MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY

START

RED LAKE FALLS NEWS

OCT 16 THRU DEC 31

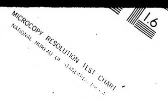
1890 RU 1891

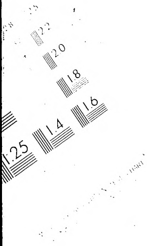
Title: Red Lake Falls NEWS	268-9 - 1978
7:45 - 9:1
Inclusive Dates: Oct 16 1890	Dec 31 1891*
Missing Issues: Sep 10, 1891

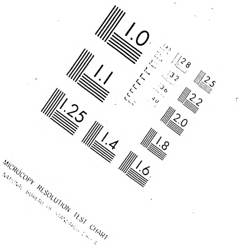
Originals held by: MHS X Other ___

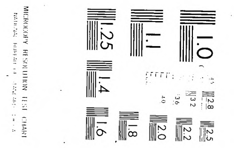
Prepared by: V.A.Rogers	Date: 9/26/1978	Format: 1A X 2B
Filmed by: Owens	Date: 9/28/78	Camera No. Red 1
Reduction Ratio: 13	Voltmeter .26/78	No. Expos.
Prelim. Inspection by:	Date:	Density:
Target Resolution: ___/mm	O.K. ___ Reject ___	Length:

The Minnesota Historical Society has reproduced the material in this microfilm without any purpose of direct or indirect commercial advantage in order to preserve and to secure it for private study, scholarship, and research. The material reproduced may be protected by copyright law (Title 17, U.S. Code). Any person engaging in further reproduction of this material may be liable for infringement.

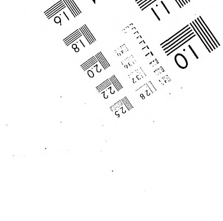






MICROCOPY RESOLUTION TEST CHART


MICROCOPY RESOLUTION TEST CHART



MICROCOPY RESOLUTION TEST CHART

From Oct. 16, 1890
to Dec. 31, 1891 —
Except for Sept. 10, '91.

1st copy directed to this Society.

RED LAKE FALLS NEWS.

MINNESOTA
HISTORICAL SOCIETY

MES MEEHAN JR., EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR — OFFICIAL PAPER OF CITY AND COUNTY.

l. VII. No. 45. RED LAKE FALLS, POLK COUNTY, MINNESOTA, OCTOBER 16, 1890. TERMS, $1.50 PER YEAR

WE HAVE AGAIN RECEIVED A FULL LINE OF

ents Furnishing Goods.

OUR LINE OF

RTS OF ALL KINDS, UNDERWEAR,

ants, and Especially Neckwear

Is Large and Varied.

d our Prices Will Suit Everybody. Also Just Received a Complete Line of Men's Ladies

nd Childrens' Shoes.

in and see our Children's School Shoes. Next Week we Expect

THE ARGEST OK OF DRY GOODS EVER BROUGHT TO THE CITY.

her particulars will be given in another issue. We now keep on hand nice crab apples, cranberries and sweet potatoes.

JOSEPH SMITH & CO.

TO MAKE ROOM FOR

Fall and Winter Goods

WE WILL OFFER

r : the - Next : Fifteen - Days

AN ENTIRE STOCK OF

Spring and SummeR
CLOTHING AT COST.

This Includes Youths' Boys' and Men's Suits.

Our Stock of

FUR - COATS

Will Arrive About Sept. 26.

A SPECIAL REDUCTION IN

adies' Oxfords and Summer Footwear.

ALL THIS WEEK.

A SNAP — A Ladie's Fine Shoe For $1.50.

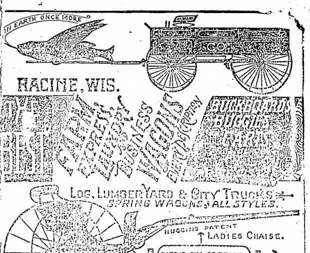
We Have Just Received a Line of

ADIES' FRENCH KID SHOES.

Which we Sell Very Cheap.

chool Shoes, School Shoes,
School Shoes.

W A SCHREITER.



HARLES LANGEVIN

—DEALER IN—

ENERAL MERCHANDISE,

AKE FALLS, MINNESOTA

A STILL MORE

Important : Event !

ECLIPSE THEM ALL!

The New Store.

H. M. KauS.

Has moved into his new building on Main street and opened a store consisting of general merchandise.

Henry wishes to inform the public that he has a well asorted stock, good goods and low prices that will astonish everybody.

He is the only merchant in town that can BOAST of having the least expenses in conducting his store,&

Remember,

CONSEQUENTLY

He can and will sell you goods at THE LOWEST POSSIBLE MARGIN, and

Do you know?

He will duplicate the price of any list of groceries outside of sugar and coffee sold by the so-called Minneapolis Wholesale House.

He is receiving large invoices of goods nearly every day and intends to carry as complete a stock as any in town.

Give the New Store a Call.

Good Advice.

From the Typographic Advertisor.

Young man, save a part of your weekly earnings, even if it be no more than a quarter dollar, and put your savings monthly in a savings bank.

Buy nothing until you can pay for it and buy nothing you do not need.

A young man who has grit enough to follow these rules will have taken the first step upward to success in business. He may be compelled to wear a coat a year longer, even if it be unfashionable; his wife may not sparkle with diamonds nor be resplendent in silk or satin, just yet; his children may not be dressed as dolls or popinjays; his table may be plain but wholesome and the whizz of the beer or champagne cork may never be heard in his dwelling; he may have to get along without the earliest fruit or vegetables; he may have to abjure the club room, the theatre and the saloon, and to reverence the Sabbath day and find amusement in loftier pastimes. But he will be the better off in every way for his self-discipline. Yes, he may do all these without detriment to his manhood, or health or character. True, empty-headed folk may sneer at him or effect to pity him; but he will find that he has grown strong hearted and brave enough to stand the laugh of the foolish. He never owes anybody and so he is no man's slave. He has become master of himself, and a master of himself will become leader among men, and prosperity will crown his every enterprise.

Young man! life's discipline and life's success come from hard work and early self-denial; and hard-earned success is all the sweeter at the time when old years climb up on your shoulder and you need propping up.

There may be persons in this community who are at times troubled with colic, or subject to attacks of bowel complaint If so, they should try Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It will afford almost immediate relief, and when reduced with water is pleasant to take. If taken as soon as the first indication of the disease is felt it will ward off the attack. Many people use it in this way, and find that it never fails them. A 25 or 50 cent bottle may be obtained at W. A. Schreiter's.

Teachers' Institute at Crookston.

The state teacher's institute for Polk county was held at the court house during the week beginning October 7. W. F. Rochleau and W. W. Pendergast were the conductors. Most of the wide-awake, go-ahead teachers of the county were present at the opening session, remained to the close and took great interest in the work.

Miss Wilson of the city schools gave instruction in vocal music and Supt. Casey presented the best method of teaching penmanship.

The lecture of Dr. S. P. Sperry, of Northwood, on "Brain and Nerve" proved that he was master of the subject and knew how to present it in a pleasing manner.

Supt. Kiehle lectured on Thursday afternoon and laid great stress on his request that the teachers should make strong efforts in the way of character building. He paid a compliment to Prof. Casey when he said that the schools of Polk county were improving and that he hoped the teachers would stand by those who had endeavored to advance the educational interests of the county.

There were a few funny incidents which no doubt will be read with interest: Prof. Rocheleau had the teachers stand and then interrogated them as follows: "All those who can tell me what is meant by the 'Original Package Bill' may stand; the remainder may be seated." The great majority of the teachers went down, and after having one of those who stood up—Mr. W. J. Nickel—explain the bill, the teachers were asked to stand, and this time those who could not tell who Melville W. Fuller was were requested to sit down, and the great majority went, as before. After getting up for the third and last round, those who could not tell who John L. Sullivan was, were told to go down, but every teacher, including all the ladies, stood, and the laugh which followed, made the giant court house spittoons rock on their bases.

Prof. Pendergast, caused a big laugh when he innocently remarked in explanation of a part of his speech: "When I say boys and men, I mean to have the boys and men embrace the women and girls."

Nearly seventy teachers were registered and about thirty received certificates of attendance at the close.

A Wonder Worker.

Mr. Huffman, a young man of Burlington, Ohio, states that he had been under the care of two prominent physicians, and used their treatment until he was not able to get around. They pronounced his case to be Consumption and incurable He was persuaded to try Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds and at that time was not able to walk across the street whitout resting. He found, before he had used half of a dollar bottle, that he was much better; he continued to use it and is to-day enjoying good health. If you have any Throat, Lung or Chest Trouble try it. We guarantee satisfaction. Trial bottle free at Schreiter's.

The Tariff Question.

Has been the theme of political discussion for the last fifty years and every campaign "protection" "free trade" "fair trade" "infant industries,, "British gold" "home markets" "Cobden club" "tariff tax" are dinned into our ears by the wind mills of the respective parties till our average voter knows nothing at all about the matter, and simply votes the ticket his father did. The tariff on wool, salt sugar, silks, coffee, clothing and many other arttcles, may be too high or may be too low, but on one thing the public is agreed, and that is, that considering the the luxurious accommodations, fast time and splendid road bed of "The Burlington," and the further fact that it is the best and most direct line to all principal towns and cities in ten great states, its passenger "tariff" rates are so reasonable as to satisfy everybody. For time tables, tickets, rates, and any information, call on any ticket agent of "The Burlington," or connecting lines, or address W. J. C. Kenyon, Gen. Pass. Agent, C.B. & N.R R., St. Paul, Minn.

Dr. A. T. Doll, who has been in the practice of medicine at North English, Iowa, since 1868, says he often prescribes Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea remedy, because he knows it to be reliable. For sale by W. A. Schreiter.

Cash paid for potatoes by Muender Bros. at Red Lake Falls, near the depot. Call and get highest prices.

Jack Moylan came down from Red Lake Friday, his wagon hitched to four span of oxen. They ought to be good for a pretty fair load.

Important Facts TO THE PUBLIC.

FACT I.—

I have been doing a Cash Business ever since I knew the value of money, and not only 1 summer.

FACT 2.—

I don't advertise Large Store, and Numerous Salesmen, with heavy expenses for my customers to pay for.

FACT 3.—

There is a small store between the rivers that is plumb full of General Merchandise. The proprietor of this store works hard, does all his own work and his expenses are next to nothing. That man's name is ED HAMRY, and he will sell you the best goods in the market cheaper than you buy old trashy goods at some of those windy stores.

FACT 4.—

When you want good goods cheap you should go to

ED HAMRY.

A Good Offer.

Do you read The Cosmopolitan, that bright, sparkling young magazine? The cheapest illustrated monthly in the world. 25 cents a number. $2.40 per year. Enlarged, October, 1889, to 128 pages. The Cosmopolitan is literally what the New York Times calls it, "At its price, the brightest, most varied and best edited of the magazines." An unusual opportunity for new subscribers for one year only:

The Cosmopolitan, per year....	$2 40
The NEWS, per year............	1 50
The price of both..............	3 90
We will furnish both for only....	3 00

This offer is only to new subscribers to the Cosmopolitan, and only for one year. The Boston Journal says "It has more articles in each number that are readable, and fewer uninteresting pages, than any of its contemporaries." The Cosmopolitan for the first time in magazine literature, a splendidly illustrated Periodical at a price hitherto deemed impossible. Try it for a year. It will be a liberal educator to every member of the household. It will make the nights pass pleasantly. Send $3.00 to this offite and secure both the Cosmopolitan and the NEWS.

A Present to our Subscribers.

It is with pleasure that we announce to our many patrons that we have made arrangements with that wide-awake, illustrated farm magazine, the American Farmer, published at Fort Wayne, Ind., and read by nearly 200,000 farmers by which that great publication will be mailed direct, FREE, to the address of any of our subscribers who will come in and pay up all arrearages on subscription and one year in advance from date, and to any new subscriber who will pay one year in advance. This is a grand opportunity to obtain a first-class farm journal free. The American Farmer is a large 16-page journal of national circulation, which ranks among the leading agricultural papers. It treats the question of economy in agriculture and the rights and privileges of that vast body of citizens—American Farmers—whose industry is the basis of all material and national prosperiy. Its highest purpose is the elevation and ennobling of Agriculture through the higher and broader education of men and women engaged in its pursuits. The regular subscription price of the American farmer is $1.00 per year. IT COSTS YOU NOTHING. From any one number ideas can be obtained that will be worth thrice the subscripion price to you or members of your household, YET YOU GET IT FREE. Call and see sample copy.

Bucklin's Arnica Salve.

The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by W. A. Schreiter.

Notice.

Having closed up business in Red Lake Falls, I desire that all persons indebted to me call and settled on or before Nov. 1st. with L. Jenson my agent. All accounts must be settled on or before Nov. 1st. or they will be put into the hands of the collector.

J. C. HEULER.

Homeseekers Excursions.

On September 9 and 23 and October 14, 1890 the agents of the Chicago, Burlington Railroad, at all stations, will sell "Homeseeker's" Excursion tickets to all principal land points in southern Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Arkansas, Indian Territory, Texas, New Mexico, Colorado, Wyoming, Utah, Idaho, Montana, South and North Dakota, Northwestern Iowa, Minnesota, Tennessee, Louisiana, Alabama and Mississippi, at a very low rate for the round trip, good for return within 30 days from date of sale. For further information apply to any ticket agent of the "Burlington," or write to W. J. C. Kenyon, St. Paul, Minn.

Our customers all speak highly in praise of St. Patrick's Pills. They are the best.—Berry Bros., Nebraska. For sale by W. A. Schreiter.

Mr. John Keown, the worthy postmaster at Keown, Allegheny County, Penn., says: "Chamberlain's Cough Remedy sells better than any other." The reason of this is because it can always be depended upon. Let any one troubled with a severe cold give it a trial and they will find that the first dose will relieve the lungs and make breathing easier, and that its continued use will free the system of the cold. The promptness and certainty of this remedy in the relief and cure of colds, has won for it many sincere friends and made it very popular.—For sale by W. A. Schreiter.

THE

WISCONSIN CENTRAL LINES
NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD CO. LESSE.

RUNS

Fast trains with Pullman Vestibuled Drawing Room Sleepers, Dining Cars and Coaches of latest design, between Chicago and Milwaukee and St. Paul and Minneapol.

Fast train with Pullmant Vestibuled Drawing Room Sleeping Dining Cars and Coaches of latest design between Chicago and Milwaukee and Ashland and Duluth.

Through Pullman Vestibuled Drawing Room and Colonist Sleepers via the Northern Pacific Railroad between Chicogo and portland, Ore.

Conveniete Trains to and from Eastern, Western, Northern and Contril Wisconsin points, affording unequalled service to and from Waukesha, Fond du Lac, Oshkosk, Neenah, Menasha, Chippewa Fall, Eau Claire, Hurley, Wis., and Ironwood and Bessemer, Mich.

For tickets, sleeping car reservations, time tables and other information, apply to Agents of the line, or to ticket Agents anywhere in the United States or Canada.

S. L. Ainslie, Gen. Man., Milwaukea.
J. M. Hanaford, Gen. Traf. Man. St. Paul.
H. C. Barlow, Traffic Man. Chicago.
Louis Eckstein, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, Chicago.

In conjunction with the Erie System operates Fast Vestibuled Trains between Chicago and the Atlantic Seaboard. you may travel in the most Elegant and complete Pullman Vestibuled Trains ever constructed and save $1.50 to Buffalo and Niagara Falls, $2.00 to New York $2.35 to Albany and Troy, and $3.00 to Boston and New England Cities.

No rival line offers the advantages of a system of through first and second-class day coaches and Pullman Dining cars chicago to New York.

It is the only line operating pullman cars to Boston and, New England via Albany.

Entire trains are lighted by gas, heated by steam. Pullman dining cars run through in either direction. Pullman chair and sleeping cars to columbus, O., and Ashland, Ky., Daily.

No extra charge for first time and unsurpassed accommodations afforded by these luxurious train.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

CAPTAIN BRAND

OR

THE PIRATE SCHOONER.

A TALE OF THE SEA

PART II.

CHAPTER XXXI.

VULTURES AND SHARKS.

When Hardy had concluded his part of the tale, he stuck the stump of his cigar into the wine-glass of ashes, as if he had no further use for either, moistened his throat with a bumper of tinta, and almost unconsciously passed his left arm around Harry Darcantel's neck.

Stingo drank two bumpers, as if he had a particularly parched throat; but Paddy Burns and Tom Stewart, strange to relate! never wet their lips, and passed their hands in a careless way across their eyes, as if there were moisture enough there—as, indeed, there was; feeling as they did, in the fonts of their own generous natures for their dear friend who sat opposite.

Piron's head rested, face downward, on his out-spread hands, and a few drops trickled through the close-spread fingers, but they were not wine. And as he raised his face and looked around the board, where glowing sympathising eyes met his, he said in a low, subdued voice—

"I trust I may thank Heaven for avenging the murder of our child."

Even as he uttered these words his gaze rested on the face of Darcantel; and striking the table with a blow that made the glasses jingle, he started back as he had done on the frigate's quarter-deck, and exclaimed—

"Merciful Heaven! can it be possible that that boy was saved from the clutches of the drowned pirate?"

Not so fast, good Monsieur Piron! Not so fast!

"You shall hear more if you are not tired, gentlemen," resumed the commodore, "though I have very little to add to what Hardy has already related of the pirate schooner. Steward, let the servant's turn in; and brew us, yourself, a light jorum of Antiqua punch! Now, then, said Commodore Cleveland, "I'm your man!"

"Before morning we were in cruising trim once more, and after breakfast the quarter-boats were lowered, and Hardy took one and I got in the other, and we pulled in towards the jaws of the channel, between the Lion rock and the ledge on the opposite side.

"A myriad of sea-birds, from Mother Carey's chickens to gulls and cormorants, and even vultures and eagles from the shore, were clustered on the wreck as thick as bees—screaming croaking, and snapping at each other with their hard beaks and bills; while thousands more were hurrying from seaward, and either swooped down over the ledge or tried to find a place on the floating spars.

I pulled towards the wreck and after the men had fired a few shots to scare away the birds. I found the body of a burly fat man wrapped in a cossack, with a string of beads around his neck, to which was attached a crucifix. In another moment the bodies rose to the surface, then a dash from the sharks and a greedy dive and a peck from the birds, and that was the last of those wretches, till the sea gives up its dead.

"As for Hardy he pulled higher up the gorge, and examined the rocks and pools on both sides, but saw nothing living or dead, and we both returned to the ship."

Had Dick Hardy landed at the flat rock where the eddy swept in under Lion's paws, he might have seen the footprints of a man with a straw slipper in it, and following the track a few yards further, he would have passed his sword through a villain lying bleeding in a mangrove thicket, and found too in his belt, snugly stowed away, a lot of gleaming jewels, with a sapphire gem of priceless value on the finger of his bloody hand. But never mind, Hardy! You will hear more of that man one of these days, and you will have no cause for regrets—though he will, perhaps; and, meanwhile, let him wander in quest of fresh villanies over Spanish South America.

"Well, gentlemen, that evening, when the land-wind made, we tripped anchor and sailed away from the Coast of Darien."

"Come, my friends," said Piron in a low, tremulous voice, rising as he spoke, "we must not push Cleveland too far to-night, for it is getting late, you know, and they keep early hours on board men-of-war."

"No hurry, Piron! I'll talk to you all night, if you have the patience to listen to me. No? Then I'll have the boat manned." He touched a bell-rope which hung over his head, and the cabin door opened. "Orderly, my compliments to the officer of the watch, and desire him to call away the barge."

While some of the gentlemen in the forward cabin left the table and stood about in groups chatting till the boat was reported, Piron put his arm around the commodore's belt, and they moved aft into the starboard state-room. Little Mouse was lying sound asleep on the elegant cot, with all his clothes on, but with a smile on his lips, and dreaming, maybe, of the dear widowed mother he would one of those days make proud of him.

"Cleveland, my old friend; tell me more of that young Darcantel!"

"Hist! Piron, don't wake little Tiny! There nothing to tell more than that he is my adopted nephew and the son of the gentleman who occupies that state-room opposite. But when we go out to Escondido I'll tell you all about his father, who has led a very adventurous life."

"Well, good-night! You will bring young Darcantel with you, and the little rogue, too, here in the cot. My wife and her sister will be delighted to see you all. Good night!"

As the Monongahela's bell struck eight for midnight, the commodore's guests got in the barge and pulled toward the shore.

At the same time a light gig with handsome Harry Darcantel, went alongside the Rosalie, and Commodore Cleveland turned into his friend's cot opposite, leaving small Mr. Mouse to sleep his dream out till morning; while as the barge ran up the landing at Kingston harbor, and a gold ounce was slipped into the old coxwain's honest paw, what did they all think about? Good-night?

CHAPTER XXXII.

ESCONDIDO.

There were pleasant sounds—the low, sweet tones of women's voices—inside the villa of Escondido. Two lovely matrons were setting within that lofty saloon, hand clasped in hand, and gazing with glowing pride upon a lovely girl, who waved lithe as a lily on its stem before them.

Dressed she was in a light mousseline coyly cowering in loose folds around her heaving bosom to the slender waist, where, clasped by a simple buckle of mother-of-pearl, it fell flowing in gauzy, floating waves to her feet. Look at her, my gallants, for she is Rosalie!

"They are coming to-day, my aunt; and uncle Jules says that our dear old Captain Blunt has just arrived at Kingston, and is coming with them."

"What else, my daughter?"

The girl held a letter before her face, maybe to hide a little blush which suffused her cheeks.

"Why mamma, he writes that the spring-cart, with Banou, was to start overnight with the 'traps'—that means trunks, I suppose—and that——"

"What, Rosalie?"

"That there is a handsome young officer, the nephew of Commodore Cleveland—merci, maman! some of uncle Jule's nonsense!"

No such great nonsense, after all, mademoiselle, when your uncle Piron tells you to keep that fluttering little heart safe within your bodice, for there are thieves in blue jackets in the island of Jamacia. Strange too, as she spoke—with her animated face, large blue eyes, and graceful, wavy figure—how much she resembled both those lovely women, with their darker coloring, who sat smiling sweetly upon her.

"Oh! here comes uncle Banou. Well, my good Banou, what news of your master?" said Madam Piron, as she put out her hand to the black, who raised it respectfully to his lips.

"He will be here with his friends at sunset, eh! And Mademoiselle Rosalie must place the gentlemen's things in their rooms, and see that the billiard-house has some cots made ready in it!"

"Nothing more?"

"No, madam,"

Through the brilliant vegetation, along the uneven road, came the sound of horses feet, with hearty shouts and laughter; and presently appeared a calvacade, mounted on mules and horses, all making the forest ring with meriment.

Ahead came Tom Stewart, on a small sure-footed pony; and beside him Mr. Tiny Mouse, reefer, on a high mule, with a scrubbing-brush mane, looking like a fly-pennant at the mast-head of the frigate—kicking his little heels into the old mule, as if that mule minded it even so much as to shake his long ears! Then, straggling in the centre, were Darcantel, Stingo, and Paddy Burns, and behind them came a tall, muscular man on a mettled barb, which he controlled by a touch of his little finger. And, at his side, on the most diminutive of of the donkey breed, with feet touching the ground, clung stout Jacob Blunt, the sailor, in a more dreadful trepidation than he had ever known on board his old teak-built brig, lying there in the roads of Kingston; while the rear was brought up by Piron and Commodore Cleveland.

"Now, you little mad-cap, look sharp when we turn the curve of the mountain, and you'll catch a peep at Escondido; and don't you pinch that old mule again on her rump, or she'll pitch you up into that silk cotton-tree."

"If it pleases Providence to restore me safely to my dear old Martha Blunt, I'll take my davy never to sit astride of any darn brute on four legs again!" This mild vow came from the lips of Jacob Blunt, and he honestly meant every word he said.

"Give us another jolly song, Stingo! it will keep your thirst clear for the claret. A Creole one, my lad, it will make the cattle move faster."

"For the sake of my old timbers, sir, and as you vally my wife's blessing, don't sing! There, you beast; you've yawed sharp up into this ere bush, and put my starboard glim out for ever! I say, Don Spanisher don't sing—I'm going fast enough!" shouted the poor skipper as he passed his paws around the little brute's neck, with his hat over his eyes.

"Colonel"—said Pady Burns as he reigned up, and gave the perverse little donkey a cut with his whip, which elicited another hoarse roar from the old sailor as the animal half doubled himself up and then ambled away like a yawl in a short sea, until he came up to the people ahead, when he stood stock-still and brayed maliciously—"have you another cigar, colonel? Thankee! Fine scenery this about here—never visited Jamaica before? Ye have been off the island, eh? It's a nate little spot Piron has there—that it is; and the whole of us will be mighty sorry to lose him. Is he going to lave? Yes, he is; and what is worse, he is going to take his swate wife and her sister, is the sister handsome? Begorra! handsome! Why, man she is a beauty! And didn't I trounce that ugly, abusive wretch, Peter Growler, for saying he had seen a grey hair in her head, when I knew it was only a loose thread from her lace cap—and me in love with her all the time? Bad luck to him! He's never hinted at such a thing since."

Here Paddy Burns' small eye twinkled as he slowly raised the stock of his riding-whip at a slender lance-wood tree about twelve yards off, and gave the lash a sharp crack.

The person on the spirited barb almost unconsciously put his right hand in his pocket.

Take care, Paddy Burns; the colonel has a cool hand and a colder eye, and has made a study of pistols—cannon and swivels, too, perhaps. Knows the cutlass exercise as well, and has had considerable experience in bullets, knives, and ropes. Has murdered women—lots of them. Wouldn't stick at killing a child with a junk bottle. And as for men—pshaw! Keep a bright look-out, Paddy. Why, he'd drown your mother, if you had a sister to love. For didn't he drag his own old father and mother down to a dishonoured grave? and do you think—you brave, honest little Irishman—that he would sleep a wink the less sound for putting you to death? Bah! man. Shoot all the game you spring, but don't waste powder on a tiger or a shark. You dislike him so you are ready to quarrel with him, though? Of course you do—who doubts it? But then, gentlemen quarrel with gentlemen; and this colonel at your elbow is a scoundrel, miscreant, villain, assassin, and—pirate! So you can have nothing in common with him, Paddy Burns.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

PAUL DARCANTEL.

"Well, Piron, as I have told you after the peace was made in 1815, I had command of a brig, and took a cruise on the coast of Brazil. After that I was appointed to a thirty-six gun frigate—the old Blazer—and went for three, years, to the East Indies, and round home by the Pacific. When we were paid off I made a tour in Europe with that boy's father, Doctor Darcantel, and——"

"But you promised to tell me, Cleveland, something about him."

"Nothing easier; and if we have half an hour before we get to Escondido I will give you all I know, in a general way of his history. Yes? Well, then. Darcantel is descended from one of the oldest and best Creole families in our state of Louisiana, and the plantation of my family and his father were contiguous to each other on the Mississippi, some leagues up the coast above New Orleans. We had the same tutor when we were children, and we grew up from infancy to boyhood together. He was passionate and ungovernable, even as a child; but as he was the heir to a large estate, and his father dead, his weak mother humored and allowed no one to curb him. I myself, one of a numerous family, was put in the navy, and I went away on cruise after cruise, and did not get home again to the old plantation for full seven years. I was a man then, had seen some active service, and I held a command as a lieutenant in the navy."

"In the meanwhile, Paul Darcantel, who had taken, at the time I left, a strong fancy for medicine and surgery, had been sent to France to begin his studies. How he applied himself we do not know; but with a large letter of credit he spent a great deal of money; and we heard that, with great talents and wonderful skill in his profession, he was yet unfitted for close application, and plunged madly into the vortex of dissipation around him. I heard too—or, at least, my brothers told me—that his extravagances had seriously impaired his fortune, and that his duels had been so numerous and desperate as to make his name dreaded even in Paris. On one occasion at a cafe he had cut a bullying hussar's head clean off with his own sabre for knocking a woman down; and in another duel, where he had detected a French count cheating him at cards, he shot his nose off for a bet. With this unenviable reputation, and at the urgent solicitations of his agent, after years of absence, he returned to his ancestral home. We met as of old—it was Paul and Henry—and though still the same restive, hot-headed spirit as he had ever been, he yet always listened patiently to what I said, and I could, in a manner, control him. He paid very little attention to his property, however and when he did go to the city to consult with his factor or trustee, he got into some wild frolic, duel, and scrape, and came back worn out with fatigue and dissipation. He was a fine, stern-looking youth in those days, with great muscular power, which, even with the endurance put upon it by gaming and drinking, seemed not to be lessened."

"After one of these visits to New Orleans, where his long-forbearing agents had at last awakened him to a bitter sense of his delinquencies, and when mortgage upon mortgage were laid with all their shocking truth before him, he returned and came to me. With all his vices and faults he was truthful and generous. He told me all, and how he would try and do better and soothe the declining years of his too indulgent mother."

"I always had great faith in the companion almost of my cradle, and I loved him, I think, better than my own brothers. Well, he spread all his affairs before me, and in my little den of an outhouse on the plantation we both went systematically over the papers. We were two days and nights at the business, and when, at last, I showed him that he would still, with a little economy, have a fair income, and eventually, perhaps, redeem his hereditary property, he burst out in a wild yell of delight, and hugged me in his arm. When he had put away the papers, I said—

"'Paul you know I am engaged to be married, and I have not seen my sweetheart for two whole days; she has a sister, too, prettier than my Fifine, whom you have never seen since we were boys together. Come, will you go with me? we can pull ourselves across the river."

"He hesitated; and it would have been better, perhaps, had he refused to accompany me, for dreadful misery came of it."

The commodore gave a deep sigh, and touched his horse with the spur.

"I don't know, though, Piron; there is a fate marked out for us all, and we should not exclaim against the decree of Providence. Paul went with me across the river. There, on the bank was, was a little bower of an old French-built stone house, where dwelt the last of a French nobility who dated back to the days of Charlemagne. It was an impoverished family, consisting of a reckless brother and two sisters, who with a few acres of sugar cane and some old, faithful servants, managed to make both ends meet, and to support the establishment in a certain air of elegance and comfort, to which they had been accustomed. They were of a proud and haughty race; the brother a disdainful and imperious gentleman, smarting and brooding over the reverse of his family, and rarely visiting his neighbors. His sisters—and they were twins—were trustful, happy girls, and Josephine had been my childish love."

Here Cleveland bent over his saddle-bow, and if the quiet old horse he bestrode believed the large drops which fell upon his sleek neck came from the clouds or drooping foliage of the forest, that animal was never more deceived in his quadruped life. We know that fact, for it stands upon the angelic record.

"Well, my dear Piron, as we entered the little saloon where Fifine was seated at the piano playing the sweet airs she had sung to me when a little bit of a girl, and her beautiful sister bending over a table near, absorbed in a book, while the candles under the glass shades lighted up her dark, passionate eyes and brunnette complexion, Paul approached her. It was not love at first sight, because they had played together when children, but it was such a love as begins and dies with man or woman. The brother came in soon afterward, but there was no love exchanged between him and Paul, and they met in a manner which seemed to revive the early dislike they had entertained one toward the other in boyhood.

"So the time passed, and in the course of a few months Josephine and I were married, and our home was made on my own old place. Still, night by night, in storm or freshet, Paul pulled himself in a skiff across that mighty river, and we could see the light shining to a late hour in the little bower. He had changed a great deal, for he loved with the whole force of his fiery and impetuous nature. Pauline loved, too, though still she feared him. The brother, however, bitterly opposed their union, and stormy scenes arose. Josephine and I did all we could to put matters on a happy footing; but Jacques, the brother, grew more determined as his sister refused to cast off her lover, till at last the feeling against him broke out into open scornful insult; and though Paul still persisted in seeing Pauline, yet we feared that the impetuous spirits of the two men would, at any moment, burst out into open violence.

"Darcantel, however, controlled himself, avoided as much as possible any altercation with Jacques, applied himself to the duties of his plantation, and always promised me that he would wait and see if time would not induce the brother to give his consent to the marriage. Meanwhile Paul's mother died. A year passed. Fifine gave me a little boy, who was called after me, and then I went again to sea. Nearly three years later I returned, and the very night before I reached the plantation a dreadful tragedy had occurred. I might, perhaps have prevented it had I been there, but it was ordered otherwise.

"It seems to me that two days previously Jacques wrote to Paul—I saw the letter—and it was something painful to read; for he not only recapitulated his vices and follies, but he taxed him with being a ruined gambler, who had brought his mother in sorrow to the grave, and he ended by swearing in the most solemn manner, that if he dared again to speak to his sister or darken their doors, he would shoot him like a dog!

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

City Collector George Ferter of Tucson, Ariz., is reported missing. Some of his friends express the belief that he has committed suicide. A shortage is reported.

MISSING LINKS.

The white rose is the favorite flower in France this summer.

A San Bernardino (Cal.) paper is printed with blue ink.

Until 1776 cotton spinning was performed by the handspinning-wheel.

Germany manufactures over £2,000,000 worth of children's toys every year.

To salute with the left hand is a deadly insult to Mohammedans in the East.

The natives pronounce Newfoundland "Nuffoulon" — with the accent hard on the last syllable.

The veteran Dan Rice is going into the show business again with an old-fashioned one-ring circus.

Constantinople is believed to have founded the first hospital in the world, as we now understand a hospital.

A machine has been invented for drilling square, oblong or hexagonal holes, heretofore found impossible.

The average width of the path of destruction with tornadoes is said to be a little more than one thousand feet.

About 4,500 species of wild bees are known, of wasps 1,100, of which 170 and 16 respectively live in Britain.

According to the Wilmington Every Evening a nail was found in the heart of a cow that died near there recently.

An Owosso (Mich.) firm advertises a job-lot of tombstones, and advises people to hurry up because there are only a few of them left.

Mrs. Eva B. Hart, who died near Syracuse, N. Y., recently at the reputed age of 113, smoked as far back as her children can remember.

Seattle, the Indian chief after whom the Washington city was named, is to have a monument erected to him by the whites. He died in 1866.

The Portuguese nation is said to be one of the least instructed in Europe, the illiterate inhabitants being officially stated at 82 per cent. of the total population.

Few ladies consider that they carry some forty or fifty miles of hair on their head; the fairhaired may even have to dress seventy miles of threads of gold every morning.

It is said that a woman in Missouri had her husband's name put down on the census enumerator's report as a lunatic because he had sold out two years ago and left Kansas.

Professor Daniel Willard Fiske, who won the $2,500,000 lawsuit brought by Cornell University, is abroad at present. He is noted for his Icelandic scholarship and his big lawsuit.

Justice Stephen J. Field is the poorest man—in dollars and cents—on the Supreme Bench, and yet he is several removes from being hard up. His residence is one of the finest in Washington.

It costs the English Government $2,962,000 annually to support Queen Victoria and her immediate family. Whenever the Queen visits Balmoral Castle it takes $5,000 to defray the railroad expenses of the journey.

As soon as the horse cars from Cairo to the pyramids are completed, and the work is nearly done, an elevator will be made to the tops of the venerable piles so that ascent may be made quickly and comfortably to the modern traveler.

Samuel Dey, of Wesley, Me., is one of the greatest bear hunters of his time. During his life he has killed 220 bears and cubs, receiving over $2,000 in bounties therefor. He must have gone around pretty well loaded all the time.

Ralph Woodman, a workman, of Auburn, Me., snatched a 3-year-old child from in front of railroad train and had such a narrow escape himself that the cow-catcher of the locomotive knocked off his hat, and it was carried under the wheels.

The French mint will soon replace the copper sous with nickels. Singularly enough the 5 and 10 centime pieces will be perforated in the center after the manner of Chinese coin. This enables them to be strung and counted, or handled with great ease.

David Dudley Field says that he remembers hearing Mrs. Fannie Kemble say some years ago, of the 1,200,000 people then inhabiting Massachusetts that, taking them all in all, she thought they were the foremost 1,200,000 people living together in the world.

John Rose Ward, the British Admiral whose death was recorded recently, organized the working department of the National Life-Boat Institution, and during his thirty-one years of service as General Inspector of Life-Boats that institution saved more than 20,000 lives.

A German of Detroit tried to figure the height of 100,000,000 silver dollars if placed one on top of the other, and because he couldn't get it within a foot or two he jumped off a wharf with suicidal intent. Although he has never had a pile a foot high he wanted to be exact about other people's money.

American naval officers who have adopted the cholera belt in the tropics find it so beneficial that they often retain it in all latitudes. It is simply a broad band of flannel worn night and day the year around tight about the waist, so as to protect the stomach from sudden changes of temperature. It is an excellent preventive of stomachic disorders.

A very influential committee has been organized in New York, with Dr. A. L. Loomis as president, to preserve the Adirondacks from further destruction by reckless tree cutting. It is hoped that the state may be induced to purchase all rights, and to convert this beautiful region, which is highly spoken of by New York physicians for its health-giving climate, into a "state forest park."

Herr Schmidt relates that one day when Chancellor (then Lieutenant) von Caprivi was at military school three volunteers were summoned to give evidence against a sergeant. Appearing at the barracks they inquired where this important matter was to be settled. "Of course at Lieut. von Caprivi's." "Why of course." "Well, he is the only Lieutenant in the barracks who has ink in his room."

LINCOLN'S MELANCHOLY.

His Sympathetic Nature and His Misfortunes.

Those who saw much of Abraham Lincoln during the later years of his life, were greatly impressed with the expression of profound melancholy his face always wore in repose.

Mr. Lincoln was of a peculiarly sympathetic and kindly nature. These strong characteristics influenced, very happily, as it proved, his entire political career. They would not seem, at first glance, to be efficient airs to political success; but in the peculiar emergency which Lincoln, in the providence of God, was called to meet, no vessel of common clay could possibly have become the "chosen of the Lord."

Those acquainted with him from boyhood knew that early griefs tinged his whole life with sadness. His partner in the grocery business at Salem, was "Uncle" Billy Green, of Tallula, Ill., who used at night, when the customers were few, to hold the grammer while Lincoln recited his lessons.

It was to his sympathetic ear Lincoln told the story of his love for sweet Ann Rutlidge; and he, in return, offered what comfort he could when poor Ann died, and Lincoln's great heart nearly broke.

"After Ann died," says "Uncle" Billy, "on stormy nights, when the wind blew the rain against the roof, Abe would set thar in the grocery, his elbows on his knees, his face in his hands, and the tears runnin' through his fingers. I hated to see him feel bad, an' I'd say, 'Abe don't cry;' an' he'd look up an' say 'I can't help it, Bill, the rain's a fallin' on her.'"

There are many who can sympathize with this overpowering grief, as they think of a lost loved one, when "the rain's a fallin' on her." What adds poignancy to the grief some times is the thought that the lost one might have been saved.

Fortunate, indeed, is William Johnson, of Corona, L. I., a builder, who writes June 28, 1890: "Last February, on returning from church one night, my daughter complained of having a pain in her ankle. The pain gradually extended until her entire limb was swollen and very painful to touch. We called a physician, who after careful examination, pronounced it disease of the kidneys of long standing. All he could do, did not seem to benefit her until we tried Warner's Safe Cure; from the first she commenced to improve. When she commenced taking it she could not turn over in bed, and could just move her hands a little, but to-day she is as well as she ever was. I believe I owe the recovery of my daughter to its use."

It Was a Surprise.

A guest at one of the mountain resorts who was charged ten cents for a glass, of lemonade made a prompt and vigorous kick, saying:

"This is nothing short of highway robbery, and I won't submit to it."

"My friend," said one of the clerks who had been called on to adjust the matter, "what do you suppose our object is in keeping this hotel?"

"To accomodate the public, of course."

"Exactly, but that's not all. We intend to make money at the same time."

"You do?"

"Of course we do?" We must have a profit, even on our beer."

"Then I'll pay my bill and go! I like to see everybody get along, but when the clothing store in my town sells a suit of clothes for half off I'm not going away from home to pay somebody full figures and a little more on top of them."—Sun.

Married Sixty-Three Years.

Henry Vreeland, of Danville, N. J., has lived with his wife for sixty-three years. They were born on the same day nearly ninety years ago, and are still in excellent health. The villagers are preparing for a grand celebration on the 90th birthday of the couple.—New York Sun.

St. Jacobs Oil
cures
Back Aches,
Headache, Toothache, and all ACHES
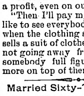
PROMPTLY



TEN POUNDS
IN TWO WEEKS
THINK OF IT!

As a Flesh Producer there can be no question but that

SCOTT'S
EMULSION

Of Pure Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites
Of Lime and Soda

is without a rival. Many have gained a pound a day by the use of it. It cures

CONSUMPTION,

SCROFULA, BRONCHITIS, COUGHS AND COLDS, AND ALL FORMS OF WASTING DISEASES. AS PALATABLE AS MILK. Be sure you get the genuine as there are poor imitations.

Result of the Conference.

"Barthleson," inquired a fellow reporter, "what have you been doing in the managing editor's room?"

"Been holding a consultation with him."

"What about?"

"About the management of the paper."

"Any change in its policy contemplated?"

"Yes. That's what the consultation was about."

"What was decided upon, if you don't mind telling me?"

"It was decided," said Barthleson twisting his mustache gloomily "that the paper didn't need me on its pay roll any longer."—Pittsburg Dispatch.

A NEW ENGLAND weekly had an item to the effect that manufacturers of chewing gum were buying up all the old rubber boots and shoes in the country, and the news wasn't a week old before two manufacturers began heavy damage suits. The editor has to prove it or quit the sanctum for the potato patch.

THE LADIES DELIGHTED.

The pleasant effect and the perfect safety with which ladies may use the liquid fruit laxative, Syrup of Figs, under all conditions make it their favorite remedy. It is pleasing to the eye and to the taste, gentle, yet effectual in acting on the kidneys, liver and bowels.

The Australian ballot system gives Covington Ky., its first Republican mayor for twenty-five years.

The Regular Army

Of the healthy are unacquainted with the horrors of chronic constipation and its associate—liver complaint. Join the ranks of this regular host. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which insures regularity of the bowels and liver, will admit you. Dyspepsia, rheumatism, kidney troubles, malaria promptly succumb to the Bitters. It never regulates a little, but always, thoroughly.

Another revolution is apprehended in Hayti. The financial condition of the republic is unsatisfactory.

FOR SOUR STOMACH TAKE ALLEN'S Iron Tonic Bitters. All genuine bear the signature of J. P. Allen, Druggist, St. Paul, Minn.

President Oakes, of the Northern Pacific, maintains that the new land grant forfeiture law is a benefit to his company.

When baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had children, she gave them Castoria.

The reports of an impending revolution in Argentine republic are without foundation.

EVERY SKIN, SCALP, & BLOOD DISEASE Cured by Cuticura

EVERY SKIN AND SCALP DISEASE, whether torturing, disfiguring, itching, burning, bleeding, scaly, crusted, pimply, or blotchy, with loss of hair, from pimples to the most distressing eczemas, and every humor of the blood, whether simple, scrofulous, or hereditary, is speedily, permanently, and economically cured by the CUTICURA REMEDIES, consisting of CUTICURA, the great Skin Cure, CUTICURA SOAP, an exquisite Skin Purifier and Beautifier, and CUTICURA RESOLVENT, the new Blood Purifier and greatest of Humor Remedies, when the best physicians and all other remedies fail. Thousands of grateful testimonials attest their wonderful and unfailing efficacy.

Sold everywhere. Price, CUTICURA, 50c.; SOAP, 25c.; RESOLVENT, $1. Prepared by Potter Drug and Chemical Corporation, Boston. Send for "How to Cure Skin Diseases."

Pimples, blackheads, chapped and oily skin prevented by CUTICURA SOAP.

Rheumatism, Kidney Pains, and weakness relieved in one minute by CUTICURA ANTI-PAIN PLASTER. 25c.

FAT FOLKS REDUCED.

"Eight years ago I had an attack of Spinal Meningitis. After recovery I took on flesh rapidly. Spine and side continued to pain me, abdomen and limbs bloated, heart troubled me and could scarcely breathe. After taking Dr. Snyder's treatment two months I lost 58 lbs., my pains were gone and I breathed easily and naturally. Dr. Snyder's treatment is pleasant to take and has done me great good."—Mrs. Mary Ramage, Ross, Washington.

PATIENTS TREATED BY MAIL.

No starving, no inconvenience, harmless and no bad effects. Strictly confidential. For circulars and testimonials address with 6c. in stamps.

DR. O. W. F. SNYDER, 243 STATE ST., CHICAGO.

[illegible]

The Oysterman's Favorite.

An Oysterman is at home in Rubber Boots; wears them Summer and Winter. The salt water, the rocks and shells on all oyster beds test the quality. Economy has taught the Oysterman to buy the best; experience has taught him Woonsockets are the Best. 8 out of every 10 Oystermen on the Atlantic coast wear Woonsocket Rubber Boots; would wear no other. Dealers in many seashore hamlets keep no Rubber Boot but the

WOONSOCKET

They can sell no other. All Woonsocket Boots are made of the same materials, by the same workmen, the same processes; are, so far as the wear is concerned, the same as the Oysterman's Boot. You may benefit by the experience of the Oysterman. The Rubber Boot which gives him best service will give you best service.

BEWARE of inferior Rubbers sold under other brands. Insist on Woonsocket Rubber Boots and Shoes. They're the best. Sold everywhere. Manufactured by the WOONSOCKET RUBBER CO., PROVIDENCE, R.I. Send for Catalogue.

IMPORTANT NEW DISCOVERY.

"VASELINE"

THE BEST SOAP for the Sk

Toilet Soap Ever Mad

A perfect pure and neutral soap combining the EMOLLIENT and HEALING properties of VASELINE. If your druggist does not keep it FORWARD 10 CENTS IN STAMPS and we will SEND a F SIZED CAKE BY MAIL, POSTAGE PAID.

CHESEBROUGH MANUFACTURING C

24 State Street, NEW YORK.

A Young Author's Good Fortune.

The experience of Mr. F. Eaton, the winner of The Youth's Companion prize of $1,000 for the best story for girls in the recent competition, is a striking illustration of the successes that are occasionally won at a bound by wholly unknown writers of fiction. His prize story, "Way Out 'n the Prary Kentry'" which appeared in the memorial day issue of The Companion, was the second short story he ever wrote and the first one that he ever submitted to a publisher. Mr. Eaton is 33 years of age, married and a lawyer by vocation. He enjoys a lucrative practice at Olean, N. Y., the place of his birth, and is now serving his seventh term as city attorney.

In his fifteenth year Mr. Eaton received a severe gunshot wound while hunting pigeons, which deprived him of the end of one finger and filled an arm with bird shot. At the age of 19 he conceived the idea that a farmer's life would perhaps restore his health, and accordingly he went to Skaneateles, N. Y., "hired out" to a farmer, and officiated as a farm hand for six months. There seemed to be so little money in the farming business, however, that he resigned, and in 1877 began the study of law at Olean. The pecuniary rewards of a law student are not usually very great, and to swell his income Mr. Eaton went to Clermont, Pa., and taught school among the miners for a time, keeping bachelor's hall in a little cabin. In 1880 he was admitted to the bar. Mr. Eaton has always been a omnivorous reader, and a great admirer of Nathaniel Hawthorne.—Current Literature.

Prof. Buhler's Snakes.

Prof. Buhler, the New York musical artist, now at his summer home in this ornate village, is an agreeable man to meet, but he has one rochet that timid folks do not like, ays a Stockbridge (Mass.) correspondent of the New York Sun. He has a passion for snakes. He catches all the harmless serpents he finds in this wild mountain region, and puts them into big, close cages in his bright, handsome parlor. For venomous snakes he has no liking. Blacksnakes, striped snakes, green ones, and so on, are his pets. On pleasant days he takes his reptiles out of the boxes, fondles them, and lets them run about the room. It is said they know him as a dog knows his master, and answer his call. He is sometimes careless with them. A few days go eith the professor left the door f one age open, or else a strong hak pried the bars of it apart, and he whole tribe in the box glided out the night watches, stole out of the ttage, and betook themselves into he woods. They did not come back —not one of them—so the artist is short on serpents just now. He has only fourteen snakes in his home.

If Artist Buhler fancied venomous serpents he could gather bushels of them in the lofty hills hereabouts, for the woods are full of them. This is a great land for rattlers, and some of them are very big and old. Visitors to the peak of Prospect mountain often meet great rattlesnakes. A few days ago a hunter bagged on the peak an immense fellow that wore fourteen rattles.

Genuine.

Modesty is a precious grace, so precious and withal so rare that some who have it cannot bear to hide it under a bushel. What is a man's light good for, if he does not let it shine? Such a person was lately holding forth after dinner.

"Nearly all charitable acts," said he, "have vanity as their motive. For my part, I hate ostentation. I remember once when I was traveling in the southern part of the state, where nobody knew me, I came upon a lonely little way station, where, in the waiting room, there was fastened to the wall a contribution box for the benefit of sufferers from a recent flood.

"There was not a soul there; nobody saw me or knew my name, and I went and dropped a five dollar gold piece into the box and slipped away unseen, unknown.

"Now, sir, what I contend is that my secret offering was a more meritorious one, intrinsically considered, than if it had been made on the public subscription list, with a loud flourish of trumpets."

"You are quite right," said one of his hearers. "That was genuine modest charity, and I don't wonder that you brag of it."—Wasp.

Funny Writers.

"If I couldn't be a millionaire," writes Miss Gilder to the Boston Transcript, "I would be a writer of funny paragraphs; they are the best paid men who wield the pen. I know of one who makes $7,000 clear a year by his humor at the rate of $1.50 a joke. The late Philip Welch got $2 a joke of three lines, more or less, and the late Josh Billings got the same for each of his smart sayings. Who would not cudgel his brains if they yielded so rich a harvest? Puck and Life and the Judge pay from $2 to $3 a joke and when the joke is accompanied by an illustration the price is any where from $10 to $25. Think of the unhappy writer of facts who thinks himself well paid at two cents a word and who uncomplainingly takes one when e can't get two! It is better to be rn funny than rich."

FARM AND HOUSEHOLD.

THE FARM.

A Dead Limb Robs the Tree.

The Florida Fruit Grower very truly says: A dead limb left on a tree robs the living wood of sap by absorption. This is proven by the sickly appearance of the limbs near the dead wood, and these limbs frequently die owing to the robbery. If the tree is young (this happens less frequently in the hard wood of old trees) the borers will sometimes start in a dead limb and go down through the center into the live wood, even down nearly or quite to the ground.

Transplanting Trees in the Fall.

The question whether trees should be set out in fall or spring depends much on how early the work is done. If the fall planting is very late, it will be impossible for new roots to form and become attached to the soil so as to hold it firmly in place. Then the advantage is altogether with heeling the trees in under a sheltered place and leaving the planting to be done in the spring. If trees are planted very early in the fall, what leaves they have on must be stripped off, as if left they will dry out the sap in the tree at a time when the roots cannot be roused to activity to renew it.—[American Cultivator.

Continuous Good Feeding.

The man who said, perhaps in fun, that he would feed his pig one day and starve him the next did not thereby set the streak of fat and streak of lean that he had expected. On the contrary he took the best possible method of destroying the animal's digestion, and thus removing from it every chance to fatten. Every check to growth in a young animal is a positive injury. It is not best for growing animals to fatten, but this can be prevented by feeding abundantly of food that makes bone and muscle rather than fat. It is harder for American farmers to feed growing stock judiciously, because in most parts of this country corn, from its cheapness, is the staple food.

Warming Water.

The Wisconsin station experimented with warming water for dairy cattle and decided in favor of it, summarizing as follows as the reason: "With butter at 25 cents a pound, skimmed milk at 25 cents per cwt. corn fodder at $5 per ton and the cost of warming water for forty cows 120 days at $15, the results obtained from the cows on the experiment indicate that a net gain of $21.36 would be realized on a herd of forty cows averaging 16 pounds of butter per cow per day, and at least $10 on a herd of twenty and $5 on a herd of ten cows. Counting the corn fodder at $10 per ton, the net gain on a herd of forty cows would still be $12.48.

A New Swindle.

The latest swindle is accomplished with a double fountain pen, one end filled with good ink, the other with ink that fades away in a day or two. The sharper's plan is to call on farmers or others, make a trade so advantageous to them that they are willing to agree to it, write the contract or agreement with the ink that fades, then manage so that the victim signs it with the ink that lasts. Then, in a few days, they have the name on a sheet of blank paper on which any sort of a note can be written. People who read the papers are careful how they sign their names to any document offered by a stranger. Others are caught in this new trap.—[Lewiston Journal.

Producers and Consumers.

Prices of the necessaries of life will this year be high, because of comparative shortness. This will be the year of boom to the producers who have food to sell; but it will of necessity be hard on the wage-earning class whose daily stipends are not increased proportionately to the cost of living. There has been no way devised that will give the farmers high prices for their products and the consumer cheap food at the same time. But the country is most prosperous when farmers get good prices and laborers, mechanics and all classes of wage earners are so well paid that they can afford liberal rates to the tillers of the soil. That state of things must result from the proper balance of industrial classes and the diversification of industries which the American system of protection is designed to accomplish.

Wild Carrot a Dangerous Weed.

Farmers in many parts of Central and Western New York are much alarmed about the progress wild carrot is making in cultivated fields. It seeds so abundantly that where once introduced it is almost impossible to eradicate it. Cutting off the top does not destroy it nor prevent it seeding, as new shoots will start out horizontally from the shrub, and often so sharp and wiry that only the sharpest scythe will cut them. If entirely prevented from seeding the second year, the carrot changes its biennial character and becomes a triennial or perennial. If not too numerous, pull out the carrots by hand, taking a time when the ground is soaked and they can be pulled easily. Plowing and reseeding until the field is cleared of the pest is, however, the better remedy.

A Cowardly Insinuation.

"Does your cow cringe and curl," asks the New England Farmer, "and appear nervous and fidgety when you sit down to milk her?" Well, not much, she don't. She isn't that kind of a cow. She isn't one of your shy, timid, bashful cows. She just fixes her eyes on vacancy with a glare that will raise a blister on an oak knot, sticks her tail straight up in the air, stiff as a poker, plants three feet firmly on the ground and then feels around with the other for the milk pail, milk stool and milkmaid; finds them; fires them up somewhere into the empyrean, and then remarking, "Ha, ha!" amid the shouting, jumps over a six-rail fence and tramples down an acre of garden. Don't talk about cringing and curling to a cow that has to be milked with a pipe line and a pumping station.—[R. J. Burdette.

Items of Interest.

Dry fodder or grain is needed to be fed along with silage to the dairy cows.

A professor of dairying defines a creamery to be a factory where butter and cheese are made.

The premium list of the Illinois state fair for 1890 aggregates nearly $27,000 in prizes.

Gov. Hoard of Wisconsin says the dairy exhibit will be one of the great features of the World's fair.

The supply of geese and ducks for the Boston market comes mostly from that little duck of a state, Rhode Island.

Remember, variety in food is as necessary for cows and other animals as it is for man.

Range cattle have died in large numbers from the effect of continued drouth in Arizona, Colorado and Mexico.

Live stock journals of the far West claim that the numbers of cattle on the ranges have been falling off so largely in the last few years that the aggregate totals now are several million head less than a few years ago.

The Nor'west Farmer says that the advice so often given to grade up dairy herds frequently begins at the wrong end. It is in too many instances the dairyman himself who wants to be first graded up.

The yearly consumption of meat per capita in the United States is 175 pounds. That of Great Britain is a little over 100 pounds, while in many other civilized countries the average is not over fifty pounds.

Economy in feeding and a careful gleaning of forage should be the rule this year. Fodder is likely to be scarce and high priced in some sections of the West before another crop is grown.

It does not pay to warm poultry houses by artificial means, except where the business of raising early broilers is carried on. Build warm houses, feed well, keep off the vermin, and fowls will get along well enough without artificial heat.

Falling leaves about the yard or grounds should be carefully raked and utilized as covering for strawberry plants in winter, or as mulching for raspberry bushes. They make excellent bedding for stables, and add to the value of the manure pile.

If you shocked your corn, husk it as soon as cured and get the fodder into the barn or stack as soon as possible, for every storm on it causes a loss, and it is going to snow before you are ready for it, if you don't hurry up. Don't forget that.

Dried milk in a powdered condition is being talked about as possible in the near future. It would be preferable to condensed in several particulars. If milk in this form is practicable, why has it not appeared before this?

In the rush of the fall work don't forget that the boys ought to go to school this winter; crowd the work but don't crowd the boys out of school. Their "development" will pay better than any crop you can gather.

When your cows seem not to thrive on silage, or when they make a poor quality of milk or cream while being fed on it, the reason is either that the silage itself is poor or they have had too much of it and not enough of dry food with it.

A Virginia fruit grower sprayed his plums with Paris green, using one tablespoonful in five gallons of water, applying with a Whitman force pump. He sprayed soon after the blossoms fell, and again in a week or ten days. The result was the most perfect crop of plums he had ever grown.

A cow wilfully and "cussedly" holds her milk by main force. She draws her stomach up and holds it in, thus compressing the milk ducts so that the fluid cannot run through them. Beating, scolding and kicking her at this time will, however, only make her worse.

There are 15,000 acres of land devoted to the culture of tomatoes in New Jersey, and the value of the crop to the farmers of that state is over $1,050,000, equal to the value of the wheat grown, and above the value of oats, rye and buckwheat. There are seventy-three canneries in the state.

In the general advance in farm products, and especially of grain, flax seed has not kept pace with other grains. It is comparatively a much cheaper feed now than it has been in several years, cheaper, too, than it is likely to be before next spring. One reason of this is that the flax seed in market is largely grown by farmers whose necessities oblige them to sell as soon as the crop can be harvested and threshed.

Whether grain should be cut high or low depends on what is to be done with the field afterwards. A high stubble is the best where young clover is growing, as it helps to shelter the plant, not only from summer heats, but from winter freezing by keeping the snow from blowing away. But if the stubble is to be plowed for winter seeding the less there is of it the better. If too much has been left it is better to burn it over than to turn mere straw stubble under for manure.

When you have company from town or city, give them eggs or chicken instead of beefsteak or roast. A lady said to us that she, with a company of others, was invited to spend an evening on a farm. Refreshments were served and the host had been at great expense to provide something nice for them; "but," said the lady, "we would have enjoyed some of their home-grown chickens and fruit much better."

When you have taken the time to figure out the profit in the weed crop that you raised in the "back field" please report. We don't think it will be otherwise than a loss. If you cannot cultivate a crop, turn the weeds under before they bloom—they will do some good then. Otherwise they are naught but a pest and a source of loss—loss of time, patience and money

THE HOME.

The Blouse on Fat Women.

Why will women weighing at least from 160 to 200 pounds adopt styles that were never intended for any but graceful, extremely slender figures? The most incongruous sight, and a not at all rare one, is a fleshy woman sailing along the street in an inflated, baggy blouse, and over that—reaching across the middle of the back, with sleeves half-covering the sleeves of baggy blouse—a zouave jacket, and just as likely as not the jacket and skirt made of a large plaid. It is a noticeable fact that this blouse waist is worn by more fleshy women than by the ones for whom the style was originally intended.—[Chicago Herald.

Foot Race for a Bride.

A novel foot race came off at Chattanooga recently, the prize being nothing less than the hand of a mountain maid, Polly Andrews, the belle of Walden's ridge. Tom Mitchell and John Vanleet sued for her favor and she was unable to decide between them. They being in earnest, proposed a duel, to which the girl demurred, realizing that if one were killed and the other a fugitive she would lose both. As the crucial test she decided upon a foot race from the Tennessee river to Fairmount, on the summit of Walden's ridge, a matter of ten miles, much of it a steep climb. The men started at 2 p. m., and at 5:10 Vanleet reached the goal, a country postoffice. His rival came in a bad second, fifteen minutes later. The beaten man accepted the situation, and Miss Polly accepted the winner.—[Nashville American.

Scientists on Coffee.

It is asserted by men of high professional ability that when the system needs a stimulant nothing equals a cup of fresh coffee. Those who desire to rescue the dipsomaniac from his cups will find no better substitute for spirits than strong, newly made coffee without milk or sugar. Two ounces of coffee, or one-eighth of a pound, to one pint of boiling water, makes a first-class beverage, but the water must be boiling, not merely hot. It is asserted that malaria and epidemics are avoided by those who drink a cup of hot coffee before venturing into the morning air. Burned on hot coals coffee is a disinfectant for a sick room, and by some of the best physicians it is considered a specific in typhoid fever.—[New York Commercial Advertiser.

Give Almost Instant Relief.

If you were obliged to get up and build a fire to heat bran sacks or other appliances, you would be more apt to neglect it until too late and cause much suffering to yourself and child. If the worn and feeble mother would heat a large flannel and lay it on her tired side, or any part of her body where there are aches and pains, she would be very agreeably relieved and save herself much suffering if the flannel could be secured in a moment. In some cases of sick or nervous headaches relief may be obtained by applying hot flannels to the stomach and head, especially if the patient is lacking in vitality. Try it, feeble mothers, and you will never more consider a flannel garment valueless even if worn past usefulness as a garment.

Two Names.

Amy Fay in Kate Field's Washington: "Among all these struggles for the advancement of individual rights I wish some one would start a reform providing for every person to have two names," remarked an old friend to me the other day.

"Two names? Wouldn't that be confusing?"

"I don't mean that they should both be used at once, but that the name used in childhood should be replaced upon maturity by one of the owner's own choosing, much as the first teeth are replaced by a set of sterner stuff. Names ought to have some appropriateness, which it is evident they never can, when a child is named before he has developed the slightest traces of individuality. Now, my parents named me—but I won't tell you what they named me; it is enough to say that I have used only initials in my signature for over forty years. Miss Juliet Capulet never showed her youth and inexperience more plainly than when she hinted that there was nothing in a name. If her own had been less melodious she would have found that there can be at least a great deal of suffering in an undesirable one."

How to Renovate Clothing.

Old clothing may be made to look nearly as good as new by pursuing the following plan: Take, for instance, a shiny old coat, vest or a pair of pants of broadcloth, cassimere or diagonal. The scourer makes a strong, warm soapsuds and plunges the garment into it, souses it up and down, rubs the dirty places, if necessary puts it through a second suds, and then rinses it through several waters and hangs it up to dry on the line. When nearly dry he takes it in, rolls it up for an hour or two and then presses it. An old cotton cloth is laid on the outside of the coat and the iron passed over that until the wrinkles are out; but the iron is removed before the steam ceases to rise from the goods; else they would be shiny. Wrinkles that are obstinate are removed by laying a wet cloth over them and passing the iron over that. If any shiny places are seen they are treated as the wrinkles are; the iron is lifted, while the full cloud of steam rises and brings the nap with it. Good cloth will bear many washings and look better every time because of them.

Giving Shape to Feet.

Every one, but especially children, should wear properly fitting shoes, no matter how common their material. They should be neither to large nor too small, and should have low, flat heels that must be properly "righted" as soon as they begin to wear to one side. If the toes of the foot show a tendency to overlap, they should be rubbed with the hands once or twice each day, and if this care be given when the curving commences, it will, as a rule, prove sufficient to correct any irregularities of this nature. If a nail is upward in its growth, trim it only lightly at the ailing corner, but fully at the opposite corner. If both corners grow too deeply into the flesh, clip them carefully and lightly, and then scrape the center of the nail from the tip to near the root until it is thin and flexible. This process seldom fails to correct refractory nails, provided, of course, they are not neglected too long.

Hints for Housekeeping.

For the shrinkage of unbleached cotton allow an inch to a yard.

Insect stings, or eruptions on the skin are relieved by alcohol.

Powdered alum applied to a fever sore will prevent it from becoming very unsightly or noticeable.

A good cook throws away nothing. Every piece of bread, every inch of meat, every particle of vegetable, can be turned into something palatable.

Evening parties for children have nothing in their favor, but a great deal against them. It is impossible to do well in school and be away from home evenings, not to speak of any other evils.

An English official report concerning diet in prisons announces that a cent's worth of split peas is equal in nourishment to nine cents' worth of beef. Oatmeal comes next in nourishment and comparative cheapness.

The milk and pulp of the coconut are such uninviting food to the tapeworm that when a man lives upon them for awhile Mr. Worm gets disgusted and quits. So says Prof. Paresi of Athens.

Remember that articles of diet to be browned on the bottom must be set directly on the bottom of the oven, but those things which are to be merely heated or to be browned on top should be placed on the grate.

Prepare on Saturday for the Sunday dinner, so that it will be one of the best meals of the week with very little work on the Sabbath. Thus you will have more time to devote to the children, and be able to make the day a delight to them.

The Sanitary Era protests against the useless custom of urging children to walk long before their soft bones have become stiff enough to bear the strain put upon them. When children are thus urged to get upon their feet and toddle too early, permanent deformities may be produced, such as bandy legs.

A tidy housekeeper and correspondent of the Rural World has the notion that typhoid fever may lurk in the dish rag of many a household. He makes an earnest and timely protest against letting dish rags lay around until they are black and rotten. They should be burned long before they reach that state.

It is said that a joint of meat may be kept many days by wrapping it loosely in a fine cloth wrung out of vinegar and hanging it in a draught of air. If the weather is very warm the cloth should be moistened twice or even thrice a day.

Mrs. Lawrence Oliphant thinks "no man can indulge in the most secret loss of hope or faith or love, without lowering the tone of those about him. The man who does not continually lift up his heart, no matter what befalls him, drags others down with him, and may thus exhaust those he loves most and whom he most desires to help."

Milk may be canned just as you would can fruit. Bring the milk to the boiling point and fill your jars to the brim with it; then shut air tight. This will keep any length of time, and be just as good when opened as when it was put up.

Mothers with young daughters can aid social reform by a rigid exclusion of "wild young men" from the home circle. No pretentious plea that it will aid in their reformation should have any weight. It simply subjects some young girl to the great risk of an unhappy marriage, a deserted home and a scandalous divorce suit.

Somebody will surely say she "can't bother," but do remember to throw a light shawl over your shoulders when you go down cellar to work the butter or skim the milk, especially if you have been at work over the stove or are prespiring freely. Many a bad cold and rheumatic attack, with attendant evils, have been gained by just such carelessness about a change of temperature when overheated. The cooler air is grateful, but it is not safe.

Deafness may sometimes be caused by an excess of ear wax which has become hardened and obstructs the action of the membrane. Either have a careful hand apply warm water through a proper syringe or a piece of cotton batting wet with essence of peppermint may be introduced, which will dissolve and absorb the hardened wax in a few hours.—[Hall's Journal of Health.

A Heiress' Fortune.

A gentleman waiting to have his portrait taken had handed to him an album of photographs. Hardly had he opened the book when he shrieked and fell insensible to the floor. The album contained a photograph of his daughter, whom he had lost sight of for twenty-one years. She was traced and found to be earning a precarious livelihood by teaching music. She is now sole heiress to a fortune of several millions.—London Tid-Bits.

The British ministry is bringing all the influence possible to bear upon the pontiff against the bestowal of a cardinal's hat upon Arch-bishop Walsh of Ireland.

I have found out a gift for my fair. It is not a ring of gold, nor flowers for her hair, nor pearls for her white neck, but Salvation Oil for her sore throat. She's a singing bird.

In all large communities persons are taking an increased interest in property insurance, and perhaps for that very reason are insuring their lives by using Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, when they are first attacked with a cough or cold.

Through the bursting of a reservoir at La Londe, France, five persons were killed and thirty injured.

Why not save your clothes, by using the best, purest, most economical soap, Dobbins' Electric. Made ever since 1864. Try it once you will use it always. Your grocer keeps it or will get it. Look for the name, Dobbins.

The Vatican has decided to advise that all Catholics abstain from voting at the coming elections in Italy.

Scrofula Humors

"My Daughter's Life was Saved"

"In regard to my little daughter, whose life was saved, as we believe, by Hood's Sarsaparilla, I would say that before she was six months old scrofula sores began to appear on different parts of her body, and in a short time she had 7 running sores. Two physicians were called but they gave us no hope. One of them advised the amputation of one of her fingers, to which we refused assent. Our attention was called to Hood's Sarsaparilla, and we began giving it to her. A marked improvement was noticed after she had taken only one bottle, and by continued use of it her recovery was complete. And she is now, being seven years old, strong and healthy. The other members of my family have been greatly benefited by Hood's Sarsaparilla, and I recommend it as an excellent blood purifier." B. C. JONES, Alma, Lincoln Co., Me.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.
100 Doses One Dollar

Intelligent Readers will notice that
Tutt's Pills
are not "warranted to cure" all classes of diseases, but only such as result from a disordered liver, viz:
Vertigo, Headache, Dyspepsia, Fevers, Costiveness, Bilious Colic, Flatulence, etc.
For these they are not warranted infallible, but are as nearly so as it is possible to make a remedy. Price, 25cts.
SOLD EVERYWHERE.

PATENTS obtained. Fees moderate Information free J. R. Littell Washington D. C

LADY Agents Wanted; new Rubber Undergarment: rapid seller; good pay. Ad., Mrs. B. N. Little Rubber Co., Chicago Ill.

CANCERS Cured without the use of the Knife. at the Iola Cancer Infirmary. Iola, Waupaca Co. Wis. Write for book of treatment.

ASTHMA CURED-FREE A trial package by mail to sufferers. Dr. R. SCHIFFMAN, St. Paul, Minn.

PENSION JOHN W. MORRIS, Washington, D.C. Successfully Prosecutes Claims. Late Principal Examiner U. S. Pension Bureau. 3 yrs in last war, 15 adjudicating claims, atty since.

MOTHERS. "Dr. Snyder's KIDNEY BALSAM" cures Enuresis, BED-WETTING. Price, $1 per package, sent post-paid, with full instructions. Circulars and testimonials for 6c stamps. Address DR. SNYDER, Lock Box 451, Chicago, Ill.

WEAK MEN and WOMEN can quickly cure themselves of Wasting Vitality, Lost Manhood from youthful errors, &c., quietly at home. 64 page Book on All Private Diseases sent FREE (sealed). CURE GUARANTEED. 30 YEARS' experience. D. H. LOWE MEDICAL INSTITUTE Winsted, Conn.

SINGLE DOUBLE 30 TULIPS ASSORTED COLORS We will send the above to any address on receipt of $1, or 14 for 50 cents, post-paid. Catalogue FREE. L. L. MAY & CO., ST. PAUL, MINN.

PENSIONS The Disability Bill is a Law. Dependent widows and parents are included. If you wish your claim quickly and Successfully Prosecuted, write to JAMES TANNER, late Commissioner of Pensions, Washington, D. C.

PENSIONS OLD CLAIMS SETTLED under NEW Law. Soldiers, Widows, Parents send for blank applications and information. PATRICK O'FARRELL, Pension Agent, Washington, D. C.

WANTED SOLDIERS' HOMESTEADS. The address of all soldiers who homesteaded a less number of acres than 160 and made final proof on the same before June 22, 1874. Moses & Ferguson, Denver, Colorado. Mention this paper.

PENSIONS Old or new Law Bounty and pay under new decisions FEES CONTINGENT. MILO B. STEVENS & CO., Attorneys 1419 F. St., Washington, D. C. Branches, Chicago, Detroit, and Cleveland Three Years army service. 26 Years practice.

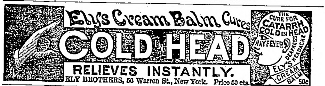
Cures in 1 TO 5 DAYS. Guaranteed not to cause Stricture. Mf'd only by the Evans Chemical Co. Cincinnati, Ohio. Trade Mark
I prescribe and fully endorse Big G as the only specific for the certain cure of this disease. G. H. INGRAHAM, M. D., Amsterdam, N. Y.
We have sold Big G for many years, and it has given the best of satisfaction. D. R. DYCHE & CO., Chicago, Ill.
$1.00. Sold by Druggists.

CHICHESTER'S ENGLISH PENNYROYAL PILLS RED CROSS DIAMOND BRAND. Safe and always reliable. Ladies, ask Druggist for Diamond Brand, in red, metallic boxes, sealed with blue ribbon. Take no other. All pills in pasteboard boxes, pink wrappers, are dangerous counterfeits. Send 4c. (stamps) for particulars, testimonials and "Relief for Ladies," in letter, by return mail. Name Paper. Chichester Chem'l Co., Madison Sq., Phila., Pa.

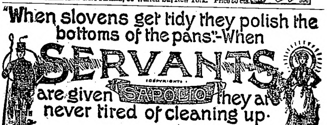
SICK HEADACHE Positively cured by these Little Pills. CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS. They also relieve Distress from Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Too Hearty Eating. A perfect remedy for Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Coated Tongue, Pain in the Side. TORPID LIVER. They regulate the Bowels. Purely Vegetable. Price 25 Cents. CARTER MEDICINE CO., NEW YORK. Small Pill. Small Dose. Small Price.

N. W. N. U. 1890 No. 42.

BARLEY RYE BUCKWHEAT SEND LARGE SAMPLE TO WOODWARD & Co., GRAIN COMMISSION, 406 and 408 Corn Exch., MINNEAPOLIS. THEY WILL WIRE YOU CASH ◆◆◆◆ ◆◆◆◆◆ OFFER AT YOUR STATION Consign your wheat to them and get TOP PRICE.



Ely's Cream Balm Cures COLD IN HEAD RELIEVES INSTANTLY. ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren St., New York. Price 50 cts.
THE CURE FOR CATARRH COLD IN HEAD HAYFEVER DEAFNESS HEADACHE ELY'S CREAM BALM 50c



"When slovens get tidy they polish the bottoms of the pans."-When SERVANTS COPYRIGHTED
are given SAPOLIO they are never tired of cleaning up.

Two servants in two neighboring houses dwelt,
But differently their daily labor felt;
Jaded and weary of her life was one,
Always at work, and yet 'twas never done.
The other walked out nightly with her beau,
But then she cleaned house with SAPOLIO.

IRRIGATION PUMP.

Water Steam Vacuum Pumps, for Irrigating, Stock, Drainage, Coffer Dams and Mining. The latest and most economical pump made. Will raise 75,000 gallons water with one bushel coal, and elevate it 10 to 150 ft. high. We handle Well Drilling Machinery, Steam Plows, which turn 8 14-in. furrows at one round. Send four cents in stamps for mailing catalogue, to WESTERN MACHINERY CO. 1412 17th St., DENVER, COLO.

PISO'S REMEDY FOR CATARRH.—Best. Easiest to use. Cheapest. Relief is immediate. A cure is certain. For Cold in the Head it has no equal.
CATARRH
It is an Ointment, of which a small particle is applied to the nostrils. Price, 50c. Sold by druggists or sent by mail. Address, E. T. HAZELTINE, Warren, Pa.

THE NEWS.

Entered at the post office at Red Lake Falls as second-class mail matter.

Official Paper of the County.

Official Paper of the City.

JAS. MEEHAN, JR. Editor and Prop.

Hon. S. G. Comstock,

FOR CONGRESS, 5th DIST.

The McIntosh Tribune, P. P. Bodine's paper, is running a Norwegian department—in the Norwegian language and in Norwegian type.

Secretary Rusk affirms that $200,000,000 worth of farm products are imported to this country annually, which may be excluded under proper protection.

The Minneapolis Times would depreciate the value of daily newspaper advertising. The Times ought to be ashamed of itself—its unlogical assertions.

When you see a paper reduced to ½ its original size just before election you may conclude that the editor is the image of Caesar's wife—so far as boodle is concerned.

Because Congressman Comstock didn't turn the whole earth into the territory of the Crookston land office the Crookston Times thinks he ought to be defeated. The people of Polk county think Crookston has enough—they now make half the state walk to the county seat whenever they have any business there.

The Moorhead News is one of the few consistent republican papers of the state. The News' arguments are pure logic. Its editor is a man with honest convictions, and, we doubt not, if his views on the tariff question were as democratic as those of the general so-called republican press of the state, he would not hesitate to pronounce himself a democrat. As it is, he is one of the few reasonable republican editors of Minnesota.

We were never an advocate of that portion of the McKinley bill which raises the price of goods consumed by the farmer; but we think that the howl that is being raised about the advance in prices is an exaggeration of real facts. The laboring classes were never in a more prosperous condition than they are to-day. Bus- is booming and with our increase of industry we may look for good times for the farmer within the next two years.

Vote for S. G. Comstock for congress not alone because he is running on a platform that declares for tariff for revenue only, but because with his experience he is the best representative we can send to congress. He knows the wants of the people of the fifth district and it was for this reason he voted to protect everything raised by the farmer of Polk county. Read the howl raised by the Canadian farmers because of the protection afforded the American farmer. Congressman Comstock voted this protection—will the farmers of his district show their gratitude and re turn him to congress? We think they will.

We don't believe the democrats of Polk county have given the self-assumed autocrat, Mr. McKenzie of the Crookston Times, any authority to read people out of the democratic party. We have talked with several leading democrats and they have said Mr. McKenzie has not the authority to decide who shall or who shall not remain in the democratic party. Because we made a personal mention of the republican candidates who were in the city a few days ago, and because we advocate the re-election of Congressman Comstock the Times jumps at the conclusion that we have been bought up, that we want to burst the alliance and are doing our work well. When he states that this paper is in the employ of the Republican bosses he asserts a lie that is too far remote from truth to need contradiction. He says the editor's instructions are "Give the alliance h—l until election and if possible break up the movement"; and then the audacious puppet has the cheek to put these words in quotations as though they came from other lips.—McKenzie himself not long ago said Mat Cornelius was the proper man for county auditor; a week later he came out with the straight democratic ticket at the head of his editorial column. Was it boodle that influenced him to do this? If Mat Cornelius was the proper man for auditor then why not advocate his election? He certainly has lost nothing in ability since—no, but the slippery old state central jackal hasn't independence enough about him to stick to his convictions and he measures every one according to himself. We shall stay in the ranks of democracy so long as we desire, notwithstanding the dictates of the assumed boss of the democracy of Polk county. Whenever we desire to be independent and advocate the election of a man because of his ability or fitness for office we shall do so and allow no party lash to crack over our back. Did you ever flop, Mr. McKenzie?

Beware of Traitors.

There will be a few alliance candidates stabbed in the back about election time by their associates. Mind what we say—the pins are now being set and great will be the crash when they fall.

Vote for the Best Men.

We have been accused of "giving the alliance h—l." So far as the alliance cause is concerned, we think it very democratic—but so far as the alliance ticket is concerned, we think a portion of it rotten to the core. It is wanting in ability; it is wanting in honesty; it lacks the individual requirements necessary for good officers. We think farmers will use precaution in voting—and vote only for the best men.

Farmers, Beware.

Did it ever occur to you to question the motives of Ignatius Donnelly in taking the stump for S. M. Owen? After Donnelly was beaten in the convention and retired to his literary work, sore, very sore, over his defeat—does it not seem strange that he should emerge from his retirement and espouse a cause that forced him into seclusion? We would not be surprised to see both Donnelly and Erwin throw up the sponge—retire to their corners and announce the alliance movement a fizzle.

The Percentage Deception.

Every partisan journal in the conspiracy to reverse the policy of protection to American labor and industries is just now vigorously flaunting the advalorem percentages of the tariff on foreign products and assuring voters that by this much is the cost of all similar products increased over what would obtain under free trade. The value of such figures in promoting the object of the Cobden Club is proportioned to the ignorance of readers, for no man possessed of energy to read market reports and sense to comprehend them can be made to relieve that any single item of the list enumerated would become permanently cheaper in absence of that domestic competition made possible by a protective tariff.

Singling out the highest advalorem equivalents to be found in Custom house reports, and making no account of undervaluations so notorious as to compel remonstrance from a free trade secretary of the treasury under the Cleveland administration, a table of figures is prepared and given conspicuous place in the free trace syndicate papers under heading of "tariff the farmers pay." This of course assumes that prices in this country are enhanced above British prices for similar products "by precisely the sum paid for duties"—a theory which, together with its once prominent champion, has seen its days in American politics.

But the voter who may be disposed to accept as truth the free trade contention that tariff is added to the price to consumers of all articles finds a still heavier draft upon his credulity when he glances at the list of articles submitted. For instance, he wonders if calico he now buys for five cents a yard, and on which the tariff is three and a half cents, would be sold for one and a half under free trade. He looks toward Great British, where the nearest approach to free trade is practiced, and finds that Amerian calicoes are sold by leading British merchants, and that as a matter of fact the retail price of calico is about the same in England as in this country. He also finds that there is no such difference in the price of other fabrics, whether of cotton, wool or silk, as free trade figures and assertions imply, and is forced to see the attempt at deception when told that window glass, crockery ware an other articles now sold cheaper then ever before are yet double the prices that would rule under free trade. No foreign price lists can be found to warrant such a claim.—Illinois Protective Tariff League.

Vote For Thomas Casey.

CROOKSTON, MINN. Oct. 13th. 1890.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS.

Mr. Editor:—Allow me through the columns of the "NEWS" to say a few words in regard to the public schools of our county

The welfare of the Public school of our county are and should be dear to every true American Citizen in the county, and whatever tends to raise the standard of the schools and add to their efficiency should receive the cordial support of the poeple.

I think I am right when I assert that one of the first requisites to make the school system strong and worthy of support, is good and competent teachers, those who love the profession and have the necessary qualifications to follow it successfully.

But in my opinion it is just as necessary for the welfare of our schools, that these teachers should have a competent person at their head. The office of Superintendent of schools, is in my estimation, one of the most important offices in the gift of the people, and the voters of Polk County, should be careful at the coming election to see to it that they elect to that responsible office a man with the necessary qualifications to do the office and the schools of the county justice, a man with sufficient honesty and backbone to see that none are licensed to teach except those whose qualifications are unquestioned, and a man of experience in school work, with great love for the profession and with sufficient education, so that he can at least, read, write and speak the English language correctly. In my opinion, we have a man before the people of this county who has all the above qualifications, and who is eminently fitted by nature and education to perform all the duties of the office in a manner satisfactory to the people of the county and with honor to himself. I refer to Prof. Thomas Casey, the present incumbent. Mr. Casey is well known in our county and has been one of our leading educators for several years before he received the appointment to the office that he now fills, and has been in greater demand and has received higher wages than any teacher in the county, with the exception of the superintendent of the schools of Crookston. Since his appointment, he has given the office his entire time and attention, has honestly striven to raise the standard of the schools of Polk county, and has demonstrated his entire fitness for the position. His opponents are doubtless good men, but in my opinion utterly incompetent to fill the responsible position of county superintendent of the great county of Polk. And if the gentleman who is the candidate of the farmer's alliance has the educational qualifications that he claims to have, he certainly don't show it in his every day business and correspondence; and while I don't wish to speak disparagingly of any man, yet I am constrained to say, from what I know of the man, that he cannot speak or write the English language correctly.

It is not necessary for Mr. Casey to go into Iowa, Dakota or elsewhere to get evidence of his fitness for the position, for his work right here in our midst fully demonstrates that the superintendent stands in the same relation to the teachers that the teachers do to their respective schools, and if the superintendent is incompetent the teachers will be demoralized and the cause of education will inevitably suffer.

Voters of Polk county see to it that you elect a man whose qualifications are undoubted, and if you do so you will vote for and triumphantly elect Prof. Thomas Casey.

Yours Respectfully,
D. D. WILLIAMS.

Now that polygamy has been abolished in the Mormon church, the Saints resume their former power, all disabilities being removed by this act. Any interference with their religious rights by this government will be in direct ignorance of the constitution of the United States. What power they will wield in this unrestricted state, only time will show.

Auction Sale.

At the residence of Mrs. Adolph Riechel in the town of Lake Pleasant on Tuesday, October 21st, 1890. Following is a list of goods to be auctioned off: Three brood mares, two spring colts, one span mules, two milk cows, ten hogs, two lumber wagons, two set working harness, three set buggy harness, bob sleighs, binder, mower, hay rake, harrows, plows, household furniture and many other articles.

I desire that all persons indebted to me call and settle within two weeks, and all to whom I am indebted, please render bill within above mentioned time.

Mrs. Adolph Riechel.

Cash paid for barley, oats, flax, hides pelts. All kinds of coal for sale. A Hoskins and Co. Elevator.
41 W. T. SPILLANE.

Unprecedented Record

The Minneapolis Times has attained the largest measure of success in the short time it has been before the people of any paper in the Northwest.

WHY ? ? ?

Because it is Bright Newsy, Ably Edited, Fair to all Parties and Gets the News.

Since the first guns of the preliminary campaign in July The Times

POLITICAL NEWS

has set the pace for its contemporaries. It has gone to the front on its Local News, Market Reports, Telegraphic Specials, Regular Press (Press News) report.

The Times

Is independent politically and prints all the news about politics and candidates, but does not deal in abuse of any man who has the misfortune to run for an office.

A Campaign Offer-The Times 4 Months

$1.00

The Times will be sent by mail 4 months from Oct. 1st for the sum of $1. Send in your subscriptions now in order to get the benefit of all the news of the present campaign.

THE TIMES,
49 Fourth St. S., Minneapolis, Minn.

JOHN M. BOYLE,

ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,

Practices in all the State and Federal courts Collections and Insurance.
Office in News, Main St.

I. LEMIEUX,

PHYSICIAN & SURGEON,

Office in residence, First street, Red Lake Falls, Minn. 3-6

Land Office at Crookston, Minn., August 27th, 1890. Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the register or receiver U. S. Land Office at Crookston, Minn., on October 14th, 1890, viz:

Georgiona Toulouse Hd No. 13286 for the e½ ne¼ and e½ se¼ sec 12 tp 150 R.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuo residence upon said land, viz:

Edward Wichterman, William Black, Henry LaChance and August Mercier, all of Lambert P. O., Polk county, Minn.

sept5oc9 H. H. Dickmann, Register.

Default having been made in the conditions of a mortgage containing power of sale dated July 31st, 1883, duly recorded in the office of the register of deeds of Polk county, Minnesota, on July 31st, 1883, in Book O of mortgages on pages 130 to 134 inclusive, whereby Henrich Bete and Elizabeth Bete his wife, mortgagors, mortgaged to Emma B. Gove, guardian of Frank M. Gove, mortgagee, the east half of the north east quarter and the southwest quarter of the north east quarter, and the north east quarter of the south east quarter, of section fourteen in township one hundred and fifty-two in range forty-six in Polk county, Minnesota, containing 160 acres, by which default the power of sale has become operative, and no action or proceeding at law or otherwise has been instituted to recover the debt remaining secured by said mortgage or any part thereof and there is claimed to be due on said mortgage at the date of this notice the sum of $705.75.

Now, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of said power said mortgage will be foreclosed and said premises will be sold at public auction by the sheriff of said county or his deputy on the 25th day of October, 1890, at 10 o'clock a. m. at the front door of the court house in the city of Crookston in said county to pay said debt and interest and taxes and $25 attorney's fees and disbursements allowed by law.

Dated September 8th, 1890.

Emma B. Grove, (now Emma B. Mitchell)
Guardian of Frank M. Gove, Mortgagee.
Montague & Bucklen,
Attorneys for Mortgagee,
Crookston, Minn. sep11-nov24

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage containing a power of sale dated April 5th, 1887, duly recorded in the office of register of deeds of Polk county, Minnesota, on April 8th, 1887, in book 30 of mortgages on page 398 whereby Wilfred Cyr and Emma Cyr, his wife, mortgagors, mortgaged to F. T. Day, mortgagee, the west half (w½) of the south east quarter (se¼) and the south east quarter (se¼) of the south west quarter (sw¼) and lots nine (9) and ten (10) all in section twenty-five (25) in township one hundred and fifty one (151) of range forty-five (45) in Polk county, Minnesota containing one hundred and seventy-four and 25-100 acres, by which default the power of sale has become operative and no action or proceeding at law or otherwise has been instituted to recover the debt remaining secured by said mortgage or any part thereof and there is claimed to be due on said mortgage at the date of this notise, the sum of $87.30.

Now, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of siad power, said mortgage will be foreclosed and said premises will be sold at public auction by the sheriff of said county or his deputy on the 22d day of November, 1890, at 10 o'clock a. m. at the front door of tne court house in the city of Crookston in said county, to pay said debt and interest and taxes and twenty-five dollars attorney's fees and disbursements allowed by law.

Dated June 1st, 1890.

F. T. Day, Mortgagee.

De Forest Bucklen,
Attorney for Mortgagee,
Crookston, Minn.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk—ss.
In probate court, special term Sept. 13, 1890.
In the matter of the estate of William J. Bahnsen, deceased.

On receiving and filing the petition of John E. Bahnsen of Rock Island, Illinois, representing among other things, that William J. Bahnsen late of Crookston, Minnesota, on the 26th day of August, A. D. 1890, at Fisher, Minnesota, died intestate, and being a resident of this county at the time of his death, leaving goods, chattles, and estate within this county, and that the said petitioner is a brother of said deceased, and praying that administration of said estate be to De Forest Bucklen granted:

It is ordered, that said petition be heard before this court on Tuesday the 14th day of October A. D. 1890, at 2 o'clock p. m. at the probate office in Crookston in said county.

Ordered Further, that notice thereof be given to the heirs of deceased, and to all persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week, for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the Red Lake Falls News, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Red Lake Falls in said county.

Dated at Crookston the 15th day of September A. D. 1890.

By the Court: C. O. Christianson,
Judge of Probate.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk—ss.
In probate court, special term, Sept. 23rd, 1890.
In the matter of the Estate of Theodore Laurent, deceased.

Whereas, an instrument in writing, purporting to be the last will and testament of Theodore Laurent deceased, late of said county, has been delivered to this court;

And Whereas, Marie Clement of Terrebonne in said county of Polk, the widow of said deceased, has filed herewith her petition, representing, among other things, that said Theodore Laurent died in said county on the 30th day of November 1889, testate, and that Joseph Laurent who is named in said last will and testament as the executor thereof declines and refuses to act as such executor thereof declines and refuses to act as such executor and praying that the said instrument may be admitted to probate, and that letters of administration with the will annexed, be to Louis St. Yves issued thereon.

It is ordered, that the proofs of said instrument and the said petition, be heard before this court, at the probate office in Crookston in said county, on the 21st day of October A. D. 1890, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, when all concerned may appear and contest the probate of said instrument:

And it is further ordered, that public notice of the time and place of said hearing be given to all persons interested by publication of these orders once in each week for three weeks successively previous to said day of hearing, in the Red Lake Falls News, a newspaper printed and published at Red Lake Falls in said county.

By the Court, C. O. Christianson,
sp25–oc9 Judge of Probate

Land Office at Coookston, Minn., October 7, 1890.
Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the register of U S Land Office at Crookston, Minn., on Dec. 6, 1890, viz, Arthur Toupin, hd 12,187, for the w½ se¼ and e½ sw¼ sec 15, tp 150, r 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of, said land, viz,

Damas Lachance Moses Guerard, Philias Desautel, Cyrille Lussier, all of Brooks P. O., Minn.
H. H. Dickmann, register.

REPORT OF THE CONDITION

—OF—

THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK AT RED LAKE FALLS, IN THE STATE OF MINNESOTA AT THE CLOSE OF BUSINESS, OCTOBER, 2ND, 1890.

RESOURCES.
Loans and discounts	57,653.38
Overdrafts, secured and unsecured	235.08
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation	12,500.00
Due from approved reserve agents	8,208.52
Due from other National Banks	955.37
Banking-house, furniture & fixtures	1,093.75
Other real estate and mortgages owned	589.95
Checks and other cash items	884.93
Bills of other banks	1,117.00
Fractional paper currency, nickles and cents	46.06
Specie	3,222.40
Legal-tender notes	1,700.00
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer (5 per cent of circulation)	562.50
Total	88,768.94
LIABILITIES.
Capital stock paid in	50,000.00
Surplus fund	[illegible]
Undivided profits	41.88
National Bank notes outstanding	11,250.00
Dividends unpaid	424.00
Individual deposits subject to check	17,557.42
Demand certificates of deposit	4,395.64
Total	88,768.94

State of Minnesota county of Polk, SS.

I, James I. Wyer, Cashier of the above-named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

JAMES I. WYER, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 11th day of Oct., 1890.

THEO. GARCEAU, Notary Public, Polk Co. Minn.

Correct—Attest:
JOSEPH SMITH
ED. HAMRY.
FRANK E. HUNT } Directors

Things Worth Remembering.

That it is dangerous to stand near a tall tree or spire during a thunder storm.

That the southwest corner of the cellar is the "cyclone safety point."

That there is no medicine so universally applicable to sickness as fresh air and sunshine."

That blowing out the gas before retiring is funny—to every one except the one who tries it.

That you may swear as hard as you please but it will not remove grease spots.

That the Wisconsin Central is the most popular line between Minneapolis and St. Paul and Milwaukee and Chicago.

That its fast train leaves Minneapolis daily at 6:25 p. m., St. Paul at 7:15 p. m., with through Pullman sleepers, arriving in Milwaukee at 7:27 and Chicago at 9:50 the following morning, serving breakfast in dining car.

That before starting on a trip always get information from some reliable ticket agent, and that nowhere will such information be more cheerfully given than at the city ticket offices of the Wisconsin Central, No. 19, Nicollet House block, Minneapolis, and 163 East 3d st, cor. Jackson, St. Paul. Address letters to Chas. E. Dixon, acting city passenger and ticket agent, St. Paul, F. H. Hanson, Gen. Northwestern Pass. agent, Minneapolis, or Louis Eckstein, Assistant General Passenger and Ticket agent, Milwaukee.

RALPH & BOURDON,

Proprietors of the

CITY DRAY LINE.

WOOD & COAL

Anything in our line done Promptly and at very Reasonable Rates.

GIVE US A CALL

TONSORIAL HALL!

N. MORISETTE, PROP.

Everything First Class!

SHAVING,
HAIR-CUTTING,
SHAMPOOING!

Shaving 15 cents.
Haircutting 25 cents.

Main Street. Red Lake Falls.

Roller Mill "B"

BEST PATENT	$2.25
BEST STRAIGHT	2.00
SECOND "	1.75
FAMILY BAKER'S	1-40
GRAHAM	2.00
RYE FLOUR	2.00
MIDDLINGS	1.00
SHORTS	.55
BRAN	.45
BEST GROUND FEED	.80
2d " "	.65

Fine corn meal per pound, 2½c.

MAJERES BROS.

Proprietor of the

City Meat Market.

A full line of market supplies, such as

BEEF, PORK,
MUTTON, POULTRY
AND SAUSAGE.

A first class meat market where everything is kept as clean as can be.

Main, near 1st st. Red Lake Falls

JOHN WATSON,

PHYSICIAN & SURGEGN,

Office in residence, Sixth street, Red Lake Falls, Minn. 4-6

VIOLINS, GUITAR, BANJOS' FINEST Assortment, Largest Stock, Lowest Prices, Best Strings for all instrument, assorted to suit, $1.50 per dozen, postpaid. Cash with order. Anything in the music line sent to any part of the United States. Write Allmendinger Piano And Organ Company, Ann Arbor, Mich. Orders from teachers and the profession solicited. Live Agents wanted for our Pianos and Organs.

NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD

The New Dining Car Route BETWEEN

WINNIPEG,
GRAFTON,
GRAND FORKS,
RED LAKE FALLS,
ST. PAUL,
MINNEAPOLIS,
DULUTH,
AND ALL POINTS EAST.

The Direct line to
MONTANA, IDAHO,
WASHINGTON TERRITORY,
OREGON, BRITISH COLUMBIA
PUGET SOUND AND ALASKA.

EXPRESS TRAINS DAILY.

To which are attached Pullman Palace Sleepers and Elegant Dining Cars. On overland trains, Emigrant Sleepers Free. The only line to the Yellowstone Park.

All trains daily.
Pullman Palace Sleeping Cars between Grand Forks and St Paul. Dining cars on all trains
Coupon tickets on sale to all points Southeast and West.
For further information regarding rates, routes maps, etc., address
CHAS. S. FEE, G. P. & T. Agt., St. Paul, Minn.
J. A. DUFFY Local Agt

Green Bay, Winona & St. Paul

Railroad. Best and most Direct Line Between

LaCROSSE,
WINONA,
Neillsville,
Eau Claire,
Grand Rapids,
Stevens Point,
New London,
Appelton,
Neenah,
Menasha,
Oshkosh,
Fon du Lac,
GREEN BAY,

And all Points in
EASTERN WISCONSIN,
Iron Districts of Northern Michigan and Lake Superior Regions.

Close Connections and Quick Time.

See That Your Ticket Reads Via
GREEN BAY, WINONA & ST. PAUL Railroad.

S. W. Champion,
Superintendent, Green Bay, Wis.
J. B Last,
Ass't Gen. Pass. Agt., Green Bay, Wis.

$100,000

To Loan on Farms

—AT—

10 pr Cent

Interest. No bonus—no delay, at

THE FIRST NAT. BANK

Red Lake Falls Minn.

Homeseekers will find the last of the public domain of agricultural and grazing value along the Great Northern Ry in North Dakota and Montana.	FREE LANDS.
New Towns	100 or more along the Great Northern Railway Line. Business chances. Write F. I. Whitney, St. Paul, Minn., for Books, Maps, etc. Write now.
Settlers on Free goverument lands along the Great Northern Railway Line in North Dakota and Montana get low rates and fine markets for products.	Low Rates
Hunting, Fishing	Finest resorts in America along the Great Northern Ry. Line in Minnesota, Dakotas and Montana. Best climate for health seekers.
Montana produces the finest horses and cattle. Free ranges yet in the Mouse, Milk and Sun River Valleys and Sweet Grass Hills.	Horses, Cattle
Health, Wealth	In Montana Free Lands, New Towns New Railways, New Mines, Low Rates. Largest area of good, vacant land.
Sweet Grass Hills, Milk and Sun River Valleys, Montana, reached only by the Great Northern Railway Line. The stock raisers' paradise.	Sheep Hogs
Gold, Coal	The Regions tributary to the Great Northern Railway Line in Montana produce all the precious and baser metals. New towns and railways are being built.
Go to the Great Reservation of Montana and get a good free homestead. Low rates and free sleepers on Great Northern R'y Line. Go now.	Milk River
Herds, Mines.	These have made Montana the richest state per capita in the Union. Plenty of room for more miners and stock raisers.
Along the Great Northern Line in Montana are free ranches and pasturage, mines of precious metal iron and coal, and new cities and towns. Now is your opportunity.	Young Man
Great Falls	Surrounded by a fine agricultural and grazing country, close to mines of precious metals, iron and coal; possessing a water power unequaled in America, it is Montana's industrial centre.
The valleys of Red, Mouse, Missouri Milk and Sun Rivers reached by Great Northern Ry Line. Half rate excursions Sept. 9, 23 and Oct. 14, 1890. Write F. I. Whitney, St. Paul	G. N. R. L.

THE LADIES FAVORITE
THE LIGHT RUNNING
NEW HOME
SEWING MACHINE
THE FINEST WOODWORK
THE BEST ATTACHMENTS
NEW HOME SEWING MACHINE CO ORANGE MASS
CHICAGO, ILL.
28 UNION SQUARE N.Y.
SAN FRAN. CAL.
ATLANTA, GA.
ST. LOUIS, MO.
FOR SALE BY DALLAS, T.

Railroad Time Table.

	LEAVE	PASSENGER	ARRIVE
	P. M.		A. M.
	8:00	St. Paul	7:05
	8:35	Minneapolis	6:35
	8:00	Duluth	7:00
	8:30	Ashland. (pm)	6:30
WAY	3:30 a m	Wadena a m	12:02	WAY
FREIGHT	A. M.		P. M.	FREIGHT
1:00 p m	6:25	WINNIPEG JCTION	9:10	2:00 a m.
2:55 "	7:35	Twin Valley	8:30	11:42 pm
4:22 "	8:22	Fertile	7:14	9:54 "
6:20 "	9:20	RED LK FALLS	6:20	7:47 "
2:00 "	9:40	Crookston	6:00	10:00 am
7:42 "	10:10	Buffington	5:29	5:55 p m
8:30 "	10:55	Grand Forks	4:45	5:00 "
DAILY	P. M.	....	P. M.	DAILY
	12:50	Grafton	2:45
	2:45	Pembina	12:55
	5:30	WINNIPEG, Man.	10:05

All trains daily.

Baby's Name.

Then father took the bible down,
And in his clear, old-fashioned hand
Upon its record pages brown
He wrote the name as it should stand.

But protest came from all the rest
At giving such a little fairy,
The dearest, sweetest and the best,
That antiquated name to carry.

And aunts and second cousins cry
"A name so worn and ordinary
Could not be found if one should try,
As that same appellation 'Mary.'"

And o'er and o'er again they laud
Her yellow curls, her baby grace,
"Oh, call her Ethelind or Maud,
Or Christine, for her angel face."

"But time would change this golden fleece
To match the eyes in dusky splendor,
Far better name her Beatrice,
Gr Omogen, serene and tender."

"Oh, name the child for Aunt Louisa,
For she, good soul, is well to do.
The compliment is sure to please her,
And we can call the darling Lou."

Most prudent counsel, all to late!
'Twixt Malachi and Mathew's pages
Appears as commonly as fate
The name beloved of all the ages.

The ancient gem, its purity
Unspoiled, shall grace our latest beauty;
Sometime on dearer lips to be
The synonym of love and duty.

And gracious womanhood adorn,
However fortune's gift may vary,
Till on a day like Easter morn
She hears the Master call her Mary.

Columbus Dispatch.

Will Dargan was in the city Sunday.

W. W. Erwin will speak here Oct. 19.

Dr. Hennemuth arrived in town yesterday morning.

Joseph Ralph returned from West Superior yesterday.

Gov. Merriam did not arouse much enthusiasm at Crookston.

Attorney Boyle was at Crookston a couple of days this week.

Ben Cyr and family now occupy the Champagne, Champagne ave residence.

Mrs Laura C. Gibbons and family depart for Grand Forks to-day there to join Mr. Gibbons.

The political skies are darkening and interest waxing warmer as the gole is being approached.

We venture the assertion that next summer will be the banner year in Red Lake Falls' progress.

Oct. 19 the great criminal lawyer of St. Paul, W. W. Erwin, will address an audience at Opera hall.

The snow storm Monday was quite a heavy one, and gave the people a foretaste of the winter that is coming.

Mr. James Meehan returned from Red Lake to day where he has been looking after the interests of P. & J. Meehan.

Miss Minnie Zaiser returned home yesterday from Minneapolis. Minnie's friends are glad to have her again in our midst.

Pierre Emard can't complain of this year's crop—he got 1500 bushels off of his farm, but little of which is under cultivation.

S. C. Bagley was in town Tuesday. The prospects of getting the Red River Lumber company's logs out this fall is not very good.

W. W Erwin is booked for a speech at Opera hall Oct. 19th. No doubt a large audience will greet the oily tongued orator.

Sunday, Oct. 26, will be made the date of a festival at Gentilly, for the benefit of their church. A play will be given in the church.

Threshing has been suspended for a few days, owing to the storm. Many of the boys have been in town enjoying the "hilarity" of the occasion.

Wm. Hillgrove came over from Dakota, where he had been running a separator in company with Theodore Schmitz. They report six weeks more threshing.

O. M. and J. F. Holmes are procuring right of way for the new road—the Duluth Red Lake Falls & Northern through Lambert, and Badger Creek to this point.

The south-side school is now equipped in good style for the year's work. New blackboards were put in Saturday, and henceforth the scholars will think life worth living.

Jas. McCaffrey arrived from Augusta, Wis., Tuesday morning to look after his roller mill B. Mr. McCaffrey's family will soon come up from Wisconsin to take up their abode here.

Miss Zelia Labissoniere and Mr. I. Benoit, of Gentilly, will be united in the holy bonds of matrimony next week. They will take up their abode in Crookston.

The schools will present an entertainment during the winter; of what nature is not yet decided upon. The drama spoken of last week is slow in materializing. It may be given up.

John Moylan and Hugh Dean started for Red Lake yesterday, with a load of provisions. They have three yoke of cattle attached to a four-horse wagon and the boys say the muddy roads have no terrors for them.

Annie Grunderson was in town Monday looking after his delapidated political fences. He will get about as many votes in Red Lake Falls as his associate the alliance windmill, the son of a veteran, et cetera, who is running for county attorney—about ten votes.

Mrs. Joseph Laurence arrived from Tacoma, Washington, Friday morning, having boarded the train at Tacoma Wednesday morning. After visiting a few day with relatives here she went to Crookston, her old home, to visit her relatives and many friends.

Ed Jeffers is considerable of a goose shot, especially with a rifle. He shot a shot the other day which went through the neck of the first goose, through the body of the second, next through a stone and cut the wing of the third goose. It wasn't much of a day for killing geese, either.

Mr. Alex Moreau, broth of our Terrebonne friends, arrived from Canada last week. Alex came not altogether on a fruitless errand, for it transpires that he will, within the brief space of a week, marry the fair Zilda Marchand, of Badger Creek. Miss Marchand is a twin sister of Mrs. August Moreau.

A grand bazar will be held at Terrebonne for the benefit of St. Antoin's church. Names of officers: Cyrile Blaudin, pres.; Arthur Lizee, manager; Jno. Clement, director of play; J. B. Fournier, and D. Robillard, commissioner or dominator; Jos. Laurent, treasurer.

REV. L. FEIGE.

Gov. Merriam's presence at Crookston Monday was the cause of an excursion train being run from Fertile down in the evening that connected with the passenger from this place. A number of our citizens took advantage of the occasion to get to the county seat, among whom were: Mrs. Joseph Laurence, John M. Boyle, F. E. Hunt, W. T. Spillane, H. A. McClatchie, C. W. Mead, S. J. Sprague, H. B. Davis, John A. Thompson.

H. M. Kaus, proprietor of the new store on Main st., has an interesting advertisement in this week's issue. There is one particular portion of the advertisement that should prove of especial interest to the farmers—the fact that Mr. Kaus' prices are as low as those of the wholesale house who recently sent agents through the country taking orders for goods. Every farmer ought to boycott these foreign institutions when they can do as well at home.

Theopelle Labissoniere, Louis Labissoniere, Nick Majeres and Jos. Baril formed a party that visited at Terrebonne Sunday. The boys were received with open arms by their friends at Terrebonne, and remined all day, intending to return in the evening. But it begun to rain Sunday evening and didn't stop till Wednesday morning. The boys decided they couldn't possibly await the pleasure of the elements, so started for home in the drizzling rain and snow. So much for one day's enjoyment.

An exchange tells its readers how to mind their "P's" in the following paragraph: "Persons who patronize papers should pay promptly, for the pecuniary prospects of the press have a peculiar power of pushing forward public prosperity. If the printer is paid promply and his pocket-book kept plethoric by prompt paying patrons, he puts his pen to his paper in peace; his patagraph are more pointed; he paints his pictures of passing events in more pleasant colors, and the perusal of his paper is a pleasure to the people. Paste this piece of proverbial philosophy in some place were all persons can perceive it."

Neat invitations, announcing the

OPENING OF HOTEL MINNESOTAH,
EAST GRAND FORKS, MINN.,
FRIDAY EVENING,
OCT. 10, 1890.

Were received here Friday. The proprietor, Mr. C. T. Walker, being very popular here, a large number of our people had prepared to accept the invitation and board the west-bound freight, due here about 8 p. m. The brass band, in full force, was to accompany them. It was found that the freight would not arrive here till about 10:30, so the trip was abandoned, much to the regret of all concerned. We learn that the opening was a brilliant success. Hotel Minnesotah starts out with good prospects and any of our citizens visiting the Forks should give the host his patronage.

Rev. Fr. Wm. Guillaume officiated at St. Joseph's church Sunday in the absence of the pastor, Fr. Arpin. Rev. Guillaume arrived last Friday, being a stranger here. He gave an instructive address which was appreciated by his audience. It is understood that he will be placed in charge of the Terrebonne mission.

The homing pigeon Dude owned by J. Hervey Doane, of Plainfield, N. Y. has reached home after more than a year's absence under circumstances which makes his case one of the most remarkable in carrier-pigeon annals. The members of the Scripps League Expedition which sailed for Paris on July 24 1889, took along six pigeons. Of these four were released the first day out at sea, for an ordinary ocean fly, the two others, Dude and Ariel were set free the second day, 700 miles from home, in attempt to break the ocean record of the world. Ariel flew almost to New York, and dropped exhausted on the deck of an incoming vessel. Of Dude no tidings ever came, and he was given up for lost until a few days ago, his owner found the familiar feathered form almost worn out with his fifteen month's journeyings, once more on his oldtime perch. A partly deciphered message from the Scripp's League Expedition, still clung to his leg, its oilskin wrapper tattered from constant exposure. It is supposed that the returned wanderer has been flying about constantly in various parts of the world in his endeavors to reach home and he is credited with the longest fly on record.

Euclid.

EUCLID, Minn., Oct. 12, 1890.

I. W. C. Misner took in the sights at Warren to-day.

Miss Hattie Davidson expects to attend school in Euclid this winter.

Miss Nellie Losey, who has had a full run of Typhoid, is improving.

Full-fledged blizzard to-day. Coal stoves would be very comfortable.

Mr. and Mrs. Harington and Mrs. H. C. Misner visited the Queen City Saturday.

Miss Hattie Tiedt and her brother Victor, expect to attend school in Crookston this winter.

E. B. Ballou and family of Angus have moved to our village. They occupy the rooms over the old drug store.

The Euclid school, with twenty-five scholars enrolled, is doing very good work under the supervision of Rev. S. Currie.

An excellent program was furnished at the last Gospel Temperance meeting. The "Round" furnished by the little folks was especially enjoyed.

Mrs. N. Piatt of Coldwater, Mich., is visiting her sons Dr. and B. S. Chapin, and Mrs. Strong and Miss Storer of Grand Rapids, Mich., are visiting their sister Mrs. M. P. Losey. Miss Storer intends remaining with her sister this winter.

Mrs. H. C. Misner entertained the male and female quartetts last Thursday evening with a few other friends. All enjoyed the evening immensely and did full justice to the excellent supper provided.

Thrashing is pretty well done in our part of the country. Wheat was not as good as the farmers had expected, the average yield being from seven to ten bushels per acre, but the price being so much better than usual, has helped out. A good deal of the wheat in this vicinity was badly frosted.

Dr. Chapin faced the storm to F. Stevens' in Angus, where he had three Typhoid fever patients. Mr. Mathews, brother of Mrs. Stevens, from Milwaukee, Wis., is convalescent. Mr. Hill, from the same place, is very sick. Eddie, eldest son of Mr. Stevens, is better, but still very sick. This makes the seventh case of Typhoid in Mr. Stevens' family this year.

Cash paid for barley, oats, flax, hides pelts. All kinds of coal for sale. A. Hoskins and Co. Elevator.
41 W. T. SPILLANE.

Eugene Labree walked into our sanctum yesterday, and somewhat surprised us, he having come from West Superior to spend a couple of days. Eugene is looking well and says prosperity is with him and all his people. We were pleased to hear this. It has come about mainly through him. Eugene is a young man of laudable qualities, of self cultivation. He is bound to get to the front, and will have no one to thank but himself.

A Wonder Worker.

Mr. Huffman, a young man of Burlington, Ohio, states that he had been under the care of two prominent physicians, and used their treatment until he was not able to get around. They pronounced his case to be Consumption and incurable. He was persuaded to try Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds and at that time was not able to walk across the street whitout resting. He found, before he had used half of a dollar bottle, that he was much better; he continued to use it and is to-day enjoying good health. If you have any Throat, Lung or Chest Trouble try it. We guarantee satisfaction. Trial bottle free at Schreiter's.

COUNTY CULLINGS.

From the Thirteen Towns.

A party of surveyors for work on the Red Lake Reservation arrived on Saturday and proceeded to that part of the country Sunday morning. Another party under the command of county surveyor Ralph arrived Tuesday morning, and started in the afternoon for the scene of operations.

Three cows were run into by the train on this branch near Erskine, on Tuesday, and so badly injured that they had to be killed. Two oxen were run into at the same time, but escaped with but slight injuries, although they were thrown into a swamp and were only extricated therefrom with the greatest difficulty, and through the assistance of the entire train crew and all the passengers aboard.

* * *

From the Crookston Chronicle.

John Walseth died very suddenly at the Sherman house last evening. He left the dining room all right and was dead in a few minutes. He came from Belmont, N. D. a few days ago, and it is reported that he has been drinking heavily since his arrival. Coroner Shepard held an inquest on the body.

* * *

From the Crookston Times.

About two o'clock Friday morning the police were notified that a man was lying near the railroad track back of M. R. Brown's livery barn, who had evidently been struck by a passing train and seriously injured. Patrolman Hayes and Locken went down and took the injured man to police headquarters where he gave his name as Frank McGuire, recently from Larimore, N. D. He said he had been walking along the railroad track on his way to his hotel when he came to McKinnon Bros' coal shed the rear of which is almost on a level with track. Owing to the darkness, he mistook this for the sidewalk and got upon it. He walked along the flat roof until he came to the opposite side, when he stepped off and fell to the ground, a distance of fourteen feets. When found, the whole lower part of his body was peralyzed. He was taken to the St. Louis hotel, and made as comfortable as possible, but at last account his condition was serious.

* * *

From the East Grand Fork News.

E. Filiatrult said: If you vote for the Alliance sheriff and if you have a mortgage on a black horse he will come and take a cow, a white horse, or anything he can find. TUEST BIEN.

It was a brilliant opening to which Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Walker treated their guests last evening at the new hotel Minnesotah. The feast did credit to the worthy landlord and landlady as caterers and good music added cheer as the hours passed pleasantly. The News welcomes them to our midst.

* * *

J. S. Ogilvie the great book publisher whose cheap serials of the best literature have familiarized the American homes with his name, spent Wednesday in Grand Forks. He is accompanied by his wife on a pleasure and business trip to the coast. They have taken a detour to Elkton, Cavasier county, to visit Mr. Ogilvie's cousin, after which he will proceed to the coast. Mr. Ogilvie has just sold all his rights of foreign books to the American Book company and will publish exclusively American works in future. He is now publishing the Eureka series of school books which will sell for 25 per cent, less than any series now extant. The author is Prof. Whyte, of New York. The News predicts as great a benefaction to the public in school books, as Mr. O. has already wrought in popular literature. Mr. and Mrs. Ogilvie are pleasing people to meet. Mr. O. has made a fortune by shrewd manipulation of popular literature, in cheap form, at the opportune time.

* *

From the McIntosh Tribune.

Rev. Davis, of Fosston, was in town [illegible] starting the ball a rolling for a new church for McIntosh. It looks as though he would be successful, many favoring the project, and will extend substantial aid to the enterprise. It would indeed be a worthy object, and all should heartily join in helping along

* * *

From the Fertile Journal.

Last night just after 10 o'clock two young fellows entered Nelson & Opheim's drug store, one of them pulling a formidable looking revolver with the command to Mr. Opheim to "Throw up you hands." Instead of obeying Mr. Opheim backed towards an adjoining room. Just as he had got through the door and seized a glass vial to defend himself the young desperado fired, the bullet barely missing Mr. Opheim. Before he could fire again Mr. Opheim smashed a bottle in his face and then got out of the back door double quick and called for help. Before any one arrived at the store the two toughs had gone. They were seen running across the railroad track towards the Thorpe elevator, after which they were lost to view. A search was made but they were lost to view. The boys were about 16 and 18 years old respectively, and had been hanging around town in company with two others since Monday afternoon. Nothing was taken from the store and Mr. Opheim fortunately escaped without injury, though it was a narrow escape.

WILD BEASTS OF INDIA.

SPORTSMEN FIND PLENTY OF EXCITING QUARRIES.

The Wild Boar Is the Best and Bravest. The Rhinoceros' Acute Senses of Smell and Hearing—Points on Hunting the Savage Animals.

Of all Indian animals the wild boar is the best and bravest. I have seen a great deal of him, having for many years hunted him on horseback or with a line of elephants to drive him out of the thick coverts, so that other men well mounted on fleet horses might pursue and slay him with their spears. I was but an indifferent performer with the hog spear, and have no feats of prowess to recount, though I once took a first spear where about ten other men were eager for that honor; but it was a very small boar, and it was quite his own fault that he fell into my hands, for I was sitting smoking at the end of a covert, just thinking of starting for home after a blank morning, when the animal rushed out and in self defense I was obliged to spear it. How angry some of the other men were at my luck, though they did not all know how unmerited it was.

It was most interesting to watch the dodges and devices of a cunning old gray boar as I stood in my howdah and tried to get the elephants to drive him out at a point convenient for the riders. The boar usually had his own ideas as to the line he would take if he were compelled to face the open; but before coming to that last resource he would try everything else. Perhaps it was not heroic conduct on his part, but he would seek to induce the old fat sow, his wife, with her infant progeny, to go out and show themselves as a blind to the hunters. If there were any of his older sons in the jungle he would roust them from their hiding places and try to drive them out, to become a vicarious sacrifice.

THE CUNNING BOAR.

He would lie down and hide himself in an incredible small patch of grass, so that the elephants might pass him by unsuspectingly; or, if too carelessly pressed by a loose line, he would charge right at some loitering elephant's legs; and there are very few elephants that will not flinch and turn aside from a wild boar's charge. It needed much patience and watchfulness to contend with all the wiles of the clever animal. I usually carried a gun loaded with snipe shot, and a charge fired into the grass or bushes just behind where the boar was moving generally startled him, and if a chance pellet hit him he thought it best to quit the covert and trust to his speed to reach some stronger shelter or swamp impenetrable to elephants and horses.

It takes a very fast horse to catch a full grown boar in a gallop over the open plain, but every experienced rider knows that he must go as hard as he can if he means to spear the animal. I shall not try to repeat the oft told story of the mortal combat that ensues. Oftentimes I could see all the incidents of the chase from my howdah, for not unfrequently the boar when overtaken would jink and come round again to the jungle from which he had started. When men ride really well the boar seldom escapes, unless he has the luck to find some deep swamp through which the horses cannot follow him.

A full grown wild boar in lower Bengal is about thirty inches high, but they are sometimes found as high as thirty-six inches, and there is a skeleton in the Indian museum in Calcutta of a boar that was forty inches at the shoulder. There is almost as much difference in the anatomy of a wild boar and a tame one as there is between a man-of-war and a merchant ship.

THE RHINOCEROS.

In the size of the brain the wild boar has a marked superiority, and perhaps this accounts for his great courage, which makes him fearless of everything. One morning, looking out of a railway carriage, I saw a wild boar come charging down at the passing train, but he missed it, for the train was going too fast for him, and he was a little hampered in forcing his way through the wire railway fencing.

I had something to do with rhinoceros, but never succeeded in shooting one, though. I sought them for three long and hot days under the guidance of the best sportsmen in Assam, and I visited their haunts in the Sunderbunds with men of great local experience. But the rhinoceros, like all big animals, has acute senses of smelling and hearing, and makes off at the slightest indication of danger. We had a large one in the Calcutta Zoo which was very tame, and when it got a bad abscess in the head, of which it eventually died, it used to come and lie down to have its ear syringed by the veterinary surgeon, whom it learned to recognize.

There were two fine rhinoceros in the rajah's menagerie at Burdwan in the inclosure in which the crocodiles were kept, for the pond in which the crocodiles used to swim served also as a bathing place for the rhinoceros. One day a young pig had been turned into the inclosure to become food for the crocodiles, and as these animals don't travel very fast on land piggy led them a lively chase, and at last, perhaps by chance, it took refuge under the legs of one of the rhinoceros, which was looking on solemnly, but when the crocodiles approached the rhinoceros the latter presented his horn and warned the crocodiles to be off. And so the pig survived and grew up and lived for some months under the protection of the rhinoceros.—Longman's Magazine.

A Mistaken Notion.

It should be distinctly understood that the idea that ice water is injurious is a mistaken notion, imported with other English fads, like the docking of horses' manes and tails, drawling the vowels and the "stony British stare." Spinsters with chronic indigestion, stout women with their interiors in a state of constant inflammation, men whose stomachs are inflamed and people getting over the grip, with internals weak, fevered and irritable to an incredible degree rightly find ice water injurious, as cold well water would be poured over a patient in a high fever, or rather like throwing cold water on a red hot boiler. Cold water is intolerable to an inflamed eye, which finds warm water soothing, and inflamed stomachs rebel against sudden chilling draughts in the same way, but nobody feels that cold water is unsafe for healthy eyes or healthy throats.—Shirley Dare in New York Herald.

That Warm Southern Kiss.

While the kiss of a pretty woman might be considered a harmless compliment anywhere it is doubly a compliment—twice as sweet and romantic—when given beneath the oaks of a moonlit park, with the stars trembling like diamonds through the dewy leaves and the lull of flowing fountains splashing their silver spray over the bared bosoms of water nymphs and bronze gods with beautiful blind eyes.—Atlanta Constitution.

DRINKING WATER FOR PARIS.

Plans for Providing a Bountiful Supply for the Capital of France.

The Galignani Messenger, in some recent articles on the water supply of Paris, gives the views of Professor Senator Cornil, who is for the purchase of the Avre springs. In the course of an interview on the subject he stated that the quantity of spring water at the disposal of the inhabitants is altogether inadequate. "Two remedies," he said, "have been proposed. The first one is a system of double canalization in each house. There would be a small pipe for the supply of spring water and a larger one for river water for washing and cleansing purposes. But this project would cost 100,000,000 francs and occupy ten years in execution. The other plan is to filter the water taken from the Seine by means of sand; it is suggested that sand pits for the purpose might be established, as at Nantes. But this system would be impracticable in Paris, where no fewer than 200 pits of the kind would be required.

"The open reservoir system, with decantation and filtration, has yielded fairly satisfactory results in England; but the process is slow and imperfect, as the filtering bed has to be so frequently renewed. Nothing, therefore, can so advantageously replace a supply taken from springs situated at a sufficient altitude. We must, therefore, conclude in favor of the scheme for drawing our water supply from the Avre springs, however much we may regret the necessity of depriving a district of a portion of its water. I am aware that the inhabitants of the valley of the Avre have loudly protested against the scheme and have suggested that we should draw our supply from the Cailly springs, but these are situated at a level below that of the Seine. To pump up the water to the heights of Paris would require the use of powerful machines, which would cost at least 5,000,000 francs."

Dr. Cornil then showed the economy of the project now before the chambers. The water which it was proposed to bring from the Avre springs, situated near Verneuil, distant about fifty-two miles from Paris, can easily be conveyed to the capital in a state of the utmost purity. It would be supplied at the average rate of 1,263 liters per second, or 110,000 cubic meters per day, during the months of June, July and August, when the consumption of Paris is at its maximum. During the first six months of the year, when the water is most abundant, the yield would be at the rate of 1,485 liters per second, or 128,000 cubic meters per day. The total cost of construction of the works would be 35,000,000 francs, and the cost of the maintenance thereafter only 50,000 francs per annum. The former sum would be drawn from the loan of 550,000,000 francs which the city of Paris had been authorized to raise under the law of July 18, 1886, and was specially provided for in the clauses of the bill. It will be three years before the scheme can be carried out, and in the meantime Parisians will do well to filter their own water.

The Zither at Alexander's Feast.

We know that at the wedding festivities of Alexander the Great with Statira, the daughter of Darius, some of the most famous kitharists, as Kathrinos of Methymna, Athenodores of Tejos, and others, had to play. It is also known that some of the best zither players of those days, like Anobeos, received a magnificent remuneration for public appearances—an Attic talent (about $500) being nothing unusually high for the performance. Under the Roman emperors, too, the kithara, often changed and improved, flourished as a fashionable instrument, and even as late as 1150 after Christ the Greek Emperor Manuel esteemed the famous kitharist, Samotheres Logotheta very highly because of his art.

During the following centuries several varieties of zitherlike instruments were in use, such as the cithara barbara, the cithara tontonica, and the psalterium in Germany and adjoining countries, the crowt in England and Scotland, and the verginale or clarichordiun later on—about 1500. The latter, together with the psalter, were popular in nearly all European countries, and it was really not until the time that the forerunners of the present piano, the spinet, etc., came into general use—about the end of the last century—that the zither went out of date.—American Art Journal.

Jay Gould's Office.

Probably to most persons the most interesting object in Mr. Jay Gould's office in the Western Union building is Mr. Gould himself. The room itself is rather handsomely furnished in a substantial way, but there are scores of down town offices which surpass it in gorgeousness. It has windows opening on Broadway and Dey street, and there is no trouble about the light. Mr. Gould sits at a big desk facing the entrance. Occasionally a visitor sees something to indicate that he is in a place where real millions figure in the calculations of the establishment. The other day there was a chair in the office which nobody sat in. It was occupied by a big pile of papers whose respectable green has conveyed suggestions of bonds and stocks and other securities. But Mr. Gould hardly glanced at the delightful pile of paper. He acted as if he were used to seeing such things every day, even where the folks didn't have company.—New York Times.

Old Time Boodle.

The "general court" did not go without its little perquisites in colony days. According to Dr. Shurtleff's "Topography of Boston" Governor's island was "granted and confirmed to the said John Winthrop and his heirs in fee farms, for which they are to pay only two bushels of apples every year—one bushel to the governor and another to the general court in winter—the same to bee of the best apples there growing." "It is supposed," says Dr. Shurtleff, "that the apples were faithfully paid in every year, and that each of the members of the general court carried home his pockets full, for again in 1642 the following significant entry appears upon the records: 'The bushell of apples was paid in.'"—Boston Transcript.

Recreation.

"No one," declares Cicero, "seems to me free who does not sometimes do nothing." Then he goes on to tell how certain noble Romans amused themselves in the country by indulging, boy like, in all sorts of frolics. Evidently they jumped and ran themselves into physical well being and ability to take up the severer duties of life again.

"Who is your doctor?" said some one to Carlyle.

"My best doctor," replied he, "is a horse."—Youth's Companion.

A New Thing in Leather.

First Tramp—Say, cully, gimme a bit of string to tie on my corporations.

Second Tramp—What yer givin' us? What yer mean?

First Tramp—Only a new name for dese yer shoes. Dey's got no soles.—Pittsburg Bulletin.

Red Lake Falls News.

BOYLE & MEEHAN, Editors & Proprietors.

TERMS, $1.50 A YEAR.

COUNT TOLSTOI is still so weak and emanciated that he can hardly walk about the fields, but he is nevertheless engaged on a new novel.

THE omission of Jay Gould from the census didn't make any more difference in the count than the omission of a bootblack. The census is in its way a leveler.

AMERICAN dentists pack away every year in defective teeth about 1,800 pounds of gold worth $450,000. Cemeteries will be the best gold mines some day.

MR, ALPHONSO R. JAMES living at eighty-six years of age in Providence, R. I., reports that sixty years ago he was told by his physician that he had consumption and would die. He therefore adopted a bread and fruit diet, and thinks that this is why he still lives.

THE telephone has played an important part in the manœuvres of the Swedish fleet. There is a telephonic post on board each vessel, and when lying at anchor they can telephone to one another by means of insulated conductors, which are run down the anchor chains and submerged.

WHILE a political meeting was impatiently listening to a speech in Alabama, recently, somebody got away with the meat and drink with which the rally was to wind up and the ungorged freemen came near lynching some negroes who were suspected of the abstraction.

DR. FISHER, of St. Louis, kissed a saloonkeeper's wife without her permission, and was put to bed for four days after being interviewed by the irate husband. He then sued the saloonkeeper, who was discharged by the judge with a compliment upon his "domestic loyalty and pugilistic ability."

THE St. Paul clergyman who is delivering a series of discourses on the question, "Why Doesn't He Marry? has struck an important topic. If there is any reason why he or she doesn't marry it is time it was ascertained to the end that it may be removed. The boarding-house is a poor substitute for the home on which to base a wholesome national prosperity or an advancing civilization.

"IT IS not intellectual work that injures the brain," says the London Hospital, "but emotional excitement. Most men can stand the severest thought and study of which their brains are capable, and be none the worse for it; for neither thought nor study interfers with the recuperative influence of sleep. It is ambition, anxiety and disappointment, the hopes and fears, the loves and hates of our lives, that wear out our nervous system and endanger the balance of the brain."

THE "pride, pomp and circumstance of glorious war" will suffer from the result of the late French manœuvers. All gay colors and glittering ornaments are to be excluded from the uniforms, and bayonets will no longer shine. The "smokeless powder" question is still unsettled. It seems to be agreed that the troops of the republic have made great progress during the past year, and now compare favorably with those of any other power.

FOR 110 years to come, no man, woman or child will write the current date without using the figure 9; for nineteen years during that period two 9's must be written—in 1899, 1909, 1919, 1929, 1939, 1949, 1959, 1969, 1979, 1989, 1990, 1991, 1992, 1993, 1994, 1995, 1996, 1997, 1998; and for one year—1999—three 9's will have to be set down. Of the people now living, it is safe to say that not one will ever write the date of his or her own time without using a 9. Besides minding their p's and q's, the next three generations must give particular heed to their 9's. Nine has never been regarded as a particularly lucky number, but beyond question the years in which it will hold so conspicuous a place will bring benefits of undreamed-of value to the world.

NEWS SIFTINGS.

Criminal, Personal, Foreign and Other Interesting News Items.

WASHINGTON.

The collector of customs at Port Townsend, Wash., reports to the treasury department under the date of Sept. 26, that Inspetor Jacklin, on Sept. 24, captured a sloop with twenty Chinamen aboard, bound from British Columbia to a landing in that state. Two men in charge of the vessel ran her ashore near Port Haddock and escaped. The Chinamen were captured and imprisoned at McNeil's island, awaiting extradition.

PERSONAL.

Hon. W. J. Campbell has been chosen by the Republican state central committee as the Illinois member of the Republican national committee.

ACCIDENTAL.

At Portland, Ore., Eli Gherhatt and four children, Morris Erickson, Lilly Chapman and others drank lemonade in which tartar emetic had been used by mistake instead of tartaric acid. Three of the victims will die.

At Washington, Pa., a Mrs. Ladshow poured nitro glycerine, which she thought was carbon oil, onto the fire. The result was an explosion, the house was wrecked, and Mrs. Ladshaw, her husband and their child were seriously if not fatally injured.

A bluff near the village of St. Pierre, thirty miles from Quebec, suddenly tumbled into the Riviere du Sud, carrying with it the house, barn and sheds of Matheis Gaynon, a strip of land half a mile long and 250 yards wide and eleven inmates of Mr. Gaynon's house, three of whom were killed and the remaining eight badly injured.

At Chewan, McNairy county, Tenn., five men were instantly killed by the explosion of a steam boiler belonging to Mr. Gurley. Gurley's body was torn into shreds. William Johnson had his head torn from his body and it was thrown fifty yards from the mill. Walter Pitman and his brother and a son of Gurley's were killed. A negro was injured, and it is thought he will die.

SINS AND SINNERS.

The case of the police for assaults on Nationalists in Tipperary ended in a row, the Nationalists and their friends leaving the court room, and the case dropped.

At Frankfort, Md., Deputy Marshal Bird was shot and fatally wounded by Alfred Palmer, a mere boy, whom Bird had arrested on the charge of horse stealing.

The special committee that has been investigating the books and accouts of ex-City Treasurer Fitzpatrick, of Terre Haute, Ind., has reported a total deficiency of $25,500.

The St. Louis pool rooms have suffered tremendous losses during the past month, and seven bookmakers are "broke." It is estimated that $100,000 has been taken from them.

Two of the robbers of the express messenger at Bellefontaine, Ohio, have been arrested. The other, who secured $600, is still at large. The amount secured by the robbers was less than $1,000.

James M. Dougherty, the insane lover of Mary Anderson-Navarro, the well known actress, shot and killed Assistant Superintendent Dr. Lloyd, of the Kings county (N. Y.) insane asylum

Recent developments indicate that the stealing of cattle in the Cherokee strip, Indian Territory, has been carried on in a wholesale manner for the past six or eight months, during which time thousands of cattle have been stolen.

William Sprague, Jr., grandson of Salmon P. Chase, and only son of ex-Gov. Sprague of Rhode Island, has committed suicide at Seattle, Wash., by inhaling chloroform. Deceased was employed by the Seattle Journal. Despondency prompted the suicide.

Two young men, Robert D. George and James F. Hafley of Limestone county, Ala., were remanded at the Yorkville court, New York, on the charge of dealing in "green goods." A complete outfit of green tinted paper, tied up to resemble rolls of bills and $1,800 in genuine money, were found in their possession.

Capt. Mike Enright, a prominent vessel captain, met his wife walking with a man named William Murphy, at Toledo, Ohio. Enright pulled a revolver and shot Murphy through the mouth. Murphy ran and Enright sent three bullets into his wife's body. The wife walked home, but will probably die, while Murphy will live, but is badly hurt. Enright was arrested.

At Clarence, Io., a young man named Matthias, drove to the house of Johnson Stears, a farmer, and invited the latter's daughter to take a drive. She refused, and her father ordered Matthias from the premises. Matthias then drew a revolver and fired, first at Stears and then at a brother of the girl, missing them both. He then shot himself through the breast, inflicting fatal injuries. Matthias was intoxicated.

Dewitt Jones of Leggett Texas, was called out of a saloon by Jim Parker and Alex Lowe. As he got outside of the door he was shot in the back by one of them. Uriah Freeman at once went to the door and commenced shooting at Parker and Lowe, who returned the fire. Lowe was killed outright. Parker was shot in the stomach and is dying. Freeman was shot in the left arm and side. Jones was shot in the back and breast. It is thought that none of the wounded men can recover. The quadruple killing had its origin in politics.

While crazed with drink John Hudloran of Cumming, Geo., ran amuck through the crowd at a camp meeting. Leander Moore and George Walds went to him and asked him to leave the arbor, but he declined to do so. They then undertook to carry him away, when he drew a knife and cut both of them badly. Thus freeing himself, he rushed through the congregation with knife in hand, slashing every one in his reach. Just before quitting the arbor he ran past Miss Dooly and stabbed her fatally. He was finally knocked down, disarmed and turned over to the officers. More than twenty persons were wounded by him.

Ed Stacey was killed at Mullen, Idaho, by E. A. Davidson. Stacey and his partner, Bassett, who have been a terror to Idaho, concluded that they would throw the country into excitement by robbing every saloon from Pottsville to Sturgis, in Montana. Disguising themselves with masks and putting on old clothes they started on the expedition. The first place they came to they found only 90 cents. They then killed the keeper because he did not have more money. Stacey was afterwards shot by Davidson, whom he tried to rob. A posse started in search of Bassett. If captured he will be lynched.

Since the conviction of Birchall at Woodstock, Con., has been constantly talking about the murder of Benwell, and it is probable that before the date set for his execution arrives he will have made a clean breast of the crime. He has already made a number of important admissions regarding the case. He acknowledges that he was an accessory, and confesses that he took Benwell to Eastwood and beyond, in the direction of the swamp where the body of the young Englishman was discovered, but denies that it was his hand that slew Benwell, He does not say much about his negotiations with the victim and his father, though he freely admits he went in to swindle both them and Pelly.

A sensational suicide occurred at Redwood, Cal. Louise Esslinger, aged 22, was wedded to George Wehrlin, at the residence of C. Groner, her uncle. The wedding was attended by a large number of friends. At 4 o'clock she and her husband were taken to their residence. She refused to allow him to enter her room, and he was compelled to return to the residence of Mr. Groner to pass the remainder of the night. On again entering his house in the morning he was horrified to find his wife lying dead in bed. In the bed were some grains of a crystal substance, the nature of which has not yet been determined. She left no letter of explanation. Miss Esslinger has been in Redwood six weeks, and was engaged to Wehrlin only four weeks. It is conjectured that a former lover in Portland, Ore., proved false to her.

FOREIGN GRIST.

Another revolution is apprehended in Hayti. The financial condition of the republic is unsatisfactory.

Through the bursting of a reservoir at La Londe, France, five persons were killed and thirty injured.

The British ministry is bringing all the influence possible to bear upon the pontiff against the bestowal of a cardinal's hat upon Arch-bishop Walsh of Ireland.

A meeting of the Holland cabinet will shortly be summoned for the purpose of proclaiming a regency in consequence of the serious illness of the king.

A treaty has been signed by Germany and Zanzibar relative to the coasting trade along the east coast of Africa. The German government pays the sultan of Zanzibar $1,000,000 for the concession:

Thirty arrests have been made in connection with a workmen's political movement in St. Petersburg. The prisoners have been secretly examined by the police department. In the interior others have been arrested charged with the manufacture of bombs.

When the Austrian and German emperors were leaving Muerzsteg for Neuberg the horses to their carriage shied and dashed the vehicle against a fence, breaking the pole. The emperors alighted unhurt, and walked until they were overtaken by the king of Saxony's carriage.

Dom Pedro, the ex-emperor of Brazil, has arrived in Cologne. He is described as looking very unhappy and broken down, and is continually accompanied by an attendant, owing to his enfeebled condition. At intervals in conversation he is heard to mutter "Brazil, Oh dear Brazil." It is feared that his mind is weakening.

Inquiry was made at the war office in London regarding the story from Halifax, that the Grenadier Guards, who were recently sent to Bermuda, from London, because of the insuborination which was showing itself in the regiment, were suffering to an alarming extent from enteric fever, and that many deaths had occurred. It was learned that the war office had heard nothing of the matter, save through the Halifax story.

OTHERWISE.

President Oakes, of the Northern Pacific, maintains that the new land grant forfeiture law is a benefit to his company.

The agent at San Carlos, Ariz., in answer to an inquiry whether the Kid had killed six scouts and wounded others, states that the whole story is a canard.

About 130 shoe manufacturers, representing all parts of the country, met in New York and decided to advance the price of shoes from 25 to 50 cents a pair.

The miners of the Monongahela (Pa.) district will demand an increase of half a cent per bushel this month, If the operators refuse the demand a strike will ensue which will affect 6,000 miners.

The officers and leading stockholders of the Granite Monntain mine, at a recent meeting in St. Louis, gave a ninety-day option on the property to the American Investment company of London at a figure close to $30,000,000.

The Knights of Labor who were instrumental in causing the strike on the New York Central are going to make a fight in the courts against the fiat of the Central road against the Knights. They are to be supported in the fight by the general council.

A tale of true love with spicy variations, was told by William Reno of a Minnesota town in a Tacoma police court. The telling points in the narrative are Reno's flight with his bride from Spokane to Ogden, to San Francisco and to Tacoma. He reached Tacoma ahead of his prospective parents-in-law and was duly wedded to Miss Mary Helen Reed of Spokane Falls.

State's Attorney C. A. Works, in his charge to the grand jury for the October term of the circuit court, at Rockford Ill., referred to the charges made by press and people against the self-styled divinity, George Jacob Schweinfurth, and asked that body to investigate them. It is probable than an indictment will be found against Schweinfurth. The sheriff has served papers on the dwellers in "Heaven" to appear before the grand jury.

John Reilly, a carpenter, of Springfield, Ohio, while tearing up the half-rotted floor in the kitchen of Mrs. Nolan's house in Urbana, found a small sack, mildewed and dusty, which contained about $5,000 in gold, silver and bills. Both Reilly and Mrs. Nolan claim the money. The rightful owners are believed to be a Mr. and Mrs. Fitzpatrick, who formerly owned and lived in the house. They went West a few years ago, and their whereabouts are not known.

The strange case of a man flayed alive and afterward passing through an ordeal of unparalleled experiences has been brought to public attention at Indianapolis, Ind., by the recovery of Wesley Kellar, a woodworker who fell into a steam vat at the Indianapolis Veneer works two months ago. His flesh was cooked, and the doctors decided that there was only one chance in a thousand of having his life saved by removing the skin from his body. After two days this was done. He was peeled from head to foot. Frog's skin was grafted on as the dead skin was removed. The operation has proven a complete success, and the man has recovered sufficietly to be able to return to work.

The count of Paris and his party arrived at Trenton, N. J., and were received by Gen. Stryker and a number of the state officials. It took eleven coaches to convey the entire party to Riverside cemetery, where Gen. McClellan is buried. As the count passed the monument recently erected to the general, he raised his hat and then proceeded to the grave some 200 yards distant. He knelt on his dead commander's mound and wept, while all those who circled around him lifted their hats. The French Republican press join in expressing the opinion that the Comte de Paris has chosen his visit to America at this time in order to escape the embarrassing effect of the Boulanger revelations.

Little Tommy O'Rourke, who has been lost in the woods near Foley Station in Benton county Minn., ever since Saturday, Sept. 28, for whom search was made in the woods and false clues were followed by the Benton county officials and for whom a special train left St. Cloud by the Great Northern, was fonnd by his cousin, Michael O'Rourke. The child was discovered sitting on a stump about a mile and a half from where he was seen, and was almost in a famished condition. With careful nursing, however, he will live. In the interval he has subsisted entirely on acorns and water, and that he should have survived is considered little short of a miracle, being his ninth day out. His recovery occasions the wildest excitement, as the whole surrounding country was interested in the search.

VERY BAD CHARGES.

A Sort of Annex Said to Exist in the Census Bureau at Washington.

The Concern Declared to Have Changed the Returns from the States.

WASHINGTON, Special Telegram, Oct. 13.—A dispatch from Washington published in the New York World this morning makes some startling charges against the census bureau.

It states that for a month the World has been investigating to find the true source of the errors which have been proven to exist in all parts of the country, and has in its possession evidence which implicates one congressman from Brooklyn, some political managers in that city, and a half-dozen clerks in the census office, in an attempt to defraud many of the states of the Union out of their legitimate congressional representation. Its charges are very direct, the names of four census clerks being given. The article charges that a secret office was fitted up at 206 D street, where clerks were detailed to alter the true census returns by scaling down the increasing totals to fit the political ideas of the managers of the scheme. The article makes ten specific charges, among them being the following:

That an order was given an official in the census office (with or without the knowledge and approval of high authorities in this government) to reduce the true census of New York State 300,000.

That the State of New Hampshire, which has lost population, was to be scaled up so that its present quota of congressional representation should not be changed.

That Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, Maine and Minnesota were to be "very liberally counted," and that the blunders at Minneapolis and St. Paul arose from a stupid misinterpretation of instructions.

That this infamous job has, to a large extent, been carried, and that when the researches of the World frightened the conspirators they removed the secret office from No. 203 D street, Washington, to Cathedral srteet, Baltimore, near the monument, where for the past six weeks the dastardly work has been in progress.

A FIRE TRAP.

Four Lives Lost by a Fire in a Chicago Hotel.

CHICAGO, Oct. 13.—Early this morning Putnam's European hotel on East Adams street, was burned and four persons lost their lives, viz.:

Mrs. Minnie Robinson, killed by jumping from a window; Tom Dowler, a barber, burned to a crisp; H. K. Sams, formerly a Pinkerton attache, burned to death; Edward Peyton, colored porter, suffocated.

The cause of the fire is still unknown. The house is lighted by gas, and the proprietor insists that there was no lamp in the hall. The fire originated in and was confined to the top floor. The loss is about $3,000. Tom Dowler left his room and entered the flaming hall to meet his death. One of the windows opened directly on the fire escape, and his room mate made his escape easily. Presence of mind would have saved his life as well as that of H. K. Sims, who had a room directly across the hall.

Mr. Robinson descended the fire-escape, carrying with him his infant child. His wife did not follow him from the room along the hall to the room in front of which was the fire-escape. The dense smoke and flames made her lose command of her senses. The building resembles a fire-trap. The halls are narrow and crooked and the narrow stairway is in the center of the structure. A very little fire was needed to make sufficient smoke to fill the halls and render them impasssible.

Mrs. Robinson, who leaped from the fourth story of the building after being roasted alive, died at the county hospital at 4:10 o'clock this morning. Strange to relate, she made the tragic descent to the stone sidewalk without receiving any broken bones or displacement of either of her limbs. She was burned almost to a crip over her entire person save where protected by her corset which she had not taken off when retiring.

MURDER AND SUICIDE.

The Bodies of an Actor and a Dissolute Woman Found in Lake Michigan.

CHICAGO, Oct. 13.—Last evening the body of a woman was found in the lake at the foot of Peck court. This morning two fishermen found the body of a man floating near the same place and towed it to the shore. Both bodies indicated that they had been at least a week in the water. The body of this woman was found to be that of Annie V. Dallas, while the man was identified as Lawrence McBeth.

The woman was of questionable character. The man's real name is said to be Beath and his home was in Sarnia, Canada. He had been an actor, at one time being with Frank Mayo's "Davy Crockett," and afterwards with the "Silver King" combination. A week ago they had their last spat and left the house at No. 527 South Clark street together about midnight. Nothing more was heard or seen of them until their bodies were found in the lake.

Robbed and Fatally Drugged.

OMAHA, Special Telegram, Oct. 13.—Charles F. Shieffle, night agent at the Union Pacific transfer depot in Council Bluffs, was taken suddenly ill on a cable car near the Coliseum last night and died in a short time. He left home on Friday night with a gold watch and about a hundred dollars in money. These were missing. It is supposed that he had been induced to drink drugged liquor and then robbed. His stomach was removed to-day and sent to a chemist for analysis.

Struck With a Plate.

ABERDEEN, S. D., Special Telegram, Oct. 13.—In a dispute over some money between Joseph King and Rasmus Nelson at the residence of the latter, King took plates from the supper table and threw three in quick succession at Nelson. One plate struck Nelson on the head, making an ugly and dangerous wound, laying the scalp open to the bone. King fled from the city and escaped arrest.

An Insane Grand Duke.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—It has been learned that at the close of the Russian military manœuvres in Volhynia the Grand Duke Nicholas, who had the chief command of the army, suddenly became insane from the effects of the disease from which he has long suffered, and that melancholy and heartrending scenes occurred until he was removed incognito to Gen. Martyroff's estate in the don Steppes. The physicians declare that his condition is hopeless. It is reported that the czar wishes his son to abandon his proposed Eastern trip.

STILL LIVES.

Justice Miller Continues With Little Change, but the End Is Near.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—There has been little change in Justice Miller's condition since early morning. All day the physicians and watchers have been gathered around his bedside momentarily expecting dissolution, and it has only been owing to his wonderful vitality and recuperative powers that he he lived through the day. Physicians say that he has been dying all day, and that the end is not far off. This morning respiration became shorter, his pulse slightly increased, his lungs filled with phlegm and he experienced great difficulty in breathing.

Throughout the day he has been in a comatose condition with no indications of rallying and the beat of the heart indicating the only sign of life to his watchers. From daybreak it was evident his condition was gradually growing worse though slowly, every development showing plainly the approach of death. Dr. Cook has been in attendance at the sick man's bed nearly all day, being relieved several times by Dr. Lincoln. At 3 o'clock when Dr. Lincoln called he noted a marked change in the patient's condition, and knew then he was past medical assistance. During the day and evening a large number of persons called many only leaving their cards, among them the justices associates on the supreme bench, members of the cabinet and other prominent officials. The justices only were admitted to the sick room where Mrs. Miller and the nurses have constanly watched by the bedside of the distinguished jurist.

A telegram was received during the day saying that Mrs. Touzalin and Mrs. Corkhill, the justice's daughter, had left Omaha for Washington and would arrive here tomorrow afternoon. During the day Mrs. Harrison called and spent some time at the house, and in the evening Chief Justice Fuller called and remained several hours. Chief Clerk McKenney, of the supreme court, has been in constant attendance at the house to give any instructions that may be necessary.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13, 2:30 a. m.—At 2 a. m. Justice Miller was still alive.

THE SUPREME COURT.

Cases to Come Up in the October Term Beginning To-Day.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—The October term of the United States supreme court will begin to-morrow. The familiar face of its oldest member, Justice Miller, will be missing. The session to-morrow will be brief. A few preliminary motions will be received unless the death of Justice Miller, as is generally expected, occurs before the court convenes, in which case an adjournment will be at once taken out of respect to the memory of the justice.

A dozen or more cases which had been argued at the last term still remain to be decided, but it will probably be two weeks before the court announces any decisions. The most important of the cases which come over from last term are those between Colorado mining corporations, involving a construction of some very important mining questions. The coming term of court, it is expected, will be a busy one. A number of interesting cases will be pressed for hearing.

Notice has already been given that an effort will be made to impeach the constitutionality of the New York electrocution law, on the ground that "in it is a cruel and unusual punishment." The Japanese Jugigo is the man in whose behalf this point will be raised. Another case which will attract attention will be an appeal brought here to secure the release of one of the Chicago anarchists now in prison under a heavy sentence. The liquor laws of various states, however, will furnish the largest number of cases of general interest. The court will early be given an opportunity to reaffirm the doctrines laid down in the original package decision. After the court's opinion in the Iowa case three dealers were arrested for opening "original package" houses in Kansas. They were arrested and convicted in a state court, and the question now to be decided is as to the legality of the order of one of the United States judges declaring their arrests contrary to law. From Vermont comes another case, arising under prohibition statutes, and other states, it is thought, will contribute their quota toward swelling the ine of this class of suits.

A FIREMAN KILLED.

The Fatal Result of a Switchman's Mistake Near Como.

ST. PAUL, Special Telegram Oct. 13.—At the switch where the Rice street yard of the Great Northern railway connects with the main line just west of Como avenue station there was a collision between two freight trains late yesterday afternoon which resulted in the death of one man and the serious injury of several others.

The collision was caused by the mistake of the switchman in letting a Great Northern freight, west bound, run on to the wrong track, where it collided with an Omaha transfer train coming in.

The man who was killed was John Hills, the fireman of the Great Northern. J. E. Kennedy, the conductor of the same train, was seriously injured, being cut about the face and head. His nose was painful cut, his chin was also badly cut, and a deep gash was made near the eye. Kennedy is a single man and his home is in West Superior, Wis. N. Whalen, a brakeman of the Great Northern, was also hurt, but not seriously. The two wounded men were taken to St. Joseph's hospital.

Three more of the men injured were later taken to St. Joseph's hospital, where their injuries were attended to by Dr. Hoyt. James English of Freeport, Ill., twenty-three years old, a brakeman on the Omaha, had his left shoulder badly hurt. Absalom Anderson, twenty-four years old, fireman on the Omaha engine, was badly shocked, but not severely injured. His home is at New York Mills. W. A. Johnston, living at Uniontown, Wash., was in charge of some stock. He was considerably shocked, but escaped serious injury.

A Murder Mystery.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Oct. 13.—The police are investigating a supposed murder mystery [illegible] Brand, a colored man aged twenty two, was found dead this morning in the door yard of his sister's residence at 7 Waller court. A red mark about his neck showed that he had beenf strangled, and from a projecting scantling was a piece of clothes line, but suicide seemed out of the question. Brand lived across the street. Last night he went home intoxicated and drove everybody out of the house, assaulting two or three men. It is believed that Brand was afterward killed and the rope attached to the scantling to convey the idea of suicide. No arrests have been made.

Smoked in Church.

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—A man of large frame and very well dressed, except that he was barefooted, walked down the aisle of aisele of the Church of the Holy Cross while mass was being said early this morning puffing vigorously at a lighted cigar. The sensation which he produced was of brie duration, for he was at once ejected. Outside he grew demonstrative and a policeman took him in charge. He described himself as Frederick Staaten of Albany. The county physician will examine into his sanity.

"Woof! Woof!" Said the Bear.

New Westminister (Wash.) Truth: Messrs. James Graham and James Condor, of the Upper Chilliwack valley, were recently off on a shooting and prospecting trip near Chilliwack Lake. Mr. Graham was taken with mountain fever one morning and remained in camp while his companion went out to hunt, when an adventure of a most extraordinary nature was encountered. Mr. Graham tells the story in these words: "It was a weary day for me, lying there fevered and almost helpless. Night came on and no Jim. I grew alarmed, as he could not possibly have lost his way, for the day was bright and clear. During the night I imagined I heard the faint sound of a voice in the distance. Daybreak came and no Jim. My fever had somewhat lessened so after taking a bath in the creek at hand. I determined to go in search of my missing companion. I deliberated about taking a gun with me on account of my weakness, but finally concluded to do so. I had not gone far up the mountains before I imagined I heard a faint voice calling on me in the distance. Hurrying as fast as my weak condition would allow I reached the edge of a deep gulch, and could then plainly hear him. Calling to him he answered me that he was at the top of a tall tree and that a big brown bear was at the foot. I drew cautiously near to get a shot at the bear before he observed me, but I stepped on a loose rock and it went rolling down the hill.

Instantly there was a "woof, woof," and the bear came plunging up hill; before he could reach me he had to cross an open space of twenty yards. Resting my gun across a log as soon as he came to the opening I fired and he fell. Before I could get another in the magazine of my Martin, he was up again. As soon as possible I fired again. Six more times did I fire at him and each time he would fall, but he got up each time instantly. At last he jumped over the log. As he did so I jumped over the other way and began to run down hill I could hear the brute panting behind me, and at last I slipped and fell. Then I felt a heavy weight pressing on me, but he was going at such a rate he could not stop, and went down past at least twenty yards. I jumped to my feet and began scrambling up a yew tree that stood conveniently at hand. When I got up a safe distance I looked and saw the bear climbing up the hill. He was covered with blood and reeled as he came. When he came to the foot of the tree he fell dead and went rolling down the hill. Jim soon joined me and told me that he had wounded it the day before and had just time to climb the tree, and it watched him all day and night. When we killed it we found three bullets had passed through its heart. It would weigh at least 1,000 pounds.

Where the Names Come From.

Did you ever stop to think why cretain thitgs have certain names names—where certain words come from? For, of course, you know there was a time when people only commanded a few words to express their meaning. The English language is composed of words from many languages, and even now, to express certain meanings, we have to borrow words. Many of these words become a part of our language, and we use them with no thought that we are using a foreign tongue.

Some one has said that to study the dictionary would make one familiar with the history of the world, and that to study out the change of meaning of some words would give the history of a race. A French scholar has studied out the names of certain kinds of woolen goods finding the origin of the names, and this is what he tells us:

Damask is from the city of Damascus; satins, from Zaytown, in China; calico, from Calicut, a town in India, formerly celebrated for its cotton cloth, and where calico was also printed; muslin is named from Mosul, in Asia; alpaca from an animal in Peru of the llama species; from whose wool the fabric is woven. Buckram takes its name from Fostat, a city of the Middle Ages, from which the modern Cairo is descended; taffetas and tabby, from a street in Bagdad; cambric, from Cambria; gauze has its name from Gaza; baize from Bajac; dimity, from Damietta, and jeans, from Jean; drugget is derived from a city in Ireland, Drogneda; duck comes from Torque, in Normandy; blanket is called after Thomas Blanket, a famous clothier connected with the introduction of woolens into England about 1340; serge derives its name from Xerga, a Spanish name for a peculiar woolen blanket; diaper is not from D'Y press, as it is sometimes stated, but from the Greek diaspron—figured; velvet is from the Italian vellute, wholly (Latin vellus, a hide or pelt); shawl is the Sancrit sala, floor, for shawls were first used as carpets and tapestry; bandana is from an Indian word, to blind or tie, because it is tied in knots before dyeing; chintz, from the Indian chott; delaine is the French of the wool.

SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT.

THE GROWING DISCONTENT.

A Craze for Wealth on the One Hand, Grinding Poverty on the Other.

It was the great Edmund Burke who wrote so learnedly when giving his "Thoughts on the Present Discontents," and many before and since have noticed a restlessness among the people. At present the discontented can be found in all countries. American soldiers have been so discontented that Congress and leading army officers have cudgeled their brains to find some way by which the number of desertions can be lessened. In England the famous and favorite of her majesty's troops have been sent to India for insubordination. And emute has recently been reported in Halifax, and the troops in Dublin are upon the verge of open revolt. Among the civilian class this discontent is also manifest, and is seeking satisfaction in various ways. In Russia the dissatisfaction of the common people, has found vent in an insane attack upon the Jews, which has resulted in a second, and this time an involuntary, exodus, where no Red Sea is called upon to open a passage way. The laboring classes in England are dissatisfied and thousands of them meet at intervals in Trafalgar square, and with more or less feeling discuss the situation. Farmers in this country are dissatisfied and are seeking in various ways to secure relief, while the laboring men were never more restless and uneasy.

Philosophers and economists have been endeavoring to account for this in vain. The world is wealthier and the rate of wages higher than ever before. Mechanics and their families live better and dress better than did lords and nobles a few hundred years ago, and as far as the comforts and luxuries of life are concerned, the man in comfortable circumstances enjoys more of them than did kings of old. Present discontents, therefore, do not arise from the condition of the people, but rather from an increase of intelligence and a spread of democratic ideas which demand more and more every year. What would have satisfied a nobleman in the past will not satisfy a day laborer now. Men being born free and equal can not submit quietly to any system of government or conditions of life that breeds and fosters disparities afterward. While one citizen must live in a garret and feed on crusts, he can not believe that his neighbor who spends $700,000 on a stable, has not been partially dealt with to the disadvantage of the poor.

However much we may yearn for that millenium dreamed of by theorists, seen in visions by philanthropists and pictured by the artists of the Bellamy school, there is but little encouragement to hope that a change is to be enjoyed in the near future that will bring about contentment and entire quiet. It is contrary to man's nature. The more intelligence is diffused the more dissatisfaction will exist because man's desires outstrip his ability to gratify them. This unrest is the cause of man's advancement. Were we all satisfied, improvement could not come. At present the world, collectively and individually, is engrossed in the task of accumulating wealth. Not a very high pursuit, it may be observed, because the acquisition of wealth is merely an animal instinct which, fired by ambition, has been intensified into a craze. It is well to obey the biblical injunction, and provide for one's household, but the spectacle of sensible people making life a burden to themselves in the race for wealth that they can not possibly use is ridiculous. The deification of the dollar, the unequal distribution of wealth and an irrational view of life may be said to cause discontent at present. Until people can look upon the world through different glasses, or until ambition finds a new parallax, little change can be expected. People should learn to enjoy the possession of what they have, and spend less time in an insatiate yearning for what they have not, if happiness is desired. It is quite as necessary and as much a duty to provide one's household with sound bodies, healthy and unwarped minds and correct ideas as it is to furnish lands and estates. The Oriental maiden who makes display of her burdensome estate of rings, coins and other trinkets, by wearing them around her neck, we esteem vulgar and foolish. Yet she is inspired by the same motive that impels a man to load himself down with strife and misery in the gathering and display of a wealth which is worthless to him because he can never use it, and which finds its root in the purely animal desire for the preservation of life, or, as it is called, the law of self defense. Tariffs may be raised or lowered, the earth may give forth a tenfold increase and people will be better off, but not less discontented, until insane ambition passes its perihelion and recedes into space, leaving virtue, purity and unselfishness the objects of pursuit. The diffusion of intelligence is hastening the good day.

TWO WOMEN

And Why They Are Single Taxers.

Brooklyn Citizen.

Miss Lillian Headifen is an active member of the Eastern District Single Tax Club, rarely missing any of the meetings. Her rare musical talent and sweet disposition have endeared her to the members. Asked as to the reasons which induced her to accept the single tax, she said: "I first attended a meeting of the Eastern District Club on invitation of Mrs. Deverall, who asked me to come and sing. Solely to oblige her I went, knowing little and caring less about the single tax. I was content to feel that, where my good friends, Mr. and Mrs. Deverall were, my life, at least, would be safe. Well, when my turn came, I sang my little part, and later, when the discussion came on, I found my indifference gradually disappearing, and before the evening closed I was as vigorous in my applause (size, etc., considered) as any person in the hall. A few more meetings and I was anxious to join the club, and here I am," said the little lady with emphasis, "enlisted for the war. Before joining the ranks I supposed that at best the single tax people were a lot of visionaries who, seeing the poverty and injustice that everywhere abound, had some sort of quack remedy which would prove about as efficacious for the social system as the usual quack nostrums do in curing the ills of the human body. Needless to say, I entertain a different opinion now," said the lady with a smile. Growing more earnest, she continued: "I now firmly believe that the single tax will bring about a reign of justice so perfect that its full realization means the total abolition of the selfish scramble which we now see on all sides—the weak crushed by the strong and the baser instincts running riot because of the ever lessening opportunities for cultivation and advancement which are open to the workers. Who so blind that can not see the rapidity with which women are replacing men in the industrial ranks, aided in great measure by labor-saving machines, which enable them to perform the work formerly requiring a man's strength? Do the women who boast of this ever reflect on what becomes of the men who are thus displaced? Why, they are driven by their necessities to seek work at any price. This unnatural competition ever tends to force wages down. I believe that the single tax will remedy this; and I further believe that, if the remedy be not soon applied, we, the toilers, will be reduced to the same degrading conditions in which the masses now find themselves throughout the old countries. In this so-called free land we may flatter ourselves that no such a result can overtake us, but I tell you that the same factors are at work here and the same results are inevitable unless we rise up and take this land monopolist by the throat and force him to let go his grip upon the natural bounties which are the inalienable inheritance of every living human being. This is my excuse, my justification, for having allied myself to what some are pleased to call 'a political movement.'"

Mrs. Emily A. Deverall, secretary of the Eastern District Club, said: "I came from a small town where the pressure of the landlord was not felt to any great extent, at that time each family occupying a house. When I tried to make a home in a flat of four rooms, my heart sank at the prospect, and yet the neighborhood was good, the rooms nice. Well, I made the best of it, but I could not help feeling that it was a very poor substitute for home. When, however, I went into the lower portions of the city and saw the tenement houses, I was thankful (not content) that my lot was no worse; but when I saw that there was an abundance of vacant lots in different parts of the city I naturally wondered why they did not build more houses and thus relieve the congested districts. I had never been encouraged to think upon matters of taxation and knew but little about them. Well, I could only feel sorry for the people crammed into those terrible tenement houses, but I could see no way out of it. Then along in 1867 I began to hear something about taxing land values, and that if this system of taxation were adopted there would be no profit in holding unimproved land. My eyes slowly began to open. After a little thinking I saw the connection. The holding of unimproved land is a profitable business; make it by taxation unprofitable, and the holder will improve it. The moral side of the question at once appealed to my sense of justice, and I am trying hard to inform myself on all that pertains to the single tax and free trade. I beg of my sisters who may see this to arouse themselves and look into the matter. For the sake of our children we should stand by our husbands in this struggle for right, and if they are not of that mind, stand alone."

Who Reaps the Harvest?

Boulder, Mont., Age.

The Helena Journal says that "to those who doubt that a benefit to a city helps every individual thereof, it is only necessary to state that conservative business men estimate that the price of real estate in Chicago has already advanced more than the amount which the World's Fair will cost that city, and the harvest has not commenced." It will puzzle the average individual to see how the rise in real estate should benefit "every individual inhabitant in Chicago." It looks as though only the landlord is the chief person to be benefitted. There is no indication that wages will be greater, that the merchant will be able to make a greater profit on his money, that work will be easier to get. Rent is the only thing which is to be higher, and it will be higher not through the energy and enterprise of the landlord but solely through the work, the presence, the energy and the enterprise of the very men who will be compelled to pay the higher rent.

The Single Tax and Perjury.

Boulder Age.

The Miles City Stockgrowers' Journal complains of the assessment returns of Custer County but can find no remedy "when individuals put in lists to which they are willing to swear." The Journal ought to be able to see that a system of taxation which so encourages perjury, which makes the honest man pay a great deal higher proportion of taxes than he should, must be a faulty system, and the Journal should therefore be willing and ready to study the reasons presented by any other proposed system which promises justice to all. The Single-Tax is such a system and all that its advocates desire in an impartial examination of its plans and the reasons therefor.

—Twelve carrier pigeons from N. E. DeLancy, of Mount Morris, N. Y., arrived at the office of the American Express Company, in Oil City, one day recently, and at seven o'clock next morning the pigeons were let go. They didn't hesitate a moment but rose gradually and took a due northeast course. At 10:05 the twelve in a bunch arrived at their owner's residence in Mount Morris, having made 160 miles in five hours. They flew at the rate of thirty-two miles an hour.

—Russians dress recent wounds with a thick layer of ashes, prepared by the burning of cotton or linen stuff. This simple, effective, and convenient method has been practiced from time immemorial by the Russian peasantry.

ONLY AN ACTOR.

From the Yankee Blade.

"Here comes the stage"

The passengers for the stage-coach came out of the Glen House, Cinnibar, in a body.

The ladies, of which there were two, took their places first and the gentlemen of the party followed.

"Now Elsie," said Miss Jemima Warde, to her pretty niece, "I shall be exceedingly displeased with you if you continue to converse with that actor."

"Dear me, aunt," replied her niece, a vivacious brunette of eighteen, "I think it is downright cruel of you to forbid that; for a long journey in a stage-coach would be in tolerable if one did not have such agreeable company. And I am sure Mr. Hackstone keeps us all amused and is very civil and respectful to you. I like him ever so much."

"Well, well, if that don't beat all! He is a low, common actor, and I do not wish you to become familiar with him."

"Oh aunty! is it familarity to exchange a few pleasant words with him? He has rendered all good service from his knowledge and experience of traveling since we left Missoula."

"For my part," observed Mr. Tom Warde, a spruce young gentleman of seventeen, dressed up to kill and holding and ivoryheaded cane in a foppish manner peculiar to the dude of our day, "I think he's a deuced jolly fellow, sis; but then you know he is only an actor and may be a gambler. Keep these chaps at a distance, you know, 'tis the safest way."

I think Tom," said his sister with a slight curl of her ripe lips, "I think you might take some lessons in politeness from him."

"All in—all in!" shouted the driver. "Why where's that there jolly actor chap?"

All the company looked about them, but the actor had disappeared.

"We can't go without him," said a pleasant faced old minor present, and the entire party murmured their assent.

At that moment an old man appeared at the door of the inn. He seemed to be in the last stage of decrepitude, and his snowy white hair streamed down about his shoulders. He hobbled slowly and painfully toward the coach, crying in a shrill, piping tone.

"Hold on! hold on there driver, I've paid my fare and I shall not allow myself to be cheated out of it. Oh, dear, dear! hold on there, driver. Stop the coach! Hold on there, I say."

"Ther coach aint a movin' old feller," said the driver with a broad grin, which was reflected in the faces of the passengers, adding: "I'm blest if you go in this coach, though. Why how, did you get hyar, eh? You didn't come along in this wehicle!"

"Yes I did; yes I did," piped the man. "I have my ticket, I came in this coach and I have my ticket," he repeated.

The passengers looked at each other, while the old man, who had now hobbled to the side of the coach, stood dancing from one foot to the other, and making feeble attempts to put his foot on the coach-step, balking himself each time. He certainly had not come on that coach, but he held a ticket in his quivering hand and continued to mutter and whine.

"Oh, it's going, going. I can't get in, and it will go without me. I can't get in. It will run over me. Oh, dear! oh, dear! oh, dear! Here's my ticket. I came in the coach."

"Poor old man," murmured Elsie Warde, compassionately. "Can't you let him in, driver?"

"He don't seem ter be able ter git in himself, miss. Thar won't be no room for him if that actor chap gits back. I can't help laughing; the old creetur would make a cat laugh. Ha-ha—ha!"

Indeed he was a ridiculous object, and in spite of the pity due to his extreme age and decrepitude, the passengers smiled, and Master Tom broke out into a loud laugh.

"For shame, Tom!" cried his sister but Tom said, stoutly:

"This poor old beggar will be a poor exchange for that jolly fellow Hackstone. Hadn't somebody better go and hunt for the actor?"

His suggestion was acted upon by two of the inmates of the coach, but the actor could not be found. So, with a great deal of trouble, the old man was hoisted into the coach, where he sat shaking and blinking at the rest of them ond giving a sharp scream at every heavy jolt. Master Tom qualified his regret for the exchange of passengers, for the old man was as much a source of entertainment as the actor was. After much fumbling he produced a pair of spectacies and began trying to read his ticket.

The spectacles fell off his nose Master Tom picked them up and handed them to him, but the trembling hand of the new passenger jerked them away again to the other end of the coach. Then one of the glasses fell out, and on recovering it he carefully placed it in his vest pocket and continued to look through the empty ring with as much satisfaction as before. Then he began giggling and laughing to himself in the most absurd manner, setting all the passengers in a perfect roar.

After awhile, to the extreme astonishment of the company, and the infinite disgust of Miss Jemima, he was discovered ogling and winking at that precise madam.

Thus they were kept in a continual roar until night fell down upon them, and the amusement was at its height when suddenly a smothered curse was heard from the driver. The horses reared and plunged, and the coach came to a sudden stop.

A man with a slouched hat and heavy beard, the upper part of the face concealed by a crape mask, stood at each side of the coach, holding a glistening revolver pointed menacingly at the startled inmates, while a third road agent held the heads of the leading horses, and ordered the driver to "come down," with levelled revolver.

The male occupants of the stage-coach were ordered one after another to get out, and were soon ranged along the roadside, holding their hands above their heads. Two of the robbers intimidated them with their revolvers. The two females, aunt and niece, clung to each other with hysterical sobs.

The third robber now said:

"Hello, they are not all out yet. Step out, old duffer, come, be quick!"

"I can't get out, I can't get out!" whined the old man, who still remained coiled up in the corner. With an impatient curse, the robber reached in at him and pulled him in a heap out of the coach. When the old man touched the road he immediately fell on his knees, and began a grotesque pantomime of beseeching gestures.

"What a queer, old beggar?" said the out-law, with a hoarse laugh. "He's durned heavy for such a miserable old rat as he is. We needn't put this old fellow in the row, I guess. We might as well let him stay here ter die of ther shakes."

"All right, Bill," said one of the others, but without removing his arm for an instant from the passengers.

The old man remained in a kneeling position in the road, trembling and shaking violently, while the robbers proceeded to rifle the coach. Elsie Warde, while not without her own feelings of personal terror, looked with a mixture of compassion and disgust on the utter prostration of the wretched old man. He muttered and mumbled to himself, his head was turned up, the whites of his eyes showing.

For one instant she caught the glance of those eyes, and then nearly screamed.

They had no longer a blank vacancy in their expression, but were dark, full and flashing, and shot a look of warning toward her. She saw the trembling hands gradually stealing to the bosom, and she instinctively divined what was about to happen! She shut her eyes, and instantly two rapid pistol shots rang out, and with a wild cry the two robbers menacing the passengers fell.

The third ruffian turned quick as lightning, but through the smoke towered a tall and stalwart form while two flashing eyes, young and fierce, glared upon him from the strange surroundings of a pale face and snowy hair.

The moment of surprise was the robber's last. A line of fire spurted from the clouds of smoke and he fell, and Walter Hackstone, holding the still smoking revolver in one hand, tore off his false wig and disguise and stood before the bewildered passengers.

Then a loud shout of gratulation burst from them. Elsis Warde ran up to him and seizing both hands, exclaimed.

"How can we ever thank you for your bravery? What reward would suffice for such heroism as you have displayed?"

Miss Jemima now came forward. Although a stiff and a little sour old maid, she was the true woman at heart.

"Mr. Hackstone," she said. "You have made us all your debtors for life. I am sure we shall be good friends."

"Oh, we certainly shall!" chorused the whole company.

"When I assumed that disguise as a jest," explained the actor, "I did not foresee what it could enable me to do. I hope you will pardon my impertinence in that character."

Miss Jemima hesitated a little at first, then laughed and extended her shrivelled hand.

"It is the privilege of heroes like you to make a little fun at the expense of an old woman like me and then make up for it by saving them and their property."

The whole party returned to the stage and were driven to the next stopping place without further incident, where they related the occurrence and notified the sheriff of the county.

They remained at this place until the following day and resumed their journey in the morning toward the Couer d' Alene mines of Idaho.

The St. Clair Tunnel.

Canadian engineering skill, enterprise and capital have just succeeded in constructing a new link between the United States and Canada, a railway tunnel under the St. Clair river from Sarnia to Port Huron. The work marks a distinct advance in engineering science owing to novel and successful methods applied in the construction. The tunnel is 28,000 feet long from the beginning of one approach to the end of the approach on the opposite side, more than five miles. Of this distance only 6,000 feet, a little more than a mile, are wholly underground, and of this only 2,310 feet, less than half a mile, are under the river. There are 2,390 feet of tunnel under Michigan soil and 2,160 feet under ground on the opposite side of the river. The following sentences outline fairly the marvelous character of the tunnel: "No brick or stone was used in its construction, and when fully ready for use it will be simply an iron tube made of plates; 6,000 feet long and 20 feet in diameter, perfectly round, and water tight; as dry as a street in summer time, lighted by electric light, ventilated by air engines, and kept at the right temperature with steam pipes." The tunnel was formally opened on August 25th; its cost will be an excess of $2,000,000, and although owned by an independent company "it is to all intents and purposes a portion of the railway system of the Grand Trunk railroad company, yet no other railroad company," says the Toronto Empire, "will be debarred from its use."

The Pirate "Blackbeard."

Harper for September.

In "Blackbeard" we have a real, ranting, raging, roaring pirate per se—one who really did bury treasure, who made more than one captain walk the plank, and who committed more private murders than he could number on the fingers of both hands; one who fills and will continue to fill, the place to which he has been assigned for generations, and who may be depended upon to hold his place in the confidence of others for generations to come.

Captain Teach was a Bristol man born, and learned his trade on borad of sundry privateers in the East Indies during the old French War—that of 1702—and a better apprenticeship could no man serve. At last, somewhere about the latter part of the year 1716, a privateering captain, one Benjamin Hornigold, raised him from the ranks and put him in command of a sloop—a lately captured prize—and Blackbeard's fortune was made. It was a very slight step, and but the change of a few letters, to convert "privateer" into "pirate," and it was a very short time before Teach made that change. Not only did he make it himself, but he persuaded his old captain to join him.

And now fairly begun that series of bold and lawless depredations which have made his name so justly famous, and which placed him amongst the very greatest of marooning freebooters.

"Our hero," says the old historian who sings of the arms and bravery of this great man—"Our hero assumed the cognomen of Blackbeard from that large quantity of hair which, like a frightful meteor, covered his whole face, and frightened America more than any comet that appeared there for a long time. He was accustomed to twist it with ribbons into small tails, after the manner of our Ramillies wig, and turn them about his ears. In time of action he wore a sling over his shoulders, with three brace of pistols hanging in holsters like bandoleers; he stuck lighted matches under his hat, which, appearing on each side of his face, and his eyes naturally looking fierce and wild, made him altogether such a figure that imagination cannot form an idea of a Fury from hell to look more frightful."

The night before the day of the action in which he was killed he sat up drinking with some congenial company until broad day light. One of them asked him if his poor young wife knew where his treasure was hidden. "No," says Blackbeard; "nobody but the devil and I knows where it is, and the longest liver shall have all."

For a time Blackbeard worked at his trade down on the Spanish Main, gathering in, the few years he was there, a very neat little fortune in the booty captured from sundry vessels; but by-and-by he took it into his head to try his luck along the coast of the Carolinas; so off he sailed to the northward, with quite a respectable little fleet, consisting of his own vessel and two captured sloops. From that time he was actively engaged in the making of American history in his small way.

He first appeared off the bar of Charleston Harbor, to the no small excitement of the worthy town of that ilk, and there he lay for five or six days, blockading the port and stopping incoming and outgoing vessels at his pleasure, so that, for the time, the commerce of the province was entirely paralyzed. All the vessels so stopped he held as prizes, and all the crews and passengers (among the latter of whom was more than one provincial worthy of the day) he retained as though they were prisoners of the war.

And it was a mightily awkward thing for the good folk of Charleston to behold day after day a black flag with its white skull and cross-bones fluttering at the fore of the pirate captain's craft, over across the level stretch of green salt-marshes; and it was mightily unpleasant, too, to know that this or that prominent citizen was crowded down with the other prisoners under the hatches.

Becoming tired of an inactive life, Blackbeard afterward assumed his piratical career. He cruised around in the rivers and inlets and sounds of North Carolina for a while, ruling the roost, and with never a one to say him nay, until there was no bearing with such a pest any longer. So they sent a deputation up to the Governor of Virginia asking if he would be pleased to help them in their trouble.

There were two men-of-war lying at Kicquetan, in the James River, at the time. To them the Governor of Virginia applied, and plucky Lieutenant Maynard, of the Pearl, was sent to Ocracoke Inlet to fight this pirate who ruled it down there so much like cock of a walk. There he found Blackbeard waiting for him, and as ready for a fight as ever the lieutenant himself could be. Fight they did, and while it lasted it was as pretty a piece of business of its kind as one could wish to see. Blackbeard drained glass of grog, wishing the lieutenant luck in getting aboard of him, fired a broadside, blew some twenty of the lieutenant's men out of existence, and totally crippled one of his little sloops for the balance of the fight. After that, and under cover of the smoke, the pirate and his men boarded the other sloop, and then followed a fine old-fashioned hand-to-hand conflict betwixt him and the lieutenant. First they fired their pistols, and then they took to it with cutlasses—right, left, up and down, cut and slash—until the lieutenant's cutlass broke short off at the hilt. Then Blackbeard would have finished him off handsomely, only up steps one of the lieutenant's men and fetches him a great slash over the neck, so that the lieutenant came off with no more hurt than a cut across the knuckles.

At the very first discharge of their pistols Blackbeard had been shot through the body, but he was not for giving up for that—not he. As said before, he was of the true roaring, raging breed of pirates, and stood up to it until he received twenty more cutlass cuts and five additional shots, and then fell dead while trying to fire off an empty pistol. After that the lieutenant cut off the pirate's head, and sailed away in triumph, with the bloody trophy nailed to the bow of his baretted sloop.

Sea Lions.

"The best sea lion contract I ever made was with P. T. Barnum in 1871," said Captain Cyrus Eastman to a San Francisco Examiner reporter recently. "His agent entered into a contract with me to deliver a pair alive to him in New York City, and paid me $1,000 upon my signing the papers, and the final output was somthing like $10,000. I took two men and went to Santa Barbara where I chartered a schooner and took on board six of the best lassoers (vaqueros) that I could get.

"San Miguel island at that time was alive with sea lions. There was no trouble in lassoing a sea lion, but the difficulty was to make the lasso hold, as a sea lion's neck is larger than his head. It was all right as long as he was headed from you, but as soon as he turned the riata would slip off and you lost him.

"My only capture on the first trip was three small ones, but as they did not come up to the required weight for Barnum I sold them to John Robinson at Omaha, where they were an immense attraction.

"On my second trip I added to my force and took a hunting crew of eight men, and profiting by my former experience I had my riats fixed with fishhooks, and also well plastered with resin, but I could not hold the beasts, and so I shot one, and throwing the lasso over a flipper I found that it would hold. All that a seal has to do is to give me his flipper and do is to give me his flipper and I have got him.

"My men were all Indians. I took one of them and showed him the trick, and the next morning we went into the sea lions' rookery and caught four. I went to San Francisco immediately and placed my captives in a salt-water tank, and kept them there until the departure of the next steamer for Panama. I got them safely over the isthmus and landed them alive and well in New York, and got my pay."

What War Means For France

Paris letter to New York Nation.

It is probably difficult for an American to realize the condition of a country like France, where military service has become obligatory, where every man between twenty and twenty-five belongs to the active army, every man between thirty and thirty-five to what is called the territorial army, and, finally, every man between thirty-five and forty to the reserve of the territorial army. And this reserve, this territorial army, are not myths, they are not merely on paper; the reservists must serve terms of twenty-eight days, the territorials terms of thirteen days. Every man has his livret, a little pocketbook in which his duty is set down; he knows where he has to go in case of mobilization, after how many days he is expected to be in ranks. The work of mobilization has been prepared in the minutest details. It is thought that the first combatant ready will have great advantages over his adversary, and in consequence everything has been arranged in view of this sudden preparation.

It is hardly possible to imagine what would be the social effects of mobilization. One of my friends, who is director of a coal mine, has just studied the effects of a mobilization merely in the mining districts. His statistics show that more than half the miners would have to leave their work immediately, the youngest and the strongest, those who work in the depths of the mine, he calculates that the home product of all the French coal districts would necessarily be diminished more than half; the importation of foreign coal might, in case of war, become an impossibility, and in that case there would not be coal enough in the country for the railroads and the necessities of the special industries which war would not arrest. This is only one instance of the great trouble which a war would produce.

The Lawyer Said Nothing More.

A very funny thing occurred in the mayor's court recently. A case was called in which the prisoner had been bailed. An attorney arose and said: "Your honor, my client is not here. It is doubtful whether he will be here. He was most brutally assaulted and beaten by an officer, and he may now be dying. He is on his bed surrounded by his friends, who are in tears, watching and praying that his life may be spared—an event of grave doubt." Just at that moment the door of the court room opened, and a man entered. A hum ran over the crowd, while, 'There he is, there he is,' could be heard on every side. It was the prisoner, who looked not a whit as if he were about to die. The attorney turned, looked at him, grunted and sat down without a word, while the crowd roared with laughter.—Columbus Dispatch.

Given but a Peep at Prosperity

It is said that one of the most pathetic little figures to be seen in New Orleans is that of Carlotta Patti, the niece and ex-adopted daughter by of the great diva. Two years ago the half starved girl was taken her aunt to the noted Welsh castle loaded with jewels and given a glimpse of the luxuries wealth can command. Then "Tant Adelina" shipped her back to New Orleans, and now she is poorer than ever, for she has acquired tastes that limited means cannot gratify. Strasburg pies and champagne are not on the menu of the penniless.

THE KEYSTONE WATCH CLUB CO
904 WALNUT ST.
PHILA.

$1 A WEEK OUR Club System while as convenient to the buyer as any instalment system, is a wholesale spot cash system to us. The co-operation of the club members sells us 38 watches in each $38 Watch Club, and we get cash from the Club for each watch before it goes out, though each member only pays $1 a week. This is why we give you more for your money than any one else and why we are doing the largest watch business in the world. We sell only first quality goods, but our prices are about what others get for second quality. Our $16 Silver Watch is a substantial Silver (not imitation of any kind) Stem-Wind American Lever Watch—either hunting case or open. Our $25.00 Watch is a Stem-wind, Open Face, first quality, stiffened Gold American Lever Watch, guaranteed to wear 20 years. It is fully equal to any watch sold for $38 by others. We find a first-class Stiffened Gold Case much more satisfactory and serviceable than any Solid Gold Case that can be sold at less than double the money, as cheap solid cases are invariably thin, weak, of low quality, and worthless after short use. Our $38 Watch contains numerous important patented improvements, of vital importance to accurate timing—Patent Dustproof, Patent Stem Wind, &c., which we control exclusively. It is fully equal for accuracy, appearance, durability and service, to any $75 Watch, either Open Face or Hunting. Our $43.00 Railroad Watch is especially constructed for the most exacting use, and is the best Railroad Watch made, Open Face or Hunting. All these prices are either all cash or in clubs, $1.00 a week. An Ajax Watch Insulator given free with each Watch.

The Keystone Watch Club Co
Main Office in Co's Own Building
904 WALNUT ST. PHILADA. PA.
Agents Wanted.

Ajax Watch Insulator, $1.00
A perfect protection against magnetism. Fits any Watch. Sent by mail on receipt of price. ☞ We refer to any Commercial Agency.

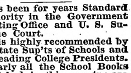
WEBSTER

THE BEST INVESTMENT
For the Family, School, or Professional Library.



Has been for years Standard Authority in the Government Printing Office and U. S. Supreme Court.

It is highly recommended by 38 State Sup'ts of Schools and the leading College Presidents.

Nearly all the School Books published in this country are based upon Webster, as attested by the leading School Book Publishers.

3000 more Words and nearly 2000 more Engravings than any other American Dictionary.

SPECIMEN TESTIMONIALS.

The New York World says: Webster is almost universally conceded to be the best.

The Boston Globe says: Webster is the acknowledged standard in lexicography.

The Atlanta Constitution says: Webster has long been the standard authority in our office.

The Chicago Inter Ocean says: Webster's Unabridged has always been the standard.

The New Orleans Times Democrat says: Webster is standard authority in our office.

The New York Tribune says: It is recognized as the most useful existing "word-book" of the English language all over the world.

Sold by all Booksellers. Pamphlet free.
G. & C. MERRIAM & CO., Pub'rs, Springfield, Mass.

THE FAVORITE WASHER

LEADS THE WORLD.

FAVORITE WASHER

It proves a blessing wherever used, and it will sell on its merits. The rub board in the Favorite Washer is constructed differently from any other. There are no pins to tear the clothes.

AGENTS WANTED.
☞ Liberal Discounts Allowed.
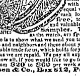
Send for Circulars.

P. A. HOLT,
Manufacturer,
NEW RICHLAND, MINN.



FREE. FREE. OUR NEW $85 Solid Gold Watch Worth $100.00. best $85 watch in the world. Perfect timekeeper Warranted heavy, SOLID GOLD hunting cases. Both ladies' and gent's sizes, with works and cases of equal value. ONE PERSON in each locality can secure one free, together with our large and valuable line of Household Samples. These samples, as well as the watch, are free. All the work you need do is to show what we send you to those who call—your friends and neighbors and those about you—that always results in valuable trade for us, which holds for years when once started, and thus we are repaid. We pay all express, freight, etc. After you know all, if you would like to go to work for us, you can earn from $20 to $60 per week and upwards. Address, Stinson & Co., Box 812, Portland, Maine.

THE STERLING CO.

Manufacturers of

THE STERLING PIANOS,

WHICH FOR
Quality of Tone, Beauty of Design,
FINISH and adaptability for standing in Tune have no equal.
Every Piano Warranted for Five Years
And satisfaction guaranteed to every purchaser.
Also Manufacture the WORLD-RENOWNED
STERLING ORGAN
Factories, Derby, Conn.

Take a policy in one of the reliable

Old Line Co's.

I represent several first class Insurance Companies and can

Guarantee
Security

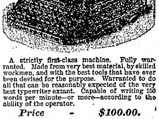
Satisfaction

To the Insured. Give us a call

John M. Boyle.

THE—

INTERNATIONAL TYPEWRITER!



A strictly first-class machine. Fully warranted. Made from very best material, by skilled workmen, and with the best tools that have ever been devised for the purpose. Warranted to do all that can be reasonably expected of the very best typewriter extant. Capable of writing 150 words per minute—or more—according to the ability of the operator.

Price - $100.00.

If there is no agent in your town, address the manufacturers,

THE PARISH MFG. CO.,
Agents Wanted. PARISH, N. Y.

FREE. STENOGRAPHY and TYPEWRITING FREE. First class facilities and best of teachers. Address, with stamp for return postage, THE PARISH MFG. CO., PARISH, N. Y.

WHAT IS GOING ON FOR MANY MILES AROUND ALL UNCOVERED TO THIS EYE, AYE MORE

One of the BEST Telescopes in the world. FREE Our facilities are unequaled, and to introduce our superior goods we will send FREE to ONE PERSON in each locality, as above. Only those who write to us at once can make sure of the chance. All you have to do in return is to show our goods to those who call—your neighbors and those around you. The beginning of this advertisement shows the small end of the telescope. The following cut gives the appearance of it reduced to about the fiftieth part of its bulk. It is a grand, double size telescope, as large as is easy to carry. We will also show you how you can make from $3 to $10 a day at least, from the start, without experience. Better write at once. We pay all express charges. Address, H. HALLETT & CO., Box 880, PORTLAND, MAINE.

SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN

Is the oldest and most popular scientific and mechanical paper published and has the largest circulation of any paper of its class in the world. Fully illustrated. Best class of Wood Engravings. Published weekly. Send for specimen copy. Price $3 a year. Four months' trial, $1. MUNN & CO., PUBLISHERS, 361 Broadway, N.Y.

ARCHITECTS & BUILDERS

Edition of Scientific American.

A great success. Each issue contains colored lithographic plates of country and city residences or public buildings. Numerous engravings and full plans and specifications for the use of such as contemplate building. Price $2.50 a year, 25 cts. a copy. MUNN & CO., PUBLISHERS.

PATENTS may be secured by applying to MUNN & Co., who have had over 40 years' experience and have made over 100,000 applications for American and Foreign patents. Send for Handbook. Correspondence strictly confidential.

TRADE MARKS.

In case your mark is not registered in the Patent Office, apply to MUNN & Co., and procure immediate protection. Send for Handbook.

COPYRIGHTS for books, charts, maps, etc., quickly procured. Address

MUNN & CO., Patent Solicitors.
GENERAL OFFICE: 361 BROADWAY, N. Y.

MADAME

DEAN'S

SPINAL SUPPORTING

CORSETS

Ladies', without Shoulder Brace, $1.50
Ladies', with Shoulder Brace, made of fine Contil, double stitched 3.00
Nursing, without Shoulder Brace, 1.75
Abdominal, " " 2.00
Misses', 10 to 14 years, ... 1.50
Young Ladies', 14 to 18 years 2.00

Highly recommended by the leading Modistes, the Fashionable Dressmakers and the most eminent Physicians in the United States and Europe. Circulars free.

Sold by Leading Houses Everywhere.

Samples sent free to any address on receipt of price. Our Illustrated Catalogue sent free on application.

Reliable Agents wanted. Liberal pay.

Apply at once,
LEWIS SCHIELE & CO
Sole Owners of Patent and Manufacturers.
390 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

$2.00 SAVED

by buying your Shoes of the Manufacturer.
SATISFACTION GUARANTEED!

ONLY $2.50
for Shoes that usually retail at $4.00 and $5.00.

BUTTON. LACE. CONGRESS.

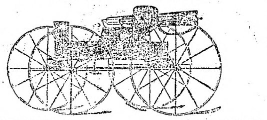
On receipt of $2.50 and twenty-five cents to pay expressage we will send one pair of our Fine Calf Shoes, Seamless Vamps, either Button, Lace or Congress. We Use only selected stock and the best workmanship. Every pair Warranted. Try our Shoes once and you will buy no others.

☞ Mention Size and Width wanted. Send postal note or N. Y. draft. Write your address plainly,—Town, County and State.

CUSTOM BOOT & SHOE CO.,
EAST WEYMOUTH, MASS.

McFARLAN CARRIAGE CO.

CONNERSVILLE, IND.



LARGE VARIETY. BEST STYLES.
LOW PRICES.
WRITE FOR CATALOGUE AND PRICE LIST.
McFARLAN CARRIAGE CO.,
Mention this paper. Connersville, Ind.

Red Lake Falls Iron Works.

P. & J. MEEHAN, Proprietors.
J. Z. PERRON, Manager.

SAW AND GRIST MILL
MACHINERY MADE AND REPAIRED.

Repairing Thresher Engines

AND BOILERS AND

AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS.

Circular Saws, Hammered. Satfaction Guaranteed, Correspondence Solicited.

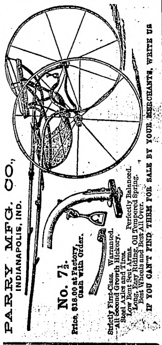
BRING IN YOUR WORK
Scrap Brass and Copper Bought

Hunt & McClatchie

—DEALERS IN—

Heavy and Shelf Hardware.

DEERING FARM MACHINERY.



PARRY MFG. CO.,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.
No. 7½.
Price, $16.00 at Factory, Cash with Order.
Strictly First-Class. Warranted.
All Second Growth Hickory.
Steel Axles and Tires.
Low Bent Seat Arms. Perfectly Balanced.
Long, Easy Riding, Oil Tempered Spring.
Best Wheels and Best All Over.
IF YOU CAN'T FIND THEM FOR SALE BY YOUR MERCHANTS, WRITE US

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Oct. 3, 1890.
Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the clerk of the district court at Detroit, Minn., on November 20, 1890. viz: Edward J. Garceau, preemption D. S. No. 5990 for the n½ sw¼, sw¼ nw¼, sec 33 and lot 2, section 32 tp 150 r 32.
He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz: Michael Burns, John F. Crawford and Felix O'Claire, all of Red Lake, Minn.
A. Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Oct. 6, 1890.
Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the judge or in his absence the clerk of the district court at Detroit Minn, on Nov. 20, 1890, viz: Michael Burns, H E No. 14,905 for the s½ se¼, nw¼ se¼ and sw¼ ne¼ sec 34, tp 150 r 32.
He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of, said land, viz: Joseph P. Dargan, John F. Crawford, Edward J. Garceau, Felix O'Claire, all of Red Lake Minn.
oct9-nov13 A. Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn. Oct. 3, 1890.
Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the clerk of Dist. court at Detroit, Minn., on November 20th, 1890, viz: John F. Crawford, pre-emption D S No. 5985 for the e½ nw¼ nw, nw¼ sec 34, and sw¼ sw¼ sec 27, tp 150 r 32.
He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of said land, viz: Machael Burns, Edward J. Garceau, Joseph P. Dargan, Felix O'Claire, all of Red Lake, Minn.
A. Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Oct. 3, 1890.
Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the clerk of the District court at Detroit, Minn., on November 20, 1890, viz: Joseph P. Dargan, preemption, D S No 5989, for the e½ ne¼, sw¼ ne¼, sec 33 and sw¼ nw¼ sec 34 tp 150 rg 32.
He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of, said land, viz: Michael Burns, Edward J. Garceau, John F. Crawford, Felix O'Clair, all of Red Lake, Minn. A. Barto, Register.

THE LITTLE GIANT
UTILE DULCI
BICYCLES

THE BEST 24 IN. SAFETY EVER MADE
ADJUSTABLE IN EVERY BEARING
AGENTS WANTED
CATALOGUE DESCRIBING OUR FULL LINE OF WHEELS SENT ON APPLICATION.
LOZIER & YOST BICYCLE M'F'G. CO.
TOLEDO, OHIO.

P. & J MEEHAN,

(SUCCESSORS TO J. J. HOWE & CO)

Manufacturers and Dealers in

LUMBER,

LATH,

SHINGLES

Sash, Doors, Moldings, Building Paper,

Yards and Office on Main St.

We Would Like to Call the Attention of

Capitalists

Manufacturers and Others Desiring a Place for

INVESTMENT

—To the—

Superior Advantages of

RED LAKE FALLS,

Its Many Water Powers and other natural advantages. It is only a question of a few years until this will be one of the leading cities of Minnesota. Investment in real estate or water privileges are sure to secure to the investors handsome returns.

—WE RE—

In the Center of Vast

Farming District.

Yearly consuming large amounts of imported products of manufactures. This vast tract of land is watered by the Red Lake and Clearwater rivers. Within the limits of the city are

12 DISTINCT WATER POWERS.

The only natural water powers on these streams. There are fine openings for paper and pulp mills, woolen and other factories. Parties outside desiring any information concerning property, address

BOYLE & MEEHAN.

RED LAKE FALLS NEWS.

JAMES MEEHAN JR., EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR

OFFICIAL PAPER OF CITY AND COUNTY.

Vol. VII. No. 46.

RED LAKE FALLS, POLK COUNTY, MINNESOTA, OCTOBER 23, 1890.

TERMS, $1.50 PER YEAR

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY

> SPECIAL <

CLOAK - SALE

>THIS WEEK<

JOSEPH SMITH & CO.

TO MAKE ROOM FOR

Fall and Winter Goods

WE WILL OFFER

For : the - Next : Fifteen - Days

AN ENTIRE STOCK OF

SpRing and SummeR

CLOTHING AT COST

This Includes Youths' Boys' and Men's Suits.

Our Stock of

FUR - COATS

Will Arrive About Sept. 26.

A SPECIAL REDUCTION IN

Ladies' Oxfords and Summer Footwear.

ALL THIS WEEK.

A SNAP—A Ladie's Fine Shoe For $1.50.

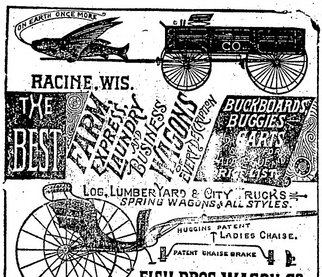
We Have Just Received a Line of

LADIES' FRENCH KID SHOES.

Which we Sell Very Cheap.

School Shoes, School Shoes, School Shoes.

W. A. SCHREITER.



ON EARTH ONCE MORE
CO.
RACINE, WIS.
THE BEST
FARM, EXPRESS, LAUNDRY AND BUSINESS WAGONS OF EVERY DESCRIPTION
BUCKBOARDS, BUGGIES, CARTS
PRICE LIST
LOG, LUMBER YARD & CITY TRUCKS
SPRING WAGONS OF ALL STYLES.
HUGGINS PATENT LADIES CHAISE.
PATENT CHAISE BRAKE
FISH BROS WAGON CO.
RACINE, WIS.

CHARLES LANGEVIN

—DEALER IN—

GENERAL MERCHANDISE,

RED LAKE FALLS, MINNESOTA

A STILL MORE

Important : Event !

ECLIPSE THEM ALL!

The New Store.

H. M. KauS.

Has moved into his new building on Main street and opened a store consisting of general merchandise.

Henry wishes to inform the public that he has a well asorted stock, good goods and low prices that will astonish everybody.

He is the only merchant in town that can BOAST of having the least expenses in conducting his store, &

Remember,

CONSEQUENTLY

He can and will sell you goods at THE LOWEST POSSIBLE MARGIN, and

Do you know?

He will duplicate the price of any list of groceries outside of sugar and coffee sold by the so-called Minneapolis Wholesale House.

He is receiving large invoices of goods nearly every day and intends to carry as complete a stock as any in town.

Give the New Store a Call.

The First Step.

Perhaps you are run down, can't eat, can't sleep, can't think, can't do anything to your satisfaction, and you wonder what ails you. You should heed the warning you are talking the first step into Nervous Prostration. You need a Nerve Tonic and in Electric Bitters you will find the exact remedy for restoring your nervous system to it normal, healthy condition. Surprising results follow the use of this great Nerve Tonic and Alterative. Your appetite returns, good digestion is restored, and the Liver and Kidneys, resume healthy action. Try a bottle. Price 50c. at W. A. Schreiter.

The New Discov ry.

You have heard your friends and neighbors talking about it. You may yourself be one of the many who know from personal experience just how good a thing it is. If you have ever tried it, you are one of its staunch friends, because the wonderful thing about it is, that when once given a trial, Dr. King's New Discovery ever after holds a place in the house. If you have never used it and should be afflicted with a cough, cold or any Throat, Lung or Chest trouble, secure a bottle at once and give it a fair trial. It is guaranteed every time, or money refunded. Trial bottle Free at W. A. Schriter.

Auction Sale.

At the residence of Mr. Adolph Riechel in the town of Lake Pleasant on Tuesday, October 21st, 1890. Following is a list of goods to be auctioned off; Three brood mares, two spring colts, one span mules, two milk cows, ten hogs, two lumber wagons, two set working harness, three set buggy harness, bob sleighs, binder, mower, hay rake, harrows, plows, household furniture and many other articles.

I desire that all persons indebted to me call and settle within two weeks, and all to whom I am indebted, please render bill within above mentioned time.

Mrs. Adolph Riechel.

Cash paid for barley, oats, flax, hides pelts. All kinds of coal for sale. A Hoskins and Co. Elevator.

41 W. T. SPILLANE.

Dr. A. T. Doll, who has been in the practice of medicine at North English, Iowa, since 1868, says he often prescribes Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea remedy, because he knows it to be reliable. For sale by W. A. Schreiter.

COUNTY CULLINGS.

From the Thirteen Towns.

Arny Grundysen next tried his hand and endeavored to dispel the idea that seemed to be taking possession of the audience that all the speakers were disgruntled Republicans and painted in glowing colors the peculiar fitness of each for the particular office for which they were running, but more especially himself. He also told a number of cute little stories, which were very amusing and tunny, but we were greatly disappointed in not hearing Arny relate that deed of valor and renown that he preformed last winter while he was deputy sheriff, when on one cold, stormy day, he went to the house of Martin Jensen, living about four miles from Crookston, with an execution, but on sizing up Jensen, without making known his business, got Mrs. Jensen to drive him to town, after she got the team in Crookston he at once took out his execution and made a levy on it, kindly informing her that she could walk home through the snow and cold, and presisted in this course until some citizens got hold of the story, when they indignantly went and compelled the officious deputy to hire a team and take the lady home, and he is said then to have taken her only part way home being evidenty afraid to meet the husband after this cowardly act. This gallant act certainly entitles him to the support of every farmer and their wives ought certainly get out and hustle for such a gentleman.

* * *

From the East Grand Fork News.

The Minnewaukon Siftings which is ungallant enough not to support its farmer neighbor Mrs. Elsenhuth, thus speaks of a successful farmer:

Mrs. Mary McClellan, the bonanza farmer of the McClellan, district, has threshed 1,100 bushels of No. 1 hard wheat from 120 acres of land. She has managed the farm herself, looking after all the details and superintending the plowing, seeding, harvesting and threshing. This shows what an energetic woman can do on a farm in North Dakota.

Any woman that can beat the average man farming like that, is entitled to vote or hold office, if she wants to do so.

* * *

From the Crookston Times.

James McCaffrey is in the city visiting his daughter Miss McCaffrey. Mr. McCaffrey is located in Red Lake Falls having purchased the Heuler mills which he runs as a custom mill.

Architect Ross of Grand Forks has just completed the designs for the interior of the new opera house in this city. They're beauties and when the new building is completed Crookston will have an opera house which for seating capacity and completeness of arrangement will be second to none in the Northwest.

Vice President Fisher, of the Duluth & Winnipeg, went through here last Monday en route to Winnipeg. He says it is hard to tell when work on the Duluth & Winnipeg through the Winnebagoshish reservation, as the interior department requires more information maps and papers which were forwarded to Washington by a special messenger Thursday.

Another ald landmark gone. The log building on Main St., which was torn down last week has quite a history. It was erected in 1878 and used as a sort of stopping place for about a year when Judge Spendely purchased it and with John Christianson used it as county offices Judge Spendley as register of deeds and Christianson as county Treasurer. There was but one room and they kept their offices separate by drawing a chalk line in the middle of the floor, and neither could do business as an officer, except on his own side of the line.

* * *

From the Thief River Falls Press.

The democrats especially seem to dislike Congr. Comstock. They no doubt have good reason for doing so as he will snow Whiteman under Nov.4th. that is the only fault they can find against Mr. Comstock but it wont work this campaign

An Indian from Mud Lake arrived in town this morning and report the hunting party that left town yesterday as having the best of luck. One of the party killed 840 ducks in two hours by the watch. The firearmes got so hot that the barrels twisted out of shape and when last seen he was shooting around a tree a taflock of geese. How it is Robecke?

We don't know but it looks a little conceited in Wilson to have engraving of himself hung up all over the state. To look at him does not arouse inspiration and he ought to know it.

Frederick Zeh made a flying trip to Crookston Monday night.

Important Facts

TO THE PUBLIC.

FACT I.—

I have been doing a Cash Business ever since I knew the value of money, and not only 1 summer.

FACT 2.—

I don't advertise Large Store, and Numerous Salesmen, with heavy expenses for my customers to pay for.

FACT 3.—

There is a small store between the rivers that is plumb full of General Merchandise. The proprietor of this store works hard, does all his own work and his expenses are next to nothing. That man's name is ED HAMRY, and he will sell you the best goods in the market cheaper than you buy old trashy goods at some of those windy stores.

FACT 4.—

When you want good goods cheap you should go to

ED HAMRY.

A Good Offer.

Do you read The Cosmopolitan, that bright, sparkling young magazine? The cheapest illustrated monthly in the world. 25 cents a number. $2.40 per year. Enlarged, October, 1889, to 128 pages. The Cosmopolitan is literally what the New York Times calls it, "At its price, the brightest, most varied and best edited of the magazines." An unusual opportunity for new subscribers for one year only:

The Cosmopolitan, per year....	$2 40
The NEWS, per year............	1 50
The price of both.............	3 90
We will furnish both for only....	3 00

This offer is only to new subscribers to the Cosmopolitan, and only for one year. The Boston Journal says "It has more articles in each number that are readable, and fewer uninteresting pages, than any of its contemporaries." The Cosmopolitan for the first time in magazine literature, a splendidly illustrated Periodical at a price hitherto deemed impossible. Try it for a year. It will be a liberal educator to every member of the household. It will make the nights pass pleasantly. Send $3.00 to this office and secure both the Cosmopolitan and the NEWS.

A Present to our Subscribers.

It is with pleasure that we announce to our many patrons that we have made arrangements with that wide-awake, illustrated farm magazine, the American Farmer, published at Fort Wayne, Ind., and read by nearly 200,000 farmers by which that great publication will be mailed direct, FREE, to the address of any of our subscribers who will come in and pay up all arrearages on subscription and one year in advance from date, and to any new subscriber who will pay one year in advance. This is a grand opportunity to obtain a first-class farm journal free. The American Farmer is a large 16-page journal of national circulation, which ranks among the leading agricultural papers. It treats the question of economy in agriculture and the rights and privileges of that vast body of citizens—American Farmers—whose industry is the basis of all material and national prosperity. Its highest purpose is the elevation and ennobling of Agriculture through the higher and broader education of men and women engaged in its pursuits. The regular subscription price of the American farmer is $1.00 per year. IT COSTS YOU NOTHING. From any one number ideas can be obtained that will be worth thrice the subscripion price to you or members of your household, YET YOU GET IT FREE. Call and see sample copy.

Bucklin's Arnica Salve.

The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by W. A. Schreiter.

Notice.

Having closed up business in Red Lake Falls, I desire that all persons indebted to me call and settled on or before Nov. 1st. with L. Jenson my agent. All accounts must be settled on or before Nov. 1st. or they will be put into the hands of the collector.

J. C. HEULER.

Homeseekers Excursions.

On September 9 and 23 and October 14, 1890 the agents of the Chicago, Burlington Railroad, at all stations, will sell "Homeseeker's" Excursion tickets to all principal land points in southern Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Arkansas, Indian Territory, Texas, New Mexico, Colorado, Wyoming, Utah, Idaho, Montana, South and North Dakota, Northwestern Iowa, Minnesota, Tennessee, Louisiana, Alabama and Mississippi, at a very low rate for the round trip, good for return within 30 days from date of sale. For further information apply to any ticket agent of the "Burlington," or write to W. J. C. Kenyon, St. Paul, Minn.

Our customers all speak highly in praise of St. Patrick's Pills. They are the best.—Berry Bros., Nebraska. For sale by W. A. Schreiter.

Mr. John Keown, the worthy postmaster at Keown, Allegheny County, Penn., says: "Chamberlain's Cough Remedy sells better than any other." The reason of this is because it can always be depended upon. Let any one troubled with a severe cold give it a trial and they will find that the first dose will relieve the lungs and make breathing easier, and that its continued use will free the system of the cold. The promptness and certainty of this remedy in the relief and cure of colds, has won for it many sincere friends and made it very popular.—For sale by W. A. Schreiter.

THE

WISCONSIN CENTRAL LINES

NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD CO. LESSEE

RUNS

Fast trains with Pullman Vestibuled Drawing Room Sleepers, Dining Cars and Coaches of latest design, between Chicago and Milwaukee and St. Paul and Minneapol.

Fast train with Pullmant Vestibuled Drawing Room Sleeping Dining Cars and Coaches of latest design between Chicago and Milwaukee and Ashland and Duluth.

Through Pullman Vestibuled Drawing Room and Colonist Sleepers via the Northern Pacific Railroad between Chicogo and portland, Ore.

Conveniete Trains to and from Eastern, Western, Northern and Contril Wisconsin points, affording unequalled service to and from Waukesha, Fond du Lac, Oshkosk, Neenah, Menasha, Chippewa Fall, Eau Claire, Hurley, Wis., and Ironwood and Bessemer, Mich.

For tickets, sleeping car reservations, time tables and other information, apply to Agents of the line, or to ticket Agents anywhere in the United States or Canada.

S. L. Ainslie, Gen. Man., Milwaukea.
J. M. Hanaford, Gen. Traf. Man. St. Paul.
H. C. Barlow, Traffic Man. Chicago.
Louis Eckstein, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, Chicago.

CHICAGO AND ATLANTIC

In conjunction with the Erie System operates Fast Vestibuled Trains between Chicago and the Atlantic Seaboard. you may travel in the most Elegant and complete Pullman Vestibuled Trains ever constructed and save $1.50 to Buffalo and Niagara Falls, $2.00 to New York $2.35 to Albany and Troy, and $3.00 to Boston and New England Cities.

No rival line offers the advantages of a system of throuh first and second-class day coaches and Pullman Dining cars chicago to New York.

It is the only line operating pullman cars to Boston and New England via Albany.

Entire trains are lighted by gas, heated by steam. Pullman dining cars run through in either direction.

Pullman chair and sleeping cars to columbus, O., and Ashland, Ky., Daily.

No extra charge for fast time and unsurpassed accommodations afforded by these luxurious train.

CAPTAIN BRAND

OR

THE PIRATE SCHOONER.

A TALE OF THE SEA

PART II.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

THE DOCTOR.

"That evening," continued the narrator, "as usual, the skiff pursued its way across the river, and late at night when it returned there was a fluttering white dress in the stern. Scarcely however, had the skiff left the bank than a boat shoved out from the other side, manned by four negroes, and came swiftly over in pursuit. What afterward transpired I heard from an old married couple of servants, who had passed their lives with the family. It appears that Paul, with Pauline in his arms, had barely reached the hall of the great house, and was giving orders to close the doors, when Jacques rushed in with a naked rapier in one hand and a pistol in the other. Paul adjured him, by all he held sacred, not to attack him as his blood was up, and unarmed as he was, he would do him a mischief. Pauline, too, implored him by a sister's love to desist; but seeing him still advance, as she partially shielded Paul, she told him that the man she loved was her husband.

"Blinded with haughty rage, this last admission rendered him ungovernable, and he lunged with all his force at Darcantel, Paul parried his rapid passes, though receiving some sharp thrusts in his arm and shoulder, and still supporting his drooping, terrified wife on his left arm, till, by a quick spring, he got within Jacques' guard, and, seizing him by the wrist, wrenched the weapon from his grasp. This was enough to make the brother totally insane by passion from baffled revenge, when he levelled his pistol and fired. There was a faint cry with the report, and a groan from Jacques, as the sword went through his body and heart, till the hilt struck hard against his ribs, as he fell, a dead man on the marble pavement. But the bullet from his pistol had pierced the fair forehead of his sister, and she lay a bridal corpse in her husband's arms. It was horrible."

"I spare you all the afflicting details, Piron, and will only add that Paul left the plantation that night, and when I got home I found an envelope post-marked New Orleans, inclosing a paper, which constituted me his sole executor, and leaving our little boy his heir. I had but a short leave of a month and duty called me again away. It was on the anniversary of the day the tragedy occurred, after another long interval of four years in the Scourge, that I again returned, and then there was wailing and moaning in my own dwelling. My poor Josephine had never recovered from the shock; she drooped away like a lily, her little boy by her side, and both died during my absence.'

What makes the strong man's eyelids quiver and voice tremule? Those eyes that have looked calmly on death and carnage in every shape, with his deep, calm voice cheering on the men to battle at his side? Ah!

"It was midnight, and I walked out to the little graveyard where my fathers had been buried, and bending my steps to a cluster of magnolias on a little mound by itself I—I—a—kneeled down beside the sod where reposed all I had loved on earth! I do not know how long I remained there, but presently I heard a groan near by, and a tall man rose up from where he had been stretched, face downward, on the ground, and I beheld Paul Darcantel! I could hardly recognize him at first, for he seemed fifty years older than when we had last parted."

" 'Cleveland,' he said, in a hollow choking voice, 'forgive me! I am a changed, and, I trust, a better man. I have been drawn to this holy spot by the same errand which brought you hither, and though I did not expect to meet you, yet I am glad of it now. Speak, and say you forgive me, and you will shed a ray of hope and salvation into the heart of one who will suffer unto the end! Speak!' "

"Old memories crowded around me, and I saw before me the child in the cradle, and with our arms round each other's neck as we played together. I forgot, for the moment the sisters lying there—bride, mother, and baby-boy. The magnolias bowed their white flowers in the light of the waning moon, and we fell again into each other's arms."

" 'After a time,' he said, 'My only friend, I have brought home a little, helpless boy: he is named Henry, after you, and will take the place of the lost little one lying here. Whoever of us survive shall inherit that estate. Come with me, and look at him!' "

"He led me to the other mound, and there, beside the tree, a beautiful child lay calmly sleeping, wrapped in a sailor's jacket, with his curls escaping from a straw hat, and the head resting on one arm on the grave beneath him."

" 'Be good to him,'—Paul went on—'for the sake of those we have lost ourselves! His mother's name was Rosalie.' "

"He stooped down as he said this, and raising the boy in his arms he kissed him passionately, and then put him gently in mine. 'Let him kneel sometimes at the grave, my friend, and pray for me.' "

"In another moment Paul Darcantel had gone. The little fellow partly awoke, and put his arms affectionately around my neck, and whispered, 'Maman, maman!' That dashing, brave young fellow ahead there was once that boy."

"Well, I took the child to the house, where my good mother and sisters went wild over him, and there he passed a happy boyhood. Years went by, and he grew apace, the pride and delight of us all; and as he evinced the greatest fondness for me and the accounts I gave him of my life at sea, I had him appointed a reefer in the navy. Since that he has seen a great deal of service: been distinguished in action; and, on shipboard as well as on shore, liked and respected by all who know him.

"In the meanwhile his father went away —nobody knew whither—for years and years. He wrote to me, however, and to his son, from all parts of the world; and when I made the tour in Europe I spoke about, Darcantel was my companion. But while there he passed a retired life, never went into society, but visited every hospital in every sea-port from the Mediterranean to Aberdeen in Scotland—for he is not only a surgeon, as I have reason to know, of wonderful skill, but a thorough-bred seaman too; and when he has been with me on board ship there is no one whose opinion of the weather, or other nautical matters, do I place greater reliance on. I could tell you of half a-dozen times when his advice to me has saved serious damage. And during all these years Darcantel's estates, under the careful supervision of my eldest brother, have been redeemed from their load of debt, and now he enjoys a noble income; or rather he spends nothing on himself, but devotes it to widows and orphans, and sick or worn-out sailors."

"During the seventeen years which have gone by since he brought his child to me, he has made several visits, of a month or two's duration, to the plantations, but only when Henry was on leave from duty. Then it was a pleasant sight to see them both together, and the touching air of affection which bound the youth to his father. Henry, from a child, often went and prayed beside the grave under the magnolias; and to this day he believes that his own mother lies buried there. Perhaps it is as well that he should cherish this early belief; for I may tell you in confidence, Piron, that we believe there at home he is the illegitimate offspring of some erring passion of Darcantel, though none of us have ever learnt it positively from his father's lips. He is not a person to be questioned by any one, not even by me; and as he seems anxious to throw a thick veil over the past, we never venture to draw it aside.

"When, however, I was appointed to my present command, Darcantel desired to sail with me and, and see the West India islands which he had not visited for an age. I was only too happy to have him, especially as Harry there—whom I love like a father—was named to the little schooner he had cut out of Africa, on his last cruise, and ordered to join my squadron. But whenever we got into port his father goes quietly on shore, passes his time, I think, among the sailors of the foreign shipping, spending money freely among the deserving, and again coming back in his calm, stern way. He told me, however, Piron, yesterday, that he might perhaps accept your kind invitation to come up here though not for some days. By George!" said the commodore, "that must be Escondido!"

Piron sighed, as if a pleasant dream had vanished.

CHAPTER XXXV.

INSTINCT AND WONDER.

As the calvacade trotted round the curve of the peak, and they walked the cattle down the steep zigzag road of the beautiful valley, the commodore said, "but, Piron, tell me who is that large man ahead of us with the black hair and blue eyes?"

"Why Cleveland, all I know of him is, that he landed at Kingston in a vessel from the Isthmus of Panama, and is going to Cuba on his way to England. He came to me, hearing that I was the consignee of old Blunt's older brig, bound to New Orleans, and so home, to know if he could be dropped at St. Jago, where he has some property or debts to collect; and since the old skipper has no objection, he has taken passage in the brig when she goes with me and my family. I have since met him—he calls himself Colonel Lawton—at dinners of our set, and he seems to be an Englishman or Scotchman. Tom Stewart thinks the latter from his accent, and for his liking for snuff; but Paddy Burns differs, and believes he don't like snuff, but only takes it to show his splendid box. Any way, he speaks all languages, Spanish, French, Italian, and English, and can talk slang in them all like a native. He has served, too, from his account, with Bolivar there on the Spanish Main; and he was with Cochrane in that desperate affair of cutting out the Esmeralda in Callao Bay. A very amusing, entertaining vagabond he is, and I asked him to join us to make the acquaintance of my people on our last frolic to the valley; but somehow, I am rather sorry that I gave him a passage with us in the brig, for I don't altogether like his looks.

"Neither do I, Piron! his hair is too black for his light blue eyes. However we must make the most of him."

Over the shaky bridge of the torrent, where Jacob Blunt prayed earnestly for Martha Blunt, and swore at his donkey as if he had never rocked on water before; Mr. Mouse, with a last tiny kick on the saddle-flaps of his lofty mule, tumbled off; Colonel Lawton swinging himself from the saddle of his barb as if he had been part of him; Tom Stewart, Paddy Burns, and Don Stingo, sliding off any way; Harry Darcantel trying to descend in fine style and failing miserably; Piron and the commodore doing the thing leisurely: Jacob Blunt pulled off bodily; while the laughing blacks took the beasts and led them away.

There were three pairs of eyes that watched all this grace and clumsiness from the windows of the saloon. The pair of dark ones smiled, and the pair of blue opened till they seemed like azure globes, and then they closed until the fringe of chestnut lashes nearly hid them from sight.

"Colonel Lawton, do me the favor to follow my old friend, Banou—you, too, Captain Jacob and Lieutenant Darcantel and Mr. Mouse; Paddy Burns and Stingo here, will show you your apartments in the old billiard-room. Come, commodore, the rest of us will find quarters in the casa.

An hour later the saloon and sala were all alight, and the sashes of the jalousies closed, for it was cool at times up there at Escondido. There, too, stood the party of gentlemen, Mr. Mouse being a prominent figure in the background. Then came a rustling of robes, and as the great folding doors swung open the three ladies lit up the saloon in a halo of loveliness with brighter rays than were shed from the wax lights in the chandelier. Two fair hands were placed in those of Cleveland, and the look which accompanied went back to the happy morning on the old brig's deck, away off there to sea.

"Oh, monsieur! I cannot say how glad I am to see you once more! Let me present you to my sister, Madam Nathalie Delonde, and our daughter. Ah, my dear Captain Blunt! both your children before you again, and you have come to take us away."

"Colonel Lawton, ma chere," said Piron.

"And Masdames," said the commodore, "let me also present my nephew, Lieutenant Darcantel, and Mr. Mouse."

What caused that woman to start, as the girl took the tiny reefer by the hand, and impulsively clasp those white hands together, while her heart beat in yearning throbs, and her bosom rose and fell like billows by the shore? Why did she then raise one hand to her fair neck, and, as if in a dream, feel for the golden links of the chain, with the other hand pressed to her panting heart for the locket which once reposed there? How was it that by a mother's instinct, she gazed at the youth before her, and then turned her eyes hopelessly around in search of her husband in the crowd?

"Yes, madam. This is my nephew, Henry Darcantel."

"Ah, Henri! Excuse me, monsieur. I am very glad to see you!"

Why, now did the touch of his hand make her heart beat faster, and send a thrill of joy through her frame? Only be a little calm, madam, for a while longer, and don't be sad and ponder all night, just as good Jules Piron does habitually. Wait, Jules will tell you all he knows when you are alone to-night.

The doors of the sala were thrown open. The broad pennant leading with Madam Rosalie; the military chief on marching beside Madam Nathalie, much to the animosity of Paddy Burns. Then Mr. Mouse conveyed mademoiselle, to the infinite disgust of the commander of the Rosalie, one gun schooner, formerly the Perdita. But what made that old negro in spotless white, standing at the door, jerk his head back and open his great eyes till there was no black left in them? And why did he blunder about the table afterward, and pour wine over the colonel's richly laced coat, while staring like an ogre at the young blue jacket opposite. That old Banou, perhaps, did not like to see his young mistress too much attended to by every gay scamp who came near her. Oh, no; of course not. But then, if that brawny negro in white had only known over whose arm and mutilated hand he was pouring light wine in his abstraction he would have crammed that heavy cut decanter in powdered glass splinters down the chieftain's throat. There would have been claret of a different color spilled then, quantities of it. You needn't feel in your pockets, colonel, or look around the sala to see if perchance there is a green silk rope squirming from the ceiling. We don't keep any of those pretty things out at Escondido. So go on with your dinner, you cold-eyed scoundrel, and tell all the lies you can to that lovely woman at your elbow; how you wanted to save Bolivar's life, and it was saved without you. Don't forget either to tell how that patriot had you drummed out of his army, suspecting you of having assassinated the officer near you in the confusion of battle, and robbing him of his watch to replace the one given you by the captain general. Paddy Burns is watching you, Colonel Lawton, and that whole-souled little Irishman is not the man to be trifled with. Now remove the covers. But take care, Banou, you nearly twitched off the military gentleman's hair. Tom Stewart saw it, and he noticed, too, a small red seam, like the track of a musket ball—honorable wound, no doubt—under your black glossy wig.

The party of ladies rose from the table and leaving the men—all except the captain of the Rosalie and Mr. Mouse who would have remained had he not seen a shake of the broad pennant's finger—went into the saloon. Then there was a brilliant prelude on the piano, a touch of a guitar by stronger fingers, an air from an opera, a song or two, much conversation—while reefer Mouse slept on the sofa—and coffee. Then it was late, every one was fatigued, bon soirs was said, and the party—coffee and all—separated,

CHAPTER XXXVI.

TRUTH AND TERROR.

In a great square room, standing, as usual on cocoa-nut stilts, which had once been used for a billiard-room, were half-a-dozen iron-framed cots ranged along the walls, and where some of the Escondido's guests were to bivouac.

The occupants of this bivouac had turned in, and the lights had been doused. Conversation, however, was kept up, especially by the thin little voice of Mr. Mouse, who having enjoyed a nap in the early evening and having been danced and tumbled about on the trip to the lodge by Harry Darcantel, who was in tip-top condition, the reefer was as wide awake as a black-fish.

"I say, Mouse, keep quiet will you, and let me go to sleep!" Harry Darcantel did not think of going to sleep—that was a fib he told the reefer—he wanted merely to shut his eyes and dream of—you know who—a tall, graceful girl with blue eyes and light hair, who looked at him once or twice such looks that there was no sleep for him for ever so long. What did she say? Why, she never opened her pouting lips to show those even pearly teeth! She only looked out of those soft blue eyes. That was all.

"Mr. Darcantel, I think of getting married,"

"The dickens you do! And who to, pray?"

"Why," said Mr. Mouse, as he rolled over and kicked the sheet off his slate-pencil built legs. "I haven't made up my mind; but you know that pretty girl up there at the big house has taken quite a fancy to me, and when you were presented to her mother she gave me such a squeeze of the hand! Oh my!"

Here Mr. Mouse's narrative was cut short by a pillow hitting him plump on the mouth, clean through his mosquito net.

"Very charming young lady, Mr. Mouse," said a quiet voice, in a cool tone, on the other side of him; "she did seem to take a violent fancy to you."

Mr. Mouse rolled over, and then sitting up in his cot replied. "Yes sir! and that was her mother sitting by you when the big nigger in white capsized the wine over your sleeve and nearly pulled your—a—hair off."

Look out, Mr. Mouse! if that man there beside you once gives a twitch at your curly locks he'll pull something more than hair—perhaps a bloody little scalp with it!

"Oh!" was the sound that came back.

"Yes, sir, and the other beautiful lady next the commodore is her sister. She had a son just mademoiselle's age, who was murdered by pirates off Jamaica ever so many years ago, and Commodore Cleveland chased them in a ship he was first lieutenant off—my father commanded the ship—she was the old Scourge."

"Hold your tongue!" came from the cot where the spare pillow was thrown over.

"Ho!" said the military chieftain; but if the room had not been so dark, the way his eyes opened and emitted an icy glare of surprise would have made Tiny Mouse shiver with cold.

"O, dear, yes colonel. I heard the commodore tell about it the other night on board the frigate. He thought I was asleep, but I kept awake through the best part of it."

"The best part of it!"

"Why, sir, how an old one-eyed Spaniard deceived my father and sent him on a fool's errand from St. Jago down to the Isle of Pines, and afterward how the Scourge chased the piratical schooner into a hurricane for ever so long, clear away to the coast of Darius, where they blew her out of water and killed every scoundrel on board."

Not every one, Mr. Mouse. There is the very greatest of those scoundrels grinding his teeth and glaring your way at your elbow.

"What was the name of that Cape, Darcantel, where the schooner was destroyed? No, I won't be quiet! the colonel wants to hear all about it. There's a good fellow tell me!"

"Garrote Cape."

The listener slowly raised the mutilated hand and put the finger with the sapphire ring to his throat, evidently not liking the name of that cape, for it caused a choking sensation to utter it—"Ho Capo Garrote!"

"Yes, sir! and Darcantel's father here once chartered a vessel, and went all the way down there to explore the place, and was gone fifteen months!

"I beg your pardon, monsieur," said the colonel to Harry in French, with a slight quiver on his tongue, "but did your father really go all the way down to Darien out of mere curiosity?"

"Yes, sir, he did go there to see if by any chance one of the pirates had escaped; and he travelled, too, a good deal about among the Indians, making inquiries."

"Ho! and did he pick up any information there?"

"Why, sir, I am not positive, but I believe that he got a hint that a European had wandered over that country who had been wounded in the head and hand, and was almost naked: but the natives could give him but meagre accounts. He continued on, however, down the Isthmus, on the Pacific side, by sea, as far as Chili, when he went into the interior to Peru, crossed the Andes, and followed down the Orinoco to Peru, when he sailed again for England."

"Oh! no other motive than curiosity?"

"Perhaps he had; for he once told me that he had some old scores to settle with the man who commanded the pirate, and if he was alive he felt quite sure he would, one of those days put him to death. My father, sir is a very determined person, and never forgets an oath."

"Truly, monsieur, you interest me. But what sort of a man in appearance is your father—a doctor, I think you said!"

"He is a tall gentleman of about fifty, sir, though he looks much older; for he has suffered deeply since my mother—a—died; but I shall have the pleasure of introducing him to you, colonel. He is on board our frigate at Kingston, and told me he would be up here to-morrow or the next day."

"Ah! thank you extremely, Monsieur Darcantel. I shall have—a—much curiosity to see him,"

No more words that night! But much thinking and moving of thin lips, and eyes staring in the dark, wide open. Had a letter, traced with the fingers of an icicle, been congealed a hundred feet deep in the heart of a toppling iceberg on the coast of Labrador, those eyes could have read it as clear as day!

"You infamous pirate, Captain Brand!" it began—"the son of the man who destroyed the pirate schooner and her crew, and the boy whom your brutal mate tore from its mother you saw at dinner to-day, are near you! That calm, stern, determined doctor, too, whom you laced down on the trestle for poisonous insects to kill, has been on your track for the past seventeen years, and will soon hold you in his iron gripe! There will be no mercy then."

The eyes closed, the heart stopped beating, and the thin lips and tongue, as dry as cartridge-paper, now took up the strain, while the mutilated hand clutched convulsively, as if there were fifty fingers fingering knives and pistols.

So passed that short night—long enough however for somebody—and before the fresh land-wind had woke up to creep down the valley, there was a mettled barb, with open nostrils, galloping up the open road as if he had the enemy of mankind on his back! —as perhaps he had, or Colonel Lawton, or Captain Brand; possibly all three, but it makes very little odds to us.

(TO BE CONTINUED.

How Men Grow.

President Roberts, of the Pennsylvania railroad, started in about thirty years ago as a track hand on the road at low wages but with high aspirations. That is, he sent his mind and thoughts on beyond the saloon, the free lunch counter, the careless, dissipating, shiftless, story telling, halting places, where so many thousands of good boys and men give themselves to the bad. As Roberts the trackman walked he paid attention to the duties assigned to him. He was faithful to trust and faithful to himself. He did not beat his wings sore against the cage of conditions, but grew out of it. He was faithful over the few things confided to his care, and thus attracted attention. Step by step he was called or pushed to higher places, always sagacious, faithful, expanding. Now he is president o the greatest railway corporation system in this country, and has a salary of $100,000 a year, because his care, his power to plan and his ability to execute and his faithfulness in advancing the interests confided to his keeping are worth that sum to those he serves. Those who say that all men are alike in their power to see, to plan, to care, to bring results, are mistaken. President Roberts is an active man, a hard worker. Every share owner in the great enterprise that has placed him in position as its financial head, gives him friendship and assistance. As money is needed to extend a line or plant improvements shares are offered and taken by those already interested. They speak well of their own and urge others to invest. Thus their treasury is filled and emptied for the good of all, and the state, as well as all interested, are directly benefited. Mr. Roberts gives faithful service to share owners and they in turn strengthen his roads. Thus goes capital and labor, brain, muscle and money, harmoniously into action.—[Advance Thought.

An Insane Family on the Road.

New York Herald Parkersburg (W. Va.) Special: The New York express over the Baltimore & Ohio railroad carried last night in the smoking car a woman and seven children, none over twelve years of age, and all the family but one more or less demented.

Just as the train was reaching Clarksburg, east of here, the mother rushed to the platform and leaped from the train, shrieking wildly. She dashed through a crowd of passengers, bleeding from her fall, and started for the hills. When the train stopped, her two oldest children—boys—armed themselves with whatever they could find and defied all proffered assistance, but were all finally secured.

The only one in the family who seems to be sane is a girl ten years old. She said that her mother's name was Mrs. John Brannon, and that they lived formerly at No. 8310 Pennsylvania avenue, St. Louis. Her father, she said, had for years treated them cruelly, and only a few days ago had driven them from home with a shotgun. She said they were trying to reach Bethlehem, Pa., where they had relatives. Oftentimes, she said, their father had been away from home for days at a time and left them nothing to eat. He never came back without beating their mother, and he often threatened to kill them.

All last night a party hunted the woods and hills for the crazy woman, but without success. The authorities are taking care of the children.

Mrs. Brannon was formerly a beautiful woman, and it is said that she is related to prominent Philadelphia people. The woman feared that she would be murdered.

A Liar from Detroit.

Detroit Free Press: A Detroiter who was in a collision on the Baltimore & Ohio road two or three weeks ago, says he was sitting just back of a farmer and his wife. The train was running so fast that the couple were nervous, and by and by the women turned about and inquired:

"Mister, do you think there is any danger?"

"No, ma'am—not in the least," he replied.

Five minutes later, the speed having perhaps increased a little, the woman again turned with:

"Mister, where are you from?"

"Detroit, ma'am,"

"And there is no danger?"

"None, whatever,"

Ten seconds later came a grand crush, and the coach reared up and fell over. As it went, with everybody shouting and screaming, the voice of the woman was heard above everything, crying:

"Oh! William, what a liar that man from Detroit has turned out to be!"

Prof. Gee of Paris is one more to conclude from physiological experiments that the nutritive value of coffee in fact amounts to nothing; that it is merely a stimulant, in that it acts on the human system as a blower on a fire, to increase the rate of activity of vital functions; to increase heat production and heat dissipation. To use it is, in short, to dissipate, to put on unnatural steam pressure and wear out the vital machinery too fast.

A LEVEL HEAD.

The Advantage of Presence of Mind in an Emergency.

During the late strike on the New York Central Railroad, the militia were ordered to be in readiness in case of a riot, but they were not called out.

In an interview, Gov. Hill said the troops were not to be called upon except in case of an emergency. The emergency had not arisen, therefore they would not be ordered out. He remarked that this was the first great strike with which he had had experience, and he did not propose to lose his head; the only point at which there had then been serious trouble was at Syracuse, and there a deputy-sheriff had lost his head and precipitated an encounter.

The strike continued several weeks and there was riotous action at various points along the road, but the civil authorities were able to cope with it without calling on the militia.

The test of a man's real ability comes when an emergency arises which makes a hasty call on his good judgment and discretion. The man who retains his presence of mind, maintains his equipoise and exercises sound discretion at such critical junctures, is to be relied on and will be put to the front.

Men with level heads have the staying qualities which do not falter in the face of danger. Otis A. Cole, of Kinsman, O., June 10, 1890, writes: "In the fall of 1888 I was feeling very ill. I consulted a doctor and he said I had Bright's disease of the kidneys and that he would not stand in my shoes for the state of Ohio." But he did not lose courage or give up; he says: "I saw the testimonial of Mr. John Coleman, 100 Gregory St., New Haven, Conn., and I wrote to him. In due time I received an answer, stating that the testimonial that he gave was genuine and not overdrawn in any particular. I took a good many bottles of Warner's Safe Cure; have not taken any for one year."

Gov. Hill is accounted a very successful man; he is cool and calculating and belongs to the class that do not lose their heads when emergencies arise.

Tips in a Common Fund.

The table waiters in some of the restaurants and hotels of this city have adopted a custom which has been in vogue for a long time among their conferrers in Paris, which astounded a New Yorker who was made aware of it while at one of the restaurants of Paris not long ago. The elegantly dressed waiter who brought him the dainty viands told the New Yorker that the waiters there put into one box all the fees which they procure each day from their customers and that the sum total in this treasury is evenly divided among them at night. "But," the New Yorker asked, "can you always trust all you conferrers that they will deal fairly in the business and deposit all the fees they procure?" "We trust in each other's honor," was the reply, "and we have never had any misunderstanding on the subjects."—New York Sun.

Deliverance!

The shackles are strong, and forged by neglect, if liver complaint has enchained you. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters breaks them easily and without loss of time. Pains in the right side, yellowness o the skin, constipation and dyspepsia attending billiousness, are annihilated by this grand alterative. Incomparably useful is it, too, in rheumatism, malaria, debility and kidney complaints.

Enjoyment stops where indolence begins.

When baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had children, she gave them Castoria.

True politeness is perfect ease and freedom.

THE POINT.

"A 1" From a Catholic Archbishop down to the Poorest of the Poor all testify, not only to the virtues of ST. JACOBS OIL, The Great Remedy For Pain, but to its superiority over all other remedies, expressed thus:

It Cures Promptly, Permanently; which means strictly, that the pain-stricken seek a prompt relief with no return of the pain, and this, they say, St. Jacobs Oil will give. This is its excellence.

FREE! 60 Complete Stories, 100 Popular Songs, Longfellow's Poems, Whittier's Poems, Dickens' Christmas Stories, Mrs. Caudle's Curtain Lectures and Gulliver's Travels. —All the above sent absolutely Free and post-paid to any one sending us Ten Cents for a Three Months' subscription to "The People's Home Journal," a large 16 page, 64 column Illustrated literary and family paper, filled with everything to amuse, entertain and instruct the whole family. Serial and Short Stories, Sketches, Poems, Useful Miscellany, Fancy Work, Household, Juvenile and Humorous Departments. Serial stories by Mrs. Southworth and Mrs. Mary J. Holmes have just been commenced. It is the best story paper published. We want 100,000 new trial subscribers—that is why we make this great offer. 'Tis the biggest ten cents' worth ever given—you will get five times your money's worth. Send for this great offer, and if you are not satisfied we agree to return your ten cents and make you a present of all. Six subscriptions, with all the premiums to each, sent for 50 cents. We refer to the Mercantile Agencies and to any newspaper published in New York City as to our reliability. Address, F. M. LUPTON, Publisher, 106 & 108 Reade Street, New York.

DR. E. C. WEST'S NERVE AND BRAIN TREATMENT.

Specific for Hysteria, Dizziness, Fits, Neuralgia, Wakefulness, Mental Depression, Softening of the Brain, resulting in insanity and leading to misery decay and death, Premature Old Age, Barrenness, Loss of Power in either sex, Involuntary Losses, and Spermatorrhœa caused by over-exertion of the brain, self-abuse or over-indulgence. Each box contains one month's treatment. $1 a box, or six for $5, sent by mail prepaid. With each order for six boxes, will send purchaser guarantee to refund money if the treatment fails to cure. Guarantees issued and genuine sold only by HIPPLER & COLLIER. The open all night Drug Store, Cor. 7th & Sibley St. Paul Minn.

HUMORS of the BLOOD & SKIN Cured by Cuticura

HUMORS OF THE BLOOD, SKIN, AND Scalp, whether itching, burning, bleeding, scaly, crusted, pimply, blotchy, or copper-colored, with loss of hair, either simple, scrofulous, hereditary, or contagious, are speedily, permanently, economically, and infallibly cured by the CUTICURA REMEDIES, consisting of CUTICURA, the great Skin Cure, CUTICURA SOAP, an exquisite Skin Purifier and Beautifier, and CUTICURA RESOLVENT, the new Blood Purifier and greatest of Humor Remedies, when the best physician and all other remedies fail. This is strong language, but true. CUTICURA REMEDIES are the only infallible blood purifiers. Sold everywhere. Price, CUTICURA, 50c.; SOAP, 25c.; RESOLVENT, $1. Prepared by Potter Drug and Chemical Corporation, Boston. Send for "How to Cure Skin Diseases."

Pimples, blackheads, chapped and oily skin prevented by CUTICURA SOAP.

Backache, kidney pains, weakness, and rheumatism relieved in one minute by the CUTICURA ANTI-PAIN PLASTER. 25c.

An Accomplished Officer.

From the Philadelphia Inquirer.

A Pretty young woman crossed over from the southeast corner of Eight and Chestnut streets, and approaching Officer Moffet, the young woman made a peculiar sign with her dainty fingers, and for a moment the big officer was nonplused—only a moment, however. Then a smile broke over his handsome countenance and he raised his hand in the air— a hand that could completely hide both those of the pretty young woman. But those fingers of the officer's were equally facile as those of the young lady's and when she moved hers with the rapidity of thought his responded with equal alacrity. For a few moments this by-play, or rather finger-play, went on, and presently the young woman smiled graciously, bowed to the officer, who gallantly lifted his hat, and tripping lightly away the young lady turned down Eight Street.

"Well, that's the latest I've had to do," said Officer Moffet, turning toward several bystanders. "I wonder what I'll have to do next?"

"Why what's the matter with the young woman?" asked one of those addressed.

"She's deaf and dumb, and I understand the sign language, that's all."

SYRUP of FIGS

ONE ENJOYS

Both the method and results when Syrup of Figs is taken; it is pleasant and refreshing to the taste, and acts gently yet promptly on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels, cleanses the system effectually, dispels colds, headaches and fevers and cures habitual constipation. Syrup of Figs is the only remedy of its kind ever produced, pleasing to the taste and acceptable to the stomach, prompt in its action and truly beneficial in its effects, prepared only from the most healthy and agreeable substances, its many excellent qualities commend it to all and have made it the most popular remedy known.

Syrup of Figs is for sale in 50c and $1 bottles by all leading druggists. Any reliable druggist who may not have it on hand will procure it promptly for any one who wishes to try it. Do not accept any substitute.

CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
LOUISVILLE, KY. NEW YORK, N.Y.

The Supreme Test

Of a Rubber Boot is in the Mines. The Boot that gives the Miner best service will give you best service. In the placer mines and the quartz mines of the Great West, in the copper mines of Lake Superior, in all mining camps, the

WOONSOCKET

Rubber Boot is the favorite; in many no other boot can be bought.

BEWARE of inferior Rubbers sold under other brands. Insist on Woonsocket Rubber Boots and Shoes. They're the best. Sold everywhere. Manufactured by the WOONSOCKET RUBBER CO., PROVIDENCE, R.I. Send for Catalogue.

FOR MEN ONLY!

A POSITIVE CURE For LOST or FAILING MANHOOD; General and NERVOUS DEBILITY; Weakness of Body and Mind; Effects of Errors or Excesses in Older Young. Robust, Noble MANHOOD fully Restored. How to Enlarge and Strengthen WEAK, UNDEVELOPED ORGANS & PARTS of BODY. Absolutely unfailing HOME TREATMENT—Benefits in a day. Men testify from 47 States, Territories, and Foreign Countries. You can write them. Book, full explanation, and proofs mailed (sealed) free. Address ERIE MEDICAL CO., BUFFALO, N. Y.

ALLEN'S IRON TONIC BITTERS

The most Elegant Blood Purifier, Liver Invigorator, Tonic and Appetizer known. The first Bitters containing Iron ever advertised in America. J. P. ALLEN, Druggist & Chemist, St. Paul, Minn.

PENSION JOHN W. MORRIS, Washington, D.C. Successfully Prosecutes Claims. Late Principal Examiner U. S. Pension Bureau. 3 yrs in last war, 15 adjudicating claims, atty since.

SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT.

WELCOME TO HENRY GEORGE.

Poem Read at Cooper Union, September 1, 1890.

To Henry George.

JANUARY—SEPTEMBER, 1890.

From heart to heart, the tidings sped;
From lip to lip the message rang;
Oh, never Hope, since time began,
A sweeter, gladder pæon sang!
Earth smiled upon her Prophet's way;
The skies of winter softer shone;
And balmy were the ocean gales
That gently urged his fleet barque on.

The listning air hushed silence kept,
Then thrilled with answering bugles clear,
While o'er the swelling Austral seas
We heard our brothers' welcoming cheer!
Oh, soul to soul, we felt your joy,
Dear brothers! whom we may not see.
And, hand to hand, with you we pledge
Our lives in sacred fealty.

Beneath the glow of Egypt's skies,
The fellah toils—a hopeless slave;
And fettered earth rewards withholds,
That once with lavish hand she gave.
Dread empire of the ages gone!
We tremble in thy shadowed air:
Death-shrouded city, sterile plain,
The irrevocable doom declare.

Gray desert reaches—silent vast!
Thou, to the spirit's ear, canst tell
Of power, that awe nor pity know;
Of pride, that deep as hades fell.
O Seer of the elder time,
Who led thy captive people forth!
We, too, have heard our Prophet's voice,
And message of a grander worth.

Did we not follow where he passed?
With spirit vision undenied.
Did not our hearts within us burn,
Even as we felt him by our side?
Aye, to the nations wrapped in death,
Now, as of old, the light hath shone!
And stirred with vague unrest their dark—
To blaze with noontide's fire, anon.

Peter! thy dome attesting stands—
The glory and the shame of faith!
And Memory flits from shrine to shrine
A pallid, self-accusing wraith.
Italia—wake! the hour is here!
A greater than thy poets dreamed,
Thy land, expectant, waits to be
From ashes of the grave redeemed.

Hast thou not welcome, sunny France?
The immortal Past invokes thee now
Imperishable glory gleams,
To crown the City's jeweled brow.
By history's page has record bright,
America can ne'er forget:
Her Prophet bears thee gift divine—
A gift to cancel all the debt!

From Scotland's glen, and England's mart,
And Ireland's green, forsaken vale,
They gather—trusted heart and true—
To bid God-speed his homeward sail.
Dear mother isle! full oft, of old,
Thy sons, undaunted, bled for thee;
And sons as loyal name thee now—
The Islands of the Blest, to be.

O country nearest to his heart—
Proud star of empire's western bound!
Thy glory trembles to eclipse;
Is there no balm to heal thy wound?
Man's fairest heritage of earth!
From thy free soil shall justice spring;
And once again, with purer tone,
The Bell of Liberty shall ring!

A thousand, thousand welcomes home!
Our Prophet friend from journeyings far.
From thy imperial city's gates,
To San Francisco's harbor bar.
The throbbing heart-tides swell and meet
A tidal wave of joy and love;
Leaders of souls! to thy high call,
Not all unworthy would we prove.

—Frances M. Milne.

THE NEW YORK TIMES SPEAKS.

The Meeting of the Single Tax Men of the United States in Conference Causes It to Say a Few Words on Existing Methods of Taxation; Meantime It Has a Good Word to Say For the Single Tax Idea.

New York Times, Sunday, August 31.

Mr. Henry George is to be greeted on his return from a trip around the world by a single tax conference, which is to hold its sessions at the Cooper Union this week. Between four hundred and five hundred delegates are expected to be present, representing single tax organizations in some thirty different States. This will certainly afford to Mr. George, after his somewhat triumphal tour, a significant evidence of the progress which his ideas have been making in the last few years. This progress has been made, however, after the practical suppression of one phase of his land theory and the fuller development of another phase. When his doctrines were first put forward, that which appeared most prominent and striking in them was the denunciation of private ownership of land, the contention that all land belonged by right to the community, and the proposition that the State should confiscate and hold in its own possession all land regardless of the vested rights of individuals. This idea was not only revolutionary, but it involved such manifest injustice as to be generally repellent. To be sure, Mr. George argued that there was nothing wrong in it, and that it was a very simple and easy matter. All that was necessary was for the State to put a tax upon land, irrespective of improvements, equal to its full rental value. Then it would not be worth any body's while to insist upon holding title to it; occupations is all that would be of any moment to the possessors, and that would have to be fully paid for, while the compensation would come in relief from all other forms of taxation.

This side of the Henry George doctrine has developed into what is known as the single tax policy, while the land ownership side of it has been rather lost sight of. The single tax idea in its present form practically ignores or neglects the question of title and ownership in land, and simply maintains that all public revenues should be derived from tax upon land values apart from improvements, which tax may rightly be carried to the point of appropriating for the State all that properly belongs to the rental value of the land. It is maintained that the bare land, that which is valuable for mere occupation, and is in no measure due to labor or expense put upon it by individuals, is the natural heritage of the community, to which all should have access on the same terms, and that the income derivable from advantages of location or quality fairly belongs to the community. Moreover, it is argued that the increase of value for occupation due to the growth of the community and the multiplication of advantages through social and industrial development, and not due to any labor or expense of the occupant, belongs by right to the community.

But, leaving all these subtleties apart, the single tax proposition is capable of being considered in a very simple form as a mere question of taxation, and as such it is not without interest, as recent discussion in many quarters amply shows. We have not hesitated heretofore to express our belief that it was the ideal of taxation, unattainable for a good while to come and without a long agitation and progressive advances, but resting on irrefragible logic. Its advantages would be many. It reduces taxation to absolute simplicity and certainty and the utmost efficiency—that is to say, the form which would bring the greatest ratio of revenue with the smallest cost and difficulty of collection. It would absolutely free from the inequalities that characterize all existing systems of taxation, for all land, by whomsoever held and for whatever purpose used, would pay a revenue in precise proportion to the advantage derived from holding and using it. Moreover, it would be the form of taxation that would interfere least with the processes of production and of trade, and therefore be the least of a burden upon the community. We do not think it would accomplish all that has been claimed for it in affording opportunities for labor and relief from poverty, which has many causes, but it would afford the very largest measure of industrial and commercial freedom and facilitate a more equal distribution of opportunities and of the results of production and exchange. It would bring about a "free trade which would be absolute in its exemption from burden, restriction and perversion by public authority.

As an ideal system it is well that this form of taxation should have its earnest and persistent advocates, that it should be the subject of agitation and discussion, that organizations should be formed and conferences held to promote it. It has a sort of analogy to the old free soil and anti-slavery idea without its sectional aspect; but there is a vast deal of this process of revolutionizing public sentiment to be done before it can become a practical question in politics and legislation. But all tax reform must move in this general direction—in the direction of removing burdens and restrictions from industry and trade, and in the direction of simplicity and certainty. We have long advocated deriving all taxes for State and local purposes—excepting such special expedients as obtaining revenue from corporations that hold public franchises—from real estate as distinguished from personal property, and reducing the national system of taxing trade to a purely revenue basis with as much simplicity and effectiveness and as little interference with the natural laws of trade as possible. These would be long steps in the direction of the single tax movement, and they are steps that may be taken as soon as the people can be convinced of their advantage. They are steps that must be taken before there can be any headway beyond them. They are within the range of practical discussion and feasible legislation. The single tax is a remote ideal, and the conference of this week will serve to make it better understood and will stimulate the working of the leaven.

The Single Tax Conference.

St. Paul Globe.

The single tax conference held in New York yesterday and the day before is a notable event, and yet its results are not liable to have a disturbing effect on national politics for a good many years to come. The single tax is a remote ideal; still, the results of the New York conference will lead to a discussion and agitation of the Henry George theory, and perhaps will serve to make it better understood.

It must have been gratifying to Mr. George, on his return from a trip around the world, to discover the growth of his single tax idea. When he went away he was the only public advocate of his hobby. He came back to be greeted by a convention of four or five hundred representatives of single tax leagues, representing about thirty different States. It was the evidence of the progress his ideas have been making within the last few years.

It is noteworthy, however, that Mr. George's doctrines have undergone a good deal of revision and modification since he first put them forward. The former denunciation of the private ownership of land, the contention that all land belonged by right to the community, and the proposition that the State should confiscate and hold as its own possession all land regardless of the vested rights of individuals—all these theories have been abandoned, and the single tax idea reduced to a more practical form. As now announced it is not so visionary or revolutionary. The single tax as now interpreted ignores or neglects the question of title and ownership in land, and simply maintains that all revenue should be derived from a tax upon land values apart from their improvements.

As we have stated, the single tax proposition is a remote ideal. It is too full of subtleties to commend itself to popular approval without a vast deal of argument and explanation. There must be a long agitation and many progressive advances before it can become popular. And yet, despite the popular prejudice against it, the single tax proposition possesses some advantages. Although unattainable for a good while to come, it presents more nearly than any thing else that has yet been suggested the ideal system of taxation. It would reduce taxation to absolute simplicity, and would bring the greatest ratio of revenue with the smallest cost and difficulty of collection. In these respects, at least, it would remove serious defects in the existing system of taxation. We fail to see how it could accomplish that relief from poverty which its advocates claim, but we do see that it must afford the very largest measure of individual and commercial freedom. It would at least establish a free trade which would be exempt from restriction and perversion by public authority.

In view of these facts, the single tax movement inaugurated in New York yesterday promises to bring Mr. George's theory within the range of practical discussion and feasible legislation. The great masses of the people are always willing to listen and to learn. The organization of a national league is done for the purpose of bringing this question directly to public notice, and to make the effort to revolutionize public sentiment in favor of Mr. George's scheme. Still, there must be a vast deal of this process of revolutionizing public sentiment before the single tax proposition can become a practical question in politics and legislation.

A New Way to Commit Suicide.

Out at Prescott, A. T., ten years ago a young man with red hair, blue eyes and soft hands tramped into town. He had come down from the Tin Cup district of Colorado on a prospecting tour, but why he should strike into Prescott for anything nobody knew. He was in hard luck as anybody could see.

His blue woolen shirt had been washed and washed until it was almost brown from the corrosive action of alkali water, and his clothing was torn and wrinkled. He was a gentleman for all that. He had a pleasant word for everybody, although some of the boys had caught him moping about the corners. How he lived nobody knew. He had no money and could get no work.

"Idaho Jack," a reckless gun fighting cowboy from the Three Sister mountains of Idaho, was in town, too. He had some money, told a good story and absorbed liquor like a blotting pad. He said he was on his way to Deming. Every night saw Jack at the Ark. He made friends with everybody except the stranger from the Tin Cup district.

One night when the Ark was blue with smoke, and "Idaho Jack" was in the midst of a harum-scarum story, the morose stranger quietly arose from his chair, walked up to the upper country romancer and cuffed him across the ear.

For an instant not a word was said. Then of a sudden the Idaho gunner drew his weapon like a flash and fired. The stranger fell dead. Nobody knew his name, but when the sheriff ransacked his tattered clothing he found this note:

"To the Sheriff:

"My name is A. C. Hepburn. My parents live at Graton, N. Y. I have been out of work and starving. I have not got money enough to buy poison or a gun, and there is not water enough in Arizona to drown a gnat. I therefore take this opportunity to slap Jack, knowing as I do that it means instant death, and that is what I seek. It costs nothing, it is a new way to seek suicide, and I demand of you that you do not prosecute Jack, because he was not the aggressor. Bury me as I die. That is all I ask. Sincerely,

A. C. H."

The letter dumbfounded the town. It took all the fight out of "Idaho Jack." Dollar by dollar the "shiners" came in, until there was enough of them to buy a varnished coffin and a whitewashed headboard. Jack's contribution was something like $8—all he had and all he could borrow at the time. He was not prosecuted, but he left the town as soon as the headboard was set.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

May Never Ascend the Throne

It is a question whether the Prince of Wales ever succeeds to the throne. His health is not robust; there are ugly rumors to the effect that Bright's disease has a hold upon him. But the prince cares little about being king. He does not court the anxieties and the onerous duties which his rise to that exalted station would necessarily involve; he is not an ambitious man; he loves and seeks the society of those he likes, and, true democrat that he is, he shudders when he thinks that there may come a time when he will be compelled to associate with men who cannot possibly have human sympathy in common with himself. His eldest son, the Duke of Clarence and Avondale, is a hulking, shiftless, good-natured lubber, looking like his mother, but having neither his mother's tact or dignity nor his father's graciousness or strength of character. It seems to be a foregone conclusion that in the due course of time the duke will marry his pretty cousin, the sweet and pretty daughter of the Princess of Teck.—Eugene Field.

He Must Get Married.

Attorney Arthur S. Fisher, of Rockford, is a candidate for matrimonial honors. He is a member of the Owl club, a society of Ogle county bachelors, and his doom was sealed at its picnic on Aug. 15. During the day came the election of officers. Among the officers is one called "the $10,000 beauty of the club." and he who is elected to this office must marry within a year and withdraw from the society. The charm has never failed to work yet, and every man who has been elected to the office has been married within the year. Every other officer is elected by acclamation, but this one is elected by solemn and sacred ballot. When the ballots were counted it was found that Mr. Fisher was the doomed man. The good natured attorney made a pleasant speech, and tried in his clever way to turn it off as a joke. The sequel has never failed to occur.—Chicago Herald.

The Man Who Works Nights

A newspaper man, who gets to bed so late that he sleeps until 2 or 3 o'clock in the afternoon, awakening the other day and looking at the clock saw that it was 6 o'clock. As he had an engagement at that hour, he fairly leaped into his clothes and rushed from the house, to find that it was 6 o'clock, but 6 a. m. He had slept just one hour. He wasn't "mad," because he felt too foolish.—New York Tribune.

Two Sweet Girl Graduates.

Two sweet girl graduates went forth to walk in the woods. In their holiday mood all roads were one to them, and when they came to a cross-road they turned into it. A hunter who happened to to be standing near spoke to them.

"Don't take that road, young women," he said; "It isn't safe."

"Why isn't it safe?" asked the sweetest of the girl graduates, incredulously.

"Because a bear has lately gone that way."

"How do you know that? Did you see the bear?"

"No, I didn't see him; but there is his trail;" and the hunter pointed to some footprints on the ground.

The girl graduates carefully examined the tracks, and said one to the other: "They don't look like the prints of a bear's paws. Do you think they are?"

"Don't believe him," said the other. "I don't think they look a bit like bear tracks."

"Do you know a bear trail when you see it?" queried the hunter.

"If you mean the print of a bear's paws on the ground," said one of the girl graduates, with a lofty air, "I am sure anyone could tell what they would look like."

"Did you ever see the tracks of a bear?" repeated the hunter.

"No," replied the girl graduate, "but natural history gives us the conformation of a bear's paws, and the commonest mental operation would teach us from that what their tracks would look like. I don't think these look the least like the footprints of a bear. Bears have claws, and there are no marks of claws here."

"Who ever heard of a bear without claws?" said the other girl graduate, with a withering glance at the hunter.

"What kind of tracks be they, then, miss?" asked the hunter.

"Indeed I don't know," returned one of the sweet girl graduates, superciliously. "They certainly are not the tracks of a bear."

"Besides," added the other sweet girl graduate, "who ever heard of bears walking along roads."

The hunter's stock of arguments as well as words were limited, and he said nothing. The sweet girl graduates went on their way.

They had not gone far when a bear sprang upon them and ate them up. The only part of their anatomy not masticated beyond identity were their tongues, which finding tough, the bear had swallowed whole. Before the process of digestion fairly begun, these found time for a few words:

"They were bear tracks after all," said one.

"And suppose they were." replied the other, "how were we to know?"—Harper's Bazar.

Modern Eloquence.

That the flowers of eloquence have not been all gathered in from time to time evident when some bold orator breaks out in a high strain. A gentleman who passed the Fourth of July in a mountain village this year furnishes the following as a specimen of the eloquence which found favor on that occasion. The oration was delivered by a local magnate, a man who has political aspirations, and of whom his neighbors say that "the 'squire had ought to go to Congress;" and the hearer declares that he wrote down this bit of modern eloquence on the spot, exaggerating it not in the least:

"Since first the great hand of Liberty was extended to pluck our sinking land like a brand from the maelstrom of oppression, and to make despots tremble in their palaces till the welkin of all Europe rang with their cries of impotent terror, there has been one day which has been as a star in the hearts of all freemen, awakening reverberating echoes which nothing can quench, and from which shall spring in glorious efflorescence the flowers of civilization and the deep-delved treasures of learning and law. The insolence of English tyranny was the last straw in the cup of American endurance, and a nation of freemen sprang full-armed into being, as a splendid comet soars in the heights of the empyrean."

Another Sauce.

The teacher told her scholars that the chewing of tobacco was a vile and reprehensible habit. One of the boys, with an air of importance, replied that he had seen a fellow chew because his tooth ached; he didn't think it could be called wrong to chew for such a purpose.

"This answer pleased the rest of the scholars, and for a moment the teacher was at a loss how to meet it. Then she said:

"Horace, if a girl should have the toothache and wish to chew tobacco, what ought she to do?"

Horace scratched his head, but was equal to the emergency:

"She ought to have the tooth pulled." he answered.—Youth's Companion.

A Self-Sustaining Municipality

Visitor—I never saw a city so abundantly supplied with milk, vegetables and general trucking as yours.

Enthusiastic Chicagoan—Yes, sir and the beauty of it is that it is all raised right here in the city, don't you see?—Puck.

The mule is an animal that likes his fling.

A famous Washington gambler, it is said, will soon go to preaching. He would have begun ten years ago, but he has just found out a cure for his cough. It is Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

"Behold! the world rests and her tired inhabitants have paused from trouble and turmoil, because the customary headache and neuralgia have been cured by Salvation Oil Price 25 cents a bottle.

The ram does not give a scent if the hound runs off the track.

We call the attention of our readers to the ad of the Van Dusen-Harrington Co. in another column. This Co. succeeds to the commission business carried on for years by G. W. Van Dusen Co. and have every facility known to the trade for disposing of grain consigned to them and are able to secure the highest possible prices. Great care is exercised by them in seeing that grain is properly inspected and weighed. It is a great advantage to shippers of grain to know that they are sending it to a responsible house that will give them fair treatment.

Dogs may not harbor thoughts but they seem to buy them.

Dobbins' Electric Soap does not chap the hands, being perfectly pure. Many people afflicted with Salt Rheum have been cured by its use. Preserves and whitens clothes. Have your grocer order it and try it now.

Most people seek the deep slumber of a decided opinion.

White Swelling

"In 1887 my son, 7 years old, had a white swelling come on his right leg below the knee, which became very much swollen and painful, and contracted the muscles so that his leg was drawn up at right angles. Physicians failed to help him materially, and I considered him

A Confirmed Cripple.

I was about to take him to Cincinnati for an operation, expecting his leg would have to be taken off, and began giving him Hood's Sarsaparilla in order to get up his strength. The medicine woke up his appetite and soon pieces of bone were discharged from the sore. We continued with Hood's Sarsaparilla, as it seemed to be doing him so much good, and the discharge from the sore decreased, the swelling went down, the leg straightened out, and in a few months he had perfect use of his leg. He now runs everywhere, and apparently is as well as ever." JOHN L. MCMURRAY, Notary Public, Ravenswood, W. Va.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

SICK HEADACHE

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Positively cured by these Little Pills.

They also relieve Distress from Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Too Hearty Eating. A perfect remedy for Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Coated Tongue, Pain in the Side, TORPID LIVER. They regulate the Bowels. Purely Vegetable.

Price 25 Cents.

CARTER MEDICINE CO., NEW YORK.

Small Pill. Small Dose. Small Price.

Dyspepsia is the bane of the present generation. It is for its cure and its attendants, Sick Headache, Constipation and Piles, that have become so famous. They act speedily and gently on the digestive organs, giving them tone and vigor to assimilate food. No griping or nausea.

Tutt's Pills

Sold Everywhere.

Office, 39 & 41 Park Place, N. Y.

JOHNSON'S SWEET CIDER. Johnson's Pure Cider Vinegar. Both pure goods. Write for prices. F. C. JOHNSON, Kishwaukee Ill.

LADY Agents Wanted; new Rubber Undergarment; rapid seller; good pay. Ad., Mrs. B. N. Little Rubber Co., Chicago Ill.

CANCERS Cured without the use of the Knife at the Iola Cancer Infirmary, Iola, Waupaca, Co. Wis. Write for book of treatment.

$1.00 An Hour, Painting signs with our Patterns experience unnecessary. Plain or Shaded letters circular for stamp. Samples of work 20cts. Morlan Co Salem, Ohio.

TANSY PILLS! Safe and Sure. Send 4c. for "WOMAN'S SAFE GUARD." Wilcox Specific Co., Phila., Pa.

FAT FOLKS Reduced 15 to 25 pounds per month by harmless herbal remedies. No starving, no inconvenience. Confidential. Send 6c. for circulars and testimonials. Address, DR. O. W. F. SNYDER, 243 State St., Chicago, Ill.

PATENTS Inventor's Guide, or How to obtain a Patent, sent free. PATRICK O'FARRELL, Att'y at Law, Washington, D. C.

SINGLE DOUBLE 30 TULIPS ASSORTED COLORS. We will send the above to any address on receipt of $1, or 14 for 50 cents, post-paid. Catalogue FREE. L. L. MAY & CO., ST. PAUL, MINN.

PENSIONS The Disability Bill is a Law. Dependent widows and parents are included. If you wish your claim quickly and Successfully Prosecuted, write to JAMES TANNER, late Commissioner of Pensions, Washington, D. C.

Cures in 1 TO 5 DAYS. Guaranteed not to cause Stricture. Mf'd only by the Evans Chemical Co. Cincinnati, Ohio. Trade Mark

I prescribe and fully endorse Big G as the only specific for the certain cure of this disease. G. H. INGRAHAM, M. D., Amsterdam, N. Y.

We have sold Big G for many years, and it has given the best of satisfaction. D. R. DYCHE & CO., Chicago, Ill. $1.00. Sold by Druggists.

IMPORTANT NEW DISCOVERY.

"VASELINE"

THE BEST SOAP for the Skin

Toilet Soap Ever Made.

A perfect pure and neutral soap combining the EMOLLIENT and HEALING properties of VASELINE. If your druggist does not keep it, FORWARD 10 CENTS IN STAMPS and we WILL SEND a Full SIZED CAKE BY MAIL, POSTAGE PAID.

CHESEBROUGH MANUFACTURING CO

24 State Street, NEW YORK.

N. W. N. U. 1890 No. 43.

BARLEY RYE BUCKWHEAT

SEND LARGE SAMPLE TO

WOODWARD & Co.,

GRAIN COMMISSION,

406 and 408 Corn Exch., MINNEAPOLIS.

THEY WILL WIRE YOU CASH

◆◆◆◆◆ OFFER AT YOUR STATION

☞Consign your wheat to them and get TOP PRICE.

Ely's Cream Balm For

CATARRH

THE POSITIVE CURE.

ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren St., New York. Price 50 cts.

"The greatest burdens are not the gain-fullest." You can lessen

LIFE'S BURDEN

by using SAPOLIO

It is a solid cake of scouring soap used for cleaning purposes.

COPYRIGHT

What would you give for a Friend who would take half your hard work off your shoulders and do it without a murmur? What would you give to find an assistant in your housework that would keep your floors and walls clean, and your kitchen bright, and yet never grow ugly over the matter of hard work? Sapolio is just such a friend and can be bought at all grocers.

THE VAN DUSEN-HARRINGTON CO.,

GRAIN COMMISSION.

MINNEAPOLIS. - DULUTH.

SELL BY SAMPLE.

Best Prices. Prompt Returns. Write for quotations. Execute orders Chicago, New York or Milwaukee.

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION

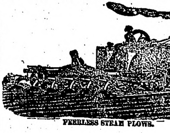
25 CTS

Best Cough Medicine. Recommended by Physicians. Cures where all else fails. Pleasant and agreeable to the taste. Children take it without objection. By druggists.

FOUND · AT · LAST

PLOWING BY STEAM IS NO LONGER AN EXPERIMENT.

Will turn six fourteen-inch furrows six to sixteen inches deep. The only steam-gang plow ever manufactured. For description, prices, catalogue, etc., apply to Western Machinery Co. Gen'l Western Agts., 1413 17th St., DENVER, COLORADO. Send 4 cents in stamps for mailing Catalogue.



PEERLESS STEAM PLOWS.

THE NEWS.

Entered at the post office at Red Lake Falls as second-class mail matter.

Official Paper of the County.

Official Paper of the City.

JAS. MEEHAN, JR. Editor and Prop.

Hon. S. G. Comstock,

FOR CONGRESS, 5th DIST.

The cunningly devised scheme of the theorist to build locks every two miles in the Red Lake and Red River will never prevent Congressman Comstock's re-election.

Farmers of this section would like to see Whiteman. A individual who can legislate to put an artificial lake on each farm so that farmers can do their seeding in boats and avoid paying the high duty on agricultural implments is indeed a wonder.

Bill Ervin's flowery speech didn't go down worth a cent with the farmers of Red Lake Falls. His figurative diction is not appreciated by the common man and rank, were the words of denunciation heaped upon the great criminal office-seeking advocate as his audience poured from the hall.

The fact that Mr. Whiteman resides in the southeast corner of the Fifth district is sufficient evidence that all his interests lie within the bluff bounded city of Duluth. Every appropriation he could get would be for the benefit of his own real-estate. Cast your vote for Comstock who represents the whole district, and you will make no mistake.

We notice most of the farmers alliance papers throughout the county are calling on the farmer's alliance members for funds. This shows the motive power which induces these editors to take such a deep interest in the cause of the alliance. It would be well for farmers to stay by their old party, as thus their grievances can sooner be healed.

Because Congressman Comstock voted for the McKinley bill when elected on a protection platform some democrats are blind enough to conclude that he could not change his vote and will vote against any reduction of the tariff hereafter although running on a platform delaring for a tariff for revenue only. Don't believe this. Congressman Comstock is just as honest as his democratic defamers.

The NEWS invites the public to visit our office and see the beautiful steel engravings which we are offering as premiums to subscribers who pay up one year in advance. Besides these we have up a gig worth about $20 brand new from the factory that goes in with the rest. Any new subscriber paying one year in advance or any old one canceling his indebtedness and doing the same well get a ticket on all the premiums, which will be raffled off some time next winter. Bear in mind the literary offers and clubbing rates.

Another dodge to catch the Norwegan vote the St. Paul News carrspondent from Crookston calls the county attorney on the alliance ticket Mr. Olsen trying to carry he impression he is a Norwegian, a bright young man great, lawyer etc. look over the court calendars the past three years and behold the number of cases he has conducted in our circuit court and then conclude he is a great lawyer with the aid of Halvor Steenerson.

Bierley of Grand Forks spoke to a mixed audience Tuesday night, principally upon the feasibility of congress appropriating money to build a system of dams and locks along the Red River of the north from Pembina to its source and from the mouth of Red Lake river to its source. Five hundred thousand dollars he claims would be sufficient to complete this work. This appriation Congressman Comstock failed to get, but he assures the voters that the man advertised to speak here who failed to put in an appearance, Mr. Whiteman, will push through congress before he is there a month. We won't stop to consider the mammoth scheme. It might be feasible 2,000 years hence but at the present time it is beyond the comprehension of the common voter. To think of the amount of fall there is in the Red Lake river between Crookston and Thief River Falls and then consider that five hundred thousand dollars would be sufficient to build dams and locks to hold back the water is taxing the intelligence of the average man, who is not a theoris beyond endurance.

Congressman Comstock was never asked by his people for an appropriation to build these dams and locks. Nor is he in congress to represent the people of North Dakota boomers. Mr. Whiteman has hired a North Dakota editor to come into the Fifth district and talk about the impossibilities congressman Comstock failed to make possible. The people of this vicinity are satisfied with the work done by Mr. Comstock because he has been a true representative.

An Inexpensive Purifier.

After boiling ten minutes the water should be poured into a wooden or stone jar, covered with a cloth and left an hour to cool, when it may be put into the filter. For a filter a new, clean flower pot of unglazed clay, filled monthly, or rather changed for one freshly charged, is better than most of the patents in the market. First cut a disk of cotton flannel to fit the bottom of the pot inside, put on this a layer of clean, white sand an inch thick, then three inches of charcoal in very coarse powder, three inches of sand above this, and clean, washed gravel over all, and you have as good a filter for a dollar as you can buy for ten, as far as working goes. The water must run through this twelve hours before the charcoal dust washes out so that the fluid runs clear. The pot should fit into the top of a long stone jar with faucet attached and the ice be hung in it, tied in a piece of cotton flannel for a primitive mode of keeping the iceworms out and making the ice last longer.

The only trouble with water so prepared is that it tastes flat from want of air, which Dr. Currier proposes to supply by a clean bellows kept for the purpose, but it is more conveniently done by pouring water from one pitcher to another several times as foaming drinks are mixed. Or one of the patent egg and cake beaters could be used in the water for a few minutes, and the most discriminating palate could hardly fail to approve water so refined.—Shirley Dare in New York Herald.

The Diffusion of Light.

A bit of clever artifice to which women may resort with a clear conscience consists in distributing light so that coloring and features may be developed instead of flattened. In more than half the houses, on visits both day and night, the light is inartistically admitted from above. Go into any ballroom where floods of illumination are dispensed from a great height, and the freshest debutante is seen at a disadvantage. Her rosiness is fairly devoured by the greedy glare, and not until one draws her into the dimly lit conservatory are all the delicate tints restored. The secret of preserving one's bloom after nightfall lies in using wax or even paraffine candles as much as possible, and so distributing their soft glow that it will all shine from about a level with the face. "How exceedingly pretty the girls always look at your house," remarked a casual observer, never guessing that one-half the credit was due their hostess, who enhanced instead of ruthlessly dissipating her guests' loveliness by the manipulation of illumination.—Illustrated American.

A Famous Woman Surgeon.

Mme. Ribart, the ex-grisette, who was the first European to practice medicine in the Turkish harems, was as skillful as most of her contemporaries. The woman's career is more romantic than most fiction. Her lover in Paris was a medical student; she devoured his text books with more avidity than he did her novels. She passed a brilliant examination at twenty-six and went to Cairo to practice; her patients were soon numbered by the hundreds, but the excesses into which she plunged resulted in her incarceration in a lunatic asylum. She then sought a new career in Cochin China and at once won the admiration of the French inhabitants. So speedily did her skill as a surgeon make her famous that she in a short time became physician to the court, and was to have operated on the queen mother of Annam for cataract. The day before she was to have relieved the old queen, who had been blind for years, the wonderfully beautiful and skillful Dr. Ribart died.—New York Telegram.

When You Go Away.

When packing your trunk remember to sew all the folds in your dresses flat. There is nothing so quickly makes a new dress look like an old one as bad management in packing. Lay a paper over passementeries and bead trimmings, as they will be sure to leave their mark on anything lightly packed above them. If your trunk is too short turn your dresses at the top, never at the bottom, and if there is a velvet panel creation in your wardrobe lay something soft where you fold it and place it perfectly flat, otherwise it will come out in a watered design where it was not evenly laid. Open all tapes, and if you have a wash dress with loopings open them out; for if packed looped by the time you reach your destination all their fresh stiffness will be lost. Pack everything as flatly and evenly as possible, and you will be surprised to see how much can be gotten into even a small trunk, especially if the trunk be packed gradually so as to let it settle by degrees.—Exchange.

Riders and Fencers.

Outside of New York Philadelphia and Baltimore furnish the handsomest and best equipped as well as the most daring horsewomen. Fencing for women grows steadily in favor. There are few conspicuous proficients, though, outside the stage. Mrs. Langtry is a fine hand with the foils. So is Mrs. Potter. Bernhardt swears by them. The exercise is so essentially French that it is no wonder French women are most expert in it. Some of the greatest ladies in Paris could fight a duel to the death, with all the chances in their favor unless the opponent was a marvelously fine swordsman. Viennese women fence, too. In each case it is the ladies of the great world and the half who affect the pastime. The great middle class and the working women know nothing of such distractions.—New York Star.

Where Famous Mrs. Tilton Lives.

Mrs. Theodore Tilton is a sad and lonely woman, with silver streaked hair, a careworn face and stooped figure, who frequents Lincoln park in Chicago with her grandchildren. Every pleasant morning in the year she goes to the pleasure ground, but is seldom recognized and never seen speaking to any one. She lives with her married daughter, who contributes to the family income by water color paintings, many of which are very lovely in conception and treatment.—Chicago Letter.

Woman's Hold on Life.

From recent statistics it seems to be shown that woman has a greater tenacity of life than man, and that the Hebrew women are the longest lived of any race. Then, too, among insects the male perishes at a relatively earlier period; in plants the seminal blossoms die earliest and are produced in the weaker limbs, and female quadrupeds have more endurance than male.—Herald of Health.

Value of an Egg.

An egg is said to contain as much nourishment as a pound and one ounce of cherries, a pound and a quarter of grapes, a pound and a half of russet apples, two pounds of gooseberries and four pounds of pears, and that 114 pounds of grapes, 187 pounds of russet apples, 192 pounds of pears and 327 pounds of plums are equal in nourishment to 100 pounds of potatoes.

BABY.

A little form so dainty small,
So soft, so tender, and so dear;
A little voice whose helpless call
Is music to a mother's ear;
A little pulse of delicate breath,
Like Eve's when Zephyr whispereth;

A little arm that nerveless lies;
Red, curling fingers, tiniest things;
Two round, blue upward gazing eyes,
All filled with silent wonderings,
That, as the kiss of heaven's light bids,
Now ope, now close their downy lids;

A little head, so smooth and white;
Pert, rosy mouth and fairy chin,
And cheeks all rounded to the sight,
Save where a dimple draws them in;
All in one tiny frame enwove,
As light as Laughter, soft as Love.

—W. Trego Webb in London Spectator.

EXERCISE FOR GRACE.

Why Women Rise from a Chair Very Much as the Doll of Their Child Does.

Has anybody told you yet, little woman, that you don't know how to rise from a chair? Well, you don't. The act, as you perform it, suggests the movements of the flat faced, jointed wooden creature you loved best when a child, because she was the ungainliest of all your children, and everybody else laughed at her and at you for cherishing her most. But you did, and you made her the very finest gowns and most astounding turbans you could devise, and kept her in your arms most of the day and put her close by your pillow when you went to bed at night, and perhaps that is partly the reason why you sit down and rise up with some suggestion of her ancient grace.

But you should have learned better things, little woman, all these days that you have been hearing so much about physical perfection, and the dress reforms, and the body reforms, and the Delsartian graces, and all the rest. And you should have learned that the reason you rise like your wooden doll is because your joints are in exactly the same inflexible and unyielding state that hers were. The secret of grace of body is suppleness of joint. It really takes all the poetry out of the matter, you see, to discover that the elegant sinuosity of movement that marks the "vere de vere" is altogether a question of mechanics, and depends upon the ease of motion in the various hinges that connect the different members of the human frame. But it is, and so the thing for you to do is to get these hinges into easy working order as soon and as completely as possible.

Begin your improving exercises, not by practicing various graceful poses before a mirror, as women who haven't got hold of the secret of the thing are wont to do, but begin with suppling each separate joint in your body in this way. Turn the fingers round and round on the axis of the hand; turn the hand round on the axis of the wrist. Turn the forearm on the elbow and the whole arm on the shoulder. Then turn the head on the neck—slowly and as far round as you can. You will be surprised to see how easily after a few days' practice your face will come to be where your back hair was a moment before.

Now try turning the trunk on the waist line, the legs on the hips, the lower half of the leg on the knee and the foot on the ankle. A steady, constant practice of this one turning exercise every day for one month until every joint is as free and supple as it can possibly be made will give a grace and freedom of motion that seems well nigh incredible to one who has never tried it. The most important of these movements are those that turn the body on the waist, the head on the neck, and the legs on the hips. Just notice the next graceful woman you meet and see for yourself how much her grace of movement depends on the free and supple action of the trunk and the waist and the hips.—New York Evening Sun.

Women Who Live by Typewriting.

A manufacturer of one of the standard typewriters on the market says that there are 75,000 women who make a living in this country by thrumming the keys of writing machines. "We are not able to give you absolutely accurate information," he said, "as to the number of women who make a living by the typewriter, but we are probably in a better position to estimate the approximate number, as we know more nearly than any one else how many machines of all makes are in use, and the proportion of male and female operators. We think it not far out of the way to say that there are about 75,000 women whose support is derived from the use of writing machines, and 25,000 men of whom the same may be said. These figures do not include the men who use the typewriter themselves in their own business or profession, but merely those who use the machine as employes of other people." Another manufacturer says that from 20,000 to 30,000 women are using the machines which he is making.—New York Sun.

The Disposition of the Ring.

The disposition of that sentimental pledge, the engagement ring, has at last been carried before the French courts, and now we know to whom when its significance is broken the token shall revert. In the Nimes court in France a recent divorce case came up in which the wife claimed as hers certain articles of jewelry presented to her before their marriage. Prominent among these was the engagement ring. The judges decided that not only is a woman entitled before the law to all those articles of value which a lover has seen fit to present to her before marriage, but that the "ring offered for the purpose of recalling the engagement of two persons constitutes the most personal and most irrevocable of all souvenirs given in view of marriage." This is as it should be.—San Francisco Argonaut.

How a Brilliant Woman Writes.

Mrs. Mary E. Bryan, who draws the biggest salary of any woman editor in the United States, has written a comedietta in one act entitled "His Society Play." It is the experience of a New York playwright with the scenes in the top story of a lodging house. This quaint, nervous little woman is a Georgia product, unusually gifted, with as many whims as a child, and a disposition quite as sunny. She is a tremendous worker, writes day and night, most of the time sitting on the floor Turk fashion, with her copy paper on a lapboard, and the whole place littered with pencil chips.—Exchange.

A Society Coach.

A lady belonging to an old New York family which has been financially wrecked is earning a substantial living by coaching people for society. She charges her pupils $5 an hour for her services, and her specialite is to supply the newest gossip as to fashionable engagements, coming marriages and other social events of interest. She has also an excellent stock of stories suitable for relation at luncheon and dinner tables, and is well up in the gossip about the latest literary and dramatic successes and the newest books.—Chatter.

Land Office at Crookston, Minn., August 27th, 1890. Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the register or receiver U. S. Land Office at Crookston, Minn., on October 14th, 1890, viz:

Georgiena Fontaine Hd No. 12286 for the e½ ne¼ and e½ se¼ sec 12 tp 150 R.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon said land, viz:

Edward Wichterman, William Black, Henry LaChance and August Mercier, all of Lambert P. O., Polk county, Minn.

sep15oc9 H. H. Dickmann, Register.

Default having been made in the conditions of a mortgage containing power of sale dated July 31st, 1883, duly recorded in the office of the register of deeds of Polk county, Minnesota, on July 31st, 1883, in Book O of mortgages on pages 130 to 134 inclusive, whereby Henrich Bote and Elizabeth Bote his wife, mortgagors, mortgaged to Emma B. Gove, guardian of Frank M. Gove, mortgagee, the east half of the north east quarter and the southwest quarter of the north east quarter, and the north east quarter of the south east quarter, of section fourteen in township one hundred and fifty-two in range forty-six in Polk county, Minnesota, containing 160 acres, by which default the power of sale has become operative, and no action or proceeding at law or otherwise has been instituted to recover the debt remaining secured by said mortgage or any part thereof and there is claimed to be due on said mortgage at the date of this notice the sum of $705.75.

Now, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of said power said mortgage will be foreclosed and said premises will be sold at public auction by the sheriff of said county or his deputy on the 25th day of October, 1890, at 10 o'clock a. m., at the front door of the court house in the city of Crookston in said county to pay said debt and interest and taxes and $25 attorney's fees and disbursements allowed by law.

Dated September 8th, 1890.

Emma B. Grove, (now Emma B. Mitchell)
Guardian of Frank M. Gove,
Mortgagee.
Nontague & Bucklen,
Attorneys for Mortgagee,
Crookston, Minn. sep11-nov24

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage containing a power of sale dated April 5th, 1887, duly recorded in the office of register of deeds of Polk county, Minnesota, on April 8th, 1887, in book 30 of mortgages on page 398 whereby Wilfred Cyr and Emma Cyr, his wife, mortgagors, mortgaged to F. T. Day, mortgagee, the west half (w½) of the south east quarter (se¼) and the south east quarter (se¼) of the south west quarter (sw¼) and lots nine (9) and ten (10) all in section twenty-five (25) in township one hundred and fifty one (151) of range forty-five (45) in Polk county, Minnesota containing one hundred and seventy-four and 25-100 acres, by which default the power of sale has become operative and no action or proceeding at law or otherwise has been instituted to recover the debt remaining secured by said mortgage or any part thereof and there is claimed to be due on said mortgage at the date of this notice, the sum of $87.30.

Now, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of said power, said mortgage will be foreclosed and said premises will be sold at public auction by the sheriff of said county or his deputy on the 22d day of November, 1890, at 10 o'clock a. m. at the front door of the court house in the city of Crookston in said county, to pay said debt and interest and taxes and twenty-five dollars attorney's fees and disbursements allowed by law.

Dated June 1st, 1890.

F. T. Day, Mortgagee.
De Forest Bucklen,
Attorney for Mortgagee,
Crookston, Minn.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk—ss.
In probate court, special term Sept. 13, 1890.
In the matter of the estate of William J Bahnson, deceased.

On receiving and filing the petition of John E. Bahnsen of Rock Island, Illinois, representing among other things, that William J. Bahnsen late of Crookston, Minnesota, on the 26th day of August, A. D. 1890, at Fisher, Minnesota, died intestate, and being a resident of this county at the time of his death, leaving goods, chattles, and estate within this county, and that the said petitioner is a brother of said deceased, and praying that administration of said estate be to De Forest Bucklen granted:

It is ordered, that said petition be heard before this court on Tuesday the 14th day of October A. D. 1890, at 2 o'clock p. m. at the probate office in Crookston in said county.

Ordered Further, that notice thereof be given to the heirs of deceased, and to all persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week, for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the Red Lake Falls News, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Red Lake Falls in said county.

Dated at Crookston the 15th day of September A. D. 1890.

By the Court: C. O. Christianson,
Judge of Probate.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk—ss.
In probate court, special term, Sept. 23rd, 1890.
In the matter of the Estate of Theodore Laurent, deceased.

Whereas, an instrument in writing, purporting to be the last will and testament of Theodore Laurent deceased, late of said county, has been delivered to this court:

And Whereas, Marie Clement of Terrebonne in said county of Polk, the widow of said deceased, has filed herewith her petition, representing, among other things, that said Theodore Laurent died in said county on the 30th day of November 1889, testate, and that, Joseph Laurent who is named in said last will and testament as the executor thereof declines and refuses to act as such executor thereof declines and refuses to act as such executor and praying that the said instrument may be admitted to probate, and that letters of administration with the will annexed, be to Louis St. Yves issued thereon.

It is ordered, that the proofs of said instrument and the said petition, be heard before this court, at the probate office in Crookston in said county, on the 21st day of October A. D. 1890, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, when all concerned may appear and contest the probate of said instrument:

And it is further ordered, that public notice of the time and place of said hearing be given to all persons interested by publication of these orders once in each week for three weeks successively previous to said day of hearing, in the Red Lake Falls News, a newspaper printed and published at Red Lake Falls in said county.

By the Court, C. O. Christianson,
sp25-oc9 Judge of Probate

Land Office at Coookston, Minn., October 7, 1890. Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the register of U S Land Office at Crookston, Minn., on Dec. 6, 1890, viz, Arthur Toupin, hd 12,187, for the w½ se¼ and e½ sw¼ sec 15, tp 150, r 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of, said land, viz,

Damas Lachance Moses Guerard, Phillias Descautel, Cyrille Lussier, all of Brooks P. O., Minn.

H. H. Dickmann, register.

REPORT OF THE CONDITION

—OF—

THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK AT RED LAKE FALLS, IN THE STATE OF MINNESOTA AT THE CLOSE OF BUSINESS, OCTOBER, 2ND, 1890.

RESOURCES.
Loans and discounts	57,653.38
Overdrafts, secured and unsecured	235.08
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation	12,500.00
Due from approved reserve agents	8,208.52
Due from other National Banks	955.37
Banking-house, furniture & fixtures	1,093.75
Other real estate and mortgages owned	589.95
Checks and other cash items	884.93
Bills of other banks	1,117.00
Fractional paper currency, nickles and cents	46.06
Specie	3,222.40
Legal-tender notes	1,700.00
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer (5 per cent of circulation)	562.50
Total	88,768.94
LIABILITIES.
Capital stock paid in	50,000.00
Surplus fund	4,000.00
Undivided profits	841.88
National Bank notes outstanding	11,250.00
Dividends unpaid	424.00
Individual deposits subject to check	17,857.42
Demand certificates of deposit	4,395.64
Total	88,768.94

State of Minnesota county of Polk, SS.

I, James I. Wyer, Chashier of the above-named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

JAMES I. WYER, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 11th day of Oct., 1890.

THEO. GARCEAU, Notary Public,
Polk Co. Minn.
Correct—Attest:
JOSEPH SMITH }
ED. HAMBY. } Directors
FRANK E. HUNT }

Things Worth Remembering.

That it is dangerous to stand near a tall tree or spire during a thunder storm.

That the southwest corner of the cellar is the "cyclone safety point."

That there is no medicine so universally applicable to sickness as fresh air and sunshine."

That blowing out the gas before retiring is funny—to every one except the one who tries it.

That you may swear as hard as you please but it will not remove grease spots.

That the Wisconsin Central is the most popular line between Minneapolis and St. Paul and Milwaukee and Chicago.

That its fast train leaves Minneapolis daily at 6:25 p. m., St. Paul at 7:15 p. m., with through Pullman sleepers, arriving in Milwaukee at 7:27 and Chicago at 9:59 the following morning, serving breakfast in dining car.

That before starting on a trip always get information from some reliable ticket agent, and that nowhere will such information be more cheerfully given than at the city ticket offices of the Wisconsin Central, No. 19, Nicollet House block, Minneapolis, and 162 East 3d st, cor. Jackson, St. Paul. Address letters to Chas. E. Dixon, acting city passenger and ticket agent, St. Paul, F. H. Hanson, Gen. Northwestern Pass. agent, Minneapolis, or Louis Eckstein, Assistant General Passenger and Ticket agent, Milwaukee.

RALPH & BOURDON,

Proprietors of the

CITY DRAY LINE.

WOOD & COAL

Anything in our line done
Promptly and at very Reasonable
Rates.

GIVE US A CALL.

TONSORIAL HALL!

N. MORISETTE, PROP.

Everything First Class!

SHAVING,
HAIR-CUTTING,
SHAMPOOING!

☞ Shaving 15 cents.
Haircutting 25 cents. ☜

Main Street, Red Lake Falls.

Roller Mill "B"

BEST PATENT	$2.25
BEST STRAIGHT	2.00
SECOND "	1.75
FAMILY BAKER'S	1.40
GRAHAM	2.00
RYE FLOUR	2.00
MIDDLINGS	1.00
SHORTS	.55
BRAN	.45
BEST GROUND FEED	.80
2d " "	.65

Fine corn meal per pound, 1½c.

MAJERES BROS.

Proprietor of the

City Meat Market.

A full line of market supplies, such as

BEEF, PORK,
MUTTON, POULTRY
AND SAUSAGE.

A first class meat market where everything is kept as clean as can be.

Main, near 1st st Red Lake Falls

JOHN WATSON,
PHYSICIAN & SURGEON,

Office in residence, Sixth street, Red Lake Falls, Minn. 4-6

VIOLINS, GUITAR, BANJOS' FINEST Assortment, Largest Stock, Lowest Prices, Best Strings for all instrument, assorted to suit, $1.50 per dozen, postpaid, Cash with order. Anything in the music line sent to any part of the United States. Write Allmendinger Piano And Organ Company, Ann Arbor, Mich. Orders from teachers and the profession solicited. Live Agents wanted for our Pianos and Organs.

NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD

The New Dining Car Route
BETWEEN
WINNIPEG,
GRAFTON,
GRAND FORKS,
RED LAKE FALLS,
ST. PAUL,
MINNEAPOLIS,
DULUTH,
AND ALL POINTS EAST.

The Direct line to
MONTANA, IDAHO,
WASHINGTON TERRITORY,
OREGON, BRITISH COLUMBIA
PUGET SOUND AND ALASKA.

EXPRESS TRAINS DAILY.

To which are attached Pullman Palace Sleeping and Elegant Dining Cars. On overland trains, Emigrant Sleepers Free. The only line to the Yellowstone Park.

All trains daily.
Pullman Palace Sleeping Cars between Grand Forks and St Paul. Dining cars on all trains.
Coupon tickets on sale to all points Southeast and West.
For further information regarding rates, routes maps, etc., address
CHAS. S. FEE, G. P. & T. Agt., St. Paul, Minn.
J. A. DUFFY Local Agt

Green Bay, Winona & St. Paul

Railroad. Best and most Direct Line Between LACROSSE,
WINONA,
Neillsville,
Eau Claire,
Grand Rapids,
Stevens Point,
New London,
Appelton,
Neenah,
Menasha,
Oshkosh,
Fon du Lac,
GREEN BAY,

And all Points in
EASTERN WISCONSIN,
Iron Districts of Northern Michigan and Lake Superior Regions.

Close Connections and Quick Time.

See That Your Ticket Reads Via
GREEN BAY, WINONA & ST. PAUL
Railroad.

S. W. Champion,
Superintendent, Green Bay, Wis.
J. B Last,
Ass't Gen. Pass. Agt., Green Bay, Wis.

$100,000

To Loan on Farms

—AT—

10 pr Cent

Interest. No bonus—no delay, at

THE FIRST NAT. BANK

Red Lake Falls Minn.

Homeseekers will find the last of the public domain of agricultural and grazing value along the Great Northern Ry in North Dakota and Montana. FREE LANDS.

New Towns 100 or more, along the Great Northern Railway Line. Business chances. Write F. I. Whitney, St. Paul, Minn., for Books, Maps, etc. Write now.

Settlers on Free government lands along the Great Northern Railway Line in North Dakota and Montana get low rates and fine markets for products. Low Rates

Hunting, Fishing Finest resorts in America along the Great Northern Ry. Line in Minnesota, Dakotas and Montana. Best climate for health seekers.

Montana produces the finest horses and cattle. Free ranges yet in the Mouse, Milk and Sun River Valleys and Sweet Grass Hills. Horses, Cattle

Health, Wealth In Mont. Free Lands, New Towns New Railways, New Mines, Low Rates. Largest area of good, vacant land.

Sweet Grass Hills, Milk and Sun River Valleys, Montana, reached only by the Great Northern Railway Line. The stock raisers' paradise. Sheep Hogs

Gold, Coal The Regions tributary to the Great Northern Railway Line in Montana produce all the precious and baser metals. New towns and railways are being built.

Go to the Great Reservation of Montana and get a good free homestead. Low rates and free sleepers on Great Northern R'y Line. Go now. Milk River

Herds, Mines. These have made Montana the richest state per capita in the Union. Plenty of room for more miners and stock raisers.

Along the Great Northern Line in Montana are free ranches and pasturage, mines of precious metal iron and coal, and new cities and towns. Now is your opportunity. Young Man

Great Falls Surrounded by a fine agricultural and grazing country, close to mines of precious metals, iron and coal possessing a water power unequaled in America, it is Montana's industrial centre.

The valleys of Red, Mouse, Missouri Milk and Sun Rivers reached by Great Northern Ry Line. Half rate excursions Sept. 9, 23 and Oct. 14, 1890. Write F. I. Whitney, St. Paul G. N. R. L.

THE LADIES FAVORITE
THE LIGHT RUNNING
NEW HOME
SEWING MACHINE
THE FINEST WOODWORK
THE BEST ATTACHMENTS
NEW HOME SEWING MACHINE CO ORANGE MASS
CHICAGO, ILL.
28 UNION SQUARE, N.Y.
SAN FRANCISCO CAL.
ATLANTA, GA.
ST. LOUIS, MO.
FOR SALE BY DALLAS, TEX.

Railroad Time Table.

WAY FREIGHT	LEAVE	PASSENGER	ARRIVE	WAY FREIGHT
	P. M.		A. M.
	8:00	St. Paul,	7:05
	8:35	Minneapolis.	6:35
	8:00	Duluth	7:00
	8:30	Ashland,(p m)	6:30
	3:30 a m	Wadena	a m 12:02
	A. M.		P. M.
1:00 p m	6:25	Winnipeg Jction	9:10	2:00 a m.
2:55 "	7:35	Twin Valley	8:30	11:42 pm
4:22 "	8:22	Fertile	7:14	9:54 "
6:20 "	9:20	RED LK FALLS	6:20	7:47 "
2:00 "	9:40	Crookston	6:00	10:00 am
7:42 "	10:10	Buffington	5:39	5:55 pm
8:30 "	10:55	Grand Forks	4:45	5:00 "
DAILY	P. M.		P. M.	DAILY
	12:50	Grafton	2:45
	2:45	Pembina	12:55
	5:30	Winnipeg, Man.	10:05

All trains daily.

Miss Bridget Hillgrove was among the number who did not miss any session of the late institute and who received a certificate accordingly.

It we had as good a correspondent in all the towns around as we have at Terrebonne and Euclid, we should be well pleased.

A lively dance, occurred Saturday night in the Beautrow building. An accordion was raffled off and Edmund Bray declared the winner.

N. Marleau started for Red Lake today. He will return in about a week accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. John Crawford.

Ye editor and J. P. Harren took a turn through the game district in the vicinity of Thief River Falls. They returned yesterday.

Mrs John Hoernig took the train Tuesday evening for her home in Oshkosh, Wis. She had a pleasant visit of three weeks here and at Thief River Falls with her daughters Mrs. W. A. Schreiter and Mrs. Carl Kretzschmar.

Mrs. Carl. Kretzschmar and children were over from Thief River Falls this week visiting with Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Schreiter.

The two year old brother of L. Brault died Friday.

Mrs. Isiah Gervais and family now reside in town, occupying the Plant residence.

Dr. I. Lemieux received a telegram Monday stating that his father was at the point of death. The doctor accordingly started for his old home near Montreal Tuesday evening.

This fine warm, clear weather is opportune. Thousands of acres will be plowed ready for next spring's operation, and threshing will be finished.

The Chinaman has opened a laundry in the Gosselin building.

Jas. McCaffrey is kept busy getting his business affairs here in running order. His family will probably occupy the Borchers residence if they decide to come, which is very likely.

Rev. W. Guillaume has been put in charge of the Lambert parish. Rev. Gaillaume will doubtless please the Lambert people. Fr. Feige will continue in charge of the Terrebonne parish, much to the satisfaction of his many friends.

Rev. Fr. Arpin took a trip to Argyle this week to look the parish over. It is more than probable the reverend gentleman will soon take charge of the Argyle church. He will be deeply regretted here, as he has won the love and esteem of his parishoners during the one year spent among them.

There was a farmer's alliance rally at opera hall Saturday night. W. W. Erwin addressed the audience. It would have been difficult to tell who he was speaking for, the democrats or alliance, had he not at one time mentioned Owen's name favorably. Just how the slip occurred, we can't say. Erwin is an orator, and though his speech was worthy of him it was not calculated to start a fusilade toward the alliance camp. The lack of enthusiasm was something painful to witness. E. E. Lommen spoke for about an hour. We commend him to obscurity without further comment. Mr. T. J. Hodgson, of the state central committee, said a few words that made a good impression.

The spasmotic evolutions of the Half sheet continue. Its last week's issue appeared in the mails Monday evening.

As thick as a swarm of bees grow the politicians. The home stretch is being run, and the campaign has reached a white heat.

We are out of devil. An energetic boy who can read manuscript wanted at this office at once.

A singing society has been organized here, the object being the mutual enjoyment of the members. Tuesday night the first meeting was held. The society will meet occasionally at the homes of different members for rehearsal or entertainment. A public entertainment may be given in the course of time.

Another democratic rally will be held here Saturday night. Hon. Wellington of Minneapolis will address the audience.

Nelson Perron is now working for the News. Nelson is a bright boy and will get to the front.

Ortman & Wholfer, the wholesalers who do a jobbing business among the farmers, delivered their goods this week. Forty thousand pounds of general merchandise were sold in this vicinity, and the farmers came in Tuesday to receive their goods at the depot. The transaction represents some $15,000 which would otherwise have been put in circulation among our merchants. The affair is outrageous, yet the farmers claim they were incited to this by the methods of the Merchant's Commercial agency.

A Duluth gentleman, Mr. Wells, who is connected with the Duluth & Winnipeg road, was in town Tuesday. Mr. Wells said Red Lake Falls would most certainly get the branch of the Duluth & Winnipeg road as soon as the main line was built, and the branch will be of nearly as much importance as the main line.

Married.

BENOIT—LA BISSONIERE—Mr. L. Benoit, of Gentilly, and Miss Zelia La Bissoniere, of Red Lake Falls, at St. Joseph's church, by Rev. Fr. Arpin, Monday, Oct. 20, 1890.

Miss La Bissoniere is a daughter of our popular citizen, George La Bissoniere, and a charming, accomplished young lady. This place has been her home for over ten years; and it may well be said she has engrafted herself in the affections of a large array of friends. Mr. Benoit is from Crookston; an energetic and worthy young man. In the refrain of congratulations the NEWS would sound a note.

P. Nelson of Terrebonne is engaged as a clerk in Joseph Smith & Co's mercantile establishment. When you go out shopping better drop in there and look over the immense stock. Your wants will be attended to without tiresome delay.

Humpty Dumpty show to-night. Tickets 25, 35, and 50 cents.

A Social Event.

Mr. and Mrs. John A. Duffy celebrated the first anniversary of their marriage Wednesday, and all their friends participated. Mr. and Mrs. Duffy received their guests at the Northwestern, as they came in throngs till the rooms were filled with the cream of Red Lake Falls society. After a brief interval of social intercourse the dance began and lasted till 12, when tables were spread and laden with a grand repast. The satisfaction evinced by the guests after having partaken of refreshments was in the order of a high compliment. Added to the other excellencies were the charms of the fair waiters. The guests began dispersing about two o'clock, and all expressed as highly delighted at the evening's successful issue, wishing Mr. and Mrs. Duffy fully fifty more anniversaries, all as auspicious and unmarred as this.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs John A. Duffy, Mr. and Mrs. W B. Duffy, of Mackinack, N. D. Mr. and Mrs. Ed. P. Duffy, Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Steward, and Mr. Berthiaume, of Buffington; Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Harren, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Schreiter, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Ovide Emard, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. W. Bourdon, Mr. and Benj. Fisher, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Garceau, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Davis, Mr. and Mas. W. T. Spillane, Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Kaus, Mr. and Mrs. F. Meyer, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Findeison, Mrs. John M. Boyle, Mrs. A. R. Holston, Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Dargan J.

Misses Elodia Bray, Sue Boyle, Lizzie Boyle, Tillie Kaufer, Maria Ralph, Roxie Todd, of Grandin, N. D.: Mollie Duffy, Ida Krueger, Clara Krueger, Carrie Fisher, Odile Provost.

Messrs. L. A. Kaufer, Ed Moran, Thos Crompe, Jas. I. Wyer, Ovilla Bray, of West Superior, Wis., Joe Bray, W. P. Crawford, Fred Zeh, John Thompson Herman Krueger, Ed. Garceau, and Phil. A. Kauter.

There may be persons in this community who are at times troubled with colic, or subject to attacks of bowel complaint If so, they should try Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It will afford almost immediate relief, and when reduced with water is pleasant to take. If taken as soon as the first indication of the disease is felt it will ward off the attack. Many people use it in this way, and find that it never fails them. A 25 or 50 cent bottle may be obtained a W. A. Schreiter's.

Wilfrid Lemieux has resigned his position on the NEWS, and will attend school.

Truth is stranger than fiction—but H. M. Kaus will sell you a pair of fine lady's shoes for $1.15.

Cash paid for barley, oats, flax, hides pelts. All kinds of coal for sale. A. Hoskins and Co. Elevator,
41 W. T. SPILLANE.

John M. Boyle and Jas. McCaffrey were at Crookston Saturday.

Theophile Labissoniere visited the county seat Tuesday.

Henry Jacklin, aged about three years narrow escaped death by eating poisonous berries Tuesday. Dr. Watson arrived just in time to save him.

Council Proceedings.

Council meeting, Aug. 30, 1890.

Members all present except president W. A. Schreiter.

On motion J. A. Duffy was chosen to preside at the meeting in the absence of the president.

Minutes of last meeting were read and approved.

On motion the following accounts were allowed:

P. and J. Meehan, road and bridge fund, $24.74.

Fred Krueger, road and bridge fund $8.25.

Talph & Bourdon, road and bridge fund, $9.60.

Charles Langevin, general fund, $48.78.

Ed. Hamry, general fund 2.00.

Lucien Philien general fund 40.00.

J3s Helm general fund 4.10.

On motion J. M. Boyle was allowed $80.00 out of general fund to apply on salary as village attorney.

Motion made and carried that the recorder be instructed to notify all saloon keepers in the village not to sell liquor to Louis Brault under penalty of having their license revoked.

Moved & carried that the village council advertise in Ada Index and Polk Co Journal two weeks for bids for drilling a flowing well in the village of Red Lake Falls. The bid of P. and J. Meehan to build sidewalk on south side 5th street was open and read it being for $.750 per. lot on motion the bid was laid over for furthe consideration. On motion council adjourned to meet in two weeks.

Hunt & McClatchie have engaged a practical tinner. Bring in your work.

Joseph Smith & Co now have four clerks on the jump. This speaks for itself.

Editor Bierley was down from the Forks Tuesday. Brainy, handsome fellow.

Smith & Fralando's Humpty Dumpty company play at the opera house tonight. The entertainment is said to be a first class moral show and those who miss it will miss it. Among the attractive scenes are "scenes in Hades Land," "The misterious kuklux Dance." "The Wintches Dream," "Grand Winter Carnival," Juggler, perch performers, clowns, wire walkers, all will take their turns in amusing the audience. If you want a good laugh don't miss Smith & Fralando's show. Prices 25, 35 and 50 cents, —children, adult and reserved seats.

Auction Sale.

At Louisville, on the E½ of the NE¼ sec 10. Tp. 150, Range Forty-five, on the 31st of Oct., 1890. Two lumber wagons, one bob sleigh, four milk cows, one tiger seeder, one McCormick binder, one yoke steers, 4yrs old one horse 10 yrs old, One swell cutter, one hay rake, one fanning mill, three heifers one year old; two sets double harness, 130 bushels of potatoes, ten or twelve tons hay, all the household furniture, and other things too numerous to mention. Terms,—All amounts under ten dollars, cash; above, one year's time with bankable security. Sale begins at 10 o'clock a. m.

SOPHIE BROUILLETT.

Mrs. Rudrolph Jacklin who has been so seriously ill, is convalescent. Dr. Watson has been in constant attendance.

JOHN M. BOYLE,

ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,

Practices in all the State and Federal courts Collections and insurance.
Office in NEWS, Main St.

I. LEMIEUX,

PHYSICIAN & SURGEON,

Office in residence, First street, Red Lake Falls, Minn. 3-6

Unprecedented Record

The Minneapolis Times has attained the largest measure of success in the short time it has been before the people of any paper in the Northwest.

WHY ? ? ?

Because it is Bright Newsy, Ably Edited, Fair to all Parties and Gets the News.

Since the first guns of the preliminary campaign in July The Times'

POLITICAL NEWS

has set the pace for its contemporaries. It has gone to the front on its Local News, Market Reports, Telegraphic Specials, Regular Press (Press News) report.

The Times

Is independent politically and prints all the news about politics and candidates, but does not deal in abuse of any man who has the misfortune to run for an office.

A Campaign Offer—The Times 4 Months

$1.00

The Times will be sent by mail 4 months from Oct. 1st for the sum of $1. Send in your subscriptions now inorder to get the benefit of all the news of the present campaign.

THE TIMES,
49 Fourth St. S., Minneapolis, Minn

WOMAN AND HOME.

VALUABLE INFORMATION CONCERNING THE CARE OF THE HAIR.

A Girl's Happiest Hour—Recipe for Laundrying Shirts—The Bloom on the Cheek of Maidenhood—Mothers Should Remember—How to Lace a Corset.

The hair is the covering of the roof of "the home of thought and palace of the soul." Where baldness, which sometimes occurs in quite young persons, is hereditary it is doubtful if anything can be done to prevent or remedy it. Avoid "restoratives" and other nostrums, and, as a rule, do not use pomatums or oils upon the head. The thorough use of a moderately stiff brush will greatly promote the health of the scalp and prevent the falling of the hair without other application. The hair should be occasionally washed, and if there is much dandruff the yolk of an egg will be most efficient in removing it. Work the egg with the fingers well into the hair, a little at a time, to bring it in contact with the scalp; then wash it out thoroughly with water, and the hair will be beautifully clean and soft.

Avoid all shampooing liquids; these used by barbers are strong potash solutions. They call it "Salts of Wormwood" and "Salts of Tartar," and use it without knowing its real nature. It is very effective in cleaning, but ruinous to the hair. If the falling of the hair is not prevented by thorough brushing some stimulating application may be made. Half an ounce of the tincture of cantharides added to a quart of bay rum will answer better than most "hair tonics." But the mode of dressing the hair must be controlled almost entirely by the fashion.

It will be considered by many of our lady readers a necessity to dress the hair in the fashion of the moment, but we should endeavor to counteract, by careful treatment, any injurious effects, such as overheating of the scalp, which produces dandruff, irritation and possible baldness. Whatever style is adopted during the day and evening the hair should be given the utmost freedom during the night. All cannot employ artists to direct the efforts of the hair dressing maid, but every one can see to it that simplicity and an appropriate ensemble are presented. Nothing is more unseemly than to see a noble, dignified face marred and its true beauty destroyed by some coquettish or frivolous arrangement of the hair wholly out of keeping with the general bearing of the wearer.—Hall's Journal of Health.

A Girl's Happiest Hour.

Did you ever see a girl, or, what is better, a woman old enough to know what love means, preparing for her lover after a long absence?

Her first thought as she wakens is: This is the day he will come! And in a moment she is out of bed, and scanning the heavens more anxiously than a sailor's wife. If fine she rejoices because the day is in harmony with her mood; if stormy she serenely defies the weather, and tells herself that so brave and so ardent a lover as hers would go through fire and water and tornado, and earthquake rather than fail of an appointment.

She dresses from the skin and with a tender and scrupulous care, although common sense would tell her that only the outer garb could possibly be known or appreciated. She puts her hair a trifle lower or a trifle higher than usual; she feels that never, never did it curl so badly or wave so stiffly, and she would really be provoked, but—he is coming.

And the dainty stockings, and the choice among the dainty boots, and the frilled skirts, and at last the pretty gown, and the laces and the ornaments, and the rose in the bosom or the little bunch of violets upon the corsage! And then the room where she will receive him! How she touches the draperies into new folds, picks a withered leaf or two from the flower vases, moves a chair, a little table and easel, a bit of drapery that everything may do its best to honor the place where he will presently shine as the center of all. And how anxiously the shades and the curtains are lowered and draped to just the becoming light, until finally he rings at the door, she takes one last furtive glance at herself and her surroundings, and then—the door opens, she has the top brick of the chimney, and the happiest hour of life is over!—Mrs. Frank Leslie.

Recipe for Laundrying Shirts.

A laundress of wide experience writes that the doing of that most difficult thing of all in laundry work—the doing up shirt bosoms—may be made highly successful by observing the following procedure: Enough cold starch to last several months may be made of one ounce of white laundry wax, two ounces of borax, one teacupful of water and three teacupfuls of starch. The borax and wax are dissolved in water, sufficiently heated for the purpose, but not hot enough to scald the starch; into this mix the pulverized starch after passing it through a flour sieve. In using take a teaspoonful of this prepared starch and dissolve in water that is not cold enough to prevent the wax from softening. The hot starch is made, not very thick, and a teaspoonful is allowed to a shirt bosom, the hotter the liquid is the better.

Apply a tablespoonful at a time, rubbing in well, before putting on more, and after the right side will take up no more apply to the under side. Unless the starch is well rubbed in the iron will stick and specks and blisters will appear. The hot starching is done first, the bosom is allowed to dry and then the cold starching is done by dipping the bosom in the liquid, wringing out and rubbing slightly. After an hour or so iron, first rubbing the bosom carefully with a cloth wrung out in hot water to equalize the starch on the surface. A thin cloth is to be laid over the bosom the first time the iron is passed over it. When this is removed dampen the surface of the bosom a little and finally iron carefully until the finish is satisfactory. Let the outside cover of the ironing board be woolen cloth and the bosom will not stick to it.

The Bloom on the Cheek of Maidenhood.

There is an indescribable expression in the eye—every fine observer knows it—which distinguishes a modest girl from a matron. Look for it in the eyes of our girls today. It is missing so often; it is replaced by another so unwelcome, so worldly wise, so unpleasantly experienced that we shrink with a sense of having lost the most precious thing in girlhood. It is not our purpose to prove here that the lax theatrical view of life is largely responsible for this, but only to ask, by the way, how far it may be responsible. Better, like the Puritan lady, to shut the eyes when the ballet comes. Better a simple, serious, unworldly ignorance of the low and vicious coming in the name of the high and cultured. Better a thousand fold the instinct of modesty which cannot see a coarse sight than the cool, indifferent, ungirllike familiarity with criminal suggestions which is now the fashion among us.

It is to be feared that the very excellent parents who compose our "select circles" have no more intelligent idea of the amusements affected by the "set" with whom their sons and daughters disport themselves than they have of the entertainments of a factory holiday or a firemen's picnic.

A lady reared in the traditions of high birth and gentle training of a generation ago has a certain exquisite innocence herself like an ideal girl's, which prevents her from appreciating the perils of her children. She who would have thought it a moral lapse to allow a young man, without right, to hold her hand; she whose lips were never touched by man until she gave them to her plighted lover; she who went to her husband as unmarred as an ideal in a dream does not readily perceive or accept the conditions of a lowered moral standard. Is it not enough to be a lady? Is not my girl the daughter of her mother? Read your girl's eyes, you lovely lady of the Brahmin birth, and sweet soul. Question her. She may return you the clear, heavenly look of the heart of your own high youth, and heaven bless her! Far be it from me to mutter and croak, as if a modest maid were an extinct curiosity. But, if she has passed from under your shelter and beyond your standards; if she has been what we call "gay;" if she has tossed a good deal in the foam of young people's frolics; if she has had some mock of a chaperon or none at all; if, in short, she has drifted on the current of existing social streams—question her, question her. —Elizabeth Stuart Phelps in Forum.

How to Lace a Corset.

"If lace you must," said a handsome and smart actress to me, "use three sets of laces in your corsets, one starting at the top and ending two or three holes above the waist line of the corsets, to tie there; the second starting at the lower edge of the corsets, extending up to two or three holes below the waist line of the corsets, to tie there; the third lacing the space left between and tying just at the waist line. Then reducing the size of your waist—that is, pulling the middle cord—isn't going to drag you into a straight line above and below the waist. Also you will wear your corsets, even though tight, with more comfort.

"There is a place—isn't there, dear doctors!—just about at the waist line, that I think God must have left, knowing that we would lace, kill or no kill, where pressure can come without tying our necessary and indispensable viscera into hard knots. By the suggested arrangement of cords we can reduce the size of the waist with less violent offense to heart and lungs and also without sacrificing entirely harmony of outline. Just make beauty and hygiene clasp hands practically—every woman knows what I mean by practically—and we will rejoice more than the doctors.

"Oh! Right here I might as well suggest elastic cord for the upper and lower strings; and even for the one at the waist if you dare. You will thereby gain a suppleness in movement and pose which is worth striving for, but which we cannot all of us take off our stays to obtain, as does the serpentine Sarah. Elastic corset lacings, as I suggest, will at least prevent our looking as if we were padlocked into a board fence when we recline in an easy chair—say like Langtry with a cigarette in one of her 'As in a Looking Glass' pictures."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Mothers Should Remember.

That the abdominal cavity is packed with its organs; that the liver alone extends two-thirds across it, and that tight lacing deeply furrows the liver, sometimes cutting it in two, a thin membrane alone connecting the parts; that the full stomach is thus often pushed up against a weakened heart, and the pelvic organs are so crowded as to produce serious and permanent ill effects.

That the lack of vitality in many children, by which they are rendered peculiarly susceptible to infectious diseases, is due to a deficiency of pure air in their sleeping rooms.

That a child's brain is not in a condition for study before its seventh year, and that when a child is precocious there is special reason for holding it back if it is to be saved from brain disease, future dullness, or possible imbecility.

That no growing child should fail to have at least nine or ten hours' sleep in a well ventilated room, and that no sleep is perfect with a light in the room.

That children under 17 should not be allowed the excitements of evening parties.

That children, from the earliest practicable age, should be trained to habits of self control in all directions.

That every mother ought to make it a prime object to secure and maintain the fullest confidence of her children and her normal influence over them.—Youth's Companion.

Quantities in Weights and Measures.

Sixty drops of liquid make one teaspoonful.

Two teaspoonfuls of liquid make one dessertspoonful.

Two dessertspoonfuls of liquid or four teaspoonfuls make one tablespoonful.

One tablespoonful of liquid makes one-half ounce.

Four tablespoonfuls of liquid make one wineglassful, or two ounces.

Eight tablespoonfuls of liquid make one gill.

Sixteen tablespoonfuls of liquid make one-half pint.

Two wineglassfuls of liquid make one gill, or one teacupful.

One coffeecupful makes one-half pint.

A heaping quart or four coffeecupfuls of flour make a pound.

A full tablespoonful of flour makes one-half ounce.

Ten eggs make one pound.

One pint or two coffeecupfuls of granulated sugar make one pound.

Two and one-half cupfuls of pulverized sugar make one pound.

One pint of broken loaf sugar is one pound.

One tablespoonful of butter is one ounce.

One pint of soft butter makes one pound.

One cupful of butter makes one-half pound.—Good Housekeeping.

Women Live Longer Than Men.

Despite the intellectual and physical strength of man the woman endures longer and bears pain to which the strong man succumbs. Physicians tell us that zymotic diseases are more fatal to males, and the records of our health departments prove that more male children die than female. The proportion dying suddenly is about 100 women to 700 men. In our large cities pulmonary consumption takes off many women, while the diseases fatal to the males are apoplexy, intemperance, affection of the heart or liver, scrofula, gout, paralysis and hydrocephalus.

Again there is an excess of more than 6 per cent. of females in the various populations, though there are from 3 to 6 per cent. more males born than females. In Connecticut many women have lived to be over 100 years old, while scores at the age of 90 are found in every town in the state. In the state of New York, the average life of a woman appears to be 48 years. In Maine the males outlive the females.—Herald of Health.

When Baby Is Young.

Baby was troubled with soreness and discharge from the navel, and nothing seemed to do any good till I applied a raisin, split and the seeds removed, keeping it firmly in place by two narrow strips of court plaster crossing each other. I changed the raisin twice in twenty-four hours; in a week the navel was entirely healed.

Put vaseline on baby's nose and chest when she has a cold, and it will also prevent all chafing and soreness under the arms, in the groin and neck and behind the ears. I found it better than any powder, starch, flour or castor oil.

Baby is one of those who never cry, and I lay it all to the fact that she has never had a pinned band on her except the week that the navel was healing; all skirts button on waists which are loose and tie with tapes. Bands are crocheted of white Saxony and button in front; flannel skirts button all the way down the front; only one safety pin in the diaper and no pricked and crying baby.—Mrs. Ada Dezotell.

A Useful Sweeping Apron.

I saw a few days since a new idea for a sweeping or dusting apron. It was made of unbleached muslin. There was a hem down each side to about eighteen inches from the top, fastened on the upper edge with a brier stitch of yellow silk. Each lower corner of the apron was turned over at right angles, meeting in the center. The hem around these corners was finished with the silk brier stitching also. The point in the center at the bottom was turned up and secured with the stitching. Each corner was divided into two pockets by perpendicular rows of stitching. Across the top there was a hem an inch and a half in width and through this a yellow satin ribbon was passed with long ends for strings. One can imagine the comfort and saving of time by finding the soft dust cloth and pair of old gloves always in place in one of the pockets.—Housewife.

How to Prepare Fly Paper.

Almost any sticky substance spread upon paper will answer for catching flies, but if you have a soft spot in your heart and do not want to see the flys suffer for a long time use poison. Fly paper is made as follows: Take sirup, honey or dissolved sugar and add about one ounce to each pound weight of yellow tersulphide of arsenic and then spread upon paper with a brush. Another fly paper is made by boiling one-half ounce of small quassia chips for ten minutes in a pint of water. Strain and add four ounces of molasses. The flies will drink this and soon die.—Exchange.

Cleaning White Ribbons.

White ribbons cannot be washed in water to look well, but in gasoline they show no trace of ever being used before. Lay them to soak in gasoline, covering the dish for a few minutes, then wash thoroughly and lay for a few minutes again in clean gasoline to rinse. Do not wring, but hang in the open air. When dry fold and lay in a book under a heavy weight. When they no longer look clear they can be colored with diamond dyes, but can never be made to look new after having once been washed and ironed.—Exchange.

A Library for Women.

Miss Annie Howard, daughter of the late Charles S. Howard, of New Orleans, built a memorial to her father, and instead of a monolith she chose a library and dedicated it to the women of New Orleans. The building is a marvel of beauty, after the Roman style, and cost $100,000. It contains 12,000 volumes, has an endowment fund of $300,000, and all the assistant librarians are women.—Exchange.

Women as Cashiers.

One of the first openings made for women in the mercantile world was at the cashier's desk, and despite the numerous channels since opened to women workers in no other field do they make a greater success. You never hear of a woman embezzler.—Chicago News.

One of the handsome belles of Columbus, O., is Miss Kittie Thurman, granddaughter of the "Old Roman," ex-Senator Thurman. She is described as a pronounced brunette, and she has about her much of that individuality and strength which characterizes the daughters of Judge Thurman, one of whom, Mrs. McCormack, resides on Long Island.

No friendship is so cordial or so delicious as that of girl for girl; no hatred so intense and immovable as that of woman for woman. In youth you love one above the others of your sex; in riper age you hate all, more or less, in proportion to similarity of accomplishments and pursuits.—Landor.

To keep the bright, green color of summer cabbage and some other vegetables boil fast in plenty of water in which has been dissolved a piece of washing soda the size of two peas; cover until the water boils and then take off the lid. If the steam is shut in the cabbage will be yellow.

It is what is done and suffered in the house, in the constitution, in the temperament, in the personal history, that has the profoundest interest for us. Fact is better than fiction, if only we could get pure fact.—Emerson.

Miss Frances E. Willard, in her walks about Chicago, has discovered women who make skirts for seventy-five cents a dozen and furnish their own thread. She also finds children working twelve hours a day for $1 a week.

The wife of a well known member of parliament keeps a scrap book in which she pastes all the uncomplimentary paragraphs printed about her husband. They come in handy for quotation at times.

A carpet, especially a dark one, often looks dusty directly after sweeping. Wring a sponge almost dry out of water and wipe off the dust from the carpet. It will brighten it quite effectively.

To clean marble mix whiting with common soap till thick as paste. Spread it on the marble and leave it for a couple of days. When the paste is cleaned off the stains will also be removed.

For solder take a mixture of two parts of tin to one part of lead. For a soldering fluid dissolve zinc in muriatic acid, then add a little sal-ammoniac and dilute it with a little water.

Celestine—Why didn't you take that seat the gentleman offered you? Ernestine—Because I would have had to sit next to that woman whose dress doesn't harmonize with mine.

Red Lake Falls News.

BOYLE & MEEHAN, Editors & Proprietors

TERMS, $1.50 A YEAR.

THE Chicago Journal is authority for the statement that there are 5,501 licensed liquor saloons in the Garden city.

CLARENCE STEPHENS, nephew of the Confederate Vice-President, is a conductor on a sleeping car in Georgia, and they say he is a good one.

A NEGRO in Galveston has property valued at $350,000. He lives sumptuously, and his wife, who believes in the superiority of her race, will have none but white servants.

THE attorney-general of Missouri has decided that a man who is so drunk on election day that he cannot make up his ticket is "physically disabled" within the meaning of the law and must lose his vote.

THE presbyterians of Spokane recently sold their church to a man who at once started a saloon in the basement, and now there is seen a beer sign on the corner of a fine structure with a tall steeple on it.

A LIST of extravagances of the London season cites an expenditure of $25,000 for a concert, $10,000 for the presents in a cotillion, $5,000 for the flowers at a single ball and $1,500 for the orchids at a dinner party.

A WATCH for blind people has been invented in Switzerland. In the middle of every figure is a small peg which drops when the hour hand reaches the figure. The owner feels that the peg is down, and counts back to 12 to determine the hour.

IT IS said that Baron Hirsch, who was extensively blackballed some time since at a well known club of the Rue Royale, has bought the block of buildings in which the club is situated, and has given the members notice to quit.

W. A. SARTORIS, of England, an uncle of Nellie Grant Sartoris, has been making a quiet tour of the west with a view of making some investments. It is his first visit to America, and he expresses himself as being much surprised at the great mineral wealth and natural advantages of the west.

AN ENGLISH scientist demonstrates—to his own satisfaction at any rate—that this planet will have all the human inhabitants it can feed in 182 years, when the population will be 5,944,000,000 at the present rate of increase, 8 per cent. in ten years. He makes no allowance for a decrease in the rate of increase as population presses upon food supply.

THE czar of Russia is the autocratic ruler of a bigger country than the United States, with a life tenure of office. But he is not having near so good a time as the president of this country. Unguarded the president is traveling over the land receiving the acclamations and good wishes of a free people. The czar is suspicious that even his confidential advisers and members of his household have designs upon his life

JACOB SELIGMAN is a millionaire who is always short, His statute is about four feet. He came from Germany to Michigan "to grow up with the country" about twenty years ago, without a dollar. He got a start in the clothing business, where he used his diminutive size as an advertisement, his trademark, "Little Jake," doing him much good. He owns lands, a railroad, bank and other property, altogether estimated at about $15,000,000. He is the smallest millionaire in the world who has made his own money.

THE far-reaching influence of a wink was well illustrated at a Conneautville (Pa.) fair the other day when two strangers appeared on the scene and, with a sly wink, quietly called the attention of the agriculturists to a large number of bottles in a basket labeled "cold tea." The wink did the business, and the "cold tea" was soon bought up at fancy prices. It proved to be cold tea in fact, and nothing more, but when the discovery was made the young men had "tipped each other the wink" and disappear d.

NEWS SIFTINGS.

Criminal, Personal, Foreign and Other Interesting News Items.

WASHINGTON.

In order to carry out the spirit as well as the letter of the civil service law, the secretary of the treasury has agreed to a change of existing practice in the marking of examinations of applications for promotions in the treasury department in the cases of honorably discharged soldiers and sailors, who, by law, are entitled to preference, other things being equal. The change will be accomplished by adding 5 per cent. to the percentage made by such persons in the examinations referred to.

PERSONAL.

Thomas P. Murphy, of North Conway, N. H., who twenty years ago was organist in the house o the earl of Gainsborough, and who clandestinely married and came to this country with Lady Blanche, the earl's eldest daughter, died in Boston in the Carney hospital of typhoid fever. Lady Blanche died eight years ago, and her remains were taken to England.

ACCIDENTAL.

By an explosion of petroleum in a skittle alley at Soignolles, France, twenty-seven persons were prostrated and severely burned. Several of the victims are dying.

Eight men were seriously injured by an accident at a blast furnace at Soho, Pa. Two of the men, Edward and John Hughes, were fatally burned, but the others will probably recover.

Flora Molloy, the six-year-old daughter of John Molloy, who has been missing from her father's house at Hazelton, Iowa, was found in a swamp near by sunk to her neck in the slime and li e nearly extinct. She died after being brought home.

Prof. Bischoff, the blind organist of the Congregationalist church in Washington, and the composer of several pieces of music of national popularity, was knocked down by a horse driven by a reckless driver and perhaps seriously injured.

Patrick Towey, one o the hod carriers engaged in the erection of the government building, met with a horrible death at Winona, Minn., He missed his balance and fell some twenty feet from a scaffolding, striking on his head on a concrete floor. Death resulted thirty minutes later.

For two days the young sons of Anton Hesset, and of a widow, Mrs. Mary Kelly, of Eau Claire, Wis., were missing. Report said they were drowned in the Eau Claire river while playing on the pier o a new bridge being erected by the Wisconsin Central. Night and day, through h avy rain storm, anxious searchers have dragged the river, and at last two little forms were taken from the water.

SINS AND SINNERS.

A hospital concern claiming Minneapolis as its headquarters swindles laborers in the Northwest.

Dion Buebli, an Italian dairyman at Omaha, quarreled with his neighbors over his cattle, and in his despair shot himself through the heart.

John Spelman, son of the millionaire distiller of Peoria, has been found guilty of burglarly at Bloomington, Ill., but has been sent to an insane asylum.

Twenty-one Chinamen arrested at Seattle, Wash., while trying to smuggle themselves into the United States, have been ordered returned to Victoria, B. C.

At a drunken fight at a Polish wedding near Iron Mountain, Mich., one man was fatally stabbed, another badly hurt, while the bridegroom was brutally kicked and pounded. The fight lasted half the night.

A serious fight occurred at a beer garden in Pirna, Saxony, the combatants being soldiers and workmen. Five of the latter were killed and many on both sides wounded.

It has been discovered that R. S. Mabrey, the newspaper man who disappeared the night he was to have married a St. Louis lady, went away with another woman, and was not murdered, as was supposed.

Mrs. Elizabeth Saunders, the keeper of a toll house near Washington, Pa., was fatally shot by two masked robbers. After being wounded she fired three shots at the robbers. One of the men has been caught.

As the result of a quarrel over $3, W. L. Thompson stabbed and killed Will Massey at Brodton, Tex. Thompson fled, and has not been caught. The stabbing, it is claimed was done in self-defense.

David C. Hennessy, chief of police of New Orleans, was shot down by three men. Hennessy received our shots. One in the stomach, it is believed, will prove fatal. His assailants so far are unknown.

Capt. A. C. Cummins, a prominent citizen of Mansfield Ohio, and a close friend o Senator Brice, was knocked down and robbed of a watch and considerable money. He is severely injured.

Two boys, Ira and Lawrence Rucker, aged respectively twelve and ourteen years, have been arrested at Seymour, Ind., for robbing the Evansville & Richmond mail car. Some of the stolen property was found in their possession.

The agent of the International & Great Northern railroad at Lyndale, Tex., was confronted by two masked men as he was about closing his office one night and robbed of $1,400. Before leaving the robbers removed parts of the telegraph instruments.

Idefinite information of the robbery of several passengers on the Missouri Pacific Omaha express has been received at Kansas City. The robbery occurred within the city limits just after the train left the union depot.

Sheriff J. R. Esdale of Kansas arrested Frank Woodruff, of Cronin trial fame, just after he was released from the Bridewell at Chicago. Woodruff will be taken to Johnson county, Kan., to answer to a charge of horse stealing. The celebrated Cronin case "confessor" offered no resistance and consented to go without the usual requisition papers.

Coffin & Stanton, bankers of New York city, have begun suit by mandamus against William H. Brisbane, state treasurer of Colorado, to compel the payment o a certain state warrant or $5,000 and also $5,000 damages. The treasurer had refused payment of the warrant on advice of the attorney general that it had been issued for an illegal account. The matter involves the management of the state finances by the state treasury ring.

Cornelia V. Miller and Priscilla Field were arrested charged with receiving stolen property amounting to $150,000. They are the wives of London bankers styled Field & Co., who failed a month ago with liabilities amounting to $500,000. The women arrested are said to have come to this country with funds which should properly have been applied to the liquidation of a portion of the debts of the insolvent firm.

The overland stage was robbed eighteen miles north of Ukiah, Cal. The Wells, Fargo & Co., treasure box and the United States mail sacks were taken. While the robber was cutting the mail sacks open Driver McDonald snapped a pistol at him, but it would not go off, The robber retreated and fired two shots at the driver, neither of which took effect. The robber was caught at Cloverdale, and proved to be a boy about eighteen years old and a stranger.

John Bigham, who was arrested several weeks ago for impersonating his brother to obtain a pension, pleaded guilty in the United States court at Grand Rapids, Mich., and was sentenced to hard labor at the Detroit house of correction for two years. Bigham's raud was one of the most bold imaginable. He secured the papers of his brother, who served in the war and had been dead two years, assumed his name, and not only obtained a pension, but was admitted and lived for over a year at the soldiers' home.

Mrs. Matilda Davis, aged 71 years, was found dead in her bed, at Leavenworth, Ks. She had been murdered, and the murderer had saturated the carpet in her room with coal oil and then set fire to it. The autopsy on the body of the murdered woman showed two ugly bruises on her head, one on each temple. The condition of the heart and lungs showed that she had been chloroformed. David Davis, the husband of the murdered woman was arrested, charged with committing the crime. His wife had applied for a divorce and he had threatened her li e several times.

The killing of one man and probably fatal mangling of another at Orville, Ohio, turns out to be murder. Coroner Solon Boydston of Orville, who was acting as policeman during the air, had John Sweeney, said to be from Cleveland, in custody on the depot platform. Sweeney saw a pal in the crowd and made a sign to him. The latter stepped up, and just as a switch engine was going by shoved Boydston in front of it. The coroner was terribly mangled and must have died instantly. He retained his grip on Sweeney as he went, and the prisoner was also run over, being badly cut up. He will probably die. The man who did the pushing was caught.

FOREIGN GRIST.

The four men left on the bark Melverly, wrecked on the coast of Nova Scotia, have been taken from the ill-fated vessel. This makes seven in all and sixteen lost.

The British Columbian authorities have refused to receive the twenty Chinese who were ordered to be sent back there from Port Townsend, Wash., by United States Judge Hanford under the exclusion act.

Portuguese gunboats have formed a line across the mouth o the Zambasi river in East Africa to bar the passage of the British stern wheel gunboats it they attempt to ascend the river.

Mrs. O'Connor, wife of Arthur O'Connor, member of the British house of commons, who was found unconscious on the streets of London, has been taken to an insane asylum.

The Russian government will immediately begin the construction of the Siberian railway, which will induce closer relations between Russia and America by the Pacific route.

Advices from Persia by way of Constantinople represent that Russians are encroaching on the Persian rontier, and have driven in a body of Persian soldiers stationed on the frontier near the river Aras. It is supposed to be Russia's intention to straighten the rontier of Trans-Caucausia, whether Persia likes it or not.

The wife of Arthur O'Connor, member of parliament for East Donegal, was found lying in a pool of blood in an unfrequented part of one of London's suburbs. It was evident that she had jumped or fallen from an overhead railway station near the spot. She was severely injured and has remained unconcious ever since found. The lady was not long ago under treatment for mental aberration, but was thought to have been restored to her normal condition. It is supposed that in a sudden fit of insanity she wandered away from home, and either attempted suicide or accidentally fell from the station.

OTHERWISE.

The supreme court of Michigan has rendered a decision holding constitutional the local option law under which several counties voted for prohibition.

The Vermont legislative joint assembly formally elected Justin S. Morrill United States senator for six years from March 4 next.

The Illinois supreme court has denied the motion to set aside the continuance in the case of O'Sullivan, the Cronin convict, now confined at Joliet.

About seventy-five colored Republicans from nineteen countries of Couth Carolina met and adopted resolutions recommending the negroes of the state to vote for Haskell, the anti-Tillman Democratic candidate for governor.

Alaska is not likely to have a representative in the next congress, Gov. Knapp refusing to call a convention, saying he had no authority to do so. The organic act of 1884 does not provide for a legislature, a representative or a delegate in congres.

The American Brewing company has just been ibcorporated at San Francisco. The capital stock o the concern is $3,000,000, of which $500,000 has been subscribed. It is proposed to erect one of the largest breweries in the world, to be in operation in about a year.

It is announced that the Spanish government will request the United States government to admit the products of the Spanish possessions in the West Indies, especially tobacco and sugar, without the recently imposed tariff restrictions. In the event of a refusal Spain, it is stated, will exclude American products, especially breadstuffs.

Fred Muncrath, the only one of the Haddock murderers ever convicted, is at liberty again. Muncrath was sentenced to four years. Gov. Boise reduced the sentence to four months, which has been further reduced by good conduct to a little more than three. Muncrath's family are at Sioux City and his hotel business has gone on during his imprisonment.

Indictments were returned at Cleveland, Ohio, by the United States grand jury against the Cleveland, Canton & Southern and New York, Lake Erie & Western Railway companies for violating the interstate commerce law. The offence of the former consisted of not posting in its stations a notice of reduction of fare, and the charge against the Erie is that no bulletin giving the rates of fare to all points on its line is posted in the Cleveland station.

R. G. Peters o Manistee, Mich., has assigned to A. M. Henry of Detroit. It is the largest financial crash in the state for years, and comes from a source least expected. Mr. Peters was the leading spirit in a score of big enterprises, And was a baron in the lumber and salt trade. The assignment covers millions of dollars' worth of property, and will be far reaching in its effects. Meigs & Co. of Grand Rapids and the Fifth National Bank of the second city are all interested in the collapse.

The engagement of Miss Winnie Davis, the "daughter o the confederacy," to Alfred Wilkinson of Syracuse, N. Y., which was announced less than six months ago, and which created so great a surprise in all parts of the country, has been broken. Miss Davis has not been in good health for some time, and she went abroad or the purpose o recruiting her health. Her trip was beneficial, but did not restore her fully to health. Her mother and her intimate friends elt that under these circumstances it would be best that the engagement should be broken, and this step was most reluctantly taken by Miss Davis. On the other hand some o Mr. Wilkinson's friends are of the opinion that the recent reverses of his amily, his moderate income, and the still more recent burning o the old homestead, had some weight in shaping Miss Winnie's decision.

COMMITS SUICIDE.

A. B. Mullett Ex-Supervising Architect of the Treasury Commits Suicide.

Despondency, the Result of Long Sickness and Financial Troubles the Cause.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—A. B. Mullett, one of the best known architects of this city, and for many years supervising architect of the treasury department, shot and killed himself this evening at his residence. He had been in poor health for a long time, suffering from rheumatic and other complaints, but it is thought financial trouble was the chief cause of Mr. Mullett's act.

Later in the evening the coroner was summoned, and a ter an examination of the body gave a verdict of death from suicide due to melancholia. The remains of Mr. Mullett will probably be taken to Cincinnati for interment. The funeral arrangements, however, will not be settled definitely until Mrs. Mullett hears from a brother of Mr. Mullett's who is at present in Kansas City.

Mr. Mullett was fifty-six years old and was well known all over the country. He designed many of the public buildings that have been erected in different cities, among them being the New York city postoffice, the St. Paul postoffice building and the imposing state, war and navy department building in this city. Since his retirement from the office of supervising architect of the treasury Mr. Mullett has devoted most of his time to professional business in Washington.

Mr. Mullett leaves a family of five children, four of whom are in Washington and one in Kansas City. His mother, two brothers and two sisters also reside in Kansas City.

Mr. Mullett had a severe case of the grip last winter, from which he still suffered. For the past few months he has been at times despondent and gloomy. He had built several houses recently that he could not dispose of, and this preyed upon his mind. Mrs. Mullett is completely prostrated by the severe shock and is under medical treatment.

TAR AND FEATHERS.

A Reformed Gambler in Chicago Fantastically Adorned.

CHICAGO, Oct. 21.—A curious and desperate assault was made upon an ex-gambler named P. J. Quinn to-night in Union Park. Two men suddenly confronted Quinn on Lake street, a lonesome thoroughfare which forms the park's northern boundary.

Quinn was compelled to hurriedly strip to the waist, an argument in the shape of a 38-caliber revolver greatly assisting in accelerating his movements. A small tin bucket of tar was quickly poured over him and a handful of feathers added by way of adornment. Then Quinn's assailants knocked him down, kicked him repeatedly in the small of the back and in the pit of the stomach, rendering him insensible for over an hour. He was found by some people who were strolling through the park, and the police were notified, but there was no trace of the assailants.

Quinn has lately been posing as a "reformed" gambler, writing a book on gamblers' methods, and is supposed to have incurred the enmity of the fraternity.

STUCK TO HIS POST.

An Engineer Killed in an Accident in Montana.

LIVINGSTON, Mont., Special Telegram, Oct. 21.—The east-bound freight train that was due in this city this morning, was derailed about nine miles from here. The engine was turned over and twenty cars wrecked. The fireman jumped from the cab and was not hurt. The engineer remained at his post, had some of his ribs broken, one of his legs broken in two places and was terribly scalded. He died two hours afterward. His name was James Theroux and he had lately come to Livingston from Sprague, Wash.

Just as the east-bound through freight was passing the outskirts of the city last night, it ran into an open switch, the engine turning over and dumping the cars. No lives were lost.

MURDER AND SUICIDE.

An Iowa Youth Kills His Sweetheart and Ends His Own Life.

CHARITON, Iowa, Oct. 21.—Elmer Oliver, aged twenty-one years, arrived here Saturday from Kansas. He became intoxicated, hired a livery team and drove to the little town of Freedom, twelve miles south of here. He immediately went to the farm house of Mr. Tuttle and requested to see his daughter, with whom he was in love. After the two had conversed for a few minutes the young man requested the girl to marry him. She refused, saying she was too young. He then drew a revolver and shot the girl through the temples, causing instant death. He then turned the weapon upon himself and fired a ball through his head in exactly the same place he had shot the girl. He lived in an unconsious condition until this morning, when he died.

FURNIVAL CAPTURED.

The Notorious Nebraska Murderer Arrested in Mississippi.

FULLERTON, Neb., Special Telegram, Oct. 21.—Word has been received here of the capture in Ellisville, Miss., of George Furnival, who committed one of the most horrible murders in the history of the state. He killed five people on Horse creek, and all efforts to find him have hitherto been fruitless. He has been identified by a man who knew him well.

Another Board of Directors.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 21.—The stockholders of the Cincinnati, New Orleans & Texas Pacific met here to-day, and elected Charles Schoff, Samuel Thomas, Calvin S. Brice, John H. Inman, Alex McDonald, T. T. Gaff, W. A. Goodman, M. E. Ingalls and W. P. Anderson a board of directors.

An Addition to Sioux City.

SIOUX CITY, Special Telegram, Oct. 21.—An election was held here to-day on the question of annexing the new manufacturing suburb of Leeds, which embraces a tract of 6,400 acres. There was a very small vote cast, 401 votes being for and 5 votes against the annexation. The annexation will bring nearly $50,000 into the treasury in the way of taxes.

Natural Gas in a River.

MADISON, Wis., Special Telegram, Oct. 21.—Natural gas has been discovered arising through the river water in the neighboring city of Stoughton. It is highly combustible.

TOO MANY HUSBANDS.

For That Reason an Iowa Judge Secures a Divorce From His Wife.

SIOUX CITY, Special, Oct. 21.—The marriage of Judge John R. Zuver and Jessie Zuver was annulled and set aside at the last term of court. They were married about ten years ago and until a few weeks since lived together as man and wife, when, according to the petition of the judge filed in court, he discovered that his wife had another husband living, from whom she had never been divorced. The facts were shown in court and a decree at once entered in accordance with the prayer of the petition. Judge Zuver also gave the defendant some valuable real estate in this city and $50 in cash. He at once left for the West, and is now living in Boulder, Col.

Judge Zuver sat on the circuit court bench in this district for more than ten years, his circuit embracing all of Northwestern Iowa. He is well known in legal circles, and has considerable property.

About six years ago, just before the circuit court was abolished by law, he was thrown from a carriage and suffered an injury to his head, which incapacitated him from work on the bench, and since that time he has lived in enforced quiet, a good share of the time on a farm near this city.

FRANCE'S TARIFF.

A New Bill Introduced by the Minister of Commerce.

PARIS, Oct. 21.—M. Roche, minister of commerce, introduced in the chamber of deputies to-day a general customs tariff bill. It provides a maximum tariff applicable to products imported from countries not conceding commercial advantages to France and a minimum tariff reserved for countries consenting to customs regulations calculated to benefit French trade. Agricultural products figuring exclusively in the maximum class will not be considered in any arrangement with powers. Among raw materials those will be exempt from duty which are indispensable to great manufacturers. The products thus admitted free include raw silks and wools, raw hides and raw cotton.

M. Deroulede created a scene by forbidding M. Reinach, whom he described as "that lackey of all administrations" to interrupt him. President Floquet demanded the withdrawal of the objectionable words. Deroulede refusing to withdraw them, the chamber censured him. Afterward Reinach challenged Deroulede to a duel, and the challenge was accepted.

A BOOMERANG.

Lord Granville's Opinion of the McKinley Tariff Bill.

LONDON, Oct. 21.—In a speech at Newcastle to-day Lord Granvelle said that the Tories pretended that they were confident of the result of appealing to the country, yet they delayed dissolving parliament as long as possible. Referring to the new American tariff, he said:

> Exaggerated language has been used with regard to the McKinley tariff, which will not injure us as much as was expected. It is certain to be more injurious to America herself.

He added that the measure would tell against American farmers and artisans, and eventually against American manufacturers. He supposed that America still desired to export, but she could only get her exports paid for by imports. But for Canada's protective duties it would be impossible to prevent wholesale smuggling. The speaker said he wished particularly to express the opinion that the new law was not enacted out of hostility to England.

After generally censuring the government for its policy toward Ireland, he strongly condemned the practice of "shadowing," from which, he said, even a felon in England is exempt.

WORK OF REBUILDING.

The Sutphin Cattle Yards to be Put in Operation Again.

WEST SUPERIOR, Special Telegram, Oct. 21.—J. B. Sutphin of Duluth, owner of the old Powder River Cattle company yards, located on the Omaha road about seven miles south of the city, is rebuilding the sheds and barns which were destroyed by fire over a year ago. About three years ago these yards were owned and operated by the Powder River Cattle company, a corporation composed of English capitalists and which owned large cattle ranches in Montana, Wyoming and British Columbia. The failure of the ranges to support the cattle caused the company, after a year or so, to discontinue its operations, and its plant was purchased by J. B. Sutphin of Duluth, who made use of the buildings until they were burned, since which time the yards have been abandoned. Mr. Sutphin is making extensive improvements in the shape of building for storing feed, sheltering sheds, barns, etc., and will operate the plant on a large scale.

CONCERTED ACTION.

Liquor Dealers Organizing to Legalize the Sale of Original Packages.

FORT DODGE, Iowa, Special Telegram, Oct. 21.—A systematic scheme on the part of the liquor men of Iowa to bring back the original package to legal life was discovered in this city to-day. A number of the men who were openly engaged in the original package business last summer received circulars purporting to come from the secretary of "The State Original Package Dealers' association." The name signed to the circular was that of a prominent Council Bluffs liquor dealer in the name of the newly formed association. Every saloonkeeper was urged to contribute liberally to a fund to be used in an attempt to secure an injunction restraining Iowa courts from prosecuting original package dealers under the old prohibition law. It is claimed that the recent Kansas decision gives good grounds for such an action.

RAILWAY TRAINMEN.

Opening of the Seventh Annual Convention of the Brotherhood.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 21.—The seventh annual convention of the National Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen opened today, the majority of the railroads of the United States being represented. The annual report of W. E. Shehan, the grand secretary and treasurer, shows an increase in the organization of 600 during the past year, its present strength being 14,057. There has been organized during the year sixty-three new lodges, making a total of 307 now in existence. The report of the grand secretary will deal at length with the recent conference of the Federation of Railroad Employes to consider the strike on the New York Central and will justify the decision arrived at in favor of non-interference.

Eight Men Lost.

PORT HURON, Mich., Oct. 21.—The steamer Annie Young, of the Lake Superior Transit company, took fire and burned to the water's edge off Lexington to-day. The steamer Ed Smith went to the rescue and took thirteen of the crew off and brought them here.

The balance of the crew, eight men, took to the yawl boat and were drowned. Their names were M. Manark, J. Donnelly, J. Crosby, J. Gallagher, J. Connelly and three deck hands, names unknown. The Young had a cargo of coal and merchandise. The boat was valued at $30,000. Insurance unknown.

Titles at a Discount.

"I don't think any more of our Pittsburg girls want to marry European titles," said a prominent lawyer from the Iron city to a New York Star man at the Fifth Avenue hotel.

"Every one is familiar with the misfortunes of poor Virginia Knox, who married the pseudo Italian Count di Montercole, and was beaten by him in Paris while on their wedding trip. The affair was freshened up in our minds at home recently by the appearance in Pittsburg of the Hon. Francis Rawle, the well-known Philadelphia lawyer, who had charge of the estate of the late Mr. Knox, father of the unfortunate countess. Mr. Rawle is also counsel for Mrs. Knox and her daughter, and while in Pittsburg was quietly securing evidence for use in a suit for divorce which will be brought against Di Montercole by the countess in a short time. She is living in strict seclusion with her mother near Philadelphia.

"The other 'horrible example' held up for a warning to our susceptible and ambitious maidens is that of the Baroness Lagerfelt. The baron had a right to his title. He really came of a noble and highly honorable Swedish family, and his uncle is on the personal staff of the king. The baron himself held a commission in the Swedish army. He came to Pittsburg about ten years ago as consul. He was one of the handsomest men I ever saw. Six feet two in height, broad shouldered, with curly, blonde hair, and a long, drooping blonde mustache—a picture of good health and manly strength, and looking like one of the old vikings of the Norseman's story-books. He was an agreeable, cultured fellow, with charming manners and plenty of money, and he became a general favorite. He engaged in business, along with the duties of his office, and three or four years ago married Miss Jennie Doty of Steubenville, a girl well known in Pittsburg, where she was educated at the Pittsburg female college. Her father was rich, and she was handsome, accomplished, and the wedding made a stir in society circles. The baron for the last two years has been speculating in stocks and getting tied up in a number of business ventures, and some time ago suddenly put what property he had in his wife's name and left for London to visit a sick uncle. Since then it has been found that his affairs were in very bad shape and that he was a forger to a large amount in certain stocks. At first it was thought that his defalcations would only amount to $20,000 or $25,000, but attorneys in the case told me that they would amount to $100,000 at least. The baroness, who, by the way, is a most estimable woman, is at her father's home nearly heart-broken, but the baron's whereabouts are unknown.

"Of course the same misfortune might have come to these young ladies if the bridegrooms had been Americans with no more title than 'mister,' but the titles give the case much more prominence. Taken with the blooming 'young son' of some British lord or other who worked his way into all the Pittsburg clubs and into the best society circles, about four years ago, they have had some pretty good lessons. That fellow had been a valet in the family of the noble lord whom he represented as his father, and a majority of the younger society bloods of Pittsburg and some of the solid men still retain numerous I O U's as mementoes of their acquaintance with the British aristocracy."

Took the Prize.

The publisher of a New York paper offered a prize of $300 for the best child's story. The stipulation was that the story should be written in the simplest language—so simple, in fact, that a wayfaring child, though a fool, might not err therein. The prize was awarded to the writer of this bit of simple composition:

Little Oliver was 6 years old when his Uncle Tom died. It was a strange sight to Oliver when a number of grave and determined looking people came and planted the old individual.

"What are they going to do with my respected and greatly emaciated uncle?" little Oliver asked.

"My dear and impressive child," said an old maid, wiping her eyes on the corner of a bed quilt, "they are going to deposit him in the cold, cold, clammy and uncommunicative ground."

"And will he grow?" the sweet and confiding child innocently asked.

"Not this season, dear. When hundreds of years have rolled over the earth, bringing blight and ruin where you now behold strength and beauty, he may sprout, take root and grow unto a beautiful chestnut tree."

"And will the chestnuts be moldy?" the sweet infant asked.

"Those that find their way into the halls of congress and those that cause roars and shouts of merriment in farce comedies will be seriously affected by mold, my angel."

"And will some of them be impregnated by worms?"

"My sweet urchin," she answered, taking up a pair of sheep shears and cutting off his hyperion lock, "those that are told at great banquets will crawl out of the bag."

Little Oliver mused deeply over what the old maid had said, and the next day he went down to the rivulet and threw a stone at a frog. Alas, when autumn came Oliver was no more.

THE NORTHWEST.

A Summary of the Important Events of the Week in the Northwestern States.

MINNESOTA.

The St. Paul public library now numbers 25,000 volumes.

Warren defeated Argyle in the county seat fight by over three hundred majority.

The Scandinavian Lutherans will erect a new church edifice at Winona.

The free delivery system will be introduced in Rochester November 1.

Thieves entered a St. Paul residence and among other things stole the family bible.

The city of Mankato has let a contract for five years for lighting the streets with electricity.

J. R. Morrin & Co., of Albert Lea, have shipped seventeen carloads of eggs this year, each car containing 400 cases, 144,000 dozen, or 2,448,000 eggs.

John Anderson, a deaf and dumb man, was killed by a Northern Pacific engine while crossing a bridge at Henning. He was facing the train but was looking at his feet.

The loss to farmers in Lawrence township, Grant county, from the recent prairie fire is estimated at between $40,000 and $50,000. The fire started from cinders dumped on the roadway by a farm engine.

The police of Hastings are prosecuting a vigorous war against dealers who have been selling tobacco to minors under sixteen years of age. Four arrests have been made so far and all the offenders fined.

S. Hess, of Motley, was accidentally shot by his son while hunting near Moose Lake. Eight buckshot entered his thigh and body at short range. He was taken to the hospital at Brainerd, where he now lies in a critical condition.

A special election held at Montgomery has voted $5,000 for a system of waterworks and a steam fire engine. Work will begin immediately on a deep well, pumphouse and a large reservoir, with water mains and hydrants through the streets.

The grand jurors of Waterman county placed five indictments against Nels Johanson, a saloonkeeper of Madelia, three of them for selling to minors and two for selling on Sunday. The sheriff took him in charge. The same jury indicted N. E. Pratt for selling liquor on Sunday.

Some time ago Mrs. Metcalf of Fairhaven brought proceedings for divorce against her husband, William Metcalf, alleging criminal intimacy with Mrs. Lettie W. Noyes of the same place. G. W. Noyes completed the sensation by suing for divorce from the woman. All the parties are quite prominent.

Indian Agent Kelsey, of the Shawano reservation, has forwarded his first official report. He says the Indians are in good condition and are devoting their time to agriculture. Last winter, he says, the Indians banked 25,691,565 feet of logs, which netted them $218,378.

In his history of his famous trip to the northwest in 1828, when he attempted to find the north pole, Sir John Franklin makes reference to the birth of a son of one of his rescuers. The infant was born in the basin of the Mackenzie river, and the farthest north of any child then born in Canada. The infant so referred to is at present visiting in St. Paul, and his name is J. R. McVicar. He is 63 years of age.

Thomas O'Connor, who has served twelve years of a life sentence in the penitentiary at Stillwater, has been pardoned on condition that he leaves the state forever. He was sentenced for the murder of his nephew, Larry Vaugh, of Le Sueur. O'Connor was subsequently re-arrested for violating his parol. He had returned to his old home, and he was believed to have had designs upon the lives of one or more of his neighbors, as he was heavily armed when taken into custody.

A young man named John Springer, who teaches school sixteen miles south of Hastings, failed to appear at the school house, and on search being instituted his dinner pail was found turned up by the roadside. The dirt was torn up as if there had been a scuffle, and in a muddy spot near by were found foot prints and a revolver trampled into the mud. He had trouble with a stranger some time ago, who threatened to kill him, and it is thought he has been murdered and his body concealed.

Benedict Lipp, a section man on the Northern Pacific, blew his brains out, in his room at Little Falls, with a gun loaded with buckshot. The whole top of his head from his nose up was blown off, his brains scooped out and scattered over the floor, bed, walls and ceiling of the room, scarcely leaving a spot three inches long which was not bespattered with blood and brains. At 3 o'clock in the morning the section boss, who was his room mate, came in, crawled over the dead body of Lipp and went to sleep, not noticing anything wrong.

NORTH DAKOTA.

The new opera-house at Grand Forks will be opened by Emma Abbott on the 10th of November.

The Bismarck saloons have received a polite invitation by mail from the attorney-general to close up and thus comply with the state law.

The artesian well at Oakes has been completed and accepted by the city council. It is 973 feet deep and has a pressure of 117 pounds.

At a special term of court held at Valley City by Judge Rose to consider saloon cases, all were dismissed by the judge, who held that the Wilson law is absolutely inoperative and void. All further prosecutions will be abandoned at present.

Milton Wyckoff, of Wheatland, is having more misfortune than should be any one man's lot, in one season, at least. Last summer his wheat was nearly all cut down with hail, and then some one set fire to about twenty-five tons of hay in stack and the whole was consumed.

Schmit & Co., dealers in general merchandise, made an assignment at Devils' Lake for the benefit of their creditors to C. M. Fisher. Liabilities about $5,000; estimated assets $7,000. The reasons given for the assignment are poor crops and slow collections.

The county commissioners of Stutsman county have ordered separate ballot boxes provided that ladies may vote for superintendent of public instruction this fall. Several other counties have already taken similar action. If the ladies are all permitted to vote it is claimed that Mrs. Elsenhurth, their candidate, will surely be elected.

The shock threshing season is about closing and stack threshing about to begin. Wheat and oats are furnishing a fairly good yield on the "divide." Wheat that was well put in is threshing out from ten to twenty bushels per acre, a good deal raging above fifteen. It generally grades No. 2 Northern. The quality of oats is good. Barley is poor and of small yield.

Charles Bailey, indicted as one of the men who held up the Northern Pacific train at New Salem last Summer and who is charged with robbing the mails pleaded guilty in the United States court, at Fargo and was sentenced to eight years in the penitentiary. Some very interesting developments were expected if this case had come on for trial. Charles Youngman was indicted for tampering with the United States mails in the Fargo postoffice and abstracting money from letters.

The Jandell horse ranch, near Jamestown, had a narrow escape from losing the range by fire. Dick Brown, one of the men on the ranch, got caught in a corner by the fire while back-firing, and before he could escape was badly burned on the face, neck and other parts of his body. His feet were burned through his boots. It seems that the unlucky man got into an extra heavy clump of grass, and flames eight feet high surrounded him before he could escape. He is at the Grand Central hotel doing as well as could be expected.

Dr. Langdon, state veterinary surgeon, returned to Fargo from an inspection trip to the western part of the state to investigate the charge that scab existed among sheep there. He found the disease in sheep brought in from Washington, and has written the governor advising him to quarantine the sheep in Stutsman, Kidder and Logan counties; also that sheep coming into the state be thoroughly inspected, and none shipped out unless they have a clean bill of health from an inspector. He also advises the owners how the disease can be exterminated, and hopes by this early and prompt action to prevent it spreading.

The Baptist convention held at Jamestown, elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, Rev. J. R. Deckard, Mandan; first vice president, Rev. J. A. Carem, Ellendale; second vice president, Rev. J. Crawford, D. D., St Thomas; secretary, Rev. George Kline, Bismarck; treasurer, Rev. E. H. Teal, Jamestown. A full board of directors was also elected, the officers of the convention being the officers of board. There are fifty Baptists churches in the state, one-half of which have houses of worship. A number of important questions were discussed with ability and interest. The convention adjourned to meet at Lisbon on Saturday before the first Sabbath in October, 1891.

Farmer Burton, of Burleigh county, tells the following story of his farming operations: This country is all right I can make money here. I had twelve acres of wheat of my own and rented 175 acres, receiving one-half the crop. I was out nothing except my time and feed or a month and three days. I had 1,748 bushels. There is some money in that, ain't there? When I came here in 1883 I had just 35 cents—my folks back in the east without anything. I now have machinery and stock and grain and nothing against 'em. This country is good enough for me. Sold sixty-nine bushels of potatoes for 55 cents a bushel. My brother is in Illinois—in a great apple country. I wrote him I would trade potatoes for apples—bushel for bushel. He wrote back "no apples and no potatoes—both a failure here." I guess my brother will not find any more fault with this country.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

The Masonic fraternity of Huron are considering the advisability of erecting a Masonic temple.

A farmer by the name of Greeno, living about twelve miles west of Dell Rapids, had 100 bushels of flax stolen from him one night.

Sioux Falls' new water-works are working satisfactorily. The supply from the new works can be increased to 6,000,000 gallons at pleasure, a quantity of water that but one or two cities in the United States the size of Sioux Falls can lay claim to.

While Surry Brothers, proprietors of the steam saw mill at Elk Point, were sawing a cottonwood log the saw struck a piece of steel that had been driven into the log and in less than ten seconds the monster saw was toothless. A reward of $50 is offered for the guilty parties.

About two weeks ago George Wagner, of Yanktown, rented a Winchester rifle to a young man who said he wanted to go out hunting. And he went and has not yet returned. Mr. Wagner has however found his rifle. It is held by a man at Grayville, who purchased it for $2.50 and refuses to give it up unless Mr. Wagner advances $3.50 for it.

A hard looking, queer acting specimen of humanity, hailing from no one knows where, undertook to associate too extensively with some Indians west of Egan one day, and came to town next morning, shoeless, hatless, bruised, discouraged and demented, having received a blow from a bludgeon wielded by the brawny arm of a Sioux gentleman who was able to take care of his own wife.

For several years a band of horse thieves have existed in Grant county, and it has been their custom to hide stolen animals on the Sisseton and Wahpeton Indian reservation, adjoining Grant county. Of late the officers have been shadowing the band so closely that they became alarmed and left the country. Mrs. Casey, the wife of a man supposed to belong to the gang, is now under arrest, and it is hoped her trial may lead to the capture of the entire outfit.

Shat, the Aberdeen shoe man, on a recent visit to Chicago, sold to Marshall Field, the great merchant prince of Chicago, 720 pairs of the papoose moccasins he is manufacturing. He says Mr. Field was much amused at the idea of buying for his house, one of the largest in Chicago, a stock of goods from Aberdeen. At the same time he was much pleased with the goods, and considered that he had an article that would please his customers. The manufacture of the moccasins give employment to a number of young ladies of Aberdeen.

WISCONSIN.

A haughty Fond du Lac tramp sprinkles his couch with insect powder whenever he sleeps in jail.

Cattle are dying by scores near Berlin. It is thought that they have contracted a plague from stagnant water.

A La Crosse man has named his boy Twice, so that lightning will not strike him in the same place.

Henry Hicks attempted to escape from the police station at Oshkosh through a cold air flue. He became wedged in, and was almost dead when discovered.

Agent Kelsey recently paid out $100.080 to the Menomonee Indians, being onehalf of last season's pay for logging, and will make a second payment shortly.

Frank Davis, a Superior tinner, carried a blazing gasoline stove out of a building to prevent a fire, and burned himself badly for his pains.

When Deputy Sheriff Cannon, of Ashland, arrived at Waunan with William Gray, the express robber, the officials recognized him. Gray had been there before for two years for a larceny job.

Cruel treatment by the officers of the Waukesha Reform School, it is claimed by the relatives of George Williams, was the cause of the boy's escape and his leap from a flying train to get away from the officers who recaptured him.

Charlie Wheeler bucked the wheat market through a Duluth bucket shop until his money gave out, and then he fell back on other people to keep up his speedy gait. As a result, Mr. Wheeler is not within many miles of Superior now, and dozens of creditors are gnashing their teeth.

George A. Williams, a powerful young fellow, who escaped from the Waukesha reform school last April, was captured at Superior. On the train he made a bold dash for liberty, but, with the assistance of passengers, was prevented from escaping.

Bogus lightning-rod men who are working the state send a man ahead who bargains with a farmer to buy a horse. The horse buyer wishes the farmer to sign a paper as reference. The horse is not called for, but the other parties come along with a written contract for $150 worth of lightning rods.

The thieves who robbed St. Paul freight cars at Richmond have been ferreted out. The gang was composed of eight or ten boys, but the authorities have succeeded in getting only five, but they are satisfied that they have the leaders. Their ages run from 18 to 21. Besides robbing cars the boys have been engaged in robbing chicken roosts, ice boxes and cellars in the vicinity of Richmond and La Moille, and storing their plunder in caves.

IOWA.

There are a great many cases of diphtheria in Des Moines, but the city physician thinks there is no cause for alarm.

Mrs. J. Ellen Foster has announced that she will not serve as president of the Iowa W. C. T. U. another year.

Charles L. Longley, for more than twenty years editor of the Tipton Advertiser, has accumulated a fortune and retired from active newspaper work.

An 8-year-old child was abducted from Harlan the other day and returned after three days to her parents with her hair gone. The woman who abducted her was arrested and fined $50.

James Ford, a farmer, and his wife were driving along the road near Clive when the horses became frightened and ran away, throwing the occupants out and inflicting injuries that may prove fatal.

Several circus companies have clubbed together and will erect a monument over the last resting place of Yankee Robinson, who died friendless and alone and was buried at Jefferson, this state, some years ago.

At Sioux Rapids the other day a farmer named Hickman found a pocketbook containing $1,000 lying on the street. He found the owner and returned it, getting $5 for his pains.

The postmaster at Mason City is anxiously waiting for Wasterdt Forbjor Thorstuesdatter to come around and inquire for a letter addressed to him and now lying in the post-office.

While digging a well near Rock Valley the other day a piece of cottonwood was found at a depth of twenty-five feet. It was unearthed in a strata of blue clay, and the specimen is in an excellent state of preservation.

A citizen of Ida county has discovered that lime slacked in buttermilk makes a first class paint for houses. He says the mixture will withstand rain and that it only costs about $1 to furnish paint enough for an ordinary house.

Saloonkeeper Dumpsey, of Dubuque is limping around on a very lame leg. While attempting to chase a rat from his place of business the rodent took refuge up the leg of his pants and before it could be dislodged had frightfully lacerated the leg with its teeth.

Among a class of twenty-four admitted to the bar by the supreme court the other day was Miss Lilly Kostomlatsky, who passed a remarkably good examination. She is the second woman admitted by the Iowa supreme court, and will at once begin practice.

◆

Ensilage in Canada.

The following points regarding the use of ensilage in Canada are reproduced from the report of the Ontario agricultural college:

First—The hay and straw crops have been factors so important for the economical wintering of cattle that if they happen to be light and short a scarcity of cheap feed has been experienced. A part of a corn crop may be planted so late that the farmer can accommodate the acreage to the prospects of a light or large hay crop, an estimate of which can be made with reasonable accuracy by the middle of June in most years.

Second—Two alternatives present themselves to the farmer who depends entirely upon pasture for his cattle during the summer months. He must either stock his fields lighter than their capacity can well support during June and July, or let the cattle suffer for sufficient herbage from which to bite during the hot and dry weather of midsummer. The system of partial soiling enables the farmer to stock his pasture fields during June to the utmost limits of their supporting power. Green fodder may be grown to carry them over a period of scant feed from pastures. While rye, clover, peas and vetches, and peas and oats are admirably adapted for such uses, they give but a small yield per acre compared with what may be obtained from a corn crop.

Third—A cheap winter fodder for cattle is indispensable to the dairyman and cattle feeder who farms for profit in these times of comparatively low prices and keen competition. Cattle can be fed upon fodder corn from a silo at least one-half less per day then when hay is the main ration. That statement will apply to almost every part of the dominion. In seasons which yield but a light hay or short straw crop, corn grows more luxuriantly. Hence it has a specially complementary crop value where large numbers of cattle are to be fed during the winter and summer.

Fourth—From the large quantity that may be obtained from a small area of land, the corn crop will enable the small farmer to engage successfully in animal husbandry. On fifty acres of good arable land a farmer, by a rotation of crops and the growth of ten acres of fodder corn, may profitably feed twenty-five head of thrifty cattle the year round, besides the ordinary complement of young stock. The number may be gradually increased as he is enabled from their droppings to enrich the soil for the growth of heavier crops and larger areas of fodder corn.

Fifth—The summer cultivation of the soil during the growth of the crop has a very beneficial action upon its fertility. The long roots of the plant loosen the soil and by their action and decay liberate some of the constituents required for the growth of succeeding crops.

They also provide for the freeing of the land from obnoxious weeds and the preventing of them from obtaining a new foothold.

◆

Texas Siftings: Little Tommy Tuft—I can' see why the members of congress should b called M. C.'s.

Mike McGonigle—Hub! Der Mc's' allers has der best show fur an office.

FARMERS AND THE TARIFF

Figures Showing How He Benefited by Protection.

Our Imports of Agricultural Products—How the McKinley Bill Will Check All This—The Farmer to be Equally Protected with the Manufacturer.

Our farmers are told by reckless purveyors of British economics that the Tariff is framed for the benefit of a few iron, woolen, cotton, silk and chemical barons, and not in the interest of the American farmer. They never tell the farmer that the direct benefits he receives from the present Tariff are far in excess of the benefits received by any other class. They do not tell him that last year the agricultural products imported on which duty was levied aggregated in value over $250,000,000. And yet this is a fact. They do not tell him that our total agricultural imports amounted to nearly $350,000,000.

How many farmers know that the aggregate importation of fruit, hides, eggs and vegetables is about equivalent in value to the importation of manufactures of iron and steel? How many know that the aggregate importation of raw flax and hemp, breadstuffs, eggs, vegetables and wools, all products of the farm, is about the same in value as the importation of manufactures of wool, or nearly $53,000,000? Changing the combination and adding hops and hay to fruit, flax, &c., and we have an aggregate far exceeding the imports of chemicals, while the importation of the last two items would equal in value the annual importation of manufactures of silk.

Is the American farmer ready to calmly listen to attacks on the greedy robber barons who manufacture glass and glassware when the imports of his own protected breadstuffs barely exceeded annually the importation of glass; when the imports of seeds, not medicinal, are about the same as the imports of earthenware?

No! Unless we are very much mistaken, the American farmer has altogether too much hay out himself not to be clever to his neighbor, the manufacturer in the matter of exchanging courtesies. Here is about how the account stands:

IMPORTS OF MANUFACTURED PRODUCTS, 1889.
Woolen goods	$52,000,000
Silk goods	35,000,000
Linen goods	25,000,000
Iron and steel	42,000,000
Chemicals	40,000,000
Cotton goods	27,000,000
Total	$221,000,000

IMPORTS OF AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS, 1889.
Sugar	$93,000,000
Animals and products, except wool	41,000,000
Fibers, animal and vegetable	60,000,000
Fruits	19,000,000
Barley and cereals	9,000,000
Tobacco leaf	11,0 0,000
Total	$233,000,000

With such an array of important products protected, to say nothing of wool, of hops, of hay, of eggs, of vegetables, of seeds, and of a score of minor products, is it likely the American farmer will give up the Tariff because the Free-Trade shouters are loudly proclaiming against the iron and woolen barons? The farmer reads and listens and looks the situation over carefully, and then begins to figure out how much of the product represented by this vast sum of nearly $250,000,000 he might produce at home if the Tariff was only tightened a little.

The manufacturer looks on the other side of the picture, and he begins to cipher out how much of the $250,000,000 of manufactured goods which are annually pouring into our ports could just as well be made at home by American labor if the inequalities of the Tariff were only corrected and undervaluations and fraudulent invoices stopped. The McKinley Tariff bill is intended to meet both the demand of the American farmer and the American manufacturer. And so they are bound to join issues and stand by the Tariff.

Yet Mr. Gladstone says the people of America should grow more corn (meaning wheat) and more cotton, and manufacture less iron and steel and less woolens. And that is the Free-Trade doctrine. Continue our philanthropic mission for the relief of the labor and capital of Great Britain? Is this the only way out? Surely not.

The Never Satisfied Free-Traders.

For months past the Free-Traders have been telling us and our farmers that they have not had sufficient Protection. That, while the manufacturer has been reaping the profits accruing from a high Tariff, the farmer has been fooled and hoodwinked with a Tariff on his products that amounted to little or nothing and afforded him no Protection whatever.

Well, we are always glad to receive points from our Free-Trade friends, and being convinced that our agricultural interests have lacked sufficient Protection to certain products the framers of the new Tariff bill have increased the duty on some and put a duty on others before on the free list. But our Free-Trade friends are no more satisfied than before. They cry now that the necessaries of life are to be taxed, &c. Truly, the Cobdenites and the Clevelandites are hard to please. It would seem that nothing but complete stagnation of our industries and ruination of farm, factory and fireside would bring joy and gladness to the advocates of British Free-Trade.

A Snag For Free-Traders.

There is one Protection proposition that Our Free-Trade friends have not been able to demolish. It is found in the following paragraph in a speech made by Senator Morrill in the Senate on July 30: "I do not know of an article that has received Tariff Protection for a series of years that is not now sold for a much less price than it was before it was protected." This little sentence of thirty-four words contains a statement which the Democratic writers have tried in vain to disprove with columns of Free-Trade argument. The facts are against them, and they are invariably compelled to give it up.

Labor and Wages in Germany.

The Effect of a Decade of Protection in that Country.

Previous to 1880 Germany, accepting the British policy of Free-Trade, imported a half million of wool hats per annum. After Protection the English were driven out of the German market, as the Germans imported in 1883 but 30,000 hats, against 500,000 in 1878. Linen manufacture has increased in Germany 300 per cent., while it has decreased in Great Britain 18 per cent. The exports of linen and yarn for the last ten years have decreased fully one-half. The shares of the leading flax mills at Bielefeld, Germany, are 22 per cent. above par, while the shares of the ten leading flax mills of Belfast, Ireland, are between 50 and 60 per cent. below par. Two hundred thousand persons are engaged in the manufacture of flax in Germany and but 150,000 in England.

Wages also have increased at a greater rate in Germany than in England. Why is it, some ask, that labor is not so high in Germany under Protection as in Free-Trade England? The answer is quite easy. Protection in Germany has built up a home market of purchasing power, thus stimulating a local production that enables the German workman to buy cheaper than his English brother, who has to pay for the foreign breadstuffs he consumes, and who is so pent up that if he lives in else but a hovel must pay an exorbitant rent to "mi lord." On the other hand, the German workingman has economical tastes in dress and living, and meets his wants with a compensatory balance of wages.

The Iron and Steel Association of Germany represents 350 firms, with a capital of $262,000,000, and employs 235,000 men. Ten years ago they were represented by 320 firms, employing but 151,000 persons. Their monthly wages have increased 52 per cent., and this rule of increase of wages will apply to all Germany. Wages are lower in Germany, but they are much higher than under Free-Trade, and their lower standard than that of Great Britain is more than compensated for by their cheaper food, raiment and house rent than is paid for by the British wageworker.

Protection for Farm Products.

Contention that the Tariff imposed on imported agricultural products is of no avail by way of Protection to American farmers will no more stand the test of facts and figures than most other assertions of the industrious attorneys for free foreign trade.

Under the existing law, Tariff is imposed on the principal farm products, as follows: Wheat, 20 cents per bushel; corn, oats, barley and rye, each 10 cents; potatoes, 15 cents; live stock (other than breeding), 20 per cent. on value. The effect of these charges, according to the great apostle of Free-Trade, who never lets slip the opportunity for reiterating his creed, is that:

Tariff taxation is not limited to the consumer of imported articles, but the duties imposed upon such articles permit a corresponding increase in price to be laid upon the domestic productions of the same kind.

Every sensible business man, with the price-lists of the different trade centers before him, can see that this is not true; while it is a fact that the Tariff rates above quoted serve as a check to an influx of foreign grown products which would, in the absence of such barrier, seriously embarrass market prices in the United States. Foreign producers pay the Tariff on such of these products as they send here, and hence cannot afford to sell them as cheaply as they could and would sell if permitted to bring their products here free. What they thus pay in the way of Tariff goes into the public treasury, and by so much reduces the amount that otherwise would be raised from our own citizens.

But notwithstanding the fact that foreign farmers are taxed for the privilege of selling their products in our markets, they did send here during the last fiscal year staple farm products to the value of nearly $14,000,000—namely: Breadstuffs, $6,034,272; vegetables, $4,455,354; live animals, $3,270,277. After paying over two and three-quarter million dollars as Tariff, these were sold in competition with the products of American farms.

It is with such facts as these that Free-Trade attorneys should be confronted when pleading with the farmer for his vote against the policy of Protection for American labor. The American farmer can no more successfully compete against the cheap grown wheat of India and Russia than the American manufacturer can compete with his foreign competitor in making cheap goods. The Tariff of 20 cents per bushel removed, and the price of American grown wheat would come down, or foreign grown wheat would be sold in its stead. Proof of this lies in a comparison of market quotations from the commercial centers of Europe and the United States, and farmers will find more profit in such comparison than in listening to the confusing diatribes of Free-Trade advocates.

Spread of Protection.

Protective Tariff sentiments are extending and chrystalizing by leaps and bounds in many parts of the world. The French people are felicitating themselves that in a couple of years more all their outstanding and objectionable trade treaties will expire by limitation, when they will make only such arrangements with other nations as will leave themselves free to enforce their ideas of Protection to their own industries to suit themselves. China is doing similarly by increasing her import duty upon cotton goods, opium, etc.; Spain is moving in the same direction; Germany imposes high Protective duties; Servia is heading off the dishonesty of importers by declining to accept their valuations of imports except under the inspection of her own customs appraisers, and, as we have heretofore shown, even in England a strong party is being formed looking to a Protective financial system. We all know how it is in Canada and the United States. It is to be observed that whenever allusion is made to this fast and wide-spreading sentiment in favor of Tariff protection, the information is promulgated that "British traders and manufacturers protest" against proposed changes. These protests do not retard the movement, and Britain will soon have to join the procession.

COULDN'T STAND IT.

The Idea of Christian Women Gambling Was Too Much For Him.

The sultan-emperor of Morocco appears to be having a hard time with the few christians who choose to reside at Tangier. The place has become quite famous as a winter health resort, and many English and Americans who have diseases of the throat and lungs repair to it. An Anglo-American company have erected a find hotel there, and have been trying to render it attractive. They first obtained permission to run a saloon in connection with it, on the plea that invalids coming from Great Britain and the United States required some alcoholic stimulants for some time after their arrival.

More recently they obtained permission to open a gaming-room and to fit it up with roulette tables and other articles employed by gamblers. It was agreed that a certain percentage of the revenues of this place was to be turned over to the sultan, who was to use the money for the purpose of founding and supporting new mosques. The scheme was something like that adopted by the Louisiana Lottery Company. The promoters of it offered to give liberal pay for certain indulgences, the money to be set apart for religious purposes.

Everything went along pretty well till the sultan was informed that women as well as men frequented this gambling-room and staked large sums of money on the games in progress. This was quite too much for the highly religious ruler of Morocco to bear. So he sent a swift mesnenger across the desert to protest against what he declared to be an outrage. But the company appealed to the English and American consuls for protection of their vested rights. The sultan was willing that men should play games of chance and skill for money, providing they paid liberally for the privilege, but he had no idea that the room where the games were played was to be entered by a woman. A compromise was therefore agreed to, by the terms of which Christian woman shall be allowed to enter the gambling-room and take part in the games, but all native woman shall be rigorously excluded.

The place is accordingly known as "The Christian Woman's Gambling Hell." All good Mohammedan woman keep away from it for fear of losing caste, if not loosing their souls, and also out of fear of being imprisoned. Still, many people wonder that Christianity is making so little progress in Mohammedan countries. They do not seem to understand that in these countries Christianity is closely associated with drunkenness, gambling and profanity. The people take more notice of how nominal Christians act than of what they believe and profess.

An Honest Typesetter.

There is an honest typesetter in this city possessed of a pliable mind, which he is apt to change according to the impressions made upon it, says the New York Sun. He once set type on a teetotal organ, and after thinking over the anti-alcoholic arguments in his manuscript he signed the pledge. He next got a job on a sporting weekly, and was soon led to join a base ball club. He afterward handled his stick in a methodist weekly, and its reasoning soon led him to membership in the church. He then set type for a presbyterian editor, whose copy convinced him of the truth of calvanism. He next "got a sit" on a free trade paper, which led him to revise his views on the tariff. He afterward worked as typo on a liquorish sheet, where, after setting a hundred galleys of arguments in favor of grog, he adopted the practice of taking a glass at times. At latest accounts this typesetter of pliable mind was standing at the case in the office of a spiritualistic publication, and had become convinced that his true function in life was that of a medium or faith curist.

Another Nickel in the Slot.

The "nickel in the slot" idea has been wrought out into something more useful than supplying the public with gum or an opportunity to hear the band through a phonograph. A newly invented gas meter is so arranged that by dropping a penny in the slot one can get twenty-five cubic feet of gas or a supply for one burner for five hours. The experiment has been tried in Manchester and is about to be in Birmingham. The ordinary price is 60 cents a thousand, and this makes it cost 80, but it will be a great blessing to small consumers even at that price, provided the slot machines will tell the truth and not lie like the ordinary meter of commerce.

Jealousy.

Of all passions that can take possession of the heart or brain jealousy is the worst. For many generations the chemist sought for the secret by which all metals could be changed to gold and through which the basest could become the best. Jealously seeks exactly the opposite. It endeavors to transmute the very gold of love into the dross of shame and crime.—Robert G. Ingersoll.

Just Like Some Men.

"You ought to have seen Peterby eat at the wedding breakfast. I'll wager he put away $3 worth of stuff."

"Yes, and then kicked because he had to buy a $2 present."

THE KEYSTONE WATCH CLUB
904 WALNUT ST.
PHILA.

OUR $1. A WEEK Club System while as convenient to the buyer as any instalment system, is a wholesale spot cash system to us. The co-operation of the club members sells us 38 watches in each $38 Watch Club, and we get cash from the Club for each watch before it goes out, though each member only pays $1 a week. This is why we give you more for your money than any one else and why we are doing the largest watch business in the world. We sell only first quality goods; but our prices are about what others get for second quality. Our $10 Silver Watch is a substantial Silver (not imitation of any kind) Stem-Wind American Lever Watch—either hunting case or open. Our $25.00 Watch is a Stem-wind, Open Face, first quality, stiffened Gold American Lever Watch, guaranteed to wear 20 years. It is fully equal to any watch sold for $38 by others. We find a first-class Stiffened Gold Case much more satisfactory and serviceable than any Solid Gold Case that can be sold at less than double the money, as cheap solid cases are invariably thin, weak, of low quality, and worthless after short use. Our $38 Watch contains numerous important patented improvements, of vital importance to accurate timing—Patent Dustproof, Patent Stem Wind, &c., which we control exclusively. It is fully equal for accuracy, appearance, durability and service, to any $75 Watch, either Open Face or Hunting. Our $43.00 Railroad Watch is especially constructed for the most exacting use, and is the best Railroad Watch made, Open Face or Hunting. All these prices are either all cash or in clubs, $1.00 a week. An Ajax Watch Insulator given free with each Watch.

The Keystone Watch Club Co
Main Office in Co's Own Building
904 WALNUT ST., PHILADA, PA.

Agents Wanted.

Ajax Watch Insulator, $1.00

A perfect protection against magnetism. Fits any Watch. Sent by mail on receipt of price. ☞ We refer to any Commercial Agency.

WEBSTER

THE BEST INVESTMENT
For the Family, School, or Professional Library.

WEBSTER UNABRIDGED DICTIONARY
A LIBRARY IN ITSELF

Has been for years Standard Authority in the Government Printing Office and U. S. Supreme Court.

It is highly recommended by 38 State Sup'ts of Schools and the leading College Presidents.

Nearly all the School Books published in this country are based upon Webster, as attested by the leading School Book Publishers.

3000 more Words and nearly 2000 more Engravings than any other American Dictionary.

SPECIMEN TESTIMONIALS.

The New York World says: Webster is almost universally conceded to be the best.

The Boston Globe says: Webster is the acknowledged standard in lexicography.

The Atlanta Constitution says: Webster has long been the standard authority in our office.

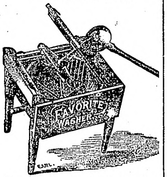
The Chicago Inter Ocean says: Webster's Unabridged has always been the standard.

The New Orleans Times Democrat says: Webster is standard authority in our office.

The New York Tribune says: It is recognized as the most useful existing "word-book" of the English language all over the world.

Sold by all Booksellers. Pamphlet free.
G. & C. MERRIAM & CO., Pub'rs, Springfield, Mass.

THE FAVORITE WASHER
LEADS THE WORLD.



It proves a blessing wherever used, and it will sell on its merits. The rub board in the Favorite Washer is constructed differently from any other. There are no pins to tear the clothes.

AGENTS WANTED.
☞ Liberal Discounts Allowed.
Send for Circulars.

P. A. HOLT,
Manufacturer,
NEW RICHLAND, MINN.

GOLD
FREE
WARRANTED

FREE. OUR NEW $85 Solid Gold Watch Worth $100.00. best $85 watch in the world. Perfect timekeeper Warranted heavy, SOLID GOLD hunting cases. Both ladies' and gent's sizes, with works and cases of equal value. ONE PERSON in each locality can secure one free, together with our large and valuable line of Household Samples. These samples, as well as the watch, are free. All the work you need do is to show what we send you to those who call—your friends and neighbors and those about you—that always results in valuable trade for us, which holds for years when once started, and thus we are repaid. We pay all express, freight, etc. After you know all, if you would like to go to work for us, you can earn from $20 to $60 per week and upwards. Address, Stinson & Co., Box 813, Portland, Maine.

THE STERLING CO.
Manufacturers of

THE STERLING PIANOS,
WHICH FOR
Quality of Tone, Beauty of Design, FINISH and adaptability for standing in Tune have no equal.
Every Piano Warranted for Five Years
And satisfaction guaranteed to every purchaser.
Also Manufacture the WORLD-RENOWNED
STERLING ORGAN
Factories, Derby, Conn.

Take a policy in one of the reliable

Old Line Co's.

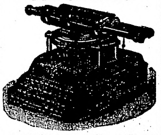
I represent several first class Insurance Companies and can

Guarantee Security Satisfaction

To the Insured. Give us a call

John M. Boyle.

THE—
INTERNATIONAL TYPEWRITER!



A strictly first-class machine. Fully warranted. Made from very best material, by skilled workmen, and with the best tools that have ever been devised for the purpose. Warranted to do all that can be reasonably expected of the very best typewriter extant. Capable of writing 150 words per minute—or more—according to the ability of the operator.

Price - - $100.00.

If there is no agent in your town, address the manufacturers,

THE PARISH MFG. CO.,
Agents Wanted. PARISH, N. Y.

FREE. STENOGRAPHY and TYPEWRITING FREE. First class facilities and best of teachers. Address, with stamp for return postage, THE PARISH MFG. CO., PARISH, N. Y.

WHAT IS SEEN ON FOR MANY MILES TO ALL UNCOVERED TO THIS EYE AYE MORE

One of the BEST Telescopes in the world. FREE Our facilities are unequaled, and to introduce our superior goods we will send FREE to ONE PERSON in each locality, as above. Only those who write to us at once can make sure of the chance. All you have to do in return is to show our goods to those who call—your neighbors and those around you. The beginning of this advertisement shows the small end of the telescope. The following cut gives the appearance of it reduced to about the fiftieth part of its bulk. It is a grand, double size telescope, as large as is easy to carry. We will also show you how you can make from $3 to $10 a day at least, from the start, without experience. Better write at once. We pay all express charges. Address, H. HALLETT & CO., Box 880, PORTLAND, MAINE.

SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN
ESTABLISHED 1845.

Is the oldest and most popular scientific and mechanical paper published and has the largest circulation of any paper of its class in the world. Fully illustrated. Best class of Wood Engravings. Published weekly. Send for specimen copy. Price $3 a year. Four months' trial, $1. MUNN & CO., PUBLISHERS, 361 Broadway, N.Y.

ARCHITECTS & BUILDERS
Edition of Scientific American.

A great success. Each issue contains colored lithographic plates of country and city residences or public buildings. Numerous engravings and full plans and specifications for the use of such as contemplate building. Price $2.50 a year, 25 cts. a copy. MUNN & CO., PUBLISHERS.

PATENTS may be secured by applying to MUNN & Co., who have had over 40 years' experience and have made over 100,000 applications for American and Foreign patents. Send for Handbook. Correspondence strictly confidential.

TRADE MARKS.

In case your mark is not registered in the Patent Office, apply to MUNN & Co., and procure immediate protection. Send for Handbook.

COPYRIGHTS for books, charts, maps, etc., quickly procured. Address

MUNN & CO., Patent Solicitors.
GENERAL OFFICE: 361 BROADWAY, N. Y.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Oct 17, 1890.
Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the clerk of district court at Detroit, Minn., on Dec. 3rd, 1890, viz: Charles Durand, pre-emption D. S. No. 5991 for the sw¼ sec 34 tp 150 rg 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz:

James C. O'Brien, John Moylan, Hugh Dean, Felix O'Claire, all of Red Lake, Minn.
oc23nov27 A. Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Oct. 17, 1890.
Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the clerk of the district court at Detroit, Minn., on Dec. 3rd, 1890, viz. Felix O'Claire, pre-emption D. S. No. 5987 for the e½ nw¼ nw¼ ne¼ sec 33 and lot 4 sec 28 tp 150 rg 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz:

Charles Durand, James C. O'Brien, John Moylan and Hugh Dean, all of Red Lake Minn.
A. Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Oct. 17, 1890.
Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the clerk of Dist Court at Detroit, Minn., on Dec. 3d, 1890, viz:

James C. O'Brien, pre-emption D S No. 5984 for the se¼ sec 23 tp 150 rg 32.

He names the following witness to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz:

Felix O'Claire, Charles Durand, John Moylan, Hugh Dean, all of Red Lake, Minn.
A. Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Oct. 17, 1890.
Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the clerk of District Court at Detroit, Minn., on Dec. 3d, 1890, viz: Hugh Dean, Pre-emption D. S. No. 5983 for the nw¼ nw¼ sec 23 e½ nw¼ & lot 1 sec 22 twp 150 r 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz:

James C. O'Brien, John Moylan, Charles Du- Felix O'Claire, all of Red Lake Minn.
A. Barto, Register.

$2.00 SAVED

by buying your Shoes of the Manufacturer.
SATISFACTION GUARANTEED!
ONLY $2.50
for Shoes that usually retail at $4.00 and $5.00.

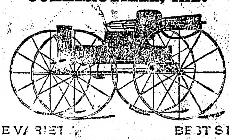
BUTTON. LACE. CONGRESS.

On receipt of $2.50 and twenty-five cents to pay expressage we will send one pair of our Fine Calf Shoes, Seamless Vamps, either Button, Lace or Congress. We Use only selected stock and the best workmanship. Every pair Warranted. Try our Shoes once and you will buy no others.

☞ Mention Size and Width wanted. Send postal note or N. Y. draft. Write your address plainly,—Town, County and State.

CUSTOM BOOT & SHOE CO.,
EAST WEYMOUTH, MASS.

McFARLAN CARRIAGE CO.
CONNERSVILLE, IND.



LARGE VARIETY. BEST STYLES.
LOW PRICES.
WRITE FOR CATALOGUE AND PRICE LIST.
McFARLAN CARRIAGE CO.,
Mention this paper. Connersville, Ind

Red Lake Falls Iron Works.

P. & J. MEEHAN, Proprietors.
J Z PERRON, Manager.

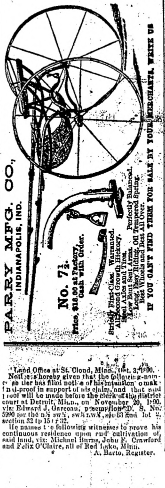
SAW AND GRIST MILL
MACHINERY MADE AND REPAIRED.

Repairing Thresher Engines
AND BOILERS AND
AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS.

Circular Saws Hammered. Satfaction Guaranteed, Correspondence Solicited.

BRING IN YOUR WORK
Scrap Brass and Copper Bought

Hunt & McClatchie
—DEALERS IN—
Heavy and Shelf Hardware.
DEERING FARM MACHINERY.



PARRY MFG. CO.,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

No. 7½.
Price, $16.00 at Factory, Cash with Order.

Strictly First-Class. Warranted.
All Second Growth Hickory.
Steel Axles and Tires.
Low Bent Seat Arms.
Long, Easy Riding, Oil Tempered Spring.
Best Wheels and Best All Over.
Perfectly Balanced.

IF YOU CAN'T FIND THEM FOR SALE BY YOUR MERCHANTS, WRITE US

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Oct. 3, 1890.
Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the clerk of the district court at Detroit, Minn., on November 20, 1890, viz: Edward J. Garceau, pre-emption D. S. No. 5990 for the n½ sw¼, sw¼ nw¼, sec 33 and lot 2, section 32 tp 150 r 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz: Michael Burns, John F. Crawford and Felix O'Claire, all of Red Lake, Minn.
A. Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Oct. 6, 1890.
Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the judge or in his absence the clerk of the district court at Detroit Minn., on Nov. 20, 1890, viz: Michael Burns, H E No. 14,065, for the s½ se¼, nw¼ se¼ and sw¼ ne¼ sec 34, tp 150 r 32.

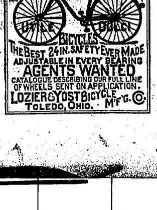
He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of, said land, viz: Joseph P. Dargan, John F. Crawford, Edward J. Garceau, Felix O'Claire, all of Red Lake Minn.
oct9-nov13 A. Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn. Oct. 3, 1890.
Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the clerk of Dist. court at Detroit, Minn., on November 20th, 1890, viz: John F. Crawford, pre-emption D S No. 5085 for the e½ nw¼ nw, nw¼ sec 34, and sw¼ sw¼ sec 27, tp 150 r 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz: Michael Burns, Edward J. Garceau, Joseph P. Dargan, Felix O'Claire, all of Red Lake, Minn.
A. Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Oct. 3, 1890.
Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the clerk of the District court at Detroit, Minn., on November 20, 1890, viz: Joseph P. Dargan, pre-emption, D S No 5989, for the e½ ne¼, sw¼ ne¼, sec 33 and sw¼ nw¼ sec 34 tp 150 rg 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of, said land, viz: Michael Burns, Edward J. Garceau, John F. Crawford, Felix O'Clair, all of Red Lake, Minn. A. Barto, Register.



THE LITTLE GIANT
BICYCLES
THE BEST 24 IN. SAFETY EVER MADE
ADJUSTABLE IN EVERY BEARING
AGENTS WANTED
CATALOGUE DESCRIBING OUR FULL LINE OF WHEELS SENT ON APPLICATION.
LOZIER & YOST BICYCLE M'F'G. CO.
TOLEDO, OHIO.

P. & J MEEHAN,

(SUCCESSORS TO J. J. HOWE & CO)

Manufacturers and Dealers in

LUMBER,

LATH,

SHINGLES

Sash, Doors, Moldings, Building Paper,

Yards and Office on Main St.

We Would Like to Call the Attention of

Capitalists

Manufacturers and Others Desiring a Place for

INVESTMENT

—To the—

Superior Advantages of

RED LAKE FALLS,

Is Many Water Powers and other natural advantages. It is only a question of a few years until this will be one of the leading cities of Minnesota. Investment in real estate or water privileges are sure to secure to the investors handsome returns.

—WE RE—
In the Center of Vast
Farming District.

Yearly consuming large amounts of imported products of manufactures. This vast tract of land is watered by the Red Lake and Clearwater rivers. Within the limits of the city are

12 DISTINCT WATER POWERS.

The only natural water powers on these streams. There are fine openings for paper and pulp mills, woolen and other factories. Parties outside desiring any information concerning property, address

BOYLE & MEEHAN.

RED LAKE FALLS NEWS.

JAMES MEEHAN JR., EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR
OFFICIAL PAPER OF CITY AND COUNTY.
Vol. VII. No. 47.
RED LAKE FALLS, POLK COUNTY, MINNESOTA, OCTOBER 30, 1890.
TERMS, $1.50 PER YEAR

>SPECIAL<

CLOAK - SALE

>THIS WEEK<

JOSEPH SMITH & CO.

TO MAKE ROOM FOR

Fall and Winter Goods

WE WILL OFFER

For : the - Next : Fifteen - Days

AN ENTIRE STOCK OF

Spring and Summer

CLOTHING AT COST

☞This Includes Youths' Boys' and Men's Suits.☜

Our Stock of

FUR - COATS

Will Arrive About Sept. 26.

A SPECIAL REDUCTION IN

Ladies' Oxfords and Summer Footwear.

ALL THIS WEEK.

A SNAP—A Ladie's Fine Shoe For $1.50.

We Have Just Received a Line of

LADIES' FRENCH KID SHOES.

Which we Sell Very Cheap.

School Shoes, School Shoes, School Shoes.

W. A. SCHREITER.

ON EARTH ONCE MORE
RACINE, WIS.
THE BEST
FARM
EXPRESS
LAUNDRY
BUSINESS
WAGONS
BUCKBOARDS
BUGGIES
CARTS
LOG, LUMBER YARD & CITY TRUCKS
SPRING WAGONS & ALL STYLES.
HUGGINS PATENT
LADIES CHAISE,
PATENT CHAISE BRAKE
FISH BROS WAGON CO.
RACINE, WIS.

CHARLES LANGEVIN

—DEALER IN—

GENERAL

MERCHANDISE,

RED LAKE FALLS, MINNESOTA

A STILL MORE

Important : Event !

ECLIPSE THEM ALL!

The New Store.

H. M. KauS.

Has moved into his new building on Main street and opened a store consisting of general merchandise.

Henry wishes to inform the public that he has a well asorted stock, good goods and low prices that will astonish everybody.

He is the only merchant in town that can BOAST of having the least expenses in conducting his store, &

Remember,

CONSEQUENTLY

He can and will sell you goods at THE LOWEST POSSIBLE MARGIN, and

Do you know?

☞He will duplicate the price of any list of groceries outside of sugar and coffee sold by the so-called Minneapolis Wholesale House.☜

He is receiving large invoices of goods nearly every day and intends to carry as complete a stock as any in town.

Give the New Store a Call.

Proceedings of the Board of County Commissioners.

County Auditor's Office, Polk County.

Pursuant to call, the board of County Commissioners of Polk county assembled in the auditor's office on the 15th day of October at ten o'clock.

All members present.

The minutes of last session were read and approved.

The sw¼ section 31, tp 150, r 47, owned by Julius Boucher, was detached from district 28 and attached to district 110.

The e½ sec 12, tp 149 r 48, owned by Sampson Hilde was detached from district 18 and attached to Dist. 110.

The e½ nw¼ and sw¼ nw¼ ne¼ sw¼ sec 11 tp 153, r 44 was detached from Dist. 102 and attached to district 24.

Hearing was set at the next meeting of the board in the matter of detaching that portion of section 7, 8, and 17, lying south of Red Lake river and all of sec 18 and n½ of sec 18 and 20, td 150, r 43, from dist 161. Also hearing set in the matter of detaching sw¼ sec 10 tp 148, r 41, from district No 139 and attaching same to District 192.

The ne¼ sec 22 tp 150, r 45, was detached from district 45 and attached to district 191.

The application of Hack and Gallasch for refunding penalty paid under protest on their city property on cor Main and 2d st for the year 1887 was granted and ordered refunded.

The amount of $685 or so much thereof as necessary was appropriated out of the county road and bridge fund for a bridge across Snake river in Sandsville tp, and the chair appointed Coms Kirsch and Rhinehart a committee to act in conjunction with the town board of Sandsville twp in the matter of locating and building said bridge.

The petition of Rev. Elie Theillen for refunding of penalty and and interest paid on townsite lots belonging to the church society of Gentilly was granted and the amount of $26.57 was ordered refunded.

Notices were ordered given the supervisors of Bygland and Huntsville tp in the matter of a petition from freeholders residing upon that portion of section 1 lying north of Red Lake river in tp 150 r 46 asking that said portion be detached to Huntsville tp.

On motion R. J. Montague was unanimously appointed county Attorney of Polk county in place of D. D. Williams resigned, said appointment to take effect November 1st.

Refunding ordered made in favor of owner (Katie B. Baker) on tax certificate issued on indemnity lands to-wit: Se¼ se¼ sec 33 tp 154 r 50 for year 1885.

The application of Kate B. Baker for refunding of tax certificate issued on the following description was rejected to-wit:

	Sec	Tp.	Rg	Yr.
Nw¼ nw¼ ne¼	31	151	48	1883
N½ ne¼ se¼	"	"	"	"
Nw¼ se¼	"	"	"	"
S½ nw¼ ne¼	"	"	"	"
Sw¼ ne¼	"	"	"	"
S½ se¼ ne¼	"	"	"	"
nw¼ ne¼	19	"	"	"
E½ ne¼	25	149	49	"
All	29	150	48	1882
All	30	150	48	1883
Lot 3	21	151	49	1883
Ne¼	17	149	47	"
S½ ne¼ and e½ se¼	13	148	59	1882
Se¼	28	147	47	1883
Sw¼ se¼	31	151	49	1883
Lot 10	21	150	48	1884
S½ ne¼ and e½ se¼	13	148	48	1883
Lot 8	21	150	48	"
Lot 10	21	150	46	"
Lot 6 block 2, Clement's ad				1884
Nw¼	6	154	46	1883
Lot 2	56	159	49	1884
Ne¼ nw¼	33	151	49	1883

The following bills were audited and allowed

Wm Marin, building culverts and road work	$ 26 00
C S Spendley, drawing jurors	3 00
Pioneer Press Co., blanks for judge of probate	13 10
Geo D Barnard & Co., tax lists	126 25
Napoleon Gullmet attendance justice court	3 76
Red River Lumber Co., lumber for woodshed	32 38
Nels O Paulsrud's [illegible] sheriff's fees	98 10
Nels O Paulsrud's county sheriff's fees	77 30
Fontaine & Anglin, Merchandise for court house	10 65
Mossefin & Lindell, clothing for prisoners	40 80
A R Erickson, boarding prisoners	79 41
J E O'Brien & Co handcuffs and leg-irons	26 75
J E O'Brien & Co. closet and hardware	30 75
F J Duffy, publishing notices	3 30
Pet Johnson, witness fees in justice court	1 12
Mike Cryderman, witness fees in justice court	2 08
Stedsvold & Larson, lumber for bridge at McIntosh	26 57
J V E Wyatt, coffin settons fees and conveyance of the body of John B Welseth	13 00
Henry Nolan repairing and making changes in the court house as per contract	1 30
Hillsttad and Ruckhaber, hauling 2 loads of lumber	1 50
John Patterson, sheriff fees	48 55
" " "	11 50
" " "	14 70
Dr A Nelson, justice fees	4 55
Gustav Pederson, witness fees in justice court	2 25
Joseph Barlang, witness fees in justice court	1 12
Magnus Witburg, witness fees in justice court	2 22
St Hilaire Spectator, publishing notices	6 70
H[illegible] Grunderson, posting school notices	3 00
L Davis, posting school notices	3 00
" "	35 0
John Evenson, cleaning vault under county jail	14 00
Hans Larson, constable fees at coroner's inquest	6 10
C C Knappen, printing and stationery	15 60
G W Lewis, justice fees, four bills	13 95
Henry Shepard, coroner's fees	47 05
G H Holt, constable fees	4 25
W R Bierley, publishing notices	8 30
Peter Opheim, interpreter's fees	1 12
Pete Christianson, juror fees	50
C J Fackwall, serving and posting school notices	2 40
August Ackerland carpenter work on woodshed	15 00
C S Spendley, justice fees	3 55
J C Brandt, justice fees	1 15
Chas G Rapp, serving and posting school notices	4 40
Onezine Ducharme, 50 days as watchman at county jail	100 00
A M Mitchell, witness fees in justice court	3 68
H T Gondrean, serving and posting school notices	4 80
Michael O'Reilly, disbursements for 18 men, for making search for Horace Russell	36 00
Frank E Hunt, commissioner's fees and mileage	7 40
M E Kirsch, commissioner's fees and mileage and committee work	32 80

The bills of Dr I Lemieux and Dr J A Palmer were disallowed.

Board adjourned sine die.

M. Cornelius,
Acting Clerk of the Board.

Keep out of Debt.

We occasionally hear it said of some millionaire, that he is "independely" rich. But if he is engaged in buisness, or heavy interests in railroad, mining or banking stocks, he may be rich, but by no means "independently" so for a continuance of his prosperiry depends very much on the good will and patronage of the public. The man who is really "independent" is the farmer who is out of debt, with something ahead. Some one is always ready to give him the umarket price for all he has to sell' no matter wether he is popular and agreeable or not. While the merchant must trust peoble for goods or lose trade the farmer may demand, and receive, the hard cash for every bushel of grain and every animal he sell. Many farmers in the Northwest are in that happy condition and we would offer them only two pieces of advice which if follwd will enable them always to be happy and independent. One is: keep out of debt. The other is: always travel by the Burlington. The best line—always takes care of you. Apply to any agents of The Burlington, to your nearest railroad agent or to W. J. C. Kenyon, Gen. Pass. Agent, C. B. & N. R. R., St Paul, Minn., and you need take no further trouble about a journey.

Dr. A. T. Doll, who has been in the practice of medicine at North English, Iowa, since 1868, says he often prescribes Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera, and Diarrhoea remedy, because he knows it to be reliable. For sale by W. A. Schreiter.

Important Facts TO THE PUBLIC.

FACT I.—

I have been doing a Cash Business ever since I knew the value of money, and not only 1 summer.

FACT 2.—

I don't advertise Large Store, and Numerous Salesmen, with heavy expenses for my customers to pay for.

FACT 3.—

There is a small store between the rivers that is plumb full of General Merchandise. The proprietor of this store works hard, [illegible] all his o[illegible] and his expenses are next to nothing. That man's name is ED HAMRY, and he will sell you the best goods in the market cheaper than you buy old trashy goods at some of those windy stores.

FACT 4.—

When you want good goods cheap you should go to

ED HAMRY.

A Good Offer.

Do you read The Cosmopolitan, that bright, sparkling young magazine? The cheapest illustrated monthly in the world. 25 cents a number. $2.40 per year. Enlarged, October, 1889, to 128 pages. The Cosmopolitan is literally what the New York Times calls it, "At its price, the brightest, most varied and best edited of the magazines." An unusual opportunity for new subscribers for one year only:

The Cosmopolitan, per year	$2 40
The NEWS, per year	1 50
The price of both	3 90
We will furnish both for only	3 00

This offer is only to new subscribers to the Cosmopolitan, and only for one year. The Boston Journal says "It has more articles in each number that are readable, and fewer uninteresting pages, than any of its contemporaries." The Cosmopolitan for the first time in magazine literature, a splendidly illustrated Periodical at a price hitherto deemed impossible. Try it for a year. It will be a liberal educator to every member of the household. It will make the nights pass pleasantly. Send $3.00 to this offite and secure both the Cosmopolitan and the NEWS.

A Present to our Subscribers.

It is with pleasure that we announce to our many patrons that we have made arrangements with that wide-awake, illustrated farm magazine, the American Farmer, published at Fort Wayne, Ind., and read by nearly 200,000 farmers by which that great publication will be mailed direct, FREE, to the address of any of our subscribers who will come in and pay up all arrearages on subscription and one year in advance from date, and to any new subscriber who will pay one year in advance. This is a grand opportunity to obtain a first-class farm journal free. The American Farmer is a large 16-page journal of national circulation, which ranks among the leading agricultural papers. It treats the question of economy in agricultnre and the rights and privileges of that vast body of citizens—American Farmers—whose industry is the basis of all material and national prosperiy. Its highest purpose is the elevation and ennobling of Agriculture through the higher and broader education of men and women engaged in its pursuits. The regular subscription price of the American farmer is $1.00 per year. IT COSTS YOU NOTHING. From any one number ideas can be obtained that will be worth thrice the subscripion price to you or members of your household, YET YOU GET IT FREE. Call and see sample copy.

Bucklin's Arnica Salve.

The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by W. A. Schreiter.

Notice.

Having closed up business in Red Lake Falls, I desire that all persons indebted to me call and settled on or before Nov. 1st. with L. Jenson my agent. All accounts must be settled on or before Nov. 1st. or they will be put into the hands of the collector.

J. C. HEDLER.

Homeseekers Excursions.

On September 9 and 23 and October 14, 1890 the agents of the Chicago, Burlington Railroad, at all stations, will sell "Homes eker's" Excursion tickets to all principal land points in southern Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Arkansas, Indian Territory, Texas, New Mexico, Colorado, Wyoming, Utah, Idaho, Montana, South and North Dakota, Northwestern Iowa, Minnesota, Tennessee, Louisiana, Alabama and Mississippi, at a very low rate for the round trip, good for return within 30 days from date of sale. For further information apply to any ticket agent of the "Burlington," or write to W. J. C. Kenyon, St. Paul, Minn.

Our customers [illegible] praise of St. [illegible] have [illegible] than [illegible] are the best.—Berry Bros., [illegible] For sale by W. A. Schreiter.

Mr. John Keown, the worthy postmaster at Keown, Allegheny County, Penn., says: "Chamberlain's Cough Remedy sells better than any other." The reason of this is because it can always be depended upon. Let any one troubled with a severe cold give it a trial and they will find that the first dose will relieve the lungs and make breathing easier, and that its contiuued use will free the system of the cold. The promptness and certainty of this remedy in the relief and cure of colds, has won for it many sincere friends and made it very popular.—For sale by W. A. Schreiter.

THE

WISCONSIN CENTRAL LINES
NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD LESSEE

RUNS

Fast trains with Pullman Vestibuled Drawing Room Sleepers, Dining Cars and Coaches of latest design, between Chicago and Milwaukee and St. Paul and Minneapol.

Fast train with Pullmant Vestibuled Drawing Room Sleeping Dining Cars and Coaches of latest design between Chicago and Milwaukee and Ashland and Duluth.

Through Pullman Vestibuled Drawing Room and Colonist Sleepers via the Northern Pacific Railroad between Chicogo and portland, Ore.

Conveniete Trains to and from Eastern, Western, Northern and Contril Wisconsin points, affording unequalled service to and from Waukesha, Fond du Lac, Oshkosk, Neenah, Menasha, Chippewa Fall, Eau Claire, Hurley, Wis., and Ironwood and Bessemer, Mich.

For tickets, sleeping car reservations, time tables and other information, apply to Agents of the line, or to ticket Agents anywhere in the Unitsd States or Canada.

S. L. Ainslie, Gen. Man., Milwaukea.
J. M. Hansford, Gen. Traf. Man. St. Paul.
H. C. Barlow, Traffic Man. Chicago.
Louis Eckstein, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, Chicago.

In conjunction with the Erie System operates Fast Vestibuled Trains between Chicago and the Atlantic Seaboard. you may travel in the most Elegant and complete Pullman Vestibuled Trains ever constructed and save $1.50 to Buffalo and Niagara Falls, $2.00 to New York $2.35 to Albany and Troy, and $3.00 to Boston and New England Cities.

No rival line offers the advantages of a system of throuh first and second-class day coaches and Pullman Dining cars chicago to New York.

It is the only line operating pullman cars to Boston and New England via Albany.

Entire trains are lighted by gas, heated by steam. Pullman dining cars run through in either direction.

Pullman chair and sleeping cars to columbus, O., and Ashland, Ky., Daily.

No extra charge for fast time and unsurpassed accommodations afforded by these luxurious train.

CAPTAIN BRAND

OR

THE PIRATE SCHOONER.

A TALE OF THE SEA

PART II.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

PEACE AND LOVE.

It was a delightful breakfast with a merry party at Escondido, as all sat under the wide, cool piazza in the shade, with the sun throwing his slanting rays through the vines and clusters of purple grapes, and through the orange-trees, where the yellow fruit was fast losing its fragrant dew. All the men once more in summer rig, and the ladies in flowing muslin and tidy caps.

"My dear," said Piron to his wife, "we have lost one of our guests, Colonel Lawton; he went away at daylight this morning, and left a message to me and compliments to you all, that business of importance which he had forgotten, demanded his immediate return to Kingston."

There was no sorrow expressed by the lady or her fair sister, and even the men treated it with indifference, except Mr. Burns, who remarked as he snapped a toothpick in twain that, for his part, he was glad the fellow had gone; he didn't like his looks at all though he did make himself so fascinating to the beautiful widow who sat next him.

As the party rose from the breakfast-table to get ready for a stroll down to the mill and around the plantation, one fair woman's hand was placed with a confiding, friendly clasp in that of Mousieur Burns, and then as a graceful girl reached up to pull down her great flat straw-hat from the post, Paddy Burns kissed her on the forehead, and she returned it, too, as if she knew how to perform that ceremony even before people. Mr. Reefer Mouse had some thoughts of getting jealous and calling Mr. Burns out, at ten paces, ship's pistols, and all that sort of thing; but the round, red-faced gentleman kissed him too, declaring the while, as he held him aloft, that he was first-rate kissing—that he was! nearly as good as mademoiselle, which quite disarmed Tiny's wrath, and then he followed the damsel's delicate steps, and tripped away with her down the valley.

Harry Darcantel exchanged a nod—not of defiance—with Paddy Burns, as much as to hint that those were not dangerous kisses—oh! not at all—and passing his hand over his brown moustache, he followed the couple before him. Yes, Harry, Tiny's legs will get tired soon, and he will be hungry, and come back to Bunoa for luncheon; while you will be putting aside the coffee-bushes, and imploring mademoiselle to keep her straw-hat about her lovely face; and not get tanned by the sun. And when she turns her humid eyes towards you, you begin to believe the sky is never so blue as those eyes!

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

SNUFF OUT OF A DIAMOND BOX.

Another week rolled on. They were all sitting over their dessert at their last dinner at Escondido, for they were all going to leave old Clinker in the morning.

"Clinker," said Piron, "you told me yesterday that you had a note from Colonel Lawton, saying he would not take passage in the brig with us to New Orleans, as his business obliged him to leave before we we could sail?"

Clinker choked out something like "Yes," as if it were the last sound a body could sigh with three or four hundred tons on his back.

"I'm glad to hear it, Piron; for your military friend didn't enlist my fancy at all, and I don't believe any more of his patriot service than I do in Clinker's earthquake. That colonel is a baste; and if my words prove true, I'll lave a thousand pounds to old Clinker there."

Paddy Burns's words did prove true; and old Clinker was with him when he gave a quake the earth had nothing to do with, it being entirely of an apoplectic nature; but he got the thousand pounds nevertheless.

"For once in your life, Burns, I agree with you; and if that military man went to shoot grouse with me in the Highlands I'd tramp behind him, and keep both barrels of me gun cocked. The—— take his black wig and his green eyes!—and he passing himself off for a Scot, too! Tut, mon!"

"By the way, Clinker," said Piron, during a pause in the conversation, "If the colonel is not going with us I must take him back his magnificent snuff-box which he forgot when he left us so suddenly the other morning. Here it is, with the letters of his name on it in brilliants. I thought it too valuable to send by one of the blacks, and I kept it to carry myself."

How singular it was that the colonel should have forgotten his royal treasure! Keep your wits about you, Captain Brand, or one of these days you will be forgetting your pistols.

"Given to him by a connection of his family, was it, Paddy? Weel, mon, let's take a peench for the honor of Sackveel Street, and then push it along to Meester Darcantel."

The doctor was sitting in his calm, grave way, listening to their disjointed words—like dried nuts dropping on the ground—from the shriveled lips of Clinker; but as he abstractedly puts his fingers in the box and turned his eyes languidly as he pushed down the lid, he gave a bound from his chair—with the box clutched in his left hand—with a jar of the room and table that even made Clinker believe the forty year earthquake had come before its time.

Standing there with his tall, majestic figure, like a statue of bronze, his right-arm poised with clench arm aloft in a threatened attitude; his dark, grizzled locks bristling above his head; the black eyes flaming with inhuman light, as if prepared to crush, with the power of a god, the pigmies around him, he said in a deep, low voice, which made the glasses ring and shudder—

"Who owns this bauble?"

"It belongs to a Colonel Lawton, who has been staying here," exclaimed Piron, quickly and hurriedly.

"What sort of man?" came again from those terrible lungs, without relaxing a muscle of his frame.

"A square-built, tallish fellow, of about feefty, with greenish blue eyes, a black wig, and a glorious sapphire ring on the only finger of his left hand!" roared Burns and Stewart together.

Again came the jar of the earthquake to make the building, table, glasses and all shake, as Paul Darcantel strode with his heels of adamant out of the sala, and to the veranda; then a bound, which was heard in the room; and after five minutes' stupid silence Banou appeared.

The buckra gentleman had torn rather than led his master's barb from the stable, and scarcely waiting for a saddle, had thrown himself like an Indian across his back. There!—his master might hear the clattering of the hoofs up the steep.

"The mon's daft—clean daft mon! Be me scowl, it's the only pair of eyes I iver wouldn't like to look at over me saw-handled friend, Joe Manton! He's taken the box with him!" crackled Clinker.

But that was the last that Paddy Burns or Stewart or Clinker ever saw of man or box. Piron rose and listened to the sound of the receding hoofs from the veranda; and when he resumed his place, his lips were sealed for the night. He saw, however, and the rest of them heard a great deal about the man and the box in the time to come.

Paul Darcantel urged the noble horse on; the animal seemed to understand what was expected of him, and dashed on like the wind, never a shy nor a snort. The grey streaks of dawn were just appearing in the east, when the tall man put up his horse and strode on toward the port.

In the meantime a dull, heavy-sailing brigantine might been seen slowly sagging past Gallows Point and the Apostle's battery, when, creeping on by the frowning forts of Port Royal, she held her course to sea.

Very different sort of a craft from the counterfeit brigantine with clean lean bows slipping out from the Tiger's Trap one sultry evening before a hurricane, which went careering, with a sea hound after her, down to the Garrote Gorge. Different kind of a crew, too, and Captain Brand must have remarked the contrast, with his keen, critical, nautical eye—that is, if he chanced to sail in both brigantines, as there is much reason for believing he did—with great disgust, on board the dirty, dumpy old ballahoo now just clear of Drunkenman's Key, and heading along shore for Helshire Point, bound for St. Jago de Cuba.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

LILLIES AND SEA WEED.

By day and night, under sun or moon, in breeze or calm—by the resounding shore—on the rippling water—in saloon and grove, picknicking and boating—under vine or awning—all around in the whirling waltz, the measured contra-danza—amidst the tinkle of guitar or trill of piano, the rattle and crash of the full band on board the frigate—gently rocking on the narrow deck of the Rosalie, or down in the brig of teak—there was ever a white arm linked in the arm of blue—now timidly, then with a confiding pressure—now a furtive look of blue eyes into dark—then a fixed, steady gaze from the brown to the light—here a palpitating pause, and then the blue arms wound around the waving stem—two white arms clasping with a passionate caress, the neck of the wee—and, yes! the Lily floating on the white cheek of the pond had been caught by the strong weed, and with the reacting tide was going out to sea! Ay, the sailor had won the maiden!

But while the Lily rocked hither and thither on the pond, with its blend leaves and petals of blue, and its pliant stem in danger at every tide, did the fond mothers watch it from the bank? That they did, thinking of the time when they were lillies of the pond themselves, with no fears of danger near! But at last it came, and, like blooming flowers they swung to and fro in the rain, dropping a tear or two from their own rosy leaves—more in dewy sorrow than in fear—and waiting for sunshine. Bending their beautiful heads of roses the while, one toward another, peeping out with their dark violet eyes and listening as the wind shook them, with a tremble of apprehension, and clinging hopefully to the straight support on which they reclined.

By day and night, in burning sun, with not a drop to drink, and in the sultry night with no morsel of food to eat—through the searing sands in the streets and lanes, down by the quays—to every vessel in the crowded barbor—in every hotel and lodging-house in Kingston—up and down Spanish town—away off to Port Royal—occasionally going on board the frigate for gold, then on shore again—in ribald wassail and drunken dance, gaming houses especially, and low crimping houses, maroon and negro huts, and wretched haunts of vice—scattering gold like cards, dice, rum, and water—no end to it—in large yellow drops, too—and still striding on, questioning, gleaming with those revengeful eyes—never resting brain or body, without drink or meat—went Paul Darcantel.

Oh, Paul! that cowardly villain saw you from the very moment you took that pinch of snuff out of his blue enamelled box! Ay! even before, when you walked your mule slowly up the broken road, while a goaded barb was curbed back in the gloomy forest till you had passed, with his rider's fingers in his waistcoat pocket. And in all your ceaseless wanderings by day and night, that now timid, terror-stricken villain was following you. Dodging behind corners—under the well-worn cloths of monte banks—in the back room of pulperias—hiding in nests of infamy! Everywhere and in all places steering clear of you!

Oh, Paul! what a deceived man you are!

And while you are doing all this just turn your eyes out to the calm spot off Montego Bay, where that leaky old brigantine is bobbing about. The dirty, surly capitano kicking and beating the hands from taffrail to bowsprit—particularly one great tall fellow, without a hat and with but a few dry thin hairs to shield his skull from the scorching sun; abusing him, as he puffs a cigarrito, for being the most idle skulk on board! But he—the scoundrel,—laughing with a hollow laugh up the sleeve of his filthy shirt, with never a dollar in his belt, or an extra pair of trousers in the forecastle, with bare feet, and still, cold eyes, now turned to green—eating nasty jerked beef and drinking putrid water—never sleeping for vermin—kicked and cuffed about the decks!

But yet he smiled with a fiendish satisfaction, Paul, for he had escaped you, and was bound for St. Jago de Cuba! From there he would charter—steal, perhaps—a small boat, and run over to the Doce Leguas Keys, where there was ten thousand pounds in mildewed gold! If nobody has discovered it—which was not probable—and he—the scoundrel—would gather it up in bags, and slink away into some other part of the world!

You must be very quick, Captain Brand, for the leaky brigantine does not sail so fast as did the pirate schooner; and your ancient compadre, Don Ignacio, is just out of prison. His old, fat, banana wife is very sorry for it, but that's none of your business.

And you, Doctor Paul! Don't you pity that flying, dirty wretch, with his mutilated hand, and soul-beseeching gaze out of those greenish, frozen eyes, where a ray of mercy never entered, but whose icy lids fairly crack as your shadow stamps across them?

No! not a ray of pity or mercy for the infamous villain; not even a twitch of the little finger of his bloody, mutilated white hand! No! not the faintest hope of pity! He shall die in such torments as even a pirate never inflicted on a victim:

But you are worn out, Darcantel; your prey has escaped you. The people think you mad, as you are, for revenge; and though your stride is the same, and your frame still as nervous as a galvanized corpse, yet flesh and blood cannot stand it. Go on board the Monongahela and talk to that true friend whose counsel you have ever listened to since you were rocking in your cradel, or take that noble, gallant youth in your arms and console him—for he needs consolation—and think of the mouse who gnawed the net years and years ago.

Well, you will, Paul Darcantel; but before you do, you will step into that little jeweller's shop and buy a trifle for old Clinker there, out at Escondido. You want a ring, the finest gem that can be found on the island of Jamaica. There it is—its equal not to be bought in the whole West India Islands, or the East Indies either.

"I gave a military man an ounce for the setting alone, but the sapphire-looking stone may be glass. He was going to sail the next morning in a Spanish brigantine for St. Jago de Cuba, and wanted the money to pay his bill at the lodging-house adjoining. The senor might take it for any price he chose to put upon it."

What made that old dealer in precious stones and trinkets turn paler than his old topaz face as he yelled frantically for his old Creole wife? The senor had seized the ring as he broke his elbows through the glass case which contained the time-honored jewelry, and dashed a yellow shower of gold ounces over the floor of the little shop, smashing the glass door of that, too, in his exit!

Paul Darcantel whirled and spun around the corners and along the sandy streets till he reached the landing, moving like a water-spout clearing everything from his track. There he sprang into the first boat he saw, seized the sculls, despite the shrieks and gesticulation of the old nigger whose property it was, and who jumped overboard with a howl as if a lobster had caught him by the toe, and who paddled into a neighboring boat, where, with the assistance of another ancient crony, they both left off volley upon volley of shrieks which alarmed the harbor, while the boat went shooting like a javelin toward the men-of-war.

However, those old stump-tail African baboons found a gold ounce in their boat after it had been set adrift from the American frigate. What a jolly snapping of teeth over a tough old goose stuffed with onions that night, with two respectable colored ladies and a case-bottle of rum beside them! You can almost sniff the fragrant odor as it rises, even at this distance. I do, and shall, perhaps many a time again, in lands where stuffed geese and comely colored ladies abound.

CHAPTER XL.

PARTING.

There had been a small party on board the Monongahela the night before to bid the commodore good-bye—old friends of both parties. The Pirons, Burns, Stewart, Stingo, and Jacob Blunt. Clinker was not there, for he never went where it was damp, and if he got musty it must be from mildew on shore.

"Cleveland," said Piron, quietly, "while the ladies and our friend are getting into the barge, come down with me to your cabin. I wish to have a parting word with you."

So they go down.

"Now, my dear friend, you have seen as well as I how wildly those young people are in love with each other. So has my wife and her sister; and, indeed, my sweet Rosalie seems more in love with him than our niece. I have not had the heart to put a thorn in the path of their happiness, and God grant it may all come right. But, Cleveland, you know that we came from an old and noble stock, where the bar sinister has never crossed our escutcheon, and I cannot yet make up my mind to an immediate engagement. This our niece has consented to—— Stop, Cleveland! hear me out. I do not, however, carry my prejudice to an absurd extent, nor have I spoken on this subject to the girl, and only to her mother and my wife; but I wish you to explain the way we feel, in your own kind manner, to your friend's son. Say to him what a trial it has been to us—how we all love him"—he pressed his handkerchief to his eyes—"and after he has learned all, if he still persists in urging his suit when the cruise is over, he shall have our consent, and blessing. Time may work changes in both; and meanwhile I shall not mention the matter to our little Rosalie, as we fear for the consequences."

"Spoken like a true father and a noble gentleman, my dear Piron! I have thought as you and your excellent wife do on the matter; but, like you, I have not had the courage to give even a hint of warning to Henry. I shall, however, break the matter gently to him, and send my coxwain for his father also, whom I have not seen for a week, and who, they tell me, has been raging about Kingston ever since he run away from you at Escondido. His son loves him devotedly; and a word from him will do more than I could say in a lifetime."

"The ladies are in the barge, commodore," squeaked Midshipman Mouse, as he popped his tiny head into the cabin.

"Very well, sir. And tell Lieutenant Darcantel that I wish to see him to-morrow morning before church service. Come, Piron,"

On the lower grating of the accommodation ladder stood the commodore with his first lieutenant as the barge moved off.

"I am heartily obliged to you, Commodore Cleveland," said Jacob Blunt, "for your kindness to me; and if Mr. Hardy will permit, I'll give the boats' crew a glass of grog for their trouble in towing the old brig."

Certainly! Jacob Blunt knew what was proper under the circumstances, and liked a moderate loss himself after a hard night's work as well as the lusty sailors in the boats, and the youngsters, Rat and Martin, who steered them.

Finally, old Jacob Blunt, master, again in full command of the brig Martha, with Mr. Binnacle Binks, cutting the anchor forward! all sail made, sheets home, and everything ship-shape, with a fresh, steady landwind, and a light gig towing astern, went steering out to sea, bound to New Orleans, by way of the Windward Passage.

At the first ray of sunrise the gig's line was cast off; and with the waves breaking over her, those four old sons of Daddy Neptune bared their tattoed arms—illustrative of ships, anchors and maidens—and bent their bodies with a will toward the harbor.

"Take keer, sir, if it's the same to you, or we'll be on that ledge off the Postle's Battery. It looks jist like that 'ere reef in the Vargin's Passage as I was wunce nearly 'racked on, on the Smasher, sixteen-gun brig."

"No fear, Harry Greenfield."

"Beg your parding, Mr. Darcantel, but that 'er wessel you is heading for is that old clump of a Spanish gun-boat; our craft is off here, under the quarter of the Monongaheelee."

"Oh, yes, Charlie; I see the Rosalie."

What made these old salts slew gravely round one to the other, as their sixteen-feet oars rattled with a regular jar in the brass rowlocks, and shut one eye tight, as if they enjoyed something themselves? Probably they were thinking of a strapping lass, in blue ribbons, who lived somewhere in a seaport town long years ago. But yet they loved that young slip of sea-weed, whose head was bent down to the buttons of his blue jacket, his epaulet lopsided on his shoulder, his sword hilt downward, and his brown eyes tracing the lines of the ash grating where pretty feet had once rested, while he jerked the tiller ropes from side to side, and his gig went wild by reef and point toward the Rosalie.

When the gig's oars at last, in spite of her meandering navigation by her abstracted helmsman, trailed alongside the schooner, and while her crew were cracking a few biscuits and jokes on deck, with the sun high up in the little craft's masts, her captain hurried down to his small cabin, and changed his rig for service on board the frigate.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Children's Feet.

It is the part of the wise mother, then, to carefully watch the feet of her little ones during their tender years. "Keep the head cool and the feet warm," is a faithful admonition especially adapted to the children. With many, woolen stockings should be avoided altogether, especially when they cause itching or sweating of the feet. Perspiration will be absorbed by the wool, making of the stocking a cold, clammy mass, more to be dreaded than the most tempting "mud puddle." Equip such children with firm, substantial cotton hose, providing woolen anklets or leggins, if thought best, and their feet will be warm and dry, except for outward wetting. When this happens, whether in child or adult, the wet garments should be promptly removed, the feet bathed—if possible with lukewarm water—and vigorously rubbed till dry. Where this is promptly done, dry shoes and stockings being put on, there is little danger of serious results. Care in keeping the feet warm and dry is very much better than muffling the throat and neck. Too often it happens that a thick muffler is laid aside, the child steps into a draught of air, the perspiration is checked, and deadly lung or throat troubles follow; whereas, had the throat been but lightly covered, the strong circulation of the blood naturally keeping it abundantly warm, with the extra attention devoted to the feet and lower limbs, where the circulation is least vigorous, there would have been no dangerous maladies.

While the child's foot is immature, with yielding bones and tender muscles, it is of greatest importance that care be exercised in all that pertains to the shoes, if serious trouble in later life would be avoided. The shoe should fit properly, being neither too large nor too small, and the child should be taught to walk firmly and squarely upon it; as soon as there are signs of the heel "running over," the aid of a cobbler should be invoked, or a new pair procured. More is meant by the "fit of a shoe" than is often realized. Unless the hollow of the foot is fitted, there is a constant tendency to break down the arch, making the foot flat and the owner miserable; and the graceful countour, once destroyed, can never be wholly regained. In mature life, except in case of disease or debility, the muscles may be trusted to maintain the true proportions.—Good Housekeeping.

Thoughts From Spurgeon.

When a man has a particularly empty head, he generally sets up for a great judge, especially in religion.

Every donkey thinks itself good enough to stand with the king's horses.

There's more in good preaching than taking a text, and saying, firstly, secondly, and thirdly.

The worst wheel in the wagon creaks most.

Proud looks lose hearts, and gentle words win them.

The preacher who measure himself by his looking glass may please a few silly girls, but neither God nor man will long put up with him.

Those who do as Rome does should go to Rome and show their colors.

None but a very silly sheep would wear wolf's clothing.

They who teach godliness should practice cleanliness.

He that makes himself a sheep will soon find that the wolves are not all dead.

If you let your neighbors put the calf on your shoulders, they will soon put on the cow.

The way to avoid great faults is to beware of small ones.

Better offend your acquiantance than lose your character.

Learn to say, "No," and it will be of more use to you than to be able to read Latin.

Never be security for more than you are willing to lose.

Paul was willing to bear stripes for his Master's sake, but he did not forget to tell the magistrates that he was a Roman.

Scrubbing spots out of leopards is nothing at all compared to leading a downright obstinate man.

The Same Old Story.

Carleton Stebbins, a farmer eighty years old living near Palmer, Mass., was swindled out of $2,800, by strangers. A well dressed young man called upon Stebbins one day, ostensible to buy his farm. The price was agreed upon, and the man returned next day to see a distant part of the land. He took Stebbins in his carriage and on the road a man on foot stopped them and engaged in conversation. He claimed to be a Southerner and did not like Yankees, as they had swindled him out of large sums of money by tricks at cards. The stranger offered to show how the trick was played, and the fellow in the carriage with Stebbins was then induced to try his luck and won $2,800. Stebbins was then told that before he was paid his winnings he must show that he was worth a like amount. He drove with the sharpers to Palmer, where he drew $1,400 from a bank, and at Monson he drew $1,400 more. Returning to Stebbins' house the would-be purchaser of the farm took a tin box from the carriage, put Stebbins' money into it and gave it to the old man, telling him to keep it till he would come and take the farm. After the men had gone Stebbins found that box contained nothing but a few sticks.

PECULIAR INFATUATION.

Different Methods of following the Injunction "Love One Another."

Do men ever fall in love with each other?

Women do. Not long ago a young woman in New Jersey was married to a youthful laborer on her father's farm. Sometime afterward it was discovered that the husband was a female; the young wife refused however, though earnestly entreated to by her friends, to give up her chosen consort. The strangest part of the discovery was the fact that the bride knew her husband was a woman before she was led to the altar.

If men do not exhibit this strange infatuation for one of their own sex, they at least oftentimes give evidence of the fact that they love one another. There are many instances on record where one man has given his life for another. There are many more instances where men have given life to another.

It is a proud possession—the knowledge that one has saved a precious human life. Meriden, Conn., is the home of such a happy man. John H. Preston, of that city, July 11th, 1890, writes: "Five years ago I was taken very sick, I had several of the best doctors, and one and all called it a complication of diseases. I was sick four years, taking prescriptions prescribed by these same doctors, and I truthfully state I never expected to get any better. At this time, I commenced to have the most terrible pains in my back. One day an old friend of mine, Mr. R. T. Cook of the firm of Curtis & Cook, advised me to try Warner's Safe Cure, as he had been troubled the same way and it had effected a cure for him. I bought six bottles, took the medicine as directed and am today a well man. I am sure no one ever had a worse case of kidney and liver trouble than I had. Before this I was always against proprietary medicines but not now, oh, no."

Friendship expresses itself in very peculiar ways sometimes; but the true friend is the friend in need.

Grammar in Prison.

A writer in The Boston Transcript describes the school in the state reformatory at Concord, Mass. The greater part of the men gladly avail themselves of its privileges, though others make all kinds of excuses, and one boy bruised his right forefinger regularly for two weeks in order to be exempt from writing.

Of course the school is not without its dunces. One boy could never remember the word "conjunction." The teacher labored in vain till one day he had an inspiration. The close proximity of the institution to Concord junction gave him an idea.

"Now, Tom," he said, "you can remember conjunction by thinking of Concord Junction."

Tom's face beamed. At last the bothersome word was conquered; he should never forget it.

Weeks went by, and the incident passed out of mind. The old difficulty was no longer heard of. One night visitors entered the room, and the teacher called up Tom to analyze a sentence. All went well till he came to the word "and." Then he stopped, and a cold chill crept over the teacher.

Tom glanced at the floor and then at the ceiling. Suddenly his face brightened.

"And—and," said he, "and is a Concord Junction.

Bridging the Straits of Dover.

Experiments, it is announced, are being conducted in the channel near Folkestone for the purpose of testing the geological structure of that portion of the sea bed upon which it has been proposed to construct a bridge across the straits. The engineers engaged are M. Georges Hersent and M. Renaud, marine hydrographic engineer. The examination of the French coast is finished, and so far as it has proceeded on the English side of the channel it has, it is stated, proved satisfactory. The sea bottom is declared very solid, and suitable for the proposed structure.—Echo.

Mount Etna is in a state of eruption. The whole eastern side of the mountain is covered with a thick layer of cinders.

When baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had children, she gave them Castoria.

Natural gas is being developed at Nanabeen, N. S. W.

BURNS AND SCALDS are cured by
St. Jacobs Oil used according to
DIRECTIONS with each BOTTLE,
also SORE THROAT
WOUNDS, CUTS, SWELLINGS
THE CHARLES A. VOGELER CO., Baltimore, Md.

BAD NEWS FOR LA CROSSE.

Dr. Frank Powell the Noted Physician and Surgeon to Settle Permanently in St. Paul.

HIS REMOVAL REGRETTED.

One of the greatest misfortunes that could happen to La Crosse, seems to be measured out for visitation upon the city in the near future. We refer to the permanent removal from the Gateway city of Dr. D Frank Powell, who has decided to make his future home at St. Paul. * * * * * * *

As we said above, the removal of Dr. Powell will be a public calamity and a loss to the city that is practically irreparable. The doctor has lived in La Crosse ten years, and his wide-spread fame as a physician has made this the medical Mecca of thousands and thousands of persons from the surrounding country, and with the doctor's removal to St. Paul, the Gateway city losses a scource of revenue that can be replaced by no other man.

The DAILY PRESS knows that the city of St. Paul will provide a wider field of practice for the doctor, but it deplores his removal as a public loss and one that will be felt by nearly every one in the city.—La Crosse Daily Press.

One of the suspected robbers that boarded the Adams Express car of the Sandusky train a few weeks ago near Tiffin, Ohio, has been captured at Bellefontaine. His name is J. F. Smith, formerly night operator for the road at Urbana, Ohio.

Vice Admiral Fremantle, on board the flagship Boadicea, has sailed from Zanzibar for Vitu, where he will co-operate with the German forces in inflicting punishment upon the natives who recently massacred a number of Germans at that place.

John Barber of Lima, Ohio, eloped with a disreputable woman known as "Big Sadie," leaving a wife and six children. Mrs. Barber followed the couple to Ransom, Mich., where she was stabbed to death by her husband's paramour. The woman has been arrested.

TO DISPEL COLDS,

Headaches and Fevers, to cleanse the system effectually, yet gently, when costive or bilious, or when the blood is impure or sluggish, to permanently cure habitual constipation, to awaken the kidneys and liver to a healthy activity, without irritating or weakening them, use Syrup of Figs.

The population of Texas is 2,232,220, an increase of 640,471.

If you wish to do the easiest and quickest week's washing you ever did, try Dobbins' Electric Soap next washday. Follow the directions. Ask your grocer for it. Been on the market 24 years. Take no other.

Shun peculiarities of dress which attract the vulgar.

A Strong Foundation

In health has the constitution fortified and built up with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. The entire physical structure nourished and sustained through the agency of assured digestion and assimilation, regularity of the bowels and liver restored, the nerves invigorated, nightly repose sound, and health yielding—these are among the results of its use. Malaria, rheumatism, kidney complaint, are annihilated by it.

The organs of sense—Newspapers that are not muzzled.

INFANTILE SKIN AND SCALP DISEASES CURED BY Cuticura

EVERY HUMOR OF THE SKIN AND Scalp of infancy and childhood, whether torturing, disfiguring, itching, burning, scaly, crusted, pimply, or blotchy, with loss of hair, and every impurity of the blood, whether simple, scrofulous, or hereditary, is speedily, permanently, and economically cured by the CUTICURA REMEDIES, consisting of CUTICURA, the great Skin Cure, CUTICURA SOAP, an exquisite Skin Purifier and Beautifier, and CUTICURA RESOLVENT, the new Blood Purifier and greatest of Humor Remedies, when the best physicians and all other remedies fail. Parents, save your children years of mental and physical suffering.

Sold everywhere. Price, CUTICURA, 50c.; SOAP, 25c.; RESOLVENT, $1. Prepared by Potter Drug and Chemical Corporation, Boston. Send for "How to cure Skin Diseases."

Baby's skin and scalp purified and beautified by CUTICURA SOAP.

Kidney pains, backache, and muscular rheumatism relieved in one minute by the CUTICURA ANTI-PAIN PLASTER. 25c.

SCOTT'S
EMULSION
Of Pure Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites
Of Lime and Soda.

There are emulsions and emulsions, and there is still much skimmed milk which masquerades as cream. Try as they will many manufacturers cannot so disguise their cod liver oil as to make it palatable to sensitive stomachs. Scott's Emulsion of PURE NORWEGIAN COD LIVER OIL, combined with Hypophosphites is almost as palatable as milk. For this reason as well as for the fact of the stimulating qualities of the Hypophosphites, Physicians frequently prescribe it in cases of

CONSUMPTION,
SCROFULA, BRONCHITIS and
CHRONIC COUGH or SEVERE COLD.

All Druggists sell it, but be sure you get the genuine, as there are poor imitations.

We've Led the World

So long on Rubber Boots that some people forget we also make Shoes. We've the largest Rubber Mill in the world operated exclusively on Rubber Shoes. Send for our catalogue and you will have a picture of it. We make 30,000 pairs of shoes daily. Made of best materials, by skilled workmen, and over correct lasts,

WOONSOCKET

Rubber Shoes fit your feet and give you best service.

BEWARE of inferior Rubbers sold under other brands. Insist on Woonsocket Rubber Boots and Shoes. They're the best. Sold everywhere. Manufactured by the WOONSOCKET RUBBER CO. PROVIDENCE, R.I. Send for Catalogue.

CANYON JOE'S DEATH.

My recollections of Canyon Joe recall a unique character, whose brief career and violent end are not recorded in the annals of the great and growing West. He was an exotic—a child of the East—but he grew to manhood among the rough frontiersmen, and the howl of the coyote, the shriek of the destructive blizzard, were as music to his ear. His nature was gradually transformed to a toughness that matched well the hardy cactus and the stunted chaparral. He was called Canyon Joe because he war found in a canyon by some trappers and adopted by me. He had strayed from a wagon train on its way to Utah and got lost. At this time he was 14 years old, and possessed of an amount of nerve which, by assiduous cultivation, developed his capacity to cut a wide and crimson swath in any community that gave him the slightest provocation. When I met him it was several years after the war. I was with a mining party prospecting in Arizona. We were in that bleak but picturesque mountainous region where old Geronimo so long defied the United States army. There were fifteen of us in the party, including a half-breed scout and several old miners, who knew the country pretty well. One evening we had struck our camp on the mountain side, near a small stream, and put out the usual pickets for Indians, when we heard a commotion and very soon the scout came walking in, leading a horse that had a rider. Tha horseman was Canyon Joe, and he seemed to be very happy to find white men with plenty to eat and drink. He had two Indian scalps, freshly taken, dangling at the pommel of his saddle, and he explained that he killed the redskins in an open, square fight. The miners present did not credit this and rather suspected that he slipped upon them unawares. His face looked as though it had been tanned for ages by a hot sun and scoured by dirt scooped from an alkali plain. Although only medium-sized, he seemed to possess a wiry frame and great physical strength and endurance. His eyes were small and piercing black, set very close together, and separated by the bridge of a very thin, acquiline nose. He asked permission to camp with us that night, and agreed to act as a guide for the party during the rest of the trip. It was considered better to utilize him than to have him at large—perhaps stirring up the Indians against us—so we gave him a cordial reception. After supper we sat before a small fire in front of the tent, and passed the bottle. Canyon Joe drank freely, and began to narrate some of his exploits. The half-breed scout, a tall, athletic man, sat, or rather reclined, on the ground by the fire opposite Joe. He kept his eyes fastened on the latter and listened attentively, but never ventured a remark.

Canyon Joe related the following adventure: "It was along in the sixties that I agreed to act as scout for a party of nine men who wanted to explore the country now known as the Black Hills. These men were a tough lot, some gamblers, some miners and all good on the shoot. I was barely 20 years old and looked younger, so when I offered myself as a scout they laughed at me and called me a kid. But when they made inquiries and learned that I had been nearly everywhere in the West and killed about as many Indians as the next one, they accepted my services. If they had not I intended to ask one or two out to settle for calling me a kid. These men somehow knew that plenty of gold was in the Black Hills, and had a map that some miner gave them on his deathbed. We started up the Little Big Missouri river in a large yawl boat, with plenty of provisions and firearms. It was slow work pulling up the river, but in ten days we had gone quite a distance. We hain't been bothered by Indians and I thought it mighty queer. It was in the fall of the year and the weather was fine. At night we tied our boat to the bank and camped on shore. We always took precautions, though, against the Indians, for fear of a surprise. Just about sunset one day I got ashore as usual and walked up the bank to select a place to camp a while the party rowed along in the boat. I had not gone far when I heard a volley of firearms. I rushed to the river and saw tha boat a few hundred yards above, but no one was pulling at the oars. Every man in it was dead or dying. A crowd of Indians on both sides of the river were firing into the boat, and some were swimming out to bring it to shore. The attack was a complete surprise, and I have no doubt the first volly killed them all. I wanted revenge, but single handed I could not attack them. Luckily I had my rifle and ammunition with me or I would have starved to death. I knew I was far from any settlement, and that if I escaped the Indians I might meet death in some other form. I crept swiftly from the river, aided by the approaching night, and had gone about half a mile when a big Indian stood right up in front of me. I was a surprise to him, and I know he was to me, but I drove my hunting knife into his breast so quick that he tumbled back without a groan. He was a stray Indian belonging to the band who did the murderous work at the river. For three days I kept up a brisk pace, and managed to kill some game, which I ate raw. Then fatigue began to tell upon me.

"On the fourth day I trudged along weary and dispirited. I knew the Indians were not giving chase, but I didn't know how soon I might meet another band. I came to a shallow stream and waded across. As I started to climb the bank I was struck by the appearance of the soil. I scratched about a little and found that gold was plentiful. For a while I forgot my fatigue and drove two sticks down to indicate my claim. I slept near by that night, and when I awoke the sun was up, and two rough-looking white men, armed with rifles, were standing near me. I tried to get up but I feel back exhausted. The men came forward and asked me how I came there and what my business was. I explained my escape from the Indians, and then they treated me better. They picked me up and carried me to a small house some distance away. When they entered the house an Indian woman, who proved to be the wife of one of the men, assisted them to put me on a few skins spread upon the floor. A half-breed girl, tall and handsome, about 17 or 18 years old, the daughter, was in the house, and paid scarcely any attention to my entrance. I was feverish from hunger and wanted to gorge at once, but they give me food in small quantities. For two days I did not stir from the house. In my delirium I must have talked about the claim I had staked, for as soon as I became lucid I noticed that a change had taken place in the people. I resolved to play delirious in odrer to discover their plans. I raved and talked incoherently and finally cried out: 'I'll come back and work my claim.'

"The two men were present. They looked at each other and one said: 'That settles it; if he doesn't die of fever he must never leave here alive. He'll have a thousand people here in less than a month.'

"The other responded cooly: 'Yes; we'll do him up if he happens to get well. I am sorry we didn't leave him to die the morning we found him.'

"Well, that talk settled me. I resolved to escape that night. I could not because I found that I was a prisoner. The Indian woman remained awake all night at the door. In the daytime they frequently left me alone, and then I managed to get at the food and eat enough to strengthen me. The second night the husband of the Indian woman kept watch. The next day I was naturally sleepy and slept soundly until noon. Then I awoke and raved in a weaker tone of voice, as if I were gradually sinking. The half-breed girl, I noticed, was sleeping all the afternoon. But before sunset she awoke, and the mother said to her in Sioux language, which I understood: 'Tacoma, the stranger may dieto-morrow. To-night you will have to watch him.'

"Tacoma replied: "Oh, why not get rid of him to-night? We do not wish to be bothered with him further.'

"They then discussed in detail my chances of getting well. The girl picked up a large hunting knife and looked at me. Her mother motioned her to put the knife down. I believe I would have been settled then and there but for the girl's mother. I made up my mind to escape that night, no matter if I had to fight my way out. It was a bright moonlight night, and I felt that I stood a good chance to have a rifle bullet put in me at long range in making a dash for liberty and life The girl took a seat near the door and the others soon fell asleep. My rifle was standing in the corner and my large hunting knife was on the pallet. Why they left the knife so near me is a mystery, unless they expected me to use it when eating jerked beef. Tacoma's death watch on me began at 9 o'clock. For two hours she scarcely moved in her chair and appeared deeply engrossed in thought. I remained perfectly quiet and at long intervals groaned feebly, as if my end were near. Between 11 and 12 o'clock she rose and looked at me. I dared not open my eyes. Then she turned and walked stealthily to the door, and to my great joy, opened it and went out. In a second I was on my feet, secured my rifle and had my knife ready for action. With cat-like tread I reached the door and stepped out into the broad glare of the moonlight. The girl was nowhere to be seen. I had resolved to level my rifle and threaten to shoot her if she made an outcry or tried to prevent my escape. I turned to the right of the house and reached the corner, intending to run down to the creek. Tacoma reached the corner from the other direction just as I did, and we collided. She seized me and gave a loud yell. It was all too sudden for me to reflect, I forgot she was a woman and plunged my knife to the hilt in her bosom. As she fell I sprang over her body and made for the creek. I heard the two men coming and knew that I could not escape them by flight. I got behind the banks of the creek and shot them both down before they came within fifty yards of me. I do not know to this day whether they are dead.

"During the night I fled to the scuth and when daylight came I was many miles away. If that girl Tacoma had not——"

Canyon Joe's sentence was never finished. The half-breed scout who had listened intently, without moving a muscle, to the cold-blooded recital sprang over the fire that separated him from Joe and buried his large hunting knife to the hilt in the heart of the man who killed the beautiful Tacoma. Joe expired without a groan and before any of us could interpose the scout had cut his scalp clean from his head.

Tacoma was his assassin's sister, and he explained that Joe murdered her in cold blood in the day time in order to make away with the gold dust in the house. The grief-stricken father pursued and was shot, but not killed. His brother, who was with him, was killed. The half-breed scout was absent when the murder occurred. He vowed vengeance against the man who murdered his sister, but had no clue by which to discover the name or identity of the assassin Canyon Joe had drank too much and lost his discretion, or else he would never have related the story. His body was left on the mountain to the vultures.

His Error.

Peddler (in a conciliatory tone)—I presume those lovely children in the yard are yours madam?

Madam (frigidly)—I have no children.

Peddler—Pardon me; since I see you more closely I see that the brats could not possible be yours.—Judge.

BRIDE OF THE AUTUMN SUN.

O, golden rod! sweet golden rod!
 Bride of the autumn sun;
Hash he kissed thy blossoms this mellow morn,
 And tinged them one by one?

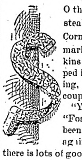
Did the crickets sing at thy christening,
 When, in his warm embrace,
He gave thee love from his aunt above,
 And beauty, and cheer, and grace?

He brightens the asters, but soon they fade;
 He reddens the sumach tree;
And the clematis loses its sunny bloom,
 But he's true as truth to thee.

Scattered on mountain top or plain,
 Unseen by human eye,
He turns thy fringe to burnished gold
 By love's sweet alchemy.

And then, when the chill November comes,
 And the flowers their work have done,
Thou are still unchanged, dear golden rod,
 Bride of the autumn sun.
—Sarah K. Bolton, in Ladies' Home Journal.

UNCLE BILL'S BET.



O there has been more stealing down to The Corner, has there?" remarked Uncle Bill Perkins to me, as I dropped in the other evening, to make the old couple a call.

"Yes," I replied. "Foster's store has been broken open agin, and he says there is lots of goods gone. Two or three houses have been entered when the folks were away, and each of them lost something. There is a thief hanging around in these parts, and he is growing bolder every day."

"Ain't they got no track of who it is?"

"No, there ain't any clue yet."

"Do they mistrust anybody around these parts?"

"I haven't heard that they do."

"Cur'us, ain't it? Now, if old Harry Tuffts was a-living, I should feel sure that it was him. He was the master old thief that ever lived in these parts. He was so cunning that although you were sure he had done a thing, it was hard work to fasten it on to him. They used to say that he was the Evil One hisself, and if he wasn't he must have been a near relation. He would make a bet that he would steal something right afore your face and eyes, and in spite of you he'd do it. But the master game I ever knowed him to play was on Nancy here."

"Bill Perkins!" she disgustedly exclaimed.

"What do ye want, old woman?"

"I want yer ter hold yer tongue, you pesky fool!"

"Can't think of doing that, Nancy.

"It alwus gets her dander up when I get speaking about that scrape," he resumed. "I don't wonder at it—getting fooled arter she had been warned about what that old scamp had bet he'd do.

"You see, one day in planting-time it chanced to be rainy, and I went down to The Corner on an errand to the store. I didn't want to go, but Nancy sed she had broke her big darning needle, and couldn't mend my feetings till I got her one. She's the master woman to send to the store arter driblets.

"She can never think of only one thing at a time, but it's always something. I used to tell her that her memory was as short as our old brindle cow's tail, which Major Hall's dog bit off.

"There was half a dozen men sitting round, and arter talking about the weather and any news that might be stirring, we got to speaking of Harry Tuffts and his habit of taking things, which he had in such a quiet, easy way; and jest as we were fairly at the subject, who should come in but Harry himself.

"'We was jest a-talking about you,' said Eben Tasker, who was sitting on a bag of meal chewing a stick, as he was always doing.

"'Keep rite on,' said Harry, as he hitched up to the counter. "I'll warrant it wan't any good yer were saying of me; but, like the Old Enemy, I ain't quite so black as I'm painted.'

"'I don't know about that,' said Eben. You know that they say that you can beat him picking up things that ye find laying round loose.'

"Harry didn't seem to mind this hit at all. He was used to having his evil doings flung at him, and kind of took pride to have people think how light-fingered he was.

"'I'd like to have ye coming round my house trying to pick up anything,' said I. 'Thar ain't a thing that you can carry off from thar.'

"'I can carry off anything—from thar that I want.'

"'I'll bet you $1 thar's one thing you can't steal.'

"'Done!' said Harry. 'Put up your money. Here's mine.'

"The store keeper took it and put it in his pocket, and then Harry said:

"'What is thar up thar that I can't get?'

"'Nancy's night-cap,' said I.

"All the men set up a shout, for they thought Harry was cornered.

"I'll have it,' he said; 'and you may tell the old woman about the bet, if you want to, in the bargain.'

"'Of course I shall tell her,' said I, 'so that she will look out that you don't get yer hands on it.'

"When I got home I told Nancy about the bet, and she was mad as a broke-up setting hen. She said I ought to be ashamed of myself for talking about her before a whole store full of men, and that nobody but a fool would have done it. As for old Harry Tuffts, she said that if he came around where she was, she would scald him, if there was a drop of hot water in the teakettle.

"For some days we see nothing o' him, but the story got round, and a'l the women in the neighborhood plagued Nancy about it. This made her madder and madder, and she kept me in hot water from morning till night.

"It was about three weeks afterward when, one night, after Nancy and I had turned in, and I was nigh about asleep, I was brought to my senses by Nancy's elbows a-digging into my ribs. I started up, thinking the house was afire. She was a-screeching at the top of her voice, and seemed in a terrible fit about something.

"'What is it, old woman?' I asked, rubbing my eyes. 'Can't ye let a feller alone when he's tired and sleepy?'

"'Don't you hear that, Bill Perkins? There's a fox close to the house. Thar! can't you hear him bark? He's arter the old goose who's a-setting here under the winder on eleven eggs, and nigh about ready to hatch. Get yer gun, Bill, and shoot him if you can. If you can't hit him—and nobody expects you will, for you can't take aim any better than a sheep—perhaps you may scar him off. Hurry up, or he'll have the goose afore ye get out of bed.'

"I could hear the fox bark, and Nancy was right in saying he was close to the house. She was on her feet, and I started for the kitchen arter my gun.

"But I hadn't taken two steps afore the old goose gave a terrib'e squawk. The fox had got hold on her and no mistake, and I see that if we would save her life thar wasn't no time to get the gun.

"She had laid and sot rite under the bed-room winder, and in a jiffy Nancy was to it and throwing up the sash, stuck her head out, yelling 'scat!' at the top of her voice.

"Jest then thar was a black shadow riz up a-tween us and the moon, which was shining as bright as day. The old goose stopped squawking on her nest, but another one took it up

"Nancy felt something grab her by the top-knot of her nightcap, and for a second it seemed as though she would be pul'ed through the winder. Then the strings give way, and a man went legging it out into the road, a-swinging it above his head, jest for all the world like an Ingin who had jest taken a scalp.

"'Confound you, Nancy Perkins!' said I, 'can't you tell a man from a fox? Yer nightcap is gone, and I've lost my dollar. That's old Harry Tuffts flying down thar like a spirit. To-morrow he'll show it to everybody in town. I only hope it's a little bit cleaner than common.'

"Nancy was as mad as a bedbug as she crawled in a-tween the sheets, and she never op'ned her head till morning."—Saturday Night.

A Glacier Dam Bursts.

The Marjelen lake, which lies at the foot of the Eggischhorn, in the upper Valais, had burst the glacier dam which lay across the valley, and spreading over the glacier had poured a black mass of mud, stones and broken ice into the Rhone below. Fortunately there was little water in the river at the time, otherwise the consequences might have been very calamitous for the people of the upper Valais. A peasant who was close to the lake at the time declares that the scene was most terrible and indescribable. When the ice dam gave way the vast mass of water came tumbling out, sweeping away the huge fragments of the glacier, with the rocks upon it, tumbling into the crevasses, bursting them up in turn, and rising over the glacier, in gigantic waves, again to carry all before it.

Just at the end of the glacier the valley had narrowed into a little defile, while the face of the glacier was some hundreds of feet high. The water seemed to have tunneled under the ice, which attacked above and below, gave way at last with a deafening crash, while the flood hurried down the mountain side into the Rhone. The lake was nearly 8,000 feet above the sea level, and usually discharged its surplus water by subterranean channels, occasionally bursting its ice barriers, as on the present occasion. The cantonal government are constructing an overflow canal, which it is hoped will put an end to these periodical outbursts.—Swiss Vaterland.

An Eastern Mind-Reader.

The eastern aspirant for the shoes of Washington Irving Bishop as a mind-reader is Chauncey Palmer, a medium-sized, black-eyed and black-haired man without the fragility of physique which distinguished Bishop and characterizes Johnstone, the Chicagoan. "I do not believe," said Mr. Palmer, recently, that any man living can tell what another is thinking of without some sort of contact with him. I am able to read the thoughts if I hold one end of a silk cord, the other end of which the thinker holds. I can also reproduce a drawing which an artist will look at in my presence, I being blindfolded, of course, and even one which the artist thinks of if I can touch his forehead. Mr. Palmer has friends who say he is equal to any of Bishop's or Johnstone's feats, and say he is will to demonstrate it under any proper surroundings. He is "resting" now. Mr. Palmer was a spectator at one of Bishop's exhibitions about four years ago, and at once declared his confidence that he "knew how it was done." Since then he has been going and doing likewise.—From the New York World.

Whiting, wet or dry, will give to glass a fine polish.

I have suffered for two weeks with neuralgia of the face, and procured immediate relief by using Salvation Oil.
Mrs. WM. C. BALD,
433 N. Carey St., Balto, Md.

A Chicago lover bet his girl that he could tell what she was thinking of. He thought she was thinking of him, but she wasn't; it was about Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, which had just cured her of a dreadful cough.

Tolerance is the only real test of civilization

FOR SICK HEADACHE TAKE ALLEN'S Iron Tonic Bitters. All genuine bear the signature of J. P. Allen, Druggist, St. Paul, Minn.

Marie Jensen weighs 160 pounds and wears a No. 3 shoe.

Life Is Misery

To thousands of people who have the taint of scrofula in their blood. The agonies caused by the dreadful running sores and other manifestations of this disease are beyond description There is no remedy equal to Hood's Sarsaparilla for scrofula, salt rheum and every form of blood disease. We know that it has cured the severest cases and it will benefit all who give it a fair trial. A book containing statements of cures sent free.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.
100 Doses One Dollar

SICK HEADACHE
CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.
Positively cured by these Little Pills. They also relieve Distress from Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Too Hearty Eating. A perfect remedy for Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Coated Tongue, Pain in the Side, TORPID LIVER. They regulate the Bowels. Purely Vegetable. Price 25 Cents.
CARTER MEDICINE CO., NEW YORK.
Small Pill. Small Dose. Small Price.

Cures in 1 TO 5 DAYS. Guaranteed not to cause Stricture. Mf'd only by the Evans Chemical Co. Cincinnati, Ohio. Trade Mark
I prescribe and fully endorse Big G as the only specific for the certain cure of this disease.
G. H. INGRAHAM, M. D. Amsterdam, N. Y.
We have sold Big G for many years, and it has given the best of satisfaction.
D. R. DYCHE & CO. Chicago, Ill.
$1.00. Sold by Druggists.

PENSIONS Old or new Law Bounty and pay under new decisions FEES CONTINGENT. MILO B. STEVENS & CO., Attorneys 1419 F St., Washington D. C. Branches, Chicago, Detroit, and Cleveland Three Years army service. 26 Years practice.

Tutt's Pills
This popular remedy never fails to effectually cure
Dyspepsia, Constipation, Sick Headache, Biliousness
And all diseases arising from a Torpid Liver and Bad Digestion.
The natural result is good appetite and solid flesh. Dose small; elegantly sugar coated and easy to swallow.
SOLD EVERYWHERE.

PATENTS obtained. Fees moderate Information free J. R. Littell Washington D. C

LADIES can have smaller feet Solid comfort. Pamphlet free. Sample pkg., 10c. The Pedine Co., New York.

CANCERS Cured without the use of the Knife at the Iola Cancer Infirmary. Iola, Waupaca, Co. Wis. Write for book of treatment.

PENSION JOHN W. MORRIS, Washington, D.C. Successfully Prosecutes Claims. Late Principal Examiner U. S. Pension Bureau. 3 yrs in last war, 15 adjudicating claims, atty since.

FAT FOLKS Reduced 15 to 25 pounds per month by harmless herbal remedies. No starving, no inconvenience. Confidential. Send 6c. for circulars and testimonials. Address, DR. O. W. F. SNYDER, 243 State St., Chicago, Ill.

WEAK MEN and WOMEN can quickly cure themselves of Wasting Vitality, Lost Manhood from youthful errors, &c., quietly at home. 64 page Book on All Private Diseases sent FREE (sealed). CURE GUARANTEED. 30 YEARS' experience. D.H.LOWE MEDICAL INSTITUTE Winsted, Conn.

MOTHERS. "Dr. Snyder's KIDNEY BALSAM" cures Enuresis, BED-WETTING. Price, $1 per package, sent post-paid, with full instructions. Circulars and testimonials for 6c stamps. Address DR. SNYDER, Lock Box 451, Chicago, Ill.

SINGLE DOUBLE 30 TULIPS ASSORTED COLORS
We will send the above to any address on receipt of $1, or 14 for 50 cents, post-paid. Catalogue FREE. L. L. MAY & CO., ST. PAUL, MINN.

PENSIONS The Disability Bill is a Law. Dependent widows and parents are included. If you wish your claim quickly and Successfully Prosecuted, write to JAMES TANNER, late Commissioner of Pensions, Washington, D. C.

CHICHESTER'S ENGLISH PENNYROYAL PILLS
RED CROSS DIAMOND BRAND.
Safe and always reliable. Ladies, ask Druggist for Diamond Brand, in red, metallic boxes, sealed with blue ribbon. Take no other. All pills in pasteboard boxes, pink wrappers, are dangerous counterfeits. Send 4c. (stamps) for particulars, testimonials and "Relief for Ladies," in letter, by return mail. Name Paper.
Chichester Chem'l Co., Madison Sq., Phila., Pa.

IMPORTANT NEW DISCOVERY.
"VASELINE"
THE BEST SOAP for the Skin
Toilet Soap Ever Made.
A perfect pure and neutral soap combining the EMOLLIENT and HEALING properties of VASELINE. If your druggist does not keep it, FORWARD 10 CENTS IN STAMPS and we WILL SEND a Full SIZED CAKE BY MAIL, POSTAGE PAID.
CHESEBROUGH MANUFACTURING CO.
24 State Street, NEW YORK.

N. W. N. U. 1890 No. 44.

BARLEY RYE BUCKWHEAT
SEND LARGE SAMPLE TO WOODWARD & Co.,
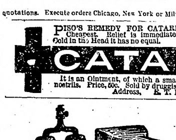
GRAIN COMMISSION,
406 and 408 Corn Exch., MINNEAPOLIS.
THEY WILL WIRE YOU CASH◆◆◆◆
◆◆◆◆◆ OFFER AT YOUR STATION
☞ Consign your wheat to them and get TOP PRICE.

Ely's Cream Balm Cures COLD IN HEAD
THE CURE FOR CATARRH COLD IN HEAD HAY FEVER DEAFNESS HEADACHE ELY'S CREAM BALM 50c
RELIEVES INSTANTLY.
ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren St., New York. Price 50 cts.

"Thrift is a good revenue."
Great Saving results from cleanliness and SAPOLIO: It is a solid cake of scouring soap. Try it in your next house-cleaning and be happy.
CHEAP COMFORT
Can be secured by the small investment in one cake of SAPOLIO when you have a house or kitchen to clean. From the paint to the pots and pans, and including the windows and floors, it is the very best labor-saving soap for scouring and cleaning. All Grocers sell it.

THE VAN DUSEN-HARRINGTON CO.,
GRAIN COMMISSION.
MINNEAPOLIS. - DULUTH.
SELL BY SAMPLE.
Best Prices. Prompt Returns. Write for quotations. Execute orders Chicago, New York or Milwaukee.

PISO'S REMEDY FOR CATARRH.—Best. Easiest to use. Cheapest. Relief is immediate. A cure is certain. For Cold in the Head it has no equal.
CATARRH
It is an Ointment, of which a small particle is applied to the nostrils. Price, 50c. Sold by druggists or sent by mail. Address, E. T. HAZELTINE, Warren, Pa.



IRRIGATION PUMP.
Water Steam Vacuum Pumps, for Irrigating, Stock, Drainage, Coffer Dams and Mining. The latest and most economical pump made. Will raise 75,000 gallons water with one bushel coal, and elevate it 10 to 150 ft. high. We handle Well Drilling Machinery, Steam Plows, which turn 6-14-in. furrows at one round. Send four cents in stamps for mailing catalogue, to
WESTERN MACHINERY CO.
1412 17th St., DENVER, COLO.

THE NEWS.

Entered at the post office at Red Lake Falls as second-class mail matter.

Official Paper of the County.

Official Paper of the City.

JAS. MEEHAN, JR. Editor and Prop.

Hon. S. G. Comstock,

FOR CONGRESS, 5th DIST.

Drop a ballot into the alliance slot and see some pure demagogues go into office.

We don't believe the Norwegians want any more than the endorsement of Knute Nelson, "the Little Norwegian," to satisfy them that Hon. S. G. Comstock is the proper man to send to congresss.

When you talk to an Alliance speaker named Jennings, about the ability of Mr. Holston, he will say "well, he is as good as Frank Ives." This same Jennings, when he was a republican, voted for Mr. Ives, and now the disgruntled office seeker is about to add insult to injury.

The Puget Sound Lumberman lies before us just having arrived from far off Seattle. The Lumberman is what its name implies, and is a semi-monthly magazine devoted to the interests of the class it represents. The initial number gives promise of great future excellence.

E. M. Walsh, the competent clerk of court, will no doubt be re-elected. This is conceded by all parties. The democratic candidate is making no effort for election, which leaves democrats the privilege to vote as they desire, without effecting their candidate's chance. Many of Ed's democratic friends should therefore vote for him.

In choosing county officers this year we have gone outside of any party lines and feel at liberty to condemn any party fealty that requires a man to vote for a rascall or even an honorable man who is incompetent. The responsibility attached to a greater number of the officers in a county like Polk, is indeed worthy the reflection and attention of every thinking man. For this reason we feel constrained to put in office only men who have proven themselves thoroughly capable, honest and efficient Do the voters want anyone incapable, dishonest or inefficient?

Gunder Krostue, the candidate for legislature from this district is a prosperous farmer and should be elected. Gunder is one of the boys who fifteen years ago worked for P. & J. Meehan on the "old Wisconsin river," and a trusty man he was, ever ready to perform his duty. Gunder hasn't forgotten his old acquaintances and we feel assured that when Red Lake Falls wants a favor which Gunder can give us through the legislature he will be willing and ready to extend a helping hand if for no other reason than the renewal of our former associations. We ask all our friends to vote for our mutual friend, Gunder Krostue, to represent us in the next legislature.

The Crookston Times says we are supporting every republican on the ticket. We don't know Czar McKenzie, the sole judge of democracy of this section, but if the man really means what he says we will have to call upon the democratic readers of the NEWS to note what a notorious old liar Autocrat Mc the Dictator is. And as we haven't left the ranks of the democracy but simply support the best men, his statement that we were paid for leaving is without foundation. We are doing just what McKenzie started to do when he advocated the election of P. J. McGuire for state auditor and Mat Cornelius for county auditor. McKenzie says we're treacherous. So was McKenzie until he found that trenchery was not the better part of financial valor. We don't know that the democrats have paid McKenzie for this flop, but we may assume that it looks very much like it.

Prof. Thos. Casey is another of the efficient officers who has proven himself capable of attending to the office of superintendent. Mr. Casey is not driven to such extremes as to seek recommendations from remote people in remote portions of the globe—but on the other hand the peodle of Polk county who are acquainted with him can testify to his ability. He is a man who can go into an educational gathering and be a credit to the people of Polk county. The schools, through his energy and educational ability, are in a flourishing condition. The voters know what Mr. Casey can do, they have watched his actions the past year—not a murmur of complaint has been heard—therefore why remove a competent man who has given good satisfaction for a man, an utter stranger; a man ashamed to publish his certificate; whose only qualifications for office are his far-fetched recommendations which any school boy from a foreign state could procure. Voters, men who have an interest in our American common school system—the bulwark of our liberty—be not deceived but cast your vote for Prof. Thos. Casey. Don't let our our school system suffer because this man was not nominated on your ticket. Cast education outside of politics. There is a higher sphere for educational thoughts—and for the advancement of those thoughts it is necessary to have a competent man at the head of the schools—therefore vote for Supt. Casey.

No Secrecy for the Ballot.

The alliance are crying against ring rule—still they work ring rule in its most arbitrary form. The leaders have endeavored to force the farmer by resolution to vote the straight ticket. Whether the majority agrees to this or not, the minority are endeavoring to force them into the yoke.

Deliberation.

Now that the time of election is near at hand it behooves every citizen, no matter what the color of his politics, to think well before casting his ballot. This is the highest privilege given to the American citizen—and it is just and proper to everyone individually that he looks well into the character of men seeking office defore he votes for them. Think well, weigh a man's capability; look into his past career as regards his public and private acts. If you find him wanting scratch him off your ticket. In county affairs it matters not to what party a man belongs so long as he has the necessary qualifications to handle the office to which he aspires. In this year of 1890 there are a great many official pretenders upon the tickets; men who were nominated because they were schemers or because their party did not stop to consider their fitness for office. Men have been nominated on the various tickets who are a disgrace to their party and we advise no man to vote a straight ticket. Independent action is wise; and consider and meditate before you place a man in a county office who is not capable of fulfilling the trust reposed in him by the people.—R. J. Montague, by his long experience in the legal profession; by his experience in office has proven himself worthy the confidence of the people of Polk county. If he is elected he will not be a disgrace to the office of county attorney. It behooves every man who has a regard for good county government to vote for and elect Mr. Montague to office. The best legal authority in this section of the state has said it would be an everlasting disgrace to the voters of Polk county to elect the alliance nominee to the office of county attorney and the farming community, if they have any regard for their future, will see to it that the nominee on the alliance ticket is scratched. Scratch him decause he hasn't the legal ability to handle the office; scratch him because he is not honest in his intentions. In conclusion, scratch him because you don't want him in office—the personification of official repugnance.

A Preventive For Croup.

The discovery of preventive for croup, is one of the most important made in recent years. Since first discovered it has been used in many cases and with unvarying success. Its being within the reach of all makes it the more valuable. It is only necessary to give Chamberlain's cough remedy freely as soon as the first indications of croup appear, and it will dispel all symptoms of the disease. Full directions are given with each bottle. For 50 cents at Schreieters.

The New Discovery

You hear your friends and neighbors talking about it. You may yourself be one of the many who know from personal experience just how good a thing it is. If you have ever tried it, you are one of its staunch friends because the wonderful thing about it is, that when once given a trial, Dr. King's New Discovery ever after holds a place in the house. If you have never used it and should be afflicted with a cough, cold or any Throat, Lung or Chest trouble, secure a bottle at once and give it a fair trial. It is guaranteed every time, or money refunded.

Trial Bottles Free at W. A. Schreiter's

The First Step.

Perhaps you are run down, can't eat can't sleep, can't think, can't do anything to your satisfaction, and you wonder ails you. You should heed the warning, you are taking the first step into Nervous Prostration. You need nerve Tonic and in Electric Bitters you will find the exact remedy for restoring your nervous system to its moral, healthy conditon. Surprising results follow the use of this great Nerve Tonic and Alterative. Your appetite return good digestion is restored, and the liver and kidneys resume healthy action. Try a bottle. Price 50 cents, at Schreiter's.

Bucklin's Arnica Salve.

The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by W. A. Schreiter.

Dr. A. T. Doll, who has been in the practice of medicine at North English, Iowa, since 1863, says he often prescribes Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea remedy, because he knows it to be reliable. For sale by W. A. Schreiter.

Affectionate Trotters.

"People often say that horses cannot think—well, maybe they can't," writes the author of "Life with the Trotters," who then tells two anecdotes which contradict what "people say."

Rarus, the wonderful trotter, bought by Mr. Bonner for $30,000, was not inclined to be affectionate. He had made the fur fly from two dogs, but when a Scotch terrier pup was placed in the stable the two became strong friends. The admiration and love that they showed for each other was almost human.

The dog one day, being left in the stall while the horse was at the blacksmith's shop, made havoc of everything there trying to get out. The horse also was uneasy and acted as badly as the dog, so that from that time the two were kept together. When Rarus was exercised or trotted, Jimmy, the dog, watched him with as much interest as his owner did. On returning to the stable the horse would bend his head to receive on his mouth the dog's kiss.

When Rarus was led out of the stable to be shown to the public, Jimmy, jumping on the hostler's shoulder, would leap on the horse's back and there stand, his head high in the air, his tail out stiff, barking furiously.

Jimmy went with Rarus to Mr. Bonner, in whose city stable there was a bull terrier, "monarch of all he surveyed." One day Jimmy attacked the bull terrier, and his yelps soon indicated that he had been rash. Rarus, hearing the cry of distress, rushed from his stall, and had he not been restrained, would have made short work of his friend's foe.

Bay, another trotter, was bred on a farm where an old gray horse ran with him in the field. Such was the strong attachment between the two that when Bay was sent to a trainer's he refused to eat and thrashed around wildly in his stall. On returning him to the farm and his old gray horse he became as quiet as a lamb. From that time the two chums were never separated, even on the track.

Discovered by Accident.

"The most valuable thing about this whole car," said an electric engineer, "was discovered more or less by accident. It shows how difficult it is even for expert inventors to foresee the effects of their work. You know heretofore the great trouble has been to get electric motors which were strong enough to start the car without losing an enormous amount of force. It is easy enough to keep a car moving after it is once started. The trouble is the dead weight at the beginning. The motor on this car can be disconnected from the axles by turning a lever, so that the motor keeps going even after the car is stopped. Accordingly, when the car is stopped, I turn off the electricity, and the motor keeps moving from its own momentum. It is usually necessary to start the car again at once, and so I connect the motor with the axle before I turn on the electricity. The momentum of the motor starts the car and gets it well under way before it is necessary to turn the electricity on. That's one of the most valuable features of the whole thing, and yet it may be classed almost as a discovery."—New York Sun.

Mr. Conkling's Favorite Word.

A small box, with a combination lock, was found among the effects of the late Roscoe Conkling, and as no will appeared among his papers it was suggested that this box might contain the desired document. The administrator did not care to break the box, and every possible word which Mr. Conkling might have used in setting the combination was used on the lock, but without success. At last his daughter said that her father was especially fond of words which contained the letter O pronounced with its long sound. She said her father would frequently utter the word Rome, dwelling particularly on the vowel, and asserting that the word was one of the most fascinating in the language for him to hear. She suggested that he might have used that word in making the combination. That word was tried; it proved to be the right one, for the combination yielded to it, the box was opened and within was found the short and simple will which Mr. Conkling had written many years before.—Chicago Herald.

Robbing Country Towns.

The country towns most subject to visitation by burglars are those which lie on the line of several railroads, and are thus in communication with many different places by various routes.

The "cracksmen" arrive from the city by the latest train at night, after the residents are most of them asleep. They have four, five or six hours for their nefarious work, and the earliest trains in the morning take them away with their plunder before the good people of the town have fairly waked up.

It is also to be noted that towns thus abundantly provided with railroad facilities are likely to be prosperous and therefore attractive to thieves.

In all places so situated the police should be particularly watchful at and above the various railway stations. Indeed the inhabitants really need just as much police protection as the dwellers in our large cities.—New York Ledger.

Silk Weights and Measures.

The size or substance of a silk thread is usually estimated by deniers. The ounce troy and the ounce pois de marc of Lyons, by the latter of which silk is tested in France and Italy, are equal in weight, but are differently subdivided. The ounce troy is divided into 20 pennyweights of 24 grains each, making 480 grains in the ounce; the ounce of Lyons, pois de marc, is divided into 24 drams, which, multiplied by 24, equals 576 deniers. The denier is, therefore, one-sixth less than the grain troy. The English reel is 818 bouts of 44 inches and equals 1,000 yards. The French, 400 ells, or 475 meters, equals 520 yards. The standard of silk measure is about 400 yards; that length of a single filament from China cocoons will weigh 2 deniers, and from French and Italian 2¼. A 10 denier silk will, then, be the combined thread of four or five cocoons.—New York Telegram.

Choosing the Lesser Evil.

"I am sorry for you, Willie," said the surgeon as he got his implements and bandages ready, "but a part of the finger will have to be amputated. I trust it will be a lesson to you, and that when the next Fourth of July comes you will let the dangerous toy cannon"——

"Doctor," said Willie, setting his teeth hard together, "just say nothing and saw bone."—Chicago Tribune.

Ananias Outdone.

Grizzly—What awful liars those real estate boomers up in Washington are!

Johnson—What have they been doing now?

Grizzly—Why, when I was up there I saw them teaming with horses, just as we do here; but here is a boom pamphlet that says "the entire country teams with game."—West Shore.

A Metropolitan Tragedy.

The unwritten tragedies of New York would transcend in interest the history of Napoleon. The other day Mrs. Bergen and her husband and the ailing baby went to Rockaway Beach for an afternoon airing. As they alighted from the train at the beach, Mrs. Bergen looked down at the face of her baby and saw that it was dead. She stifled the moan that rose unconsciously from her stricken heart, because she was afraid the authorities would take her child away. Neither did she tell her husband the awful news. All the afternoon she carried the little inanimate body around on the sands, choking back the tears, answering her husband's gay chatter with sobs. But she did not reveal her awful secret. Now and then she stole a wistful look at the white face resting against her shoulder. At last the long afternoon's agony was over and they reached the door of the now desolate home. As they entered the house the stricken mother gasped out:

"Tom, Nellie's dead!" and fell upon the floor with the child in her arms.—Ernest Jarrold in New York Journal.

Insincere Expressions of Grief.

A hearty grief is seldom expressed in "ahs" and "ohs" and "alases." "Alas!" is particularly objectionable. It is only mawkish, affected sentimentalists who make use of it. It does not belong to the vocabulary of the heart. One often meets with it in dramatic literature, for it is of the stage, stagy. When the heroine of a tragedy is informed that somebody has poisoned or put a few inches of cold steel into her lover or brother or papa she shrieks, swoons, and on coming to a little, "alas!" is generally her "cue"—the keynote of a tedious complimentary notice of the virtues of the deceased. But we venture to say that no reader ever heard the exclamation from the lips of a sincere mourner. "Helas!" from which we derive our word, is, to be sure, a common ejaculation in France, but then all the French world is a stage, and all the men and women more or less players. Even in his extremest misery a Frenchman is always dramatic, and when he dies a violent death, either by his own hand or anybody else's, it is usually in fifth act style.—New York Ledger.

Squirrels and Owls Fight.

The home of these owls has been from immemorial time in an aged elm that graces the front yard of one of the old mansions in our town. In a hollow caused by the breaking off of a large limb the owls have taken up their abode. Three winters ago some squirrels took possession of the same tree and waged continual war with the owls. The latter maintained their rights and the contest was hotly carried on until, incautiously, the owls took a fancy to spend the day out a-visiting. The squirrels seized their opportunity and stopped the hole full of sticks, twigs and even branches of considerable size, which they drove in so firmly that all the storms of the succeeding winter did not dislodge them. For that year, then, the owls gave it up and made their home elsewhere, but they are back at this present writing, and matters are going on as of old.—Christian Union.

The Sun's Goal.

Dr. Ludwig Struve's determination of the motion of the solar system in space, as published in the memoirs of the St. Petersburg academy, is derived from comparisons of the positions for 2,500 stars recorded in catalogues of 1755 and again in 1855. These show that the solar system is moving toward a point in the constellation Hercules. The motion for 100 years, it would have been seen from an average sixth magnitude star, was 4.36 seconds of arc, a rate corresponding to an actual velocity of about thirteen miles a second. Combining his results with those obtained by other astronomers, Dr. Struve finds the point toward which the sun and its family of planets are speeding to be still in the constellation Hercules, and the mean velocity to be fifteen miles a second.—Arkansaw Traveler.

To Circumvent Cyclones.

Ignatius Donnelly is now backing a scheme to circumvent western cyclones. He holds that cyclones are entirely electrical, and suggests that the rails and telegraph wires of the Pacific railways have brought the surplus electricity of the Pacific coast to this side of the Rockies, much to our detriment. He proposes to knock out the cyclones by keeping anchored balloons in the air at a great height, connected with the earth by metallic ropes. The balloons are to be kept supplied with gas by means of tubes. Ignatius thinks that by this apparatus the surplus electricity may be extracted from the air and sent about its business.—New York World.

A Designing Cat.

A Waterville lad tells a story of the remarkable sagacity of a pet cat which he owns. The feline has a great fondness for the flesh of birds and in order to make her quest for the same successful employs a stratagem. Evidently understanding the birds' fondness for angle worms, she collects a number of the same and buries them in the ground. She then takes her place in a convenient place of ambush and when the birds alight to secure their coveted morsel she springs from her concealment and pounces upon them. Many a bird thus falls a prey to pussy's shrewdness.—Waterville Sentinel.

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage containing a power of sale dated April 5th, 1887, duly recorded in the office of register of deeds of Polk connty, Minnesota, on April 8th, 1887, in book 30 of mortgages on page 398 whereby Wilfred Cyr and Emma Cyr, his wife, mortgagors, mortgaged to F. T. Day, mortgagee, the west half (w½) of the south east quarter (se¼) and the south east quarter (se¼) of the south west quarter (sw¼) and lots nine (9) and ten (10) all in section twenty-five (25) in township one hundred and fifty one (151) of range forty-five (45) in Polk county, Minnesota containing one hundred and seventy-four and 25-100 acres, by which default the power of sale has become operative and no action or proceeding at law or otherwise has been instituted to recover the debt remaining secured by said mortgage or any part thereof and there is claimed to be due on said mortgage at the date of this notice, the sum of $87.30.

Now, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of said power, said mortgage will be foreclosed and said premises will be sold at public auction by the sheriff of said county or his deputy on the 11th day of December, 1890, at 10 o'clock a. m. at the front door of the court house in the city of Crookston in said county, to pay said debt and interest and taxes and twenty-five dollars attorney's fees and disbursements allowed by law.

Dated June 1st, 1890,

F. T. Day, Mortgagee.

De Forest Bucklen,
Attorney for Mortgagee,
Crookston, Minn.

Land Office at Crookston, Minn., October 7, 1890.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the register of U S Land Office at Crookston, Minn., on Dec. 6, 1890, viz. Arthur Toupin: hd 12,187, for the w½ se¼ and e½ sw¼ sec 15, tp 150, r 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of, said land, viz,

Damas Lachance Moses Guerard, Philias Descautel, Cyrille Lussier, all of Brooks P. O., Minn.

H. H. Dickmann, register.

Things Worth Remembering.

That it is dangerous to stand near a tall tree or spire during a thunder storm.

That the southwest corner of the cellar is the "cyclone safety point."

That there is no medicine so universally applicable to sickness as fresh air and sunshine."

That blowing out the gas before retiring is funny—to every one except the one who tries it.

That you may swear as hard as you please but it will not remove grease spots.

That the Wisconsin Central is the most popular line between Minneapolis and St. Paul and Milwaukee and Chicago.

That its fast train leaves Minneapolis daily at 6:25 p. m., St. Paul at 7:15 p. m., with through Pullman sleepers, arriving in Milwaukee at 7:27 and Chicago at 9:59 the following morning, serving breakfast in dining car.

That before starting on a trip always get information from some reliable ticket agent, and that nowhere will such information be more cheerfully given than at the city ticket offices of the Wisconsin Central, No. 19, Nicollet House block, Minneapolis, and 162 East 3d st, cor. Jackson, St. Paul, Address letters to Chas. E. Dixon, acting city passenger and ticket agent, St. Paul, F. H. Hanson, Gen. Northwestern Pass. agent, Minneapolis, or Louis Eckstein, Assistant General Passenger and Ticket agent, Milwaukee.

RALPH & BOURDON,

Proprietors of the

CITY

DRAY

LINE.

WOOD & COAL

Anything in our line done

Promptly and at very

Reasonable

Rates.

GIVE US A CALL

TONSORIAL HALL!

N. MORISETTE, PROP.

Everything First Class!

SHAVING,

HAIR-CUTTING,

SHAMPOOING!

Shaving 15 cents.

Haircutting 25 cents.

Main Street, - Red Lake Falls.

Roller Mill "B"

BEST PATENT	$2.25
BEST STRAIGHT	2.00
SECOND "	1.75
FAMILY BAKER'S	1-40
GRAHAM	2.00
RYE FLOUR	2.00
MIDDLINGS	1.00
SHORTS	.55
BRAN	.45
BEST GROUND FEED	.80
2d " "	.65

Fine corn meal per pound, 2½c.

MAJERES BROS.

Proprietor of the

City Meat Market.

A full line of market supplies, such as

BEEF, PORK,
MUTTON, POULTRY
AND SAUSAGE.

A first class meat market where everything is kept as clean as can be.

Main, near 1st at - - Red Lake Falls

JOHN WATSON,

PHYSICIAN & SURGEGN,

Office in residence, Sixth street, Red Lake Falls, Minn. 4-6

VIOLINS, GUITAR, BANJOS' FINEST Assortment, Largest Stock, Lowest Prices, Best Strings for all instrument, assorted to suit, $1,50 per dozen, postpaid. Cash with order. Anything in the music line sent to any part of the United States. Write Allmendinger Piano And Organ Company, Ann Arbor, Mich. Orders from teachers and the professional solicited. Live Agents wanted for our Piano and Organs.

NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD

The New Dining Car Route BETWEEN

WINNIPEG,
GRAFTON,
GRAND FORKS,
RED LAKE FALLS,
ST. PAUL,
MINNEAPOLIS,
DULUTH,
AND ALL POINTS EAST,

The Direct line to
MONTANA, IDAHO,
WASHINGTON TERRITORY,
OREGON, BRITISH COLUMBIA
PUGET SOUND AND ALASKA.

EXPRESS TRAINS DAILY.

To which are attached Pullman Palace Sleeping and Elegant Dining Cars. On overland trains, Emigrant Sleepers Free. The only line to the Yellowstone Park.

All trains daily.

Pullman Palace Sleeping Cars between Grand Forks and St Paul. Dining cars on all trains

Coupon tickets on sale to all points Southeast and West

For further information regarding rates, routes maps, etc. address

CHAS. S. FEE,
G. P. & T. Agt.,
St. Paul, Minn.

J. A. DUFFY
Local A.gt

Green Bay,
Winona
& St. Paul

Railroad. Best and most Direct Line Between

LACROSSE,
WINONA,
Neillsville,
Eau Claire,
Grand Rapids,
Stevens Point,
New London,
Appelton,
Neenah,
Menasha,
Oshkosh,
Fon du Lac,
GREEN BAY,

And all Points in
EASTERN WISCONSIN,
Iron Districts of Northern Michigan and Lake Superior Regions.

Close Connections and Quick Time.

See That Your Ticket Reads Via
GREEN BAY, WINONA & ST. PAUL
Railroad.

S. W. Champion,
Superintendent, Green Bay, Wis.
J. B Last,
Ass't Gen. Pass. Agt., Green Bay, Wis.

$100,000

To Loan on Farms

—AT—

10 pr Cent

Interest. No bonus—no delay, at

THE FIRST NAT. BANK

Red Lake Falls - - - Minn.

FREE LANDS. Homeseekers will find the last of the public domain of agricultural and grazing value along the Great Northern Ry in North Dakota and Montana.

New Towns 100 or more, along the Great Northern Railway Line. Business chances. Write F. I. Whitney, St. Paul, Minn., for Books, Maps, etc. Write now.

Low Rates Settlers on Free government lands along the Great Northern Railway Line in North Dakota and Montana get low rates and fine markets for products.

Hunting, Fishing Finest resorts in America along the Great Northern Ry. Line in Minnesota, Dakotas and Montana. Best climate for health seekers.

Horses, Cattle Montana produces the finest horses and cattle. Free ranges yet in the Mouse, Milk and Sun River Valleys and Sweet Grass Hills.

Health, Wealth In Monta. Free Lands, New Towns New Railways, New Mines, Low Rates. Largest area of good, vacant land.

Sheep Hogs Sweet Grass Hills, Milk and Sun River Valleys, Montana, reached only by the Great Northern Railway Line. The stock raisers' paradise.

Gold, Coal The Regions tributary to the Great Northern Railway Line in Montana produce all the precious and baser metals. New towns and railways are being built.

Milk River Go to the Great Reservation of Montana and get a good free homestead. Low rates and free sleepers on Great Northern R'y Line. Go now.

Herds, Mines. These have made Montana the richest state per capita in the Union Plenty of room for more miners and stock raisers.

Young Man Along the Great Northern Line in Montana are free ranches and pasturage, mines of precious metal iron and coal, and new cities and towns. Now is your opportunity.

Great Falls Surrounded by a fine agricultural and grazing country, close to mines of precious metals, iron and coal possessing a water power unequaled in America, it is Montana's industrial centre.

G. N. R. L. The valleys of Red, Mouse, Missouri Milk and Sun Rivers reached by Great Northern Ry Line. Half rate excursions Sept. 9, 23 and Oct. 14, 1890. Write F. I. Whitney, St. Paul

THE LADIES FAVORITE
THE LIGHT RUNNING
NEW HOME
SEWING MACHINE
THE FINEST WOODWORK
THE BEST ATTACHMENTS
NEW HOME SEWING MACHINE CO ORANGE MASS
CHICAGO, ILL.
28 UNION SQUARE, N.Y.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
ATLANTA, GA.
ST. LOUIS, MO.
FOR SALE BY DALLAS, TEX.

Railroad Time Table.

WAY FREIGHT	LEAVE	PASSENGER	ARRIVE	WAY FREIGHT
	P. M.		A. M.
	8.00	St. Paul,	7:05
	8:35	Minneapolis.	6:35
	8:00	Duluth	7:00
	8:30	Ashland, (pm)	6:30
	3:30 a m	Wadena a m	12:02
	A. M.	....	P. M.
1:00 p m	6:25	WINNIPEG JCTION	9:10	2:00 a m.
2:55 "	7:35	Twin Valley	8:30	11:42 pm
4:22 "	8:22	Fertile	7:14	9:54 "
6·20 "	9:20	RED LK FALLS	6:20	7:47 "
2:00 "	9:40	Crookston	6:00	10:00 am
7:42 "	10:10	Buffington	5:29	5:55 pm
8:30 "	10:55	Grand Forks	4:45	5:00 "
DAILY	P. M.	....	P. M.	DAILY
	12:50	Grafton	2:45
	2:45	Pembina	12:55
	5:30	WINNIPEG, Man.	10:05

All trains daily.

ECHOES OF THE RAPIDS

The NEWS has prepared a grand benefit for its readers. We are desirous of adding new names to our subscription list, and settling up with those already there. A grand inducement is offered in the following proposition: Every person who pays up all arrearages on subscription and one year in advance, will be given a ticket in the drawing of the following articles: Four beautiful steel engravings, valued at from $15 to $20 each, the size being 3½x2½ feet, and one new gig, valued at $20. Each ticket has the chance of winning one of these grand prizes, the aggregate value of which is nearly $100. Not content with the above magnificent offer, the NEWS presents FREE, to its farmer friends who take advantage of the above offer and request it. The American Farmer, a farm magazine. To those who desire one of the very best American magazines at a greatly reduced price, we offer the Cosmopolitan, (if the premium offer is accepted) at $1.50 cents, the regular price being $2.40. You can hardly afford to let this opportunity pass. It is open for a month.

John Labree is over from Thief River Falls to day.

The Sterns family started for Spokane Falls Tuesday.

Frank McGriff reports the arrival of another son at his home.

Pierre Bottireau has been very low but is now recovering.

Miss Poliy Zaiser was over from Grand Forks Saturday, visiting relatives.

Peter Champagne went to Duluth yesterday to live with his parents.

Miss Josephine Lefreniere is teaching the winter term at the Ridge school.

Mr. and Mrs. John Crawford returned to the city yesterday after an absence of five months.

Mr. and Mrs. Cota are entertaining a youngster that put in his appearance last week.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Meyer departed for Minneapolis Tuesday night, there to make their future home.

Miss Mary Brady is engaged to teach the Black River school. Miss Brady seems to be a successful teacher.

Rev. Ig. Balluff has abandoned the Euclid mission till spring months shall make the journay less severe.

Mrs. M. C. Malone and Miss Lillie McCaffrey visited relatives in the city the last of last and first of this week.

Look over our advertising columns, and patronize the firms represented there. They are the live men and those are the ones to stay by.

Louis Berthiaume and family returned to spend the winter in the city. Louis will handle beef which he will ship to Minneapolis.

H. M. Kaus (whose attractive ad appears on the front page of the NEWS weekly) says he is delighted at the thrift of his business.

Mrs. Phil Zeh and Mrs. Hubert Holtzknecht were down from Thief River Falls the first of the week visiting relatives.

Napoleon Marlowe went up to the Red Lake country and returned in six days. Quick trip. You couldn't cross the Atlantic in much less time.

W. P. Crawford took a team Friday and met Messrs. Boyle and McCaffrey and Mrs. Jos. Laurence at Black River, they having come from Crookston.

Mrs. Enright, nee Annie Roark, of East Grand Forks, has been spending a week with her mother north of town. She departed for her home Monday.

W. P. Crawford opens a seven months' term of school in the Raymond district Monday. Will has applied himself assiduously to the study of law during the past three months.

Rev. Father Thomas of Red Lake was in the city yesterday. He came down over the new road and reports it almost finished. This is Father Thomas' first visit to our city—we hope to see him here often in the future.

A Sunday School excursion to Grand Forks Saturday was taken advantage of by a large number of our little people, and some big ones.

We learn that A. B. Champagne, formerly of this place, who recently moved to Duluth, met with an accident last week which cost him one of his hands. He was caught between two cars.

The harvest festival at Gentilly Sunday was attended by all the county political candidates. A fifteen minute speech was granted to each one. The plan was a brilliant one, and carried off the honors of being the principal feature of the day.

Cy Wel'ng'on spoke to a small but appreciative audience at opera hall Saturday evening. His speech bristled with figures of oratory and as an advertisment for the law firm of Erwin & Co. it was a glowing success. He made a few converts by riddling the McKinley bill into shreds.

James Ford, son of John Ford who lives three miles north of here met with a severe accident which nearly cost him his life. While taking a loaded gun out of a wagon it was accidently discharged, the load of shot taking effect in his hip. Dr. Watson was called and removed several pieces of bone from the wound.

A sad accident happened eight miles north on the sand ridge, a boy, name not known, about fourteen years of age was riding on a threshing engine, had on an overcoat which caught in the gear drawing the boy in, crushing his left shoulder Dr. Watson attended, several pieces of bones were taken out, and his recover is doubtful.

The Humpty-Dumpty show Thursday night proved an entertaining one. Fisher, the contortionist and Falando, the juggler are marvellous, and their feats are worth the price of admission. The remainder was weak, but still amusing, and the people went home well satisfied. Fertile people don't know a good show when they see it.

The grand fete at Gentilly Sunday was a success in every particular. Fully four hundred people were in attendance, many of our citizens having participated, They report a most enjoyable time. Political speakers of all parties took occasion to extol their own virtues before the assembly. Several exciting contests were indulged in between popular young ladies of the parish for different articles. The gold chain was contested for by Misses Souvee and Pagie, and won by the former. This alone netted $125. In the evening a drama was played by local talent that met with an enthusiastic ovation by the audience. Over four hundred dollars was cleared for the church, and the fetists broke up rejoicing. The people about Gentilly are especially prosperous this year, owing to a universal good crop of every kind of produce, and their purses teem with glittering shekels. May it ever be so.

Terrebonne.

TERREBONNE, October 27.

Mr. Aleck Moreau of Ontario, and Miss Zelia Marchaud, of Terrebonne, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony Monday, the 27th inst, at this place, by Rev. Louis Feige. Mr. Napoleon Marchaud acted as groomsman and Miss Rebecca Brunelle as bridesmaid. After the ceremony, the happy couple with a few friends, adjourned to Mr. August Moreau's, where a dainty dinner was spread. The evening was passed at Mr. Ovide Moreau's where after partaking of a bountiful feast the time was spent in dancing and other amusements. Messrs. Theophile La Bissoniere, Joseph Baril and Nicholas Majeres were present, and although coming at the eleventh hour enjoyed themselves heartily. The bride received several beautiful presents. Miss Marchand was a general favorite and will be greatly missed by the people of this vicinity. Mr. Moreau, though living across the high tariff line, has many friends here. He is an exemplary young man, and is to be congratulated on his successful wooing of so fair a lady. Mr. and Mrs. Moreau will remain in Terrebonne a few weeks, when they will go to Ontario to live where Mr. Morean is engaged in the lumber business.

I can not see policy, principle or profit for the democrats of Polk county to vote for the alliance candidate for treasurer, who has expressed himself as being in favor of only the alliance ticket, working for only the alliance candidates, and knifing those good democrats who are honest enough to stand on one platform and urge principles which they believe to be right and which they are willing to stand or fall by. Democrats, republicans, citizens of Polk county, you want an honest, efficient, obliging man for treasurer, see to it that you elect him—vote for Ovide Moreau; then your vote will be placed where it will count, it will be cast on the winning side.

NEMO.

Miss Bridget Hillgrove has at last secured a school. She will begin to teach Monday in Emardville. Good girl.

Truth is stranger than fiction—but H. M. Kaus will sell you a pair of fine lady's shoes for $1.15.

P. Nimesgern and I. Poirier had a lively experience Sunday. They were driving one horse hitched to a sulky and approaching the hill leading to Roller mill A. The horse started to run, without the slightest provocation, and this unwonted proceeding on the part of that horse so upset the boys that they became panic stricken. Pete took a header down the steep embankment and rolled nearly to the bottom, while Poirier escaped with less annoyance—merely a foot-and-a-half rent in his trousers to tell the tale. Pale and panting, and with trembling fingers, Pete adjusted the disarranged harness after he had caught the horse, and soon rode off as if nothing had happened. Poirier had gone on ahead.

The Queen Pays All Expenses

The Queens last free Trip to Europe having excited such universal interests, the publishers of that popular magazine offer another and $200 for expenses to the person sending them the largest list of English words constructed from letters containing the three words British North America. Additional prizes consisting of Silver Tea Sets, China Dinner Sets, Golb Watches, French Music Boxes' Portier Curtians, Silk Dresses Mantel Flakes and many other useful and valuable articles will also be awarded in order of merit. A special prize of a Seal Skin jacket to the lady, and a handsome Shetland Pony to boy or girl (delivered free in Canada or United States) sending the largest lists Everyone sending a list of twenty words will recieve a presen send six U. S. stamps for complete rules, illustrated catalogue of prizes, and sample numbers of the Queen. Address The Arnadian, Queen Toronto, Canada.

How Severe Colds are Broken up in Montana.

When we find a medicine we know to possess genuine merit, we consider it a duty, and take pleasure in telling the public what it is. Such a medicine we found Chamberlain's Cough remedy, last winter, when la grippe was prevailing We are satisfied that we warded off severat attacks that were threatening by the use of this syrup and we have since relieved in a few hours, severe colds, and in the course of two or three days, entirely broken them up by its use, as have several of our friends to whom we have recommended it. It is all that it is represented to be by the manufacturers. If you have cough and want to stop it Chamberlain Cough remedy will do the work, for sale by W. A. Schreiter.

There may be persons in this community who are at times troubled with colic, or subject to attacks of bowel complaint If so, they should try Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It will afford almost immediate relief, and when reduced with water is pleasant to take. If taken as soon as the first indication of the disease is felt it will ward off the attack. Many people use it in this way, and find that it never fails them. A 25 or 50 cent bottle may be obtained a W. A. Schreiter's.

JHN OLEVEQUE.

PRACTICAL BLACKSMITH,

Horse and ox shoer. Manufactures wagons, buggies, etc: Shops on Main street, opposite bank.

JOHN M. BOYLE,

ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,

Practices in all the State and Federal courts Collections and insurance.
Office in NEWS, Main St.

I. LEMIEUX,

PHYSICIAN & SURGEON,

Office in residence, First street, Red Lake Falls, Minn.
3-6

Unprecedented Record

The Minneapolis Times has attained the largest measure of success in the short time it has been before the people of any paper in the Northwest.

WHY ? ? ?

Because it is Bright Newsy, Ably Edited, Fair to all Parties and Gets the News.

Since the first guns of the preliminary campaign in July The Times'

POLITICAL NEWS

has set the pace for its contemporaries. It has gone to the front on its Local News, Market Reports, Telegraphic Specials, Regular Press (Press News) report.

The Times

Is independent politically and prints all the news about politics and candidates, but does not deal in abuse of any man who has the misfortune to run for an office.

A Campaign Offer-The Times 4 Months

$1.00

The Times will be sent by mail 4 months from Oct. 1st for the sum of $1. Send in your subscriptions now in order to get the benefit of all the news of the present campaign.

THE TIMES,
49 Fourth St. S., Minneapolis, Minn.

LOVE ONE ANOTHER.

It was Saturday night, and two children small
Sat on the stairs in a lighted hall,
Vexed and troubled and sore perplexed,
To learn for Sunday the forgotten text;
Only three words on a gilded card,
But both children declared it hard.

"'Love,' that is easy—it means, why, this"—
(A warm embrace and a loving kiss);
"But 'one another,' I don't see who Is meant by 'another'—now, May, do you?"

Very grandly she raises her head,
Our thoughtful darling, and slowly said,
As she fondly smiled on the little brother,
"Why, I am only one, and you are another,
And this is the meaning—don't you see?—
That I must love you, and you must love me."

Wise little preacher, could any sage
Interpret better the sacred page?

—Good Cheer.

Three Little Words.

With the three little words, "why," "how," "what," it is quite possible for some blockhead to puzzle a philosopher. "Why does the magnetic needle point always to the north?" "How was the universe made?" "What is light?" Here are three questions that any fool may ask, yet that all the wisdom in the world cannot answer. There are hundreds of other queries as simple and as likely to suggest themselves to the inquisitive to which science can make no satisfactory reply. On the other hand, positive philosophy, history, the mechanic arts and other practical branches of human knowledge afford conclusive responses to a vast number of important "whys" and "hows" and "whats."

All that it is necessary for man to know he can learn from these sources, and education in its best sense consists in the broadcast diffusion of the information they afford, in its simplest, clearest form. Europeans say that we are an over curious people—that we examine and cross-examine strangers about matters with which we have no concern. That's a mistake. Everything in the way of information that any human being is willing to impart concerns us. We want to know. If those we question do not choose to answer, or cannot answer, our "whys" and "hows" and "whats," they can say so. We shall not be offended by the rebuff; but ask, we will.—New York Ledger.

Carelessness Criticised.

He came out of the house, boarded the car and looked about with the good humored air of a man who has just finished a satisfactory breakfast. His eyes rested on the feet of a man opposite, and he continued to look at them with a half amused expression as he chewed his toothpick. Finally the other passenger left the car, and he of the toothpick turned to his neighbor:

"Did you notice the great blotch of dried mud on that gentleman's shoe?" he asked. "It's funny," he continued, "how a well dressed man will be so careless sometimes. Had a fresh shine, walked out of the house, didn't look to see where he was going, and stepped right square into a mud puddle the first thing. I dunno, I think that kind of gives a man away, don't you?"

"Excuse me," said the other, "but you've got something on the under side of your coat sleeve. I don't know what it is."

The toothpick chewer raised his arm to get a view of the spot indicated, then carefully wiped off the sleeve with his handkerchief, remarking as he did so, "It's stewed codfish and cream, that's what it is."—Detroit Free Press.

A Witty Cabman.

Among the cabmen at the city hall plaza is one who has a reputation for wit among his fellow cabbies. His name, I think, is Cornell. He had as a customer the other night a certain literary gentleman who is distinguished by the elegance of his raiment as well as the costliness of the umbrellas he carries. Of this literary swell one of his intimates says "he spends three-fourths of his time in selecting clothes and the other fourth in buying umbrellas." One wet night he sported a particularly loud umbrella, and probably fearing that the heavy shower might injure it he hired a cab to take him home. Arriving there the cabman demanded $1 from him.

"What do you mean by overcharging me," said the literary swell as he hoisted the umbrella. "Do you know who I am?"

"I don't care if you were the umbrella, I'll have my fare," said the coachman, and he got it.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Pineapple Fabric.

Still another textile material bids fair to rival jute. This time it is the pineapple fiber, and a Mr. R. Blechynden, of Calcutta, is attempting to awaken interest to the great economic value of this product. The pineapple has long been cultivated for its fiber in India, while it is manufactured into a cloth in the Philippines and woven into linen in China. But more recent investigations show that when subjected to the process of bleaching the fiber becomes pliant enough to be spun like flax and by the same machinery. The fiber can be subdivided into threads of such delicacy as to be barely perceptible and yet sufficiently strong for any purpose.—New York Telegram.

Obedient, but Why?

There was a new dog at the farm house, writes a correspondent of Wide Awake, and Baby, aged 4, had been told that he must not play with it. On his way to the farm he was reminded of his mamma's injunction not to play with the strange dog, and he exclaimed in a tone which showed him proudly conscious of his virtue:

"Of course I wouldn't for the world do what mamma tells me not to!" Then, descending suddenly from this unusual height of morality, he added confidentially, "And, 'sides, he snapped at one of the men yesterday!"

Reflections.

"Why, where have you been so long?" she asked, as he joined the party on the hotel piazza.

"Oh, simply indulging in quiet reflections."

"Oh, you vain man! Looking at yourself in the mirror, I suppose."—New York Herald.

Anything to Oblige.

Father—Don't you ever let me see you sitting in a hammock with a young man again.

Dutiful Daughter—All right, pa. I'll have it removed to a place that isn't overlooked by your study window.—Munsey's Weekly.

A Young Man of Business.

Teacher—Willie, can you name the five senses?

Tommy (from back seat)—I—I can tell.

Teacher—Well, Tommy, what are they?

Tommy—A half dime.

Senator Davis, of Minnesota, was formerly an expert telegraph operator and was for a long time employed in the office at Waukesha. Senator Davis was one of the first four men in the country to read telegraphy by sound.

The Life of a Funny Lecturer.

The lecture platform (alack that it should be so!) is become a booth in Vanity Fair, and they that stand therein have wares to sell. And there be some of us standing in the market place who mourn that the passerby may lament unto us. Some of us there be who pipe that the light of heart may dance. And others still are there, good as the best of those who toil, and stand idle, even until the eleventh hour, because no man hath hired them. But alike are they all in the market place. The lecture business is a "business." The lecturer invests, comparatively speaking, much in it. He causes to be made a lithograph of himself which resembles him "as the mist resembles rain" or a silver dollar resembles the Goddess of Liberty. He compiles a book of "press notices," so uniformly and extravagantly laudatory that we might fear he stood in danger of the woe pronounced upon us when all men shall speak well of us did we not suspect that the press notices undergo a rigid civil service examination, and that only the fittest for the business survive the ordeal of natural selection.

He salaries an advance agent, or nestles under the wing of a lecture bureau. He provides for himself many changes of raiment, extra sandals and scrip for his purse. He pays full railway fares; often he travels hundreds of miles between engagements; he eats when he has opportunity and there is aught to eat; he goes to bed when the committee is too sleepy to sit up in his room any longer; he passes sleepless nights on freight trains; he endures, because he must, the maddening roar and racket and rush and jar of railway trains day after day, months in succession; he lives without companionship; there is no time to read; he hears no lectures save his own, and of them perhaps he grows a-weary. He attends no concerts, no theatre; he sees little of his friends, less of his family.—Robert J. Burdette in Forum.

Stamps That Will Not Stick.

Correspondents complain that the two cent red stamp will not stick on their letters long enough to have them delivered through the mail. Letters are received duly post marked, showing that the stamp had been affixed, but quite devoid of any pay stamp on reaching their destination. Other stamps are heard from that come off in the hand while they are being posted. The letter goes off in the box, the stamp flutters off in the hand. You can wrap up, says one correspondent, a ten cent special stamp in a bit of paraffine paper and it will keep its stickiness, for the mucilage is good.

But if you wrap up your two cent red stamp in a similar paper, to keep them all from sticking together, the result is bad; stickiness goes out of them, and the chances are that they will fall off your letter before it reaches Mr. Field's stamping machines. Yet the paraffine paper is supposed to act, by its oiliness, precisely as the less elegant plan of rubbing the stamps as you buy them on the hair of your head. Is there any remedy for stickless stamps? Certainly there is. The mucilage bottle, if you have any doubts. You had better resurface them—in this individual way—than to have the trouble of tearing them apart when all glued together.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Marie Bashkirtseff's Lingerie.

About her underclothing this interesting young person was as wildly extravagant as in other directions. She had all those things made of the finest linen lawn and real lace.

She was especially fond of Valenciennes lace as being youthful and chaste. The style which she always affected was what the French call the virginal or young girlish.

Doucet made her underclothes as well as her outer ones. They were horribly expensive of course and she ordered quantities of them.

Her wash bills were dreadful to contemplate, and her Aunt Romanoff, who smoked all the time and cared very little for underclothes, made these wash bills and Marie's constant changing of lingerie a topic of frequent and amazed though uncomplaining conversation.

Marie was very liberal with all her things, including her underclothes. For instance, she gave to Breslau, whom she hated, but with whom she wished to be on friendly terms, a very fine old fashioned linen bodice, trimmed with long ruffles at the neck and sleeves, which she herself had been wearing at the studio. It cost 100 francs and Breslau, who was a poor and practical young woman, accepted it with thanks, and probably has it yet.—New York Sun.

Stanley and Artist Bell.

Mr. Joseph Bell was an admirable sketcher, fertile in suggestion, and quick at taking hints and notes, but somehow he always managed to irritate Stanley by what may be called his excessive verbosity and the mischievous delight he always took in endeavoring to land Stanley on the horns of some dilemma. For example, he got him to describe the method of getting a donkey across a deep river. Stanley explained to him how the porter led the donkey into the stream, holding the bridle and keeping the donkey's head (which was alone visible) out of the water with one hand and swimming vigorously with the other hand. "Yes," said Bell; "did the porter carry a rifle?" "Of course," said Stanley. "Yes," said Bell, "and in which hand did he carry the rifle, seeing that one hand is already engaged in guiding and helping the donkey and the other in swimming for dear life?" This was a sort of fun which Stanley did not appreciate.—Edward Marston in Scribner's.

Two Morals to One Story.

In a little village not a thousand miles from Hartford, and not a thousand years ago, a happy family sat down to dinner. They had blanc-mange for dessert. The blanc-mange, unfortunately, as it turns out, was put to cool outdoors before it was placed on the table. Nearly every one partook heartily. Presently the head of the family felt something hard in the dish, and delving into it spooned up a hoptoad. Said toad had jumped into the dish as it lay outside, and the blanc-mange being soft and hot, had sunk and died.

This true story teaches not only that one should look before one leaps, but that things are not always what they seem.—Hartford Courant.

Jamaica Ginger for the Blues.

A farmer in northern Maine recently drank three bottles of Jamaica ginger to drive away the "blues." He afterward went to sleep in the barn, and a cow laid down on him and broke two of his ribs. He hasn't done a day's work since, and at last accounts he was "bluer" than ever.—Kennebec Journal.

Everybody knows of the totems of North American Indians, but not quite everybody has been interested to learn that totemism is nearly universal with savage man. No savage will eat the animal that represents his own clan

For Office Seekers.

The following story, which may be true, but more probably is not, is related of President Lincoln: A local politician went to Washington seeking an office, but in a fortnight came back without it. "What was the trouble?" asked one of his friends. "Didn't you see the president?" "Yes, of course," answered the politician. "Well, then, why didn't you get the office?"

"Well," said the disappointed applicant, "we went in and stated our errand. The president heard us patiently, and then said, 'Gentlemen, I am sorry that I have no office for Mr. ——, but if I can't give you that I can tell you a story.' Then he went on:

"'Once there was a certain king who kept an astrologer to forewarn him of coming events, and especially to tell him whether it was going to rain when he wished to go on hunting expeditions. One day he had started for the forest with his train of lords and ladies when he met a farmer.

"'Good morning, farmer,' said the king.

"'Good morning, king,' said the farmer. 'Where are you folks going?'

"'Hunting,' said the king.

"'Hunting! You'll all get wet,' said the farmer.

"'The king trusted his astrologer and kept on, but at midday there came up a tremendous rain that drenched the king and all his party.

"'On getting back to the palace the king had the astrologer decapitated, and sent for the farmer to take his place.

"'Law's sakes,' said the farmer when he arrived, "it ain't me that knows when it's going to rain, it's my donkey. When it's going to be fair weather he always carries his ears forward, so. When it's going to rain he puts 'em backward, so.'

"'Make the donkey the court astrologer!' shouted the king.

"'It was done, but the king always declared that that appointment was the greatest mistake he ever made in his life.'

"Mr. Lincoln stopped there," said the office seeker. "'Why did he call it a mistake?' we asked him. 'Didn't the donkey do his duty?'

"'Yes,' said the president, 'but after that every donkey in the country wanted an office.'"—Youth's Companion.

Some Foreign Words.

One of the fair young girl graduates who quite recently mapped out the destiny of the world in an essay entitled "A Dream of the Future," has taken to writing society novels, and her latest effort, the manuscript of which lies on the desk of the literary editor for review, is well up to the standard of current fiction. Especially is this so in the selection of foreign words and phrases which abound in the story. It strikes me, however, that they are not always up to the mark in the application.

For instance, it is going a little too far, I think, to say that the rounded cheeks of Jessica wore a beautiful sub rosa hue, and that her hat draped in nom de plumes was most becoming. I don't quite see how the little bona fide could come in wagging his tail, or that the chickens could be put into their coup d' etat. I should not care to risk my bones galloping away on a hors de combat, but I suppose I should be as safe as in ordering my steak double entendre, especially when Ich dien at 2 o'clock precisely. Finis, the end is an apt quotation.—Memphis Times.

Salt for the Hair.

There is an old belief that salt water injures the hair, and a delightful old lady once explained the reason therefor.

"You see," she said, "the salt in the water is stronger than the hair in your head, and so the salt just draws the hair right out." Assuming this to be true, that salt water will draw the hair out of the head when it isn't otherwise specially inclined toward coming out, by good homœopathic reasoning we come to the conclusion that when the hair insists upon coming out of its own accord a vigorous treating with salt and water will put a stop to it. Whether the reasoning be true or not the fact is. Not all the tonics you can buy at the hairdresser's will do your hair half the good, if it manifests a tendency toward falling out, that a daily scalp bath of strong salt and water will.—New York Evening Sun.

The Power of Prayer.

One of our city undertakers relates a little incident which illustrates the power of prayer in a way different from that which is taught by orthodox ministers. He says:

"I had a funeral the other day. It was the child of a poor family; but few people and no minister were at the grave. I pitied them; it looked so desolate and forlorn that I made a prayer at the last myself, although I had never done the like anywhere before."

"You didn't!" exclaimed his wife.

"Yes, I did. I have heard it done so often that it all came to me without thought. Besides that it did me good; I got three funerals last week which would never have come to me had it not been for the prayer."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

Where the Lifeboat Was Born.

A monument to the lifeboat now stands at South Shields, said to be the lifeboat's birthplace. In 1789 the ship Adventure was wrecked off the Tyne and a committee was formed to consider the matter of providing a lifeboat. The models submitted by Henry Greathead, a boat builder, and by William Wouldhave, a journeyman painter, were selected by the committee for use. Whether Wouldhave or Greathead was the actual inventor is a moot point; but locally Wouldhave is looked upon as the author of the model. The names of both men are given on the memorial. The first occasion on which a shipwrecked crew was landed by means of a lifeboat was on June 30, 1790.—Chicago Herald.

Josh Billings.

Josh Billings is the nom de plume of Henry W. Shaw, who was born in Lanesborough, Mass., in the year 1818. He first became known as a humorous writer and lecturer in 1863, and since that time his comic sketches have been extensively published in the journals of the United States and England.

Protesting Too Much.

Lucy (effusively)—My dear, I was so very sorry that I was not in when you called yesterday.

Jessie (earnestly)—Please do not feel vexed, dear; I assure you it didn't matter at all.—Pittsburg Bulletin.

The Sad Part.

Fred—I wish my girl would hurry up and marry me, if she is going to.

Edwin—Is she keeping you in suspense?

Fred—No, expense.—Detroit Free Press.

The Race Question Again.

"Uncle Abe, they tell me your colored church is very exclusive?"

"It tries to be, sah, but er white man will sneak in ercasionally."—Epoch.

Red Lake Falls News.

BOYLE & MEEHAN, Editors & Proprietors

TERMS, $1.50 A YEAR.

A BILL to forbid and punish the making of caricatures has been introduced in the Vermont Legislature.

BABIES are now very scarce in France. One may pass a hundred houses without finding a cradle in it. Such a country is doomed.

THE Australian tailor who traveled in a trunk from Vienna to Paris has made the trip from Paris to London in the same manner.

THROUGH celebrating the coming of the "harvest moon" by imbibing their own booze the stills of four Arkansas moonshiners were discovered and raided.

A CHICAGO man wants a divorce because his wife is quarrelsome and is a woman of "large physical proportions and great muscular development."

THE explosion of a blast of 35,000 pounds of powder successfully tore away 65,000 tons of rocks at the entrance to Port Crescent harbor, on Puget Sound.

ELECTRICITY applied to locomotive headlights is among the safeguards proposed for railway travel, and a recent simplified apparatus is thought to be the most satisfactory so far introduced.

AT Union, Iowa, Charles Rever and Miss Minnie Flagg have just been married. Over the parlor door of the bride's house was hung the words: "A union of hearts, a union of hands, and the Flagg of union for Rever."

MRS. SMART, of Texas, had four husbands killed in the rebel army. She would probably have made further demonstration of patriotism if the war had lasted longer, as she had five marital partners since the war.

THE cotton gin down south appears to be as treacherous as the buzz-saw up north. The Atlanta papers of the last few days contain frequent accounts of mangled hands and arms due to these members being drawn between cogwheels.

PROF. ORTON, while urging the imperative necessity of taking action to restrict the wasteful use of natural gas, admits that even the strictest regulations cannot prevent the exhaustion of the supply in a few years.

THE railway mileage of Kansas, according to the State board of Assessors, consists of 8,762 miles of of main lines, which are assessed at from $4,000 to $7,500 per mile, the aggregate value of all railway property in the State being fixed for assessment purposes at $57,866,232.

A ROCHESTER husband has secured a divorce chiefly, it is said, on the evidence furnished by an instantaneous photograph of his wife sitting on the correspondent's knee. With the general introduction of kodaks and phonographs it looks as though the divorce and breach of promise business may yet be carried on by machinery and chambermaids and private detectives find their occupation gone.

THE keeper of the Tillamook Rock (Oregon) lighthouse reports to the lighthouse board a wave which broke at a height of 100 feet above high-water mark. His calculation is made as follows: The rock upon which the lighthouse tower stands rises ninety-six feet above high water, the focal plane of the light itself is thirty-eight feet above the base of the tower, and the crest of the wave was at least twenty-five feet above the light. The windows of the tower were broken and the lamp extinguished.

A PAINLESS death for criminals is suggested by a physician of the Pennsylvania Hospital. He says that "if one grain of morphia be injected into the arm of any ordinary man, and the dose be repeated an hour afterward, the man would drop off into a delicious slumber, and from this painless sleep there would be no waking. Prussic acid is another poison that might be utilized in this way, as it is probably the most rapid of poisons. Aconite, if administered hypodermically, would cause death in less than a minute.

NEWS SIFTINGS.

Criminal, Personal, Foreign and Other Interesting News Items.

WASHINGTON.

Mayor Grant of New York has sent a letter to Secretary Noble asking for a recount.

Secretary Blaine has been informed by the minister of the United States at St. Petersburg that the various reports of the alleged persecution by the Russian government of the Hebrews living in that country are false.

Ex-President Cleveland arrived in Washington to attend to business before the United States supreme court. He is apparently in good health, and had occasion to deny a rumor that he had dropped dead.

PERSONAL.

Bishop Whipple of Minnesota arrived in Chicago from St. Paul and took a train for New York, from which city he sails for a visit to Europe.

Marshall Field, Jr., son of the head of the great dry goods firm of Marshall Field & Co., and Miss Albertine Huck, daughter of Louis C. Huck, the millionaire brewer were married in Chicago by Archbishop Feehan.

At the meeting of the Cornell university trustees at Ithaca, N. Y., Henry W. Sage added $200,000 to his previous gift of $60,000 for the establishment of a department of philosophy. Mr. Sage's gifts to the university now aggregate more than a million dollars.

Charles C. Kinswater, of the Second United States infantry, on recruiting service, dropped dead in the recruiting office at Dubuque, Iowa. He was thirty-two years old and had been in the service twelve years. His death was caused by heart disease. He was in apparent good health and was the evening before engaged in drilling the Governor's Grays, of that city. He was a member of Company A, Second United States infantry, stationed at Omaha.

ACCIDENTAL.

Felix Young was instantly killed, James Turner fatally injured and several others were badly bruised by the falling of a derrick on a new building in Chicago.

A collision occurred on the Elgin, Joliet & Eastern, near Joliet, Ill., between a freight train and a construction train. Thomas Lawler, a foreman of the construction gang, was killed and eight others were injured.

Herman Schenneman, a young farmer, of Turtle Lake, Wis., was engaged in loading wood, when he accidentally fell from his wagon. His team started and caught him between the wheel and a tree, killing him almost instantly.

A freight train on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul was wrecked on a trestle forty feet high between Excelsior Springs and Mosley, Mo., by unknown villians. The fireman, John Wright, of Cincinnati, was instantly killed, and S. C. McKinley, a brakeman, severely injured.

Four persons employed at the Quaker City Dye works in Philadelphia were poisoned. The victims are Bernard Hughes, James Tighe, Walter Spellman and William Eberhardt. Hughes and Eberhardt will die. For a week past a chemist has been engaged in experimenting with a new dye, which caused the poisoning.

Miss Lillie Booth died at Quincy Ill. She was not shot as at first stated by her betrayer, Dan Price. He rushed into the store after she shot him, and returning with a revolver fired at her but missed her, and then fell on the side walk. His brother grappled with Miss Booth to get her weapon, and in the struggle was accidentally discharged, the ball entering her body and causing her death. Miss Booth was worth not less than $30,000 in her own name, well educated and accomplished.

SINS AND SINNERS.

McDaniel, the Arkansas train robber, has been condemned to the penitentiary for life.

At Providence, R. I., Jerome Sweet was found guilty of murder of his wife by saturating her body with kerosene and firing it, and has been sentenced to prison for life.

An unknown man assassinated Tom Marshal Vogelsong at Falmouth, Ky. A. Richie and Oscar Downard have been arrested and may be lynched.

Numerous members of the Corndodger club, an organization of youthful thieves and burglars operating in Texas cities, have been arrested.

At Montreal, Que., William Proulx, from Denver, Colo., has been arrested on the strength of a telegram asking that he be held on the charge of embezzling $3,500.

Near Port Huron, Mich., a man mamed Pellet stabbed and probably fatally wounded James O'Hare, a wealthy farmer, and his wife. Robbery was the motive. Pellett has not yet been captured.

The Toronto Globe publishes a letter from Birchall, who now claims that he and Benwell had concocted a plan to swindle Benwell's father out of £500, which they were to divide, and also that Pelly was to be victimized. Their trip to Woodstock was to further their schemes, but he denies all knowledge of Benwell's murder.

John Hope, who was implicated in the robbery of the Manhattan Savings bank, with his father, Jimmie Hope, the famous bank robber, was liberated from Sing Sing prison upon a pardon from Gov. Hill. Hope received a sentence of twenty years by Judge Cowing in July, 1879. He served nine years eight months and twenty days.

The jury in the Novak murder case at Joliet, Ill., returned a verdict of guilty in the first degree, with the death penalty. Several months ago Joseph Novak quarreled with a fellow workman named Sokzloski. That night he went to Sokzloski's house and fired a load of shot through a window, with the intention of killing his enemy. The charge instead struck and killed Sokzloski's fifteen-year-old daughter.

Miss Flora Tyler of Butler, Ill., walked into the room of Eugene F. Mease, at Chicago, and, after securing a ring and photograph, placed a revolver over Mease's heart and fired. Mease turned slightly and the bullet entered his left shoulder. The wound is not fatal. Miss Tyler was immediately arrested. Mease had been engaged to Miss Tyler, but had broken off the engagement, and a few days ago married Miss Jessie Raymond, who was present during the shooting. The shooting was for revenge.

Last summer William Fillinger and his wife, who lives three miles from Perry, Mich., attended a series of revival meetings and became religion-mad in a mild way. With them lived Fillinger's mother, who has long been physically frail. It worried Fillinger and his wife that the older woman was unbaptized, and so they decided that the necessary religious rite should be preformed, although the poor woman was confined to her bed, unable to rise. Taking water to her room, they began the ceremony by dashing water in her face, and continued it until from shock and exhaustion their victim died. Fillinger and his wife were arrested and taken to jail.

John Dixon, a prosperous farmer of Allegheny county, N. C., discovered that an intimate relation was existing between his wife and Marshall Halsey, and he promptly shot and killed Halsey. Charles Halsey, a brother of the dead man, hunted Dixon down and tried to shoot him. He was prevented by several persons who said if he wanted to fight he would have to fight fair and give Dixon a chance. This he agreed to and the two men were soon facing each other. The word was given and both men began firing. Halsey was shot four times and fell dead, but Dixon was not hit. Dixon has not yet been arrested, and the people of the county say no sheriff can take him. Heretofore he has been a peaceful man and well known throughout the country.

FOREIGN GRIST.

A duel with sabers was fought near Pesth, Austria. Lieut. Logar, one of the combatants had his arm cut off by his antagonist.

The British ship Lizzie Troop, Capt. Fownes, has been wrecked at Loo-Choo, while on a voyage from Naguquo for Puget Sound and Melbourne. A portion of her crew were saved.

It is understood that official inquiries are being made by Germany to acertain whether goods which have hitherto been obtained from America can be imported from other countries.

Detachments of troops are guarding the mines of Arras and Carvin, in Northern France, where the miners are on a strike, and numerous assaults have been made on the free laborers.

A French syndicate, headed by the Rothschilds, is said to have purchased a majority of the stock of the National Bank of Mexico, and will take charge of the institution shortly.

The British admiral at Zanzibar has been ordered to destroy Vitu and make unsparing war on the inhabitants, unless all the murderers of the German traders are surrendered, to be turned over to the Germans for punishment.

Count Von Moltka arrived in Berlin. He was met at the railway station by an enormous crowd of people, who cheered him the entire distance from the station to his quarters. Emperor William has sent to the count as a birthday present a marshall's silver baton embellished with emperial eagles and set with diamonds.

The Indians in the Kootenai mining district of British Columbia are on the warpath. They claim proprietorship of the country in which mineral has been found, and threaten to make a bloody raid if the miners do not pay them tribute. The miners are asking protection of the Ottawa government.

At a session of the Protestant Episcopal Missionary council held at Pittsburg a resolution was adopted providing for the appointment of a commissinon to consider what can be done to further the mission among the colored people of the South. The committee appointed were Bishops Whipple, Lyman, and Quintard; Reverend Doctors Satterlee, Lindsay and Capers, and Messrs. J. N. Brown, G. R. Fairbanks and J. L. Stettim.

OTHERWISE.

Seven original package houses have opened at Yankton, S. D., on the strength of the recent Kansas decision.

There are reports afloat in Warsaw of a futile attempt to shoot the czar, but they are unconfirmed.

An inspector has examined Chicago's $6,000,000 government building, and says that it is in a deplorable condition, but in no immediate danger of falling.

Henry Popp, who was to have been executed at the Ohio penitentiary, at the last moment was granted a respite by Gov. Campbell to Nov. 28.

The bodies of Mary Doyle and Mary Padden, servants, are still in the ruins of the Leland hotel fire at Syracuse, N. Y. All the injured are improving and no more deaths are expected.

Mrs. Metz, the wife of a prominent business man of Chattanooga, Tenn., who eloped with Vernon Whitesides, the embezzling city auditor, has entered a Chicago convent, having been left penniless by Whitesides.

In the fraudulent naturalization cases in Chicago, Sol Von Prang, candidate for the state senate, has been held in bail of $5,000 to the federal grand jury. Barney Manning and James Sheehan were also held in $200.

The Standard Oil company has given the producers of the Northwestern Ohio field another black eye by again reducing Buckeye oil 2½ cents on a barrel, the price now being 30 cents. It is thought the price will be reduced to 15 cents.

A few days ago a small schooner-rigged yacht containing six persons left Fall River, Mass., or Prudence island, where the party intended to spend a day. The boat has been found at Happy Hollow on the beach, and nothing has been heard of the occupants.

A town of England, Skiddaw, Cumberland, stands unique as a township of one house and one solitary male adult inhabitant. This man is deprived of his vote because of the act that there are no overseers to make out a voter's list, and no church or public school building on which to publish one if made.

Official returns from Idaho show the total number of votes cast at the recent state election to be 18,008. The majority received by the Republican candidates for congress and governor are as follows: Sweet, congressman, 2,171; Shoup, governor, 2,372. Upon joint ballot the legislature will stand: Republicans, 45; Democrats, 9.

United States Consul Henry Gillman at Jerusalem has notified the department of state that three American locomotives, made in Philadelphia and intended for the new railroad from Jerusalem to Jaffa, have arrived at Jaffa. The consul says it must interest our citizens to know that the first locomotives ever used in this ancient land were made in the new world.

Fred Twitchell, who left West Superior, Wis., during the recent race meeting, leaving behind him quite a number of creditors has been heard from. A letter has been received from him dated at Dallas, Tex., in which he enclosed $200 to pay a note on which the late Register Mundy was indorser. He stated in the letter that he would transmit a similar amount to Ald. Matchett.

A decision was rendered in the United States court in Topeka, Kan., that has dropped like a bombshell and created consternation among the friends of prohibition in Kansas. The decision in question allows the reopening of original package liquor houses in Kansas, and declares that the Wilson bill enacted by congress does not restore the power of the Kansas prohibitory law as against original package saloons.

The Indians of Northwest are to receive a visit from Gen. Miles. The general left Chicago accompanied by R. B. Smalley and John Zerfass, members of the commission. The trip will extend over a month, and the tribes along the Northwest and also the Pine Ridge, Tongue River and Crow agencies will be visited. Gen. Miles will send a report on his inspection to army headquarters at Washington.

Hog cholera is playing havoc near Madison, Wis. Sidney Terwilliger of the town of Oregon said: Out of 161 pigs in my pens 48 have died, and I am afraid the entire number will go before the disease stops. A hog will be apparently as well as ever, when it will suddenly keel over and die in a very few minutes. Others will appear dumpish for some time, then begin to shiver and finally drop. The cholera was inoculated in our part of the country through some hogs brought from Chicago, and it begins to look as though we would never be rid of it. The death rate in the pens of my neighbors is as bad as mine, so that it is becoming a very serious matter with us.

INDIANS AGITATED.

Sioux Indians in South Dakota Crazed Over the "Indian Millinnium."

Sitting Bull the High Priest and Latest Apostle of the Doctrine.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28.—The commissioner of Indian affairs has received reports from the Standing Rock agency in South Dakota indicating that the "Indian millenium" craze is increasing among the Sioux Indians. Great excitement over the matter prevails among the Sitting Bull faction of the Sioux, who are anxiously and confidently awaiting the coming of the millenium next spring.

Agent McLaughlin, in a long report to the department on the subject, says the superstitious notion come from the more southern Sioux, and is doubtless the same craze that has been agitating the Shoshones in Wyoming and the Cheyennes and the Arapahoes in the Indian Territory.

Sitting Bull appears to be high priest and the latest apostle of this latest Indian absurdity. Sitting Bull's influence as a disturbing element seems to have increased during the last few years, and this is partly accounted for, the agent thinks, by the presence of a woman from Brooklyn, Mrs. C. Weldon, who went to the agency in June, 1889, announcing herself as a member of Dr. Bland's society. She has lavished numerous and costly gifts upon Sitting Bull and this has made him more insolent than ever.

The agent devotes a large portion of the report to Sitting Bull, giving him a bad reputation. He says:

> Sitting Bull is a man of low cunning, devoid of a single manly principle in his nature, or an honorable trait of character; but, on the contrary, is capable of inciting others (those who believe in his powers) to do any amount of mischief. He is a polygamist, libertine, habitual liar and obstructionist and a great obstacle in the way of civilization of these people, and he is totally devoid of a single noble trait of character.

The officials of the Indian bureau here look upon the situation as serious, but think they can bridge over the trouble.

DENIES THE APPLICATION.

New York Must Be Contented With the Government Census.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28.—Secretary of the Interior Noble to-day rendered a decision denying the application of Mayor Grant for a renumeration of the population of the city of New York. In his decision the secretary, after reciting the facts in the case, says:

> It thus appears that the mayor bases his application on the fact, as he alleges, that the municipal census shows many more inhabitants to have been in New York in October than the United States census shows to have been there in June, and because the municipal census was supervised by a representative of the United States census bureau, this department is bound by the result made known to it and should without further inquiry order the superintendent to make a renumeration; that the superintendent has denied the alleged supervision and any official knowledge of results that would warrant a renumeration, and has offered a hearing to the mayor, which he has not accepted but has brought his demand to the secretary on the same grounds as originally made; that the secretary finds the municipal census was not taken under any supervision by the census bureau or any one representing it, and that no such information has been sent the bureau or the department as enables it to determine that the United States census was faulty and should be retaken; that many facts exist tending to account for the real difference that may be ultimately found, and these are sufficiently weighty to demand careful consideration; that the applicant assailing the United States census has the affirmation to prove that it is wrong, and the difference in numbers cannot be accounced for upon any other hypothesis than a faulty United States census; that this must be shown by proof that the excess now claimed were inhabitants of the city in June and not then enumerated; that the national census has been so well taken that the body of the people are content with it and that it should neither be abandoned nor its harmony impaired but for the most weighty reasons. No such reasons are here shown to exist, and the application is not allowed.

DEPARTMENT OF COLUMBIA.

Annual Report of Brig. Gen. Gibbons, the Commander.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28.—Brig. Gen. Gibbons, commanding the department of Columbia, in his annual report to the war department for the last fiscal year, states that the Indians in his section have been perfectly peaceful during the past year, and will doubtless remain so indefinitely, unless goaded to desperation by the constant encroachments of the whites and by their continuous acts of injustice.

Gen. Gibbons says the proposition to take from department commanders the power to order general courts martial would, in his opinion, be a mistake; but at the same time he thinks decided improvements might be made in the present administration of military justice by establishing a schedule of punishments for offenses; requiring a strict compliance with the law in convening general courts, and by establishing a military court of appeals similar to a court of appeal in civil cases.

The "canteens" are advocated, and Gen. Gibbons says the system is not only better than that of the tradership, but the enlisted men now begin to realize how much better and more profitably they can supply themselves than be supplied by others.

THE BARRUNDIA AFFAIR.

Minister Mizner's Conduct Approved by Secretary Blaine.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28.—It is understood that Mr. Mizner, our minister to Central America, has received from Secretary Blaine assurances of the approval of the president of his conduct in the Barrundia case, and has been fully justified in the course he pursued.

According to the announcement Minister Mizner is held not to have exceeded his duty. On the contrary, he went no further in the matter in the interest of Gen. Barrundia and his family than he was required to go.

Gen. Barrundia's political acts did not enter into the consideration of the question. Capt. Pitts' conduct, it is understood, has also been approved by the steamship company.

A Singular Coincidence.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28.—Ex-President Cleveland to-day made his argument before the supreme court as associate counsel for James Wallace Peake in what is known as the New Orleans drainage case. By a coincidence there were but two persons present who had been members of the ex-president's cabinet. Mr. Bayard was there and gave a hearty greeting to his former chief. Mr. Garland had come with a motion to file, and seized the opportunity to shake hands with Mr. Cleveland, while Justice Lamar bowed and saluted from the bench to which he had been named by the man who now sat before him waiting to plead a case.

GERMANY'S GREAT GENERAL.

Congratulatory Telegrams Received by the Thousand by Count von Moltke.

BERLIN, Oct. 28.—Two thousand and ninety nine congratulatory telegrams, containing 74,484 words, have passed through the Berlin office for Count von Moltke. The count expresses in the columns of the Post his thanks for the thousands of letters and telegrams which he has received, and regrets that it is impossible to answer them all.

A banquet was given to-day in honor of the deputation of Austrians from Emperor Francis Joseph, sent to convey the imperial congratulations to Count Von Moltke. During the banquet Count Von Moltke toasted Emperor William and the Austrian emperor together, saying that monarchs so united could well be included in the same toast.

HONORED IN AMERICA.

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—The ninetieth anniversary of the birth of Count Von Moltke was celebrated to-night by one of the greatest festivals of music and oratory that has ever been held at the Metropolitan opera house. All the German societies and prominent clubs of the city added their share of interest to the event. The great hall was not decorated, but was thronged with people who included most of the prominent Germans of this and neighboring cities. Chauncey M. Depew was the principal speaker. He said:

> There are two old men now living that have been been talked of the world over, yet neither of these men could receive a celebration such as this of Von Moltke's. These two men are Bismarck and Gladstone. When we shall have passed away and been gathered among the men whom God places in the biggest seats in heaven there will be numberless monuments erected to his memory, but the monument that will stand for all time and the greatest will be the German empire.

SMOOTH SWINDLERS.

Denver Town Lots Thirty Miles From Town Sold for a Song.

DENVER, Oct. 28.—Deputy United States Marshal Long and Postffice Inspector Lawrence yesterday arrested James Pierce and William M. Stott on the charge of running a fraudulent real estate business at Plainfield addition to Denver, thirty miles from here, on the Denver & Fort Worth road.

The Plainfield Addition company began business in September, 1889. Thousands of circulars were printed and distributed throughout the country from Colorado to Maine. These announced that the company was giving away lots for the price of recording them, say $2.50, and a two-cent postage stamp, which was necessary to return the deed.

The only house within six miles of Plainfield addition to Denver is Pierce's own house, which is located on the property. The secret of the scheme lays in the recording of the deeds, the regular fee for recording a deeds in Douglass county is $2.50, but by an agreement with Henry Jones, the county recorder, he received only 90 cents for this service and the company pocketed the balance, $1.60. By this deal the company had cleared nearly $8,000 or $9,500 more than they paid for the whole property. The recorder has made over $30,000.

HOME RULE.

The Liberal Party Waiting for an Expression of the Country's Opinion.

EDINBURGH, Oct. 28.—A meeting of Liberals was held here to-day, at which Mr. Gladstone delivered an address. He said that the Liberal party was prepared to wait for an expression of the country's opinion regarding home rule before announcing a premature scheme. He urged the people to closely watch the naval and military expenditures of the government, which, he declared, have gone beyond the bounds of prudence and propriety.

Referring to the foreign policy of the government, Mr. Gladstone blamed Lord Salisbury for sending an accredited envoy to the Vatican. Regarding Armenia and the misrule of the porte, he said that the long series of outrages committed by Turks might eventually seal the doom of the once great Turkish empire.

Referring to home politics Mr. Gladstone said that there were seven test questions apart from that of home rule for Ireland, namely, the questions of temperance, a working day of eight hours, the disestablishment of the church in Scotland, the disestablishment of the church in Wales, woman's suffrage, home rule for Scotland, and allotments.

Mr. Gladstone made no reference to the United States tariff law.

THEIR DOOM SEALED.

Two Indian Murderers in Montana Sentenced to Be Hanged.

MISSOULA, Mont., Special Telegram, Oct. 28.—Pascale and Antley, the two Indian murderers, were sentenced to-day by Judge Marshall to be hanged Dec. 19. Pascale murdered J. M. Dunn in the Flathead lake country about a year ago, and Antley is one of the three Indians who killed two prospectors on Wolf creek in the fall of 1887. His two associates were killed soon after they committed the murder by a posse.

MORE INDIAN MURDERERS.

SPOKANE FALLS, Wash., Oct. 28.—Dispatches from Wilber, in the Big Bend country, report the murder of S. S. Cole, a freighter, by the Colville Indians. Cole left Cumming's Ferry on Saturday, Oct. 11. on his return to Wilber, and has not since been seen. His blood-stained wagon and hobbled horses were found, but persistent search has failed to bring to light the missing man. He had considerable money and loafing Indians saw him receive it. A few days prior to his departure Indians held up another freighter and robbed him. The whole country is being scoured and a call been made on Agent Cole for the surrender of the suspected Indians.

A Gold Find.

PIERRE, S. D., Special Telegram, Oct. 28.—Parties who have been prospecting up the Bad river on the reservation lands returned to-day and report having found gold in paying quantities. The gold is found in five and six-cent nuggets, and the parties claim that quicksilver abounds in quantities enough to make placer running easy. Claims were taken up and a townsite company formed to start a town near the spot. A large number of prospectors left here this evening for the scene of the find.

A Squatter's Title.

FORT DODGE, Iowa, Special Telegram, Oct. 28.—An important decision involving legality of a squatter's title to a piece of river land has been decided by Judge Stephens in the district court. The case was that of Ristine vs. Newsome. Ristine had the river land title and brought suit to obtain possession of the land occupied by Newsome, who had a squatter's title. The judge took the case from the jury, and decided in favor of the plaintiff.

A Salesman Arrested.

DUBUQUE, Iowa, Special Telegram, Oct. 28.—Frank Morse, traveling salesman for the J. P. Farley Cracker company of this city, was arrested to-day charged with embezzling the money of the firm. His peculations are said to amount to several hundred dollars. Morse has been married but a few months. He spent the night in jail.

A Roundhouse Burned.

NORTHFIELD, Special, Sept. 28.—The roundhouse of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul was destroyed by fire this afternoon. Six engines were in the building at the time, but this was removed without injury. The cause of the fire is unknown.

What She Feared.

The car was filled with excursionists. Every seat contained a pair of lovers. The last bear died in Ohio some time ago, but the art of hugging has survived. It was the midnight express and the air was right chilly, but not a soul noticed that except a poor little married man who sat alone in the half seat by the unlighted stove. He looked down the car and noticed that apparently all the young men were one-armed; at least but one arm of each male was visible. The light in the car was very low, however, and that may account for the phenomenon.

Lovers like twilight; if Adam and Eve did not sing "In the Gloaming" it was because they new a fresher song. And it was twilight in that car, for all three double lamps were turned down very low, and before the train was out of the Allegheny yards the flame in one of them had sputtered, flared a moment and expired. Of course every girl in the car was alarmed when the gloom deepened. Every girl got a little closer to her protecter, and a few minutes later when the second lamp began to show signs of a collapse—the flame leaped up frantically as if afraid to die—about a dozen pianissimo screams came from as many feminine throats.

The conductor opened the door a few minutes later, and the draught finished lamp number two. This left one lamp alight at the rear end of the car. How anxiously it was observed! Would it go out? It looked consumptive, but there was no draught to expedite its decease. At last the train whistled for its first stop, and the little married man came out of his corner by the stove to alight. He had been a bachelor once, and he remembered it as he laid his hand on the door knob. The train had not stopped, but he opened the door, and immediately a gust of wind murdered the last lamp. As he stood in the doorway inhaling cinders and river fog he had the satisfaction of hearing a sweet voice murmur behind him: "O! George, I was so afraid!"

"O what, my darling?"

"That that lamp would never go out!"—Pittsburg Dispatch.

How to Spot a Hotel Beat.

I was talking with the night clerk in a Cincinnati hotel when the 'bus backed up and a late passenger got down and came in. He had on a silk hat and a fine suit of clothes and carried a handsome portmanteau. I sized him up for a diamond agent and from the way he carried his baggage I believed there was quite a load in it.

"Good evening."

"Good evening."

"Will you place this bag in your safe and give me receipt for it?"

"No, sir."

"What?"

"I said no, sir."

"Do you mean to say that you won't care for my property?"

"I do, sir."

"This is an insult!" choked the stranger."

"Yes."

"And if you were out here I'd knock you down for your impudence!"

The clerk opened the gate and walked out and hit the stranger on the ear and then kicked him out. The satchel fell to the floor and the shock opened it, and out rolled an old shirt, a pair o' socks, three or four brickbats and an ancient paper collar. The clerk threw it after the man, who picked it up and dusted.

"Who was it?" I asked.

"A professional hotel beat."

"How did you know it?"

"By his trying to make himself solid before he had registered. All the highrollers work the same line. He'd have squeezed us for about $30.

Stopping the Press.

I was sitting in the office of a Kentucky weekly paper, and the editor had just furnished proof of the fact that he was editor, printer, compositor, pressman, and mail boy when a shock-headed lad came in to say:

"Mr. Laggers, he 'un's waitin' down thar' for you!"

"Who's awaitin'?"

"Kurnal Brill."

"What's he 'un want?"

"Ter shute, I reckon."

"Go'n tell he'un to wait till next week; I'm too busy."

When the boy had gone the editor turned to me with: "You kin see fur yourself what's a-holdin' me down. That Kurnal Brill is no gentleman, or he wouldn't put in when he knows I'm rushed."

The boy come back a moment later to say:

"He 'un can't wait."

"Why?"

"Says he cum in ter shute, an' his got to shute, an' he will shute."

"Dot rot sech a man! I reckon I'll hev to go down. Didn't like my leader last week, and wants ter shute. He'un's no gentleman, stranger. I'll be back in a few minits, stranger."

I sat there in the office and heard the reports of pistols, and I looked out of the window and saw a crowd, and ten minutes later the editor came in with his right ear split by a bullet, and somewhat petulantly remarked: "And now there'll be a coroner's inquest, and I'll hev to lose at least a half a day! If the kurnal wanted to pop at me, why couldn't he un hev waited till some tramp printer cum along to ease me off a bit? He was no gentleman—no gentleman.—From the New York Sun.

THE NORTHWEST.

A Summary of the Important Events of the Week in the Northwestern States.

MINNESOTA.

A basket factory furnishing employment to fifteen hands has been established at Albert Lea.

The police of Red Wing are engaged in a vigorous prosecution of dealers who sell tobacco to minors.

In the election for county seat of Marsha county, Warren defeated Argyle by over 300 majority.

Patrick E. Nagle of Minnesota has been appointed medical examiner in the pension bureau, at a salary of $1,800.

Rev. W. T. Boutwell, the pioneer missionary of Minnesota, died at his residence near Stillwater. He was 88 years of age.

At a special election at Montgomery it was voted to put in a $5,000 system of water works and to purchase a $4,000 steam fire engine.

Walter F. Morton, who is accused of drowning his wife and daughter in the Mississippi river near St. Paul, has been indicted for murder in the first degree.

In a row at Ashley, Frank Prescott was stabbed by a man named Healey. The knife entered an inch from a vital point. Healey is under arrest.

Alma Anderson, a girl thirteen years of age, disappeared from her home at Red Wing and all efforts to discover her whereabouts have proven fruitless.

A pelican measuring eight feet two inches from tip to tip of its extended wings was shot on the lake at Lake City while he was trying to make acquaintances among a flock of tame geese.

Patrick Towey, a hod carrier, fell from a scaffold in the government building at Winona, striking on his head on a concrete floor thirty feet below and dashing his brains out.

The St. Croix boom closed down with the unprecedented output of over 452,000,000 feet of logs, being 190,000,000 feet more than last season, and 90,000,000 feet more than any previous year.

A man named Weber was found on the Milwaukee track with a fractured skull. He is not expected to live. He started to walk down the track to the poor farm and is supposed to have been struck by the train.

Burglars entered the hardware store of William Powell at St. Cloud and stole razors, revolvers and knives to the amount of about $100. They were traced for some blocks by having occasionally dropped some of the plunder.

Two convicts, Tom Field and Tom King, escaped from the prison at Stillwater. They obtained a ladder, which they placed against the wall, and climbed over between two guards. The men were doing four and five years' time respectively.

The state board of health has ordered a veterinary surgeon to go to Reno, Houston county, to investigate in regard to a contagious disease among cattle which has broken out in that locality. A fatal malady has also attacked the hogs in the vicinity of Chatfield.

The population returns for Red Wing and Goodhue county as given out by the census bureau have caused no little indignation. Every one maintains that they are incorrect, those for the city being several hundred and those for the country several thousand below what they ought to be.

A freight train from the east on the Northwestern was run into at Owatonna by another freight coming from the same direction, at full speed, down grade. The caboose and four or five cars were smashed to splinters. No one was in the caboose at the time. The engineer and fireman narrowly escaped with their lives.

At Foley Station the men employed by the Great Northern in laying steel rails on the St. Cloud & Hinckley branch became dissatisfied with the food given them in the boarding cars and attacked them, completely wrecking the cars and smashing the contents. Thirty of the prominent ones in the affair were discharged.

Senator James Compton accidentally shot himself while hunting, four miles from Fergus Falls. A full charge of shot entered his left wrist and hand, mangling both in a horrible manner. He was driven home as rapidly as possible, and amputation of the wounded member between the wrist and elbow was performed. He will undoubtedly recover.

Seymour Curran, a farmer living near Northfield, became involved in a quarrel with Sam Partlow, his hired man. After engaging in a fist fight, in which both men were badly pounded, Partlow secured a pitchfork and drove Curran into the house. The latter secured a revolver and shot Partlow in the face, the bullet breaking his jaw and making a wound which may result seriously. The trouble is said to have been caused by improper relations between Partlow and his employer's daughter.

An important case will come before the United States court at Duluth this session. A. F. Christian, local agent of Armour & Co., has been arrested and placed under bonds for disposing of oleomargarine to a Two Harbors firm without possessing a state license. The company will defend the case on the ground that their license from the federal government was sufficient to cover the sale of the article anywhere in the United States. The question involved will be as to whether a state has the right to interfere with any business licensed by the federal government. This is the same point involved in the original package case in Iowa.

NORTH DAKOTA.

An agricultural college and experiment station has been established in this State.

Capt. Powell, who has charge of the expenditure of $300,000, appropriated by congress to improve the Missouri river between Sioux City and Fort Benton, will have his headquarters at Bismarck.

William Carmichael, eighteen years old, became engaged in a quarrel with a farmer named John Bockhouse near Omis. The boy went home, secured a gun, returned to the scene of the quarrel and killed Bockhouse instantly. Carmichael escaped.

It is stated that the reason why the Red river is so low at Fargo this fall in spite of the rains is because a dam has been put in down near Pelican lake, or somewhere in that vicinity, which causes the water to flow through some other stream in place of down the Otter Tail into the Red river.

The W. C. T. U., of this state at its last convention at Jamestown, created a department of charitable work and elected Mrs. Linda Slaughter superintendent. The object of this department is to prevent suffering among the poor of the state during the coming winter.

A. Thompson, druggist, Grand Forks, county, made nearly 700 sales of liquor during one month, all of which were alleged to have been for medical use and the purchaser made affidavit in each case that the liquor was not intended for a beverage. Court proceedings have been instituted to revoke his license.

State's Attorney Cochran, at Grand Forks has brought suit for slander, with damages placed at $5,000, against M. F. Murphy, of the same place. The plaintiff alleges that the defendant has lost no opportunity of endeavoring to convince the citizens that the former in his capacity as a state's attorney has accepted moneys from both the prosecutor and prosecuted; in other words, that Mr. Cochran has accepted bribes.

Peter Burrows purchased $40 worth of goods of Max Stern, at Fargo, and gave a check of $127,70 in payment, signed by John Johnson, on a Moorhead bank. Stern paid him the difference, but mistrusting that all was not right, sent over to Moorhead and discovered that it was a forgery. When Burrows was arrested he was wearing the new suit and had the money on his person. He is now in jail in default of $500 bonds.

A mass meeting was held in Grand Forks, for the purpose of organizing to induce emigration to the Red river valley. The counties of Cass, Richland, Traill, Grand Forks, Walsh and Pembina were represented. A committee from each county was appointed to complete arrangements. It was decided to establish bureaus at Fargo and in Grand Forks, and several thousand dollars will be invested in immigration literature to be distributed in the East.

State Veterinary Langdon recommends to the governor that the sheep in Stutsman, Kidder and Logan counties be quarantined and that no sheep be allowed to be shipped out of the state unless they have a clear bill of health from the state veterinary or from a competent inspector. It would be well also if all sheep coming into the state should be subjected to a rigid inspection, as in the cases coming under his notice the disease came from the state of Washington.

Webster Mull embezzled $1,000 from the St. Anthony & Dakota Elevator company at Gardner over two years ago and ran away. He was brought back to Fargo by W. H. Chappelle, who arrested him in Lower California, Oct. 2, having traced him by getting acquainted with a cousin of the culprit in Illinois. Mull was bound over to the district court in $1,000 bonds. He acknowledges the theft, and lays his downfall to gambling and dealing in options.

Engineer Tilden, of the Northern Pacific's Dakota extension, says work on the extension from Faulkton will continue until the ground freezes. The Northern Pacific intends to get into the Black Hills as soon as possible, and will be quicker than any Eastern road now heading that way. The Oakes extension is no South Dakota capital location scheme. The extension from Milnor to Valley Junction, will also soon be built. This will give the Northern Pacific a direct short line to Wadena, Minn., where connection is made with the main line.

The board of trustees of the North Dakota agricultural college has confirmed the appointment of F. E. Ladd, of Seneca, N. Y., as chemist; H. L. Bolley, of Lafayette, Ind., as botanist, while Prof. Waldron will remain as aboriculturist, and he will continue the work commenced this year. The board has tendered the position of veterinary to a gentleman who is said to be one of the leading men in his profession in the country. Sufficient rooms have been engaged at the Fargo college and the next term will open January 1.

Highway robberies are becoming very common in the vicinity of Grand Rapids. An old Frenchman living east of Grafton, was held up and relieved of $60. Two hired men were held up later with revolvers pointed at their faces and made to deliver what they had. From one the men got a watch and $15, and from the other they got a watch and 35 cents. On the same night a farmer named Trudo was stopped and robbed of $20. John Houser was held up and made to deliver up all he had, which was $35. In all these depredations no one was identified, as they wore red handkerchiefs over their faces.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

"Temperance" saloons at Kimball must pay an annual license of $300.

Several ladies and gentlemen of Bridgewater indulged in a fox hunt recently. The number of foxes captured is not reported.

A stock company has been formed in Charles Mix county for the purpose of sinking an experimental artesian well near Edgerton.

The Yankton Hotel association has ordered work recommenced on their $100,000 building, and it will be enclosed before cold weather begins.

John Green, of Lisbon township, Davison county, raised this year 1,500 bushels of wheat, 1,000 bushels of oats, 300 bushels of flax and 2,000 bushels of corn.

The farmers in the vicinity of Valley Springs are building granaries and storing their grain at home instead of hauling it to town and storing in elevators.

The Sioux Indians predict ten years of rainy weather. They saw the last dry year ended with this season, and they are making preparations for the deluge by moving their teepes to higher ground.

Beaver-In-The-Woods, the Rosebud brave, who stood off fifteen Indian police, as long as his ammunition lasted, to resist arrest, was sentenced to eighteen months imprisonment in the penitentiary at Sioux Falls.

George Wright, of Mitchell, was recently injured by a pitchfork wound in his thigh. The wound apparently healed up, but the limb is now hard and swollen and blood poisoning is feared.

The county jail at Wessington Springs contained a prisoner one night recently for the first time in many a month. Joseph Vanis, of Crow Lake, was in custody for having mortgaged some chattles too often.

Quite a lively scrap took place in the kitchen of the Keystone at Deadwood during the dinner hour. The participants were a colored waiter and a "biscuit shooter" of the Irish persuasion. The coon won, cutting the white trash up considerably in the course of the discussion.

The Russian thistle has already taken a strong hold on the eastern part of Sully county, and will next season cover the western part. Some fear it will prove a lasting pest, while others think that like the mustard, which was such a pest a few years ago, it will die out and disappear of itself.

WISCONSIN.

Jack Frost is the chilly name of an Indian under arrest at Ashland for selling liquor on the Odonah reservation.

Eight hundred gallons of wild grape wine have been made this year by farmers near Albion.

Dixon has a bride, Mrs. Drew by name, who is six feet seven inches high. The groom takes a day off when he goes up to kiss her.

Supt. Wright, of the St. Paul road, was robbed of a $75 overcoat at Western Union Junction.

Nicholas Thompson, a homesteader in the town of Commonwealth, blew out his brains after he had drank himself almost to death.

Some absent-minded gentleman walked through a plate-glass window in the Woodworth House at Berlin. It didn't "phaze" him.

Fireman M. L. Bertles, of the St. Paul road, was fatally hurt by being struck by the broken connecting rod of his engine which broke while the train was running at full speed near Eagle.

Richard F. Piatt, of Prescott, is wanted by the American Express Company. He is missing, and they claim that he converted $5,000 of the company's funds to his own use.

A Chicago traveling man was stopped on a bridge near Browntown, Lafayette County, and while one of the two men diverted his attention with a shotgun the other relieved him of a pocketbook with $450 in it.

Janesville school girls have petitioned the Board of Education that all the class which is to graduate in June be allowed to read essays. Heretofore it has been the custom to have only three numbers on the programme.

Henry Luke, a wealthy farmer living two miles north of Prospect, was almost fatally injured by an infuriated bull that he was feeding in his barn. Three of his ribs were broken and his lungs terribly hurt.

"Jack" Haverly, the minstrel man, accompanied by a nephew of Robert Bonner, the horseman, is at La Crosse on a quiet mission, and everybody in the town is engaged in a guessing match as to what is the object of their presence.

It is said that the timber on the line of the Lake Shore road, that is owned by the T. B. Scott Lumber Company, of Merrill, cost 80 cents per thousand when it was originally purchased, and is now held at about $5 per thousand. The tract contains 375,000,000 feet.

The sheriff of Monroe County began search recently for "a tall, black-moustached, black-complexioned individual wearing a black slouch hat, black coat," who hired a fine livery rig at Northrup's stables in Sparta, but the officer is still looking for him.

IOWA.

A party of lightning rod swindlers was driven out of Linn county by officers the other day.

Shovers of the queer are working off lead dollars on the unsuspecting citizens of Council Bluffs.

Miss Fuhrmeister, a Marion school teacher, and A. Reiter, the school janitor, are under arrest for whipping a boy. The boy had been unruly during school hours and the janitor held him while the teacher laid on the birch.

While showing some boys how to handle a revolver, Lester Raymond, a 12-year-old Malcolm boy, had his hand shattered by the accidental discharge of the weapon. The bullet passed within an inch of his little sister's head.

A man named Garry, living near Rock Valley, slipped and fell into a deep well containing five feet of water. He managed to escape, after an hour's hard work, by climbing up the slippery tubing, a distance of twenty-six feet.

At Harlan recently a keeper from the insane hospital at Clarinda took charge of an escaped lunatic who had been committed to jail for housebreaking on a large scale. He broke into a dozen houses in the southern part of the county and succeeded in making a small haul in each of them.

A Hastings correspondent says the yield of corn is very disappointing in that section of southwestern Iowa. Farmers who confidently expected thirty bushels to the acre are finding less than twenty on getting into the fields. Feeders are picking up all the old corn they can find at 2 and 3 cents above the market price, as the quality of the new is so poor.

Some Osage small boys made a hot-air balloon in imitation of one that made an ascension in that town recently. An urchin named Wallie Hill was the aeronaut. The balloon rose for a distance of thirty feet, when it collapsed, the young disciple of Montgolfier falling gracefully onto the roof of a shed, and sustaining painful but not serious injuries.

Not a Word Said.

Boston Traveler: The disadvantages of being deaf and dumb were plainly demonstrated to the few pedestrians who chanced to be at the corner of Court and Washington streets at a late hour last night.

Two men came along together and stopped to have a look at the new Ames building.

"It's pretty high, isn't it?" remarked No. 1.

"Yes, it is," replied No. 2.

At least it must be inferred that that was the substance of their remarks, for they did not talk in the usual way, but with their hands. They were deaf mutes.

They stood there and continued to converse. For some reason or other the attention of pedestrians was called to the queer sight, for it was a novelty. It was noticeable that the mutes were growing excited over something. Their fingers were moving rapidly, and they appeared to be interrupting each other at frequent intervals. Suddenly No. 1 drew back his fist and attempted to strike No. 2. But the latter was too wary and dodged to one side, at the same time bestowing upon the other some choice epithet with his fingers. Of course no one could tell just what was said, but whatever remark was made it angered No. 1, and he made another lunge at No. 2, who again dodged.

They continued their strange battle in a funny way. No. 1, with his fingers moving like Mr. Hyde's, talked away at No. 2 at lightning speed, and the other was not far behind. It was a battle with noiseless powder, and how long it would have been kept up there is no telling, had not a friend of the combatants appeared and acted as peacemaker. They went down Washington street, each telling the third party his side of the story.

The Servant Question.

Servant hiring is generally regarded from the point of view of the employer. Mrs. Darwin, writing in the Nineteenth Century, discusses the subject from the view-point of the employed in an original if not convincing manner. "There is one peculiar relic of feudalism," she remarks, "which needs reform. It is strange, to say the least of it, that the mistress should be entitled to have a written and formal character of the servant, and that the servant, to whom the situation is everything that is most important in life, should have no formal opportunity given her of judging the situation, of hearing of the character of the household. This, which common justice demands, could be easily remedied without any extra machinery by the following plan: Every mistress should choose a referee, or two referees, among her servants, past or present, who had been with her not less than two years; she should give the names and addresses of these two referees to the servant whom she is inclined to engage before she writes for her character from her last mistress. Mistresses could then gather statistics and make generalizations as to the situations which were most highly recommended and sought after by the best and most competent servants."

SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT.

COLUMBIA COLLEGE LANDS.

(New York Standard.)

Money for the establishment of a college in New York City having been previously raised by a lottery, George II gave a charter to Kings college in 1754, and on May 13, 1755, the "rector and inhabitants in New York in communion with the church of England" conveyed to the governors of the college of the province of New York, for a consideration of ten shillings, a lot of ground now bounded on the south by Barclay street, on the north by Murray street, on the east by Church street, and on the west by the North river. Park place now runs through the center of the property. On a portion of this land the old college buildings were erected and they continued to be used for college purposes until the institution was moved to its present site in 1857. At the time of the grant by Trinity this land was valued at about £3,000, and it appears not to have been regarded by the early managers of the institution as an important source of revenue.

The first leases were for merely nominal sums. For instance, a number of lots between Greenwich and Washington streets were conveyed to Frederick Rhinelander forever, partly by the regents of the university, in 1786 and 1787, and partly by the trustees of the college in 1792, in consideration of a perpetual yearly rent of $371.59, to be paid to the college. How foolish a bargain this was on the part of the college is now too manifest for comment. In 1812 a lot 40x125 feet, near the corner of Murray and Greenwich streets, was leased for fifty-nine years for six peppercorns a year. Hence it brought to the college no revenue whatever until 1871. It was not until 1825 that leases began to be made that promised a substantial income to the institution; but even then the consideration was such that it would now be regarded merely nominal. A lot 25x75 feet, on Murray street near College place, was leased at $150 a year. Two lots on the east side of Chapel street (now College place) were each leased for five years at $100 a year. In 1830 two lots 28x114 feet, on the north side of Barclay street, were each leased for twenty-one years at $300 a year. A 25x75 lot on the west side of College place was in the same year leased for $200 a year. It was these twenty-one year leases at low prices that made the colleges short of funds at the time of the Legislative investigation in 1855, when this property, including that then occupied by the college buildings, was estimated as worth about $1,000,000.

By that time there had come a considerable increase in the rental value of land, and we find that in 1855 a piece of ground fronting 33 feet on College place and having a depth of 45 feet, was leased for sixteen years at $1,100 a year, and an adjoining lot of 25 feet front and but 44 feet deep was leased for twenty-one years at $840 a year. Considering the depth, these appear to have been good prices at that time. In 1854 two lots, each 29x75 feet on Murray street, east of College place, were leased for twenty-one years at $4,000 a year each. Next year a lot of 100x45 feet, at the corner of College and Park places, was leased for $5,200 a year. In general, rents were in 1855 more than four times as great as in 1755, and the demand for lots was far greater, even at the enhanced prices.

It is difficult to ascertain the advance since that time, because of the systematic neglect of the college authorities to record leases. In 1872 a lot on Barclay street, running through Park place, 159x29 feet, was leased for twenty-one years from May 1 for $2,500 a year. In 1875 a lot 29x76 on the south side of Murray street was leased for twenty-one years at $2,000 a year. The average price for a 25x75 lot on this property appears to be about $1,200, giving an aggregate of $102,000 a year. This is, of course, an estimate based on the price of the small number of leases recently recorded. It is, however, believed to be quite within the mark, and in a very few years renewal of leases will increase the sum.

In 1814 the Legislature gave to the college Dr. Hosack's botanic garden, acquired by the State in 1810. This property extends along Fifth avenue from Forty-seventh to Fifty-first streets and westward to a line parallel with and about 100 feet from Sixth avenue. For many years the college derived no benefit from this property, but at the time of the legislative investigation, already referred to, it valued it at from $350,000 to $400,000. In 1857 eight lots at the corner of Forty-eighth street and Fifth avenue were sold to the Collegiate Dutch church, the consideration named in the deed being one dollar and a mortgage for $80,000. The tract sold was 200 feet square, and hence included the whole avenue front from Forty-eighth to Forty-ninth streets and the Forty-eighth street front for 200 feet back toward Sixth avenue. The church occupies but eight of these lots, and most of the remainder have since passed into the hands of private parties and they have increased enormously in value. A single lot, from which the house has been removed, on Fifth avenue, just above the church, is now offered for sale, the price being $70,000. To appreciate this it must be remembered that the whole tract containing 248 full lots, was vainly offered for sale at $18,000 in 1825, and in 1854 it was estimated as worth $350,000 to $400,000, while, at the average price for all lots, indicated by the price of that on Fifth avenue, the selling price of the whole tract would be between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000. The college still owns three-fourths of the avenue front and all the street fronts. The selling value of its property, then, must certainly be more than $4,000,000.

From 1860 lots were leased on this property, the first leases being for rents that would now be considered low. Lots 16x100 leased for $288 a year; lots 20x100 for $350; lots 22x100 for $400, and lots 25x100 for $450. As the region soon became thickly populated rents rapidly advanced, and now, twenty years later, the average ground rent on a 20x100 lot, the tenant paying all taxes, is about $1.200 a year, and its income from ground rents on the 248 lots still remaining to it on the Botanic garden property, must, at this rate, be $297,600 per annum. Adding to this, $102,000, which is a low estimate of its receipts from its down-town property, we have an aggregate of $399,600 as the probable annual income of Columbia from ground rents alone. To this must, of course, be added the thousands of dollars received from students in the academic, medical and other departments. Dr. Sears, writing of the college in 1869, spoke of its income at that time as "princely." It would trouble him to find an adjective by which he could characterize its income to-day. It is possible that the income does not quite equal the figures given in our estimate, but if such is the fact, it is due to the failure of the management to get all that he could out of the property. In many cases leases granted by the managers for twenty-one years have subsequently been sold for a large bonus. The money that thus goes into private pockets, would, together with the Columbia rents, go into the public treasury under a system that placed all taxation on land values.

The trustees, however, are keenly alive to the advantages of land speculation, for we find that in 1872 they bought from Gouvernor M. Ogden, Stephen P. Nash, and Charles R. Swords, ten acres of ground west of Eleventh avenue, in the neighborhood of 106th street, for $375,000. Perhaps it is the intention to move the institution to this site at some future day, but land in that neighborhood is now advancing rapidly in value.

The most cursory examination of the facts show that, enormous as is the income now derived by the college from its legal power to levy a tax on land in the most valuable business and residential quarters of the city, the managers of the estate have not wisely administered it. The leasing of property for so long a period as fifty-nine years at a nominal price, the permanent alienation of some of the most valuable of its down town property, for a mere bagatelle of a rent, and the sale of the Fifth avenue property to enable the trustees to meet embarrassments occasioned by these earlier blunders, all show that so long as land is permitted to be subject to private taxation for either personal or semi-public use the testators granting it for the establishment of trusts are wise to make it inalienable. A comparison of the management of the Columbia College estate with that of the Snug Harbor and Dutch Reformed properties makes this plain.

But suppose this property, all of which at one time belonged either to the English sovereign or to the people of New York, in their sovereign capacity, had never been handed over to private control, though set aside for the promotion of education. In that case none of the mistakes that have retarded the growth of Columbia college could have occurred. The right to occupation having been granted in consideration of the payment of a land tax equal to the rental value, such a bargain as that which has enriched the Rhinelander estate at the expense of the college would have been impossible. Furthermore, no necessity to provide for taxes would have arisen to even suggest the advisability of a sixty-nine years' lease for a nominal consideration. Public improvements being made at public expense, no assessments would have fallen on the Botanical Garden property, and for the whole period during which the property lay idle and a source of expense, it would have been yielding some revenue had it been open to the occupancy of whosoever chose to put it to use. But, most important of all, the natural operation of the law of rent would have given the institution a steadily rising income from the land tax absolutely proportioned to the increase in population that made new demands upon it for enlarged educational facilities.

Thus planted and nurtured it would have naturally become the real head of our system of public instruction, and would ere this have grown into a university overshadowing all others, as New York outranks all other cities in wealth and population. No cast iron rule made by men who have lain in their graves for a century could have subjected the college to the suspicion of sectarianism. No self-perpetuating board of trustees could have deepened that impression by an act of bigotry and then have safely defied the law they had violated. With Columbia college recognized by the people as their own, and an object of pride and affection, the citizens of New York would not have voted in 1848 to the disgust of Columbia's trustees, "The College of the City of New York," and the Normal college (for women) would only have come into existence as natural outgrowth of Columbia college. Nor is this all. The advantages of the wealthy institution would not have been open only to the sons of the well-to-do who can pay admission and tuition fees which, nevertheless, do not meet one-third of the expenses of their education, but instruction could have been free to all and would certainly have extended to the thousands of students who have graduated from the two city colleges within the past fifteen years, and better work could have been more economically done by the single university than by the three colleges separately. Columbia would have been a name to conjure with. The college would have possessed the support and affection of the people, and the celebration of the hundredth anniversary of its existence would not have been left to the fantastic folly of masquerading students and the dreary platitudes of dry-as-dust orators, enlivened by the usual solo performance of that professional comedian, the lily-handed and horny-tongued son of toil, Chauncey M. Depew.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

WIL KENNEDY, editor of the Boulder, Mont., Age, has been proposed as a candidate for State Senator from Jefferson County, to represent the single tax principle. The nomination will be by individuals, in accordance with the new ballot act of that State, and if it is decided that he shall make the run the nominating paper will be filed with the clerk and recorder of the county.

A New Bear Story.

From the Anaconda Standard.

Everett Paxson, A. Rudolph, Wil Morris and Julius Jacobs, brother of City Treasurer Jacobs, returned from Yellowstone Park, where they have been fishing, hunting and loafing for five weeks. They are as bronzed as Indians and as fruitful in yarns as sailors. They killed car loads of small game, all of which was shipped East. As to large game, many bears were seen, but the gang fought shy of them.

Julius Jacobs, however, had a wonderful adventure with a bear, which is worth recording. On horseback he rode some distance from the camp and got away from his companions. Tethering his horse to a tree in the dense forest, he cast his eagle eye around for game, and when several rods from his horse he descried an immense bear glaring him full in the face. Jacobs wasn't loaded for bear. If he had been it would have been a simple and ordinary bear story. The bear wasn't very troublesome, but whenever Jacobs started to retreat bruin would advance a few paces towards him.

If he advanced toward the bear, the bear would show his teeth and retreat a few steps. Thus, with considerable manœuvering, about the same relative positions were maintained. Jacobs searched all his pockets for a suitable weapon, and finally found a tenpenny nail. A bright idea seized him, and he carefully drew the bird shot from his gun and loaded it up with the tenpenny nail. The bear was standing with his tail against the trunk of a tree. Jacobs took careful aim, fired and nailed the bear's tail fast to the tree. The bear was now unable to advance toward Jacobs and he retreated in safety to where his horse was tethered.

Arrived at this point another brilliant idea struck Jacobs. He took his riding whip and returned to the scene of the adventure. He began flaying the bear with the whip, in spite of the bear's howls and protests. Finally the hide was so loosened that the bear jumped clear out of his skin and made his way into the woods with yells of distress. Jacobs calmly drew the nail from the tree, slung the skin over his shoulder, mounted his horse and returned to camp.

Unfortunately, while the caravan was crossing the Jefferson river the bear skin tumbled off and was lost. Jacobs, however, still has the tenpenny nail and can show it.

His Mind Unsettled by a Dog Bite.

A curious case presented itself at the Pasteur institute in the person of a man who had received a slight bite on the little finger of his left hand. The hand and forearm swelled to enormous proportion and caused the man excruciating pain. The hydrophobia question has been agitated so much lately that the man at once concluded that he was becoming a victim of the dread malady. While he and his wife were peacefully sleeping, he suddenly awoke and almost bit a piece out of her neck. This circumstance as much as anything else put the man in a distressing state of mind. He determinded to apply for admission to the Pasteur institute.

While waiting in the parlor his mind suddenly became a blank, his face assumed a ghastly hue, and the eyes stuck out in their sockets to much more than their normal size. He talked wildly, and could remember nothing that had happened. All at once he came out of his strange condition and talked naturally. He said he remembered losing his senses, but further than that he knew nothing. The dog that bit him is a common cur and is not mad, but the physicians at the institute think that the matter has preyed so forcibly upon the man's mind that it has temporarily unsettled him.—New York Tribune.

What Might Happen Elsewhere

The New Review, of August, 1885, relates, with the dry conciseness of an annalist, that a lady had a dress of Chinese silk on her when she entered the Batoum custom house, on her way to the railway station. She had no luggage whatever. The custom house officials, however, required her to pay duty for the dress she wore. She refused. Her husband, who accompanied her, was indignant, and qualified the demand as unjustifiable extortion. In answer to these protests the official said simply: "All right, I confiscate the dress." And Mme. Dzaparidze, who at once became hysterical, was forthwith undressed and was obliged to traverse the city from one end to the other—in returning to her hotel—in her linen. —Fortnightly Review

How to Sweep a Store.

We don't use a leaky old sprinkling pot to sop the floor all over in puddles when we sweep. No, sir! We have wet sawdust, and I put a row of it across one end of the store and sweep that right along to the other end, just like a regiment marching across a ten acre lot. It catches all the dirt and carries it along. If it gets a little dry, I add some more. Some folks scatter sawdust all over the floor, but Mr. Vanders says that's no good; that the reason for using sawdust is to avoid wetting the floor all over and to have something that will absorb the dust.—Commercial Enquirer

$1 A WEEK

Club System

which as convenient to the buyer as any instalment system, is a wholesale spot cash system to us. The co-operation of the club members sells us 38 watches in each $38 Watch Club, and we get cash from the Club for each watch before it goes out, though each member only pays $1 a week. This is why we give you more for your money than any one else and why we are doing the largest watch business in the world. We sell only first quality goods, but our prices are about what others get for second quality. Our $10 Silver Watch is a substantial Silver (not imitation of any kind) Stem-Wind American Lever Watch—either hunting case or open. Our $25.00 Watch is a Stem-wind, Open Face, first quality, stiffened Gold American Lever Watch, guaranteed to wear 20 years. It is fully equal to any watch sold for $38 by others. We find a first-class Stiffened Gold Case much more satisfactory and serviceable than any Solid Gold Case that can be sold at less than double the money, as cheap solid cases are invariably thin, weak, of low quality, and worthless after short use. Our $38 Watch contains numerous important patented improvements, of vital importance to accurate timing—Patent Dustproof, Patent Stem Wind, &c., which we control exclusively. It is fully equal for accuracy, appearance, durability and service, to any $75 Watch, either Open Face or Hunting. Our $43.00 Railroad Watch is especially constructed for the most exacting use, and is the best Railroad Watch made, Open Face or Hunting. All these prices are either all cash or in clubs, $1.00 a week. An Ajax Watch Insulator given free with each Watch.

The Keystone Watch Club Co.

Main Office in Co.'s Own Building
904 WALNUT ST. PHILADA. PA.

Agents Wanted.

Ajax Watch Insulator, $1.00

A perfect protection against magnetism of any Watch. Sent by mail on receipt of price. ☞ We refer to any Commercial Agency.

WEBSTER

THE BEST INVESTMENT

For the Family, School, or Professional Library.

WEBSTER UNABRIDGED DICTIONARY
A LIBRARY IN ITSELF

Has been for years Standard Authority in the Government Printing Office and U. S. Supreme Court.

It is highly recommended by 38 State Sup'ts of Schools and the leading College Presidents.

Nearly all the School Books published in this country are based upon Webster, as attested by the leading School Book Publishers.

3000 more Words and nearly 2000 more Engravings than any other American Dictionary.

SPECIMEN TESTIMONIALS.

The New York World says: Webster is almost universally conceded to be the best.

The Boston Globe says: Webster is the acknowledged standard in lexicography.

The Atlanta Constitution says: Webster has long been the standard authority in our office.

The Chicago Inter Ocean says: Webster's Unabridged has always been the standard.

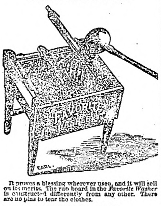
The New Orleans Times Democrat says: Webster is standard authority in our office.

The New York Tribune says: It is recognized as the most useful existing "word-book" of the English language all over the world.

Sold by all Booksellers. Pamphlet free.
G. & C. MERRIAM & CO., Pub'rs, Springfield, Mass.

THE FAVORITE WASHER

LEADS THE WORLD.



It proves a blessing wherever used, and it will sell on its merits. The rub board in the Favorite Washer is constructed differently from any other. There are no pins to tear the clothes.

AGENTS WANTED.

☞ Liberal Discounts Allowed.

Send for Circulars.

P. A. HOLT,

Manufacturer,

NEW RICHLAND, MINN.

GOLD
WARRANTED

FREE. OUR NEW $85 Solid Gold Watch FREE. Worth $100.00. Best $85 watch in the world. Perfect timekeeper. Warranted heavy, SOLID GOLD hunting cases. Both ladies' and gent's sizes, with works and cases of equal value. ONE PERSON in each locality can secure one free, together with our large and valuable line of Household Samples. These samples, as well as the watch, are free. All the work you need do is to show what we send you to those who call—your friends and neighbors and those about you—that always results in valuable trade for us, which holds for years when once started, and thus we are repaid. We pay all express, freight, etc. After you know all, if you would like to go to work for us, you can earn from $20 to $60 per week and upwards. Address, Stinson & Co., Box 812, Portland, Maine.

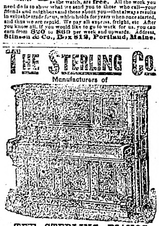
THE STERLING CO.

Manufacturers of



THE STERLING PIANOS,

WHICH FOR

Quality of Tone, Beauty of Design, FINISH and adaptability for standing in Tune have no equal.

Every Piano Warranted for Five Years

And satisfaction guaranteed to every purchaser.
Also Manufacture the WORLD-RENOWNED

STERLING ORGAN

Factories, Derby, Conn.

Take a policy in one of the reliable

Old Line Co's.

I represent several first class Insurance Companies and can

Guarantee Security

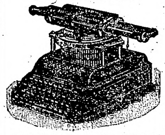
Satisfaction

To the Insured. Give us a call

John M. Boyle.

THE—

INTERNATIONAL TYPEWRITER!



A strictly first-class machine. Fully warranted. Made from very best material, by skilled workmen, and with the best tools that have ever been devised for the purpose. Warranted to do all that can be reasonably expected of the very best typewriter extant. Capable of writing 150 words per minute—or more—according to the ability of the operator.

Price - $100.00.

If there is no agent in your town, address the manufacturers,

THE PARISH MFG. CO.,
Agents Wanted. PARISH, N. Y.

FREE. STENOGRAPHY and TYPEWRITING FREE. First class facilities and best of teachers. Address, with stamp for return postage, THE PARISH MFG. CO., PARISH, N. Y.

WHAT IS GOING ON FOR MANY MILES AROUND IS ALL UNCOVERED TO THIS EYE, AYE MORE

One of the BEST Telescopes in the world. FREE Our facilities are unequaled, and to introduce our superior goods we will send FREE to ONE PERSON in each locality, as above. Only those who write to us at once can make sure of the chance. All you have to do in return is to show our goods to those who call—your neighbors and those around you. The beginning of this advertisement shows the small end of the telescope. The following cut gives the appearance of it reduced to about the fiftieth part of its bulk. It is a grand, double size telescope, as large as is easy to carry. We will also show you how you can make from $3 to $10 a day at least, from the start, without experience. Better write at once. We pay all express charges. Address, H. HALLETT & CO., Box 880, PORTLAND, MAINE.

SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN

Is the oldest and most popular scientific and mechanical paper published and has the largest circulation of any paper of its class in the world. Fully illustrated. Best class of Wood Engravings. Published weekly. Send for specimen copy. Price $3 a year. Four months' trial, $1. MUNN & CO., PUBLISHERS, 361 Broadway, N.Y.

ARCHITECTS & BUILDERS

Edition of Scientific American.

A great success. Each issue contains colored lithographic plates of country and city residences or public buildings. Numerous engravings and full plans and specifications for the use of such as contemplate building. Price $2.50 a year, 25 cts. a copy. MUNN & CO., PUBLISHERS.

PATENTS

may be secured by applying to MUNN & Co., who have had over 40 years' experience and have made over 100,000 applications for American and Foreign patents. Send for Handbook. Correspondence strictly confidential.

TRADE MARKS.

In case your mark is not registered in the Patent Office, apply to MUNN & Co., and procure immediate protection. Send for Handbook.

COPYRIGHTS for books, charts, maps, etc., quickly procured. Address

MUNN & CO., Patent Solicitors.
GENERAL OFFICE: 361 BROADWAY, N. Y.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Oct. 17, 1890.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the clerk of district court at Detroit, Minn., on Dec. 3rd, 1890, viz Charles Durand, pre-emption D. S. No. 5991 for the sw¼ sec 31 tp 150 rg 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz:

James C. O'Brien, John Moylan, Hugh Dean, Felix O'Claire, all of Red Lake, Minn.

o23nov27 A. Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Oct. 17, 1890.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the clerk of the district court at Detroit, Minn., on Dec. 3rd, 1890, viz: Felix O'Claire, pre-emption D. S. No. 5987 for the s½ nw¼ nw¼ ne¼ sec 33 and lot 4 sec 28 tp 150 rg 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz:

Charles Durand, James C. O'Brien, John Moylan and Hugh Dean, all of Red Lake Minn.

A. Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Oct. 17, 1890.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the clerk of Dist Court at Detroit, Minn., on Dec. 3d, 1890, viz:

James C. O'Brien, pre-emption D S No. 5984 for the se¼ sec 33 tp 150 rg 32.

He names the following witness to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz:

Felix O'Claire, Charles Durand, John Moylan, Hugh Dean, all of Red Lake, Minn.

A. Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Oct. 17, 1890.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the clerk of District Court at Detroit, Minn., on Dec. 3d, 1890, viz: Hugh Dean, Pre-emption D. S. No. 5983 for the nw¼ nw¼ sec 23 e½ nw¼ & lot 1 sec 22 twp tp 150 rg 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz:

James C. O'Brien, John Moylan, Charles Du[illegible] Felix O'Claire, all of Red Lake Minn.

A. Barto, Register.

$2.00 SAVED

by buying your Shoes of the Manufacturer.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED!

ONLY $2.50

for Shoes that usually retail at $4.00 and $5.00.

BUTTON. LACE. CONGRESS.

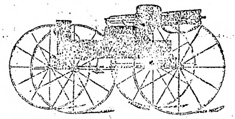
On receipt of $2.50 and twenty-five cents to pay expressage we will send one pair of our Fine Calf Shoes, Seamless Vamps, either Button, Lace or Congress. We Use only selected stock and the best workmanship. Every pair Warranted. Try our Shoes once and you will buy no others.

☞ Mention Size and Width wanted. Send postal note or N. Y. draft. Write your address plainly,—Town, County and State.

CUSTOM BOOT & SHOE CO.,
EAST WEYMOUTH, MASS.

McFARLAN CARRIAGE CO.

CONNERSVILLE, IND.



LARGE VARIETY. BEST STYLES.

LOW PRICES.

WRITE FOR CATALOGUE AND PRICE LIST.

McFARLAN CARRIAGE CO.,
Mention this paper. Connersville Ind

Red Lake Falls Iron Works.

P. & J MEEHAN, Proprietors.
J. Z. FERRON, Manager.

SAW AND GRIST MILL

MACHINERY MADE AND REPAIRED.

Repairing Thresher Engines

AND BOILERS AND

AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS.

Circular Saws Hammered. Satfaction Guaranteed, Correspondence Solicited.

BRING IN YOUR WORK

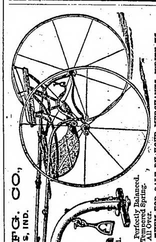
Scrap Brass and Copper Bought

Hunt & McClatchie

—DEALERS IN—

Heavy and Shelf Hardware.

DEERING FARM MACHINERY.



PARRY MFG. CO.,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

No. 7½.

Price, $18.00 at Factory, Cash with Order.

Strictly First-Class. Warranted.
All Second Growth Hickory.
Steel Axles and Tires.
Low Bent Seat Arms. Perfectly Balanced.
Long, Easy-Riding, Oil Tempered Spring.
Best Wheels and Best All Over.

IF YOU CAN'T FIND THEM FOR SALE BY YOUR MERCHANTS, WRITE US

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Oct. 3, 1890.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the clerk of the district court at Detroit, Minn., on November 20, 1890, viz: Edward J. Garceau, preemption D. S. No. 5990 for the n½ sw¼, sw¼ nw¼, sec 33 and lot 2, section 32 tp 150 r 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz: Michael Burns, John F. Crawford and Felix O'Claire, all of Red Lake, Minn.

A. Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Oct. 6, 1890.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the judge or in his absence the clerk of the district court at Detroit Minn. on Nov. 20, 1890, viz: Michael Burns, H E No. 14,905, for the s½ se¼, nw¼ se¼ and sw¼ ne¼ sec 34, tp 150 r 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz: Joseph P. Dargan, John F. Crawford, Edward J. Garceau, Felix O'Claire, all of Red Lake Minn.

oct9-nov13 A. Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn. Oct. 3, 1890.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the clerk of Dist. court at Detroit, Minn., on November 20th, 1890, viz: John F. Crawford, pre-emption D S No. 5985 for the e½ nw¼ nw, nw¼ sec 34, and sw¼ sw¼ sec 27, tp 150 r 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz: Machael Burns, Edward J. Garceau, Joseph P. Dargan, Felix O'Claire, all of Red Lake, Minn.

A. Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Oct. 3, 1890.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make the final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the clerk of the District court at Detroit, Minn., on November 20, 1890, viz: Joseph P. Dargan, pre-emption, D S No 5989, for the e½ ne¼, sw¼ ne¼, sec 33 and sw¼ nw¼ sec 34 tp 150 rg 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of, said land, viz: Michael Burns, Edward J. Garceau, John F. Crawford, Felix O'Clair, all of Red Lake, Minn. A. Barto, Register.

THE LITTLE GIANT
UTILE DULCI

BICYCLES

THE BEST 24 IN. SAFETY EVER MADE
ADJUSTABLE IN EVERY BEARING
AGENTS WANTED
CATALOGUE DESCRIBING OUR FULL LINE OF WHEELS SENT ON APPLICATION.
LOZIER & YOST BICYCLE M'F'G. CO.
TOLEDO, OHIO.

P. & J MEEHAN,

(SUCCESSORS TO J. J. HOWE & CO)

Manufacturers and Dealers in

LUMBER,

LATH,

SHINGLES

Sash, Doors, Moldings, Building Paper,

Yards and Office on Main St.

We Would Like to Call the Attention of

Capitalists

Manufacturers and Others Desiring a Place for

INVESTMENT

To the

Superior Advantages of

RED LAKE FALLS,

Is Many Water Powers and other natural advantages. It is only a question of a few years until this will be one of the leading cities of Minnesota. Investment in real estate or water privileges are sure to secure to the investors handsome returns.

WE RE

In the Center of Vast

Farming District.

Yearly consuming large amounts of imported products of manufactures. This vast tract of land is watered by the Red Lake and Clearwater rivers. Within the limits of the city are

12 DISTINCT WATER POWERS.

The only natural water powers on these streams. There are fine openings for paper and pulp mills, woolen and other factories. Parties outside desiring any information concerning property, address

BOYLE & MEEHAN.

RED LAKE FALLS NEWS.

JAMES MEEHAN JR., EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR | OFFICIAL PAPER OF CITY AND COUNTY.

Vol. VII. No. 48. RED LAKE FALLS, POLK COUNTY, MINNESOTA, NOVEMBER 6, 1890. TERMS, $1.50 PER YEAR

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

>SPECIAL<

CLOAK - SALE

>THIS WEEK<

JOSEPH SMITH & CO.

TO MAKE ROOM FOR

Fall and Winter Goods

WE WILL OFFER

For : the - Next : Fifteen - Days

AN ENTIRE STOCK OF

SpRing and SummeR

CLOTHING AT COST

This Includes Youths' Boys' and Men's Suits.

Our Stock of

FUR - COATS

Will Arrive About Sept. 26.

A SPECIAL REDUCTION IN

Ladies' Oxfords and Summer Footwear.

ALL THIS WEEK.

A SNAP—A Ladie's Fine Shoe For $1.50.

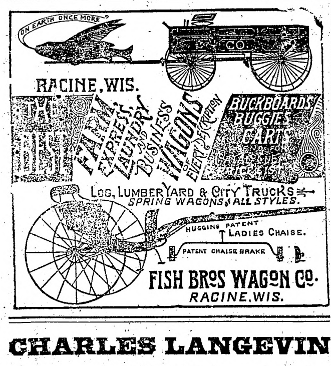
We Have Just Received a Line of

LADIES' FRENCH KID SHOES.

Which we Sell Very Cheap.

School Shoes, School Shoes, School Shoes.

W. A. SCHREITER.



ON EARTH ONCE MORE
CO.
RACINE, WIS.
THE BEST
FARM EXPRESS LAUNDRY AND BUSINESS WAGONS OF EVERY DESCRIPTION
BUCKBOARDS BUGGIES CARTS
LOG, LUMBER YARD & CITY TRUCKS
SPRING WAGONS of ALL STYLES.
HUGGINS PATENT LADIES CHAISE.
PATENT CHAISE BRAKE
FISH BROS WAGON CO.
RACINE, WIS.

CHARLES LANGEVIN

—DEALER IN—

GENERAL MERCHANDISE,

RED LAKE FALLS, MINNESOTA

A STILL MORE

Important : Event !

ECLIPSE THEM ALL!

The New Store.

H. M. KauS.

Has moved into his new building on Main street and opened a store consisting of general merchandise.

Henry wishes to inform the public that he has a well asorted stock, good goods and low prices that will astonish everybody.

He is the only merchant in town that can BOAST of having the least expenses in conducting his store, &

Remember,

CONSEQUENTLY

He can and will sell you goods at THE LOWEST POSSIBLE MARGIN, and

Do you know?

☞He will duplicate the price of any list of groceries outside of sugar and coffee sold by the so-called Minneapolis Wholesale House.

He is receiving large invoices of goods nearly every day and intends to carry as complete a stock as any in town.

Give the New Store a Call.

Merit Wins.

We desire to say to our citizens, that for years we have been selling Dr Kings New discovery for consumption Dr Kang New Life pills, Bucklins Arnica salve and Electric Bitters and have never handled remedies that sell as well, or that gives such satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price, if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits. W. A. Schrieter, Druggest.

ASafe Investment

Is one which is guaranteed to bring you satisfactory results, or in case of failure a return of purchase price. On this safe plan you can buy from our advertised Druggest a bottle of Dr. Kings New Discovery of Consumption. It is guaranteed to bring relif in every case, when used for any affection of Throat, Lungs or Chest, such as Consumption, Inflammation of lungs, Bronchitis Asthma, whooping cough, Croup, etc., etc. It is pleasant and agreeable to taste, perefectly safe and can alway be depended opon. Trial bottle free at W. A. Schreiter's drugstore.

The Queen Pays All Expenses

The Queens last free Trip to Europ having excited such universal interests, the publishers of that popular magazine offer another and $200 for expenses to the person sending them the largest list of English words constructed from letters containing the three words British North America. Additional prizes consisting of Silver Tea Sets, China Dinner Sets, Gold Watches, French Music Boxes' Portier Curtians, Silk Dresses Mantel Flakes and many other useful and valuable articles will also be awarded in order of merit. A special prize of a Seal Skin jacket to the lady, and a handsome Shetland Pony to boy or girl (delivered free in Canada or United States) sending the largest lists Everyone sending a list of twenty words will recieve a presen send six U. S. stamps for complete rules, illustrated catalogue of prizes, and sample numbers of the Queen. Address The Arnadian, Queen Toronto, Canada.

Rather Sensational.

From the East Grand Fork News.

There has been much excstement over an investigation into the charge that Charles Bushee had killed his little two year old girl, on the assumption that the child was somebody's else. Coroner Shepherd had a jury taking testimony, but no direct evidence sustaining the charge is reported. The child at the time of its death was buried in the Catholic cemetery, in Grand Forks and the cause as given out by the parents was that something fell on it. When coronor exhumet the coffin it was found empty. There were no evidence that the grave was reently disturbed, so that the body must have been taken out soon after interment. No clue has yet been foud to the body. The accounts given by Bushee and his wife are said to conflict some. But the law and public decency reqnire equally that they be innocent of so grave a charge until conclusively proven guilty. One story given out is that Bushee came home and whipped his wife, who told the little girl to go and call in a neighbor, which is fishy to begin with. Then Bushee in his rage seized the infant and beat out its brains against the stove. There can be no truth in this either. Mrs. Bushee visited her husband at the city jail yesterday and when she was there Bushee wept like a child. He stoutly maintains that he did not kill the child.

Buying Railroad Tickets.

There are a good many people who do not know how to buy a railroad ticket for a journey of over a hundred miles. Think not? Well, it's true. We knew an editor An intelligent man, who was going from an interior Illinois town to Manchester, Vermont. H bough to Chicago—could do better, you know—let an agent sell him to Manchester, New Hampshire. Got into Montreal Saturday night, couldn't get away till Monday morning, then had no ticket to his destination, and paid fare Montreal to his Vermont town. He simply didn't know how to buy a ticket. Your local railroad agent may not look like a very smart man; he may not have a front pew in church; he may not rank high in town's social circles; but he knows more about railroad rates and connections than you do. If you are contemplating a trip, just call at his office, tell him where you want to go, and that you want your tickets to read over "The Burlington," then take his advice about all the rest. That is the way to buy a ticket. For any particulars about "The Burlington" whic your agent cannot give, write to W. J. C Kenyon, Gen. Pass. Agent C. B. & N. R.R. St. Paul Minn.

Keep out of Debt.

We occasionally hear it said of some millionaire, that he is "independely" rich. But if he is engaged in buiness, or heavy interests in railroad, mining or banking stocks, he may be rich, but by no means "independently" so for a continuance of his prosperity depends very much on the good will and patronage of the public. The man who is really "independent" is the farmer who is out of debt, with something ahead. Some one is always ready to give him the market price for all he has to sell' no matter wether he is popular and agreeable or not. While the merchant must trust peoble for goods or lose trade the farmer may demand, and receive, the hard cash for every bushel of grain and every animal he sell. Many farmers in the Northwest are in that happy condition and we would offer them only two pieces of advice which if follwd will enable them always to be happy and independent. One is: keep out of debt. The other is: always travel by the Burlington. The best line—always takes care of you. Apply to any agents of The Burlington, to your nearest railroad agent or to W. J. C. Kenyon. Gen. Pass. Agent, C. B. & N. R. R., St Paul, Minn., and you need take no further trouble about a journey.

The New Discovery

You hear your friends and neighbors talking about it. You may yourself be one of the many who know from personal experience just how good a thing it is. If you have ever tried it, you are one of its staunch friends because the wonderful thing about it is, that when once given a trial, Dr. King's New Discovery ever after holds a place in the house. If you have never used it and should be afflicted with a cough, cold or any Throat, Lung or Chest trouble, secure a bottle at once and give it a fair trial. It is guaranteed every time, or money refunded.

Trial Bottles Free at W. A. Schreiter's

Dr. A. T. Doll, who has been in the practice of medicine at North English, Iowa, since 1868, says he often prescribes Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea remedy, because he knows it to be reliable. For sale by W. A. Schreiter.

Important Facts TO THE PUBLIC.

FACT 1.—

I have been doing a Cash Business ever since I knew the value of money, and not only 1 summer.

FACT 2.—

I don't advertise Large Store, and Numerous Salesmen, with heavy expenses for my customers to pay for.

FACT 3.—

There is a small store between the rivers that is plumb full of General Merchandise. The proprietor of this store works hard, does all his own work and his expenses are next to nothing. That man's name is ED HAMRY, and he will sell you the best goods in the market cheaper than you buy old trashy goods at some of those windy stores.

FACT 4.—

When you want good goods cheap you should go to

ED HAMRY.

A Good Offer.

Do you read The Cosmopolitan, that bright, sparkling young magazine? The cheapest illustrated monthly in the world. 25 cents a number. $2.40 per year. Enlarged, October, 1889, to 128 pages. The Cosmopolitan is literally what the New York Times calls it, "At its price, the brightest, most varied and best edited of the magazines." An unusual opportunity for new subscribers for one year only:

The Cosmopolitan, per year....	$2 40
The NEWS, per year............	1 50
The price of both.............	3 90
We will furnish both for only....	3 00

This offer is only to new subscribers to the Cosmopolitan, and only for one year. The Boston Journal says "It has more articles in each number that are readable, and fewer uninteresting pages, than any of its contemporaries." The Cosmopolitan for the first time in magazine literature, a splendidly illustrated Periodical at a price hitherto deemed impossible. Try it for a year. It will be a liberal educator to every member of the household. It will make the nights pass pleasantly. Send $3 00 to this offite and secure both the Cosmopolitan and the NEWS.

A Present to our Subscribers.

It is with pleasure that we announce to our many patrons that we have made arrngements with that wide-awake, illustrated farm magazine, the American Farmer, published at Fort Wayne, Ind., and read by nearly 200,000 farmers by which that great publication will be mailed direct, FREE, to the address of any of our subscribers who will come in and pay up all arrearages on subscription and one year in advance from date, and to any new subscriber who will pay one year in advance. This is a grand opportunity to obtain a first-class farm journal free. The American Farmer is a large 16-page journal of national circulation, which ranks among the leading agricultural papers. It treats the question of economy in agriculture and the rights and privileges of that vast body of citizens—American Farmers—whose industry is the basis of all material and national prosperiy. Its highest purpose is the elevation and ennobling of Agriculture through the higher and broader education of men and women engaged in its pursuits. The regular subscription price of the American farmer is $1.00 per year. IT COSTS YOU NOTHING. From any one number ideas can be obtained that will be worth thrice the subscripion price to you or members of your household, YET YOU GET IT FREE. Call and see sample copy.

Bucklin's Arnica Salve.

The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by W. A. Schreiter.

How Severe Colds are Broken up in Montana.

When we find a medicine we know to possess genuine merit, we consider it a duty, and take pleasure in telling the public what it is. Such a medicine we found Chamberlain's Cough remedy, last winter, when la grippe was prevailing We are satisfied that we warded off several attacks that were threatening by the use of this syrup and we have since relieved in a few hours, severe colds, and in the course of two or three days, entirely broken them up by its use, as have several of our friends to whom we have recommended it. It is all that it is represented to be by the manufacturers. If you have cough and want to stop it Chamberlain Cough remedy will do the work, for sale by W. A. Schreiter.

A Preventive For Croup.

The discovery of preventive for croup, is one of the most important made in recent years. Since first discovered it has been used in many cases and with unvarying success. Its being within the reach of all makes it the more valuable. It is only necessary to give Chamberlain's cough remedy freely as soon as the first indications of croup appear, and it will dispel all symptoms of the disease. Full directions are given with each bottle. For 50 cents at Schreieters.

There may be persons in this community who are at times troubled with colic, or subject to attacks of bowel complaint If so, they should try Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It will afford almost immediate relief, and when reduced with water is pleasant to take. If taken as soon as the first indication of the disease is felt it will ward off the attack. Many people use it in this way, and find that it never fails them. A 25 or 50 cent bottle may be obtained a W. A. Schreiter's.

THE

WISCONSIN CENTRAL LINES

RUNS

Fast trains with Pullman Vestibuled Drawing Room Sleepers, Dining Cars and Coaches of latest design, between Chicago and Milwaukee and St. Paul and Minneapol.

Fast train with Pullmant Vestibuled Drawing Room Sleeping Dining Cars and Coaches of latest design between Chicago and Milwaukee and Ashland and Duluth.

Through Pullman Vestibuled Drawing Room and Colonist Sleepers via the Northern Pacific Railroad between Chicago and portland, Ore.

Conveniete Trains to and from Eastern, Western, Northern and Contril Wisconsin points, affording unequalled service to and from Waukesha, Fond du Lac, Oshkosk, Neenah, Menasha, Chippewa Fall, Eau Claire, Hurley, Wis., and Ironwood and Bessemer, Mich.

For tickets, sleeping car reservations, time tables and other information, apply to Agents of the line, or to ticket Agents anywhere in the Unitsd States or Canada.

S. L. Ainslie, Gen. Man., Milwaukee.
J. M. Hansford, Gen. Traf. Man. St. Paul.
H. C. Barlow, Traffic Man. Chicago.
Louis Eckstein, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, Chicago.

In conjunction with the Erie System operates Fast Vestibuled Trains between Chicago and the Atlantic Seaboard. you may travel in the most Elegant and complete Pullman Vestibuled Trains ever constructed and save $1.50 to Buffalo and Niagara Falls, $3.00 to New York $2.35 to Albany and Troy, and $3.00 to Boston and New England Cities.

No rival line offers the advantages of a system of throuh first and second-class day coaches and Pullman Dining cars chicago to New York.

It is the only line operating pullman cars to Boston and New England via Albany.

Entire trains are lighted by gas, heated by steam. Pullman dining cars run through in either direction.

Pullman chair and sleeping cars to Columbus, O., and Ashland, Ky., Daily.

No extra charge for fast time and unsurpassed accommodations afforded by these luxurious trains.

CAPTAIN BRAND

OR

THE PIRATE SCHOONER.

A TALE OF THE SEA

PART II.

CHAPTER XLI.

DEVOTION.

Sunday morning in Kingston harbor. The deep-toned bells from Cathedral and church were wafted off from the town; the troops at Park Camp marching with easy tread to their chapel; matrons and maidens, with bare heads, fans and mantillas, going along demurely; portly judges, factors, and planters trudging beside the palanquins of their Saxon spouses; negroes in white; Creoles in brown, cigarritos put out for a time; while the rolling sound of organs and chants, to prayers and sermons, from kirk and pulpits, told how the people were worshipping God according to their beliefs.

On the calm harbor, too, and in Port Royal, lay the men-of-war, the church pennants taking the place of the ensigns at the peaks, the bells tolling, and the sailors—quiet, clean, and orderly—were attending Divine service.

On board the Monongahela the great spar-deck was comparatively deserted—all save that officer with his spy-glassing old quarter-master, and the sentries on gangway and forecastle. The ropes, however, were flemished down in concentric coils, the guns without a speck of dust on their shining coats, the capstan polished like an old brass candle-stick, and everything alow and aloft in a faultless condition.

As Harry Darcantel came rather languidly over the gangway, and went down to the main-deck, where the five hundred sailors in snowy-white mustering clothes were assembled, Commodore Cleveland beckoned to him with his finger as he stood talking at the cabin-door to his first lieutenant.

"Hardy, I do not feel well this morning; make my excuses to the chaplain, and go on with the service. Come in, Harry. Orderly allow no one, not even the servants, to enter the cabin—except Doctor Darcantel, in case he should come on board."

The curtains of the after-cabin were closely drawn, even to shut out the first whisper of the young sea-breeze which was fluttering in from Port Royal, and there stood that noble officer, with his strong arm thrown around the gallant youth—the picture of abject woe—talking in his kind, feeling accents, trying to console him, painting the sky bright in the distance, and begging him, by all the love and affection he bore him through so many years, to be a man, and trust to his good conscience and his right arm to cleave his way through the clouds and gloom which surrounded him.

"There, Henry, you are calmer now. Sit down here in my state-room, and while you think of that fond girl give a thought to that poor, bereaved mother, Madam Rosalie, who loves you for the resemblance she thinks you bear to her little boy who was murdered by pirates, just seventeen years ago, off this very island."

"What do you say, Cleveland?" said a voice behind him, with such a deep, concentrated energy that the commodore fairly started. "What did you say about a lost child and a Madam Rosalie?"

Paul Darcantel stood there in the softened crimson light with his sinewy, bony hands upraised, his gaunt breast heaving, with unshorn beard and tangled, grizzly locks, the iron jaw half open, and his dark, terrible eyes gleaming with unearthily fire.

"Speak, Harry Cleveland! For the wife you have lost, speak!"

"My dear, dearest friend; do be calm! Why have you been so long away from me? I wanted you here, but you did not come. Our poor boy has had his first lesson in the world's grief, and I have felt obliged to tell him all—yes, everything! That the grave he has so often wept over under the magnolias, does not contain his mother; and that——"

"Merciful Heaven!" said Paul Darcantel, sinking down on his knees, with his hands clasped together, while the first tears for more than twenty years streamed from his agonized eyes. "There is a Providence in it all. That boy is not my son! I saved him from the pirate's grasp, and that woman must be his mother."

Lower and lower the lofty head bent, till it touched the deck, the bony hand clasped tight together—and those eyes! Ah, those parched eyes; No longer dry!

"Paul, Paul, what is this I hear? For the love of Heaven and those angels who are waiting for us, speak again."

"My father—my more than father, I am not illegitimate, then! No such shame may cause your boy to blush for his mother?"

While strong and loving arms raised the exhausted man from the deck, and while he becomes once more the same determined Paul Darcantel, and with hand grasped in hand is rapidly recounting unknown years of his existence, let us leave the cabin.

CHAPTER XLII.

ALL ALIVE AGAIN.

Before the hands were turned to from dinner, the cabin-bell rang so violently that the orderly's brass scale-plate fixtures on his leather hat fairly rang too as he opened the sacred door.

"Tell the first lieutenant I want him."

The dismayed soldier forgot to lay his white worsted finger on his visor as he slammed to the door and marched out on the gun-deck."

"Mr. Hardy, unmoor ship! Hoist a jack at the fore and fire a gun for a pilot! Get the frigate under way, sir, and be quick about it!"

"Ay, ay, sir!"

As Hardy rapidly passed his old cronies, who were tramping along the deck as he mounted the after ladder, he said, with a nod—

"I haven't seen the commodore in such a breeze since he blew that pirate out of water at Darien."

In a minute the Monongahela's bell struck two, and the boatswain and his mates, piping as if their hairy throats would split, roared out, "all hands!" and a moment later, "All hands unmoor ship!"

"What the blazes does this mean?" said a cook of a mess to the old quarter-master, who had just come down from his watch.

"Mean? why, you lazy blind duff b'iler, it means that I've lost my blessed dinner."

"Hello!" says Rat to Beaver, "what's that? Unmoor ship on my liberty day! I swear I'll resign!"

No you won't reefers, but you'll trip aloft as fast as your little legs will carry you—Mouse in company—up to the fore, main and mizzen tops, and squeak there as much as you like; but jump about and look sharp that nothing goes wrong, or Mr. Hardy will be down upon you like a main tack.

Bang from the bow port, and the union-jack at the fore!

"Bless my heart, fellows, this is the most shameful tyranny I ever heard of!" came from the ward-room; "all of us engaged to dine at Kingston this evening, and——"

"'It's 'All hands up anchor, gentlemen!'"—and away they all went.

"Massa captain," said the shining ebony pilot, in his snowy suit, as he took off his fine white Panama hat, "dis is de ole pilot, sa, Peter Crabreef—name after dat black rock way dere outside. Suppose you tink ob beating dis big frigate troo de channel? Unpossible, wid dis breeze!"

"Peter Crabreef," said the old sailing-master to whom these observations were addressed, "you had better not give such a hint to that gentleman there in the epaulets; for if you do, you'll never see Mrs. Cabreef again! You had better keep your wits about you, too, and plenty of water under the keel, for the commodore is fond of water!"

"Sartainly, massa ossifa! I is old Peter, and never yet touch a nail of man-of-war copper on de reefs!"

On board the pigmy black schooner near, half a dozen old salt veterans were squinting at the flag-ship and holding much deliberate speculation as to what all the row meant. Old Harry Greenfield, however, with Ben Brown, who were the gunner and boatswain of the little vessel, observed that, "In the ewent of our bein' wanted, ye see, Harry, it will be as well to have the deck tackle stretched along for heavin' in, and get the prop from under the main boom."

Even as they spoke, a few bits of square bunting went up in balls to the mizen of the frigate, and, blowing out clear, said, as plain as flags could speak, "Prepare to weigh anchor!"

Again were heard the quick notes of the fifes on both decks, and in less than five minutes more the anchors were catted, and the Monongahela, under a cloud of canvas, began to move.

But where was the Rosalie, late Perdita, all this time? Why, there she goes with never a tack through the narrow strait, lying over under the press of her white dimity like a witch on a black broomstick, as she shoots out to sea.

It was not another five minutes before the other thirty-nine old sea-dogs knew all about everybody, and where they were bound and so on. They did not care a brass button for the thousand silver dollars they were to have from the tall gentleman. Not they! They wanted merely to lay their eyes along that Long Tom amidships, and to have a cutlass flashing over their shoulders!

But where was the Martha Blunt? Oh, that old teak brig was bouncing along past Morant Point, with a good slant from the southward, pretty much where she was seventeen years before, with a few more passengers in her deck cabin, reading their Bibles and praying on that Sabbath-day for those who go down to the sea in ships.

And where was the Spanish brigantine, with the exacting capitano—who was a slaver in dull times—and his pleasant mate, who would think no more of sticking a knife into you than he did of kicking that skulking ice-eyed sailor on board—detesting as he did the entire Saxon race ever since Cadiz was bombarded—and feeding him on rotten jerked beef? There were no prayers, only imprecations on board that brigantine, as she dropped anchor in St. Jago that fine Sunday morning.

And where was our ancient one-eyed mariner, formerly in command of the colonial guarda costa felucca, the Panchita, named after his fat banana of a sposa? Oh, the don—simply Ignacio—now had had a quiet confab with the deputy administrador, all about some treasure which he knew was concealed, and where—for he had seen with his bright eye, the light of a torch in a cleft of a crag—and he would go shares with that official if he would give him a little assistance.

"Oh, cierto!" why not? And there was an old launch, with a torn lateen sail, which Columbus might have been proud to command; and, in this fine weather, he might sail back to Port Palos in her.

Oh, yes! But to keep all secret, he would merely take old Pancha, his wife, for crew. And so, with a few bundles of paper cigars and some dried fish and water—the only property they possessed save his eye and a pack of cards, and those valuables they rescued with difficulty—they sailed before the blessed Sunday. He never came back, though. No blame attributable to the eye—that was as bright and wary an old burning spark of suspicious fire as ever; but then old Pancha held the cards, and this time she won. Very singular it was, cierto. If Ignacio had not gone back again for another bag—which was not there—— Ah! we won't anticipate.

But we are all alive yet, except those murdered women, whose white coral headstones still stand up there in the cactus, and poor Binks, and those slashing blades of the pirate schooner, who were eaten by the sharks. All alive, the rest of us; and wide awake!

CHAPTER XLIII.

THE ROPE LAID UP.

Well, the positions of all hands were simply these. The ice-eyed man, without snuff-box or ring on that mutilated flipper, with two under-pockets in his shirt, and something in them, a pair of filthy old canvas trousers, and no hanger by his side—when there had been so much hanging in the good old times—slipped overboard like a conger-eel, and swam on shore at St. Jago de Cuba. Without a real of wages—for he was to work his passage—and because he didn't feel inclined to work, the capitano in command assisted his agile subordinate to kick him all the voyage.

So soon as the icy-blue man had congealed, as it were, in the sun until he was quite dry and frozen again, he slunk away to the ditch of the old fort where he thawed till nightfall, and then entered the town.

Presently coming to the wide streets and to the outskirts of the town, he spied a large mule, ready caparisoned for the road, hitched to the door of a house, waiting for his owner to mount him. The icy green-eyed individual, disgusted for the time with blue salt-water, and being, as we know, a capital cavalry man—in dashing charges among the patriots, and caprioling also up the Blue Mountain to Escondido—thought he would take another gallop on the dry ground, just to keep his hand and little finger in. So he quietly cast off the mules's painter, and flung his canvas legs over the beast as if he belonged to him. And so he did; for he told the man at whose place he passed an hour or two that night, and who thought he knew the master to whom the mule had once belonged, that it had been presented to him by an old friend, whose name—as had the mule's—escaped him.

All this time the one-eyed man, with his banana woman, Pancha, were creeping along the water part of the land—with the peak of Tarquina in sight—toward Cape Cruz, bound round that peninsula, and so on to the Doce Leguas Keys; while the man on the mule navigated by the Sierras del Cobre of St. Jago, steering by bridle for Manzanillo, and then to take water again for the same secret destination.

The cargo they both expected to take in there was about ten thousand pounds sterling, in mildewed coin of various realms and denominations; but it was there, and would pass current anywhere.

So they sailed and navigated. It was tedious work, though. And it took a week for the old launch with the torn sail to get into the Tiger's Trap—fine weather and no sea—and there make fast to the rocks. At the same evening hour the mule with his passenger planted his fore feet like a pair of kedges over his bows, in the fishing village near Manzanillo, and foundered bodily, going down with his freight slap-dash in the mud. The passenger, however, escaped, and sculled along the shore, where he fell in with a poor fisherman who was about to shove off in his trim, wholesome bark, for professional recreation on the Esperanza bank.

Glad was old Miguel Toringa to have a strong man to assist him for the privilege of joining in a slip of aguardiente and catching a red snapper or two. So they jumped on board and spread the sail.

Had old Miguel, however, seen the shark-like eyes of his assistant in the sunlight, or dreamed what a snapper was about to catch him, he would not have gone fishing that night; and it would have saved him much tribulation at daylight the next morning, when he was picked off a small rock by a fisher acquaintance of his from Manzanillo.

But we have nothing to do with old Miguel; and need only say, to console him, that his staunch boat went safely through the blue gateway of the roaring ledge of the white breakers, and late Sunday night lay calmly in the inlet abreast Captain Brand's former dwelling.

To go back again for a week, the Monongahela—double-banked leviathan as she was—came plunging out to sea from Kingston; every man and boy, from Jack Smith on her forecastle to Bill Plump in the spirit-room, and from Richard Hardy to Tiny Mouse, knowing from the first plunge the frigate made, what they all sailed for.

"Sail ho!" sang out the man on the fore top-sail yard.

"Where away?"

"Right ahead, sir. A brig on the starboard tack!"

Ay, the old Martha Blunt bouncing along under all sail, squaring off at the short-armed seas, and striking them doggedly, as she bent up for the Windward Passage between Hayti and Cuba.

But there was an old sea-bruiser of a different build, who wore the belt in the West Indies, and was after that sturdy old brig with teak ribs for a hearty set-to; and when she came up alongside, in the friendly sparring-match which ensued while both squared their main yards and lay for an hour side by side, there was considerable conversation; so much talk, in fact—boats going to and fro, mingled with roars and shrieks, and clasping of hands on board the brig—never a sound on board the ship—that the blue pennant fluttered in such a way it was hard to tell whether it was Jacob or Piron, or the sweet wife, or mademoiselle, or her lovely mother, who threw their arms around that pennant's truck.

Then yard-arm and yard-arm, the frigate with her canvas canopy of upper sails furled, and the brig in her best bib and tucker, they both filled away and moved side by side.

For a day or two they went on, talking and laughing to one another in these friendly shakes of the hand over the blue water, until one day, the brig being to windward, she came upon an old, water-logged launch, with a broken mast and a torn sail hanging over her side.

It fell calm, and Jacob Blunt ordered young Binks to get into the yawl and tow the boat alongside, and to be smart about it; for the breeze might make so soon as the fog rose, and the commodore was not the man to be kept waiting in a big frigate. Mr. Binks was smart about it, and presently he returned—though there was no hurry, for the calm lasted a long time—with his water-logged prize.

There was no human being in this prize; but when she came alongside; and a yard tackle was hooked on to let the water drain out of her, Jacob Blunt and the people on board gave a pleasant yell of astonishment.

"By all that's wonderful, here is my old bag of guineas, and some few Spanish milled dollars! Look at the mark! my darlings!"

Another weighty bag was set aside for Mrs. Timothy Binks, and the rest were devoted, with some large doubloon reservation for crew, to Martha Blunt and Jacob Blunt in their declining years.

Then, the weather being still calm and foggy, Jacob and his passengers went on board the double-banked frigate for Church service, where they all prayed with much hope and thanksgiving for what had passed and what was to come; and they went into the commodore's cabin, where they remained ever so long a time.

Let us go back this same week again—a very long seven days it has been for everybody, particularly so for the ice-eyed man, who was extremely anxious, as he kicked and lashed his mule, and kept looking around the south side of Jamaica, from Portland Point to Pedro Bluff and San Negril, throwing a ray of cold frost there day and night, expecting that tall doctor to come striding along in the deep water, heading due north.

And at last the dark figure hove in sight, in the schooner Rosalie—the sweet craft skimming exultingly over the seas, kissing them occasionally with both her dainty, glistening cheeks, reeling joyously over on her sides, with her tidy dimnity laced and spread in one flat sheet of white; while the slender arms bent like whalebone to the freshening breeze, and she left the dancing bubbles sparkling and flashing lovingly in her wake, as she leaped away from their liquid embrace.

Two hundred miles to go, and the breeze fell from fresh to light, until at last, shrouded in a thick fog, one Sunday morning, when there was no air at all, only a flat calm, the sea as smooth as a glass mirror with the quicksilver clouded.

Then out sweeps, my lads! Ten of a side, and two of those bronzed old lads at a sweep! All except the two after ones, where Ben Brown and the tall doctor handled one apiece.

Thus, with sails down and bare arms, the light little Rosalie continued gliding rapidly over the mirrored surface—a little ashamed of herself, perhaps, at being seen in such a scanty rig—while her commander guided her graceful course, and Harry Greenfield peered about forward to see that no harm should arrest her dainty footsteps.

Presently we heard the toll of a bell. The sweeps passed—the hide ground resting on the thoil-pins, and the water raining from their broad blades.

"That must be a man-of-war off here on the quarter," exclaimed the young officer at the tiller, "ringing for church."

The old seamen at the sweeps unconsciously took off their hats, wiped the sweat from their brows, and listened.

"It can hardly be the Monongahela," said Ben, "though, p'r'aps she took more of a breeze to wind'ard, off the island."

Still the schooner glided on noiselessly over the sea, until a minute later, Harry Greenfield sung out—

"Port, sir! or we'll be plump into a vessel here ahead."

The helm was put down, and the Rosalie sheered off to starboard within a biscuit toss of a large brig.

"By my grandmother's wig," said Ben, "that's the old Martha Blunt."

"Henri," said Paul Darcantel in French, in his deep voice, "the last request I shall ever make is to keep on. There is not a moment to lose."

"Give way, men!" shouted the officer in a decided tone, as the words came with a stifled grasp from his heaving breast, while the sigh that followed was drowned in the splash of the sweeps in the water as they again chafed in their gromets, and the foam flashed away from the blades astern.

"Give way, my lads! Another thousand dollars if we get up to the Key before dark!" said the deep, low tones of the tall doctor.

"Good Heaven!" roared a voice from on board the brig, now shut up again all alone in the fog—"if that old nigger has not gone and jumped overboard, my name's not Binks."

"All right, Mr. Binks; Banou is safe! Send a boat on board the Monongahela, and report that the schooner Rosalie has passed ahead," went back in a clear note.

It was some considerable time before Binks could believe that he had not been hailed by David Jones himself, for he had seen nothing—being at the time in the lower cabin reading his Bible, and writing his name "Binnacle Binks, master of brig Martha Blunt," on the fly-leaf, and he was only disturbed in this praiseworthy occupation by a heavy body plunging overboard, and by one of the drowsy crew who had, with his comrades, been sleeping near reporting that circumstance with his eyes half shut.

Then young Binks took considerable more time to get a boat lowered, and send her, with the cabin boy to the large frigate close on his beam, whose bell had just struck seven.

The boat, too, with four sleepy hands to pull her took considerable time to find the ship, and then the whistles were piping to dinner, and all the good people from the brig, with the flag officers, had retired to the commodore's cabin for luncheon.

When Jacob Blunt heard the news, regardless of sherry and cold tongue, he himself got in his boat, leaving his passengers in an excited frame of mind, but rather comfortable on the whole, and returned to the teak bosom of his Martha.

(CONCLUDED NEXT WEEK.)

Carmen Sylva.

Harpers' for September: Modernity, indeed, is always somehow a charming thing when you get it skilfully expressed in a picture or a story, or in some such piece of personal history as Baroness Deichmann's translation of Baroness Stackelberg's life of Carmen Sylva, the queen of Roumania. When you think of the figure that royalty once cut in the awed imaginations of men, wrapped round with mists of twilight, it is sufficiently striking to have it electric-lighted, even to its intimate life and its recondite emotions by such a memoir as this. Happily, the queen of Roumania, if a poet of less effect than feeling, is a person whose life is as noble and beautiful as that of most women in the humbler walks of love and duty, and bears knowing as well. We are aware that this is saying a good deal for a queen; but we think it may be hazarded. We think the great attraction, the great use of the book is that it shows how little a princess of forty or fifty descents is characterized by lineage, and how little a good and gifted woman is embellished by royalty. You discover that she was like any number of other impulsive, cultivated, gifted girls, and is like any number of other self-sacrificing, heroic women, tried by love, by sorrow—the wives of lawyers, doctors, ministers, mechanics and laborers. Her father and mother were excellent people, and there was talent in the family; but her training was no better, one might almost say it was no other, for it could not well be any other, than such as intelligent and conscientious people now give their daughters in ethics and æsthetics; though perhaps the average American girl, from being a Protestant all her life, might have some misgiving in adapting herself to the Greek religion as soon as she became queen of Roumania. But we are not sure that Carmen Sylva did not do wiselier in bringing herself close by all possible means to the hearts of the people she desired to love and has greatly befriended; it is hard for a sovereign to be of any real use, with all the advantages.

Was a Father Himself.

Exchange: He was an old man, bent and gray. In spite of his unkempt appearance and his poor, faded clothes there was a certain nobility in his face that could not but attract the casual observer. He sat in the ante-room of the police court, together with a score of other prisoners. Upon his knees he held a little girl, whose uncared for appearance could not hide her childish prettiness. She leaned against his breast, and on her head there fell, now and then, a great tear.

"What oo cryin' for, popper?" the little girl would say, when some of these tears crept beyond her tumbled curls and crept down her forehead. Even the sottish crowd about them grew respectful. The two were so pathetic.

Finally the man's name was called, and he appeared before the judge. He stated his case. The charge was some minor offense. Just then the little girl, who began to realize that her father was in some danger, crept near. The judge caught sight of her. The child crept up, in spite of the gaze fixed on her from the bench, and clung to her father's hand.

"Is that your child?" asked the judge.

"It is, your honor; my motherless child."

The sternness died out of the eyes of the judge, and a moist tenderness took its place. He was a father himself. He raised his handkerchief, without shame, to wipe away the gathering dimness.

"I cannot do it," he said within himself. Then, looking at the prisoner before him, he said, in a voice choked with feeling: "Thirty days."

Swallow Only Pennies.

New York Times: A boy with tears coursing down his cheeks was led by an excited woman into the office of an East side physician a few days ago.

"Can you save him, doctor?" demanded the woman in a trembling voice.

"What's the matter with the boy, madam?" responded the doctor.

"He's swallowed some money."

"How much?"

"A cent."

"Old style or new?"

"New."

The doctor gave a sigh of relief, and then smiling upon the woman he said: "Don't be alarmed, madam. Wipe the little fellow's eyes and take him home. He'll not die this time. But let me give you a bit of advice, madam. Make that boy of yours understand that if he must eat money he is to stick all the while to the lowest denomination, and the newest fashion of that! I couldn't do anthing for your boy, madam, if, for example, he should swallow a silver dollar or a double eagle."

A Tall Man Settles Down.

Oklahoma City Chief: J. W. Patterson, the tallest man known in the world excepting the Chinese giant Chang, will make Oklahoma City his home. Mr. Patterson stands seven feet seven inches in his stocking feet and is twenty-seven years old. He has traveled with a number of the best shows in the country for the past eight or ten years, and is well fixed in this world's goods. About a year ago he married, and has decided to settle down and take life easy. He owns considerable property in this city, and as soon as he returns from the East will begin the erection of a fine residence. A couple of months ago his wife presented him with a pair of strapping boys, of which Mr. Patterson is immensely boastful. Mrs. Patterson is larger than the average woman, being nearly six feet high and weighing over 200 pounds.

A Bright Jury.

Daniel O'Connell was at one time defending a man accused of murder at Clonmel. The circumstantial evidence was so strong against the prisoner, that the jury had already determined upon their verdict of guilty, when the man supposed to be murdered was brought into court, alive and unhurt. The jury was desired to return their verdict at once, and they did so, but it was one of "Guilty." "What does this mean?" inquired the judge; "if the man has not been murdered how can the prisoner be guilty?" "Please, yer honor,' said the foreman, "he's guilty; he stole my bay mare three years ago."—San Francisco Argonaut.

A German Woman's Knitting.

If I were asked to present in one word the characteristics of the German women I should employ the word "knitting-work." A drive through the German country on Sunday afternoon reveals rows of women sitting on benches in front of the cottages knitting. The men drink beer and cultivate idleness while the women knit. Children of 10 years also sit in the doorways and knit.—Cor. Lewiston Journal.

Western Union telegraph operators in St. Paul strike to procure the reinstatement of the men discharged for being members of the brotherhood.

"Perched upon a bust of Pallas," or better yet, on some handy shelf, the sensible housekeeper has her bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, and when the child has a distressing cough or a touch of croup she cures the little one in no time.

"What de precher talk 'bout to-day brudder Julius?" "Oh, he telled 'bout Samson beat dem Philistines, en, you know I mose cry to tink dem poor creeters couldn't get no Salvation Oil.

At Fresno, Cal., Joseph L. Stillman, who shot Theatrical Manager Fiske, has been found guilty of murder in the first degree and sentenced to life imprisonment.

DR. FRANK POWELL, (White Beaver) will open an office in St. Paul, next Jan. Diseases of women exclusively.

There has been introduced into the French chamber of deputies a bill imposing a heavy tax on crests and titles of nobility.

Mind Reading.

You can read a happy mind in a happy countenance without much penetration. This is the sort of countenance that the quondam bilious sufferer or dyspeptic relieved by Hostetter's Stomach Bitters wears. You will meet many such. The great stomachic and alterative also provides happiness for the malarious, the rheumatic, the weak, and those troubled with inaction of the kidneys and bladder.

Bill Moore wanted to dig a well, so he plowed a lot of land and planted it in oats. Every day he watched the oats, observing the spots that showed greatest moisture. Finally he selected a spot and sunk a well. At twenty-four feet he had a fine stream of water—said to be the best well in the county. Other farmers in the same neighborhood have failed to find water at 200 feet.—[Atchinson Globe.

CATARRH

Is a complaint which affects nearly everybody, more or less. It originates in a cold, or succession of colds, combined with impure blood. Disagreeable flow from the nose, tickling in the throat, offensive breath, pain over and between the eyes, ringing and bursting noises in the ears, are the more common symptoms. Catarrh is cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla, which strikes directly at its cause by removing all impurities from the blood, building up the diseased tissues and giving healthy tone to the whole system.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

SICK HEADACHE

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Positively cured by these Little Pills. They also relieve Distress from Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Too Hearty Eating. A perfect remedy for Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Coated Tongue, Pain in the Side, TORPID LIVER. They regulate the Bowels. Purely Vegetable. Price 25 Cents.

CARTER MEDICINE CO., NEW YORK.

Small Pill. Small Dose. Small Price.

SEA-SHELLS, 600 for $1. Sent prepaid. Liberal sample assortment for 25ct. Over 20 rare kinds, ¼ to 2 in. diameter, from Congo, China, Indian and other Coasts. Very beautiful, many colors. For Pins, Bangles and Ornaments. Make beautiful decorations. No teacher needed. Large shells of all kinds. Full information and catalogue free J. MELLICK & CO., Eastern, Pa.

MOTHERS, "Dr. Snyder's KIDNEY BALSAM" cures Enuresis, BED-WETTING. Price, $1 per package, sent post-paid, with full instructions. Circulars and testimonials for 6c stamps. Address DR. SNYDER, Lock Box 431, Chicago, Ill.

Ely's Cream Balm For CATARRH THE POSITIVE CURE.

THE CURE FOR CATARRH COLD IN HEAD HAY FEVER ELY'S CREAM BALM 50c

ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren St., New York. Price 50 cts.

THE VAN DUSEN-HARRINGTON CO.

GRAIN COMMISSION.

MINNEAPOLIS. - DULUTH.

SELL BY SAMPLE.

Best Prices. Prompt Returns. Write for quotations. Execute orders Chicago, New York or Milwaukee.

Caton's College

703 NICOLLET AVE., MINNEAPOLIS, is now the largest and best Business College in the Northwest. SHORT-HAND, TYPEWRITING, BOOK-KEEPING, Commercial Law, Penmanship and the common English branches are taught by experts. For College Journal, address T. J. CATON.

Cuticura Soap For Bad Complexions Red Rough Hands and Baby Humors.

BAD COMPLEXIONS, WITH PIMPLY, blotchy, oily skin, Red, Rough Hands, with chaps, painful finger ends and shapeless nails, and simple Baby Humors prevented and cured by CUTICURA SOAP. A marvelous beautifier of world-wide celebrity, it is incomparable as a Skin Purifying Soap, unequalled for the Toilet and without a rival for the Nursery.

Absolutely pure, delicately medicated, exquisitely perfumed, CUTICURA SOAP produces the whitest, clearest skin, and softest hands and prevents inflammation and clogging of the pores, the cause of pimples, blackheads, and most complexional disfigurations, while it admits of no comparison with other skin soaps, and rivals in delicacy the most noted of toilet and nursery soaps. Sale greater than the combined sale of all other skin soaps. Price, 25c.

Send for "How to Cure Skin Diseases."

Address POTTER DRUG AND CHEMICAL CORPORATION, Proprietors, Boston, Mass.

Aching sides and back, weak kidneys, and rheumatism relieved in one minute by the CUTICURA ANTI-PAIN PLASTER. 25c.

JOHNSON'S SWEET CIDER. Johnson's Pure Cider Vinegar. Both pure goods. Write for prices. F. C. JOHNSON, Kishwaukee Ill.

$1.00 An Hour. Painting signs with our Patterns experience unnecessary. Plain or Shaded letters circular for stamp. Samples of work 20cts. Morlan Co Salem, Ohio.

CANCERS Cured without the use of the Knife at the Iola Cancer Infirmary. Iola, Waupaca, Co. Wis. Write for book of treatment.

ASTHMA CURED. FREE A trial package by mail to sufferers. Dr. R. SCHIFFMAN, St. Paul, Minn.

PENSION JOHN W. MORRIS, Washington, D.C. Successfully Prosecutes Claims. Late Principal Examiner U. S. Pension Bureau. 3 yrs in last war, 15 adjudicating claims, atty since.

FAT FOLKS Reduced 15 to 25 pounds per month by harmless herbal remedies. No starving; no inconvenience. Confidential. Send 6c. for circulars and testimonials. Address, DR. O. W. F. SNYDER, 243 State St., Chicago, Ill.

TANSY PILLS! Safe and Sure. Send 4c. for "WOMAN'S SAFE GUARD." Wilcox Specific Co., Phila., Pa.

LADIES can have smaller feet. Solid comfort. Pamphlet free. Sample pkg., 10c. The Pedine Co., New York.

ALLEN'S IRON TONIC BITTERS

The most Elegant Blood Purifier, Liver Invigorator, Tonic and Appetizer known. The first Bitters containing Iron ever advertised in America. J. P. ALLEN, Druggist & Chemist, St. Paul, Minn.

PATENTS Inventor's Guide, or How to obtain a Patent, sent free. PATRICK O'FARRELL, Att'y at Law, Washington, D. C.

PENSIONS The Disability Bill is a Law. Dependent widows and parents are included. If you wish your claim quickly and Successfully Prosecuted, write to JAMES TANNER, late Commissioner of Pensions, Washington, D. C.

$75.00 to $250.00 A MONTH can be made working for us. Persons preferred who can furnish a horse and give their whole time to the business. Spare moments may be profitably employed also. A few vacancies in towns and cities. B. F. JOHNSON & CO 1009 Main St., Richmond, Va.

WANTED

FARMS IMPROVED and UNIMPROVED

WILD LANDS

TIMBER LANDS

CITY and VILLAGE PROPERTY.

Send full description, price and terms. We want the address of every person having property of any kind for sale or exchange. We can sell if offered at fair prices, and are allowed a reasonable time to perfect a sale. Property of every description for sale in nearly every State and Territory. See our list before purchasing. Address CURTIS & EDWARDS INV. CO. (Incorporated) 326 Robert St., St. Paul Minn.

FOR MEN ONLY!

A POSITIVE CURE For LOST or FAILING MANHOOD; General and NERVOUS DEBILITY; Weakness of Body and Mind: Effects of Errors or Excesses in Older Young. Robust, Noble MANHOOD fully Restored. How to Enlarge and Strengthen WEAK, UNDEVELOPED ORGANS & PARTS of BODY. Absolutely unfailing HOME TREATMENT—Benefits in a day. Men testify from 47 States, Territories, and Foreign Countries. You can write them. Book, full explanation, and proofs mailed (sealed) free. Address ERIE MEDICAL CO., BUFFALO, N. Y.

FREE
NEW AMERICAN MUSIC BOX
WILL PLAY 100 TUNES
FREE
FREE

To introduce them, one in every County or town furnished reliable persons (either sex) who will promise to show it. Excelsior Music Box Co., Box 2128, N.Y. City.

When It Storms

Wear Woonsocket Rubber Shoes. They'll keep your feet dry and warm. They'll preserve health and save doctor's bills. Made from best Rubber, by skilled workmen, over correct lasts, they'll fit your feet and give you service. See that they are stamped

WOONSOCKET

BEWARE of inferior Rubbers sold under other brands. Insist on Woonsocket Rubber Boots and Shoes. They're the best. Sold everywhere. Manufactured by the WOONSOCKET RUBBER CO., PROVIDENCE, R.I. Send for Catalogue.

WHEN SHALL WE MEET AGAIN?

When shall we meet again,
Dearest and best,
Thou going eastward, and
I going west.
Thou in whose love my heart
Seeks for its rest;
When shall we meet again,
Dearest and best?

Not in love's common way
Was my love spoken—
No sweet confession made,
Sealed by sweet token;
Calmly I uttered it,
Though half heartbroken;
Not in love's common way
Was my love spoken.

What will its issue be?
Cloud shadows fall—
All is uncertainty—
Yet over all
One guideth steadily
Great things and small;
What will the issue be?
God guideth all.

—JAMES FREEMAN CLARKE.

REVENGE OF A GIRL.

In 1865, having lost an arm in the war, I accepted the quiet position of station agent at Big Lick Junction in one of the wildest mountain sections in Tennessee. The north and south accommodation trains passed Big Lick about 11 in the morning, at which hour the branch time train left for Riverville, the country east, and the north bound express passed at 11 at night. If I had passengers I stopped her; if not, she thundered past the junction at the rate of thirty-five miles an hour.

One warm July evening I was waiting for the north express to pass. In five minutes it would be due. Through the still night air I could hear the puffing of the locomotive, and at the same time I saw a man hurrying up the track. He came almost breathless into the depot and surprised me by asking for a ticket to Nashville.

"I'm no tramp, but I haven't a cent," said he. "Say quick, if you'll let me have a ticket for this, and stop the express."

He threw down a curious old sleeve-button as he spoke, and I saw at a glance that it was valuable. There was only a moment left, but I tried to size the man up. He looked strange, somehow, but before I could determine whether he was a scoundrel or a crank I gave him the ticket and went out to wave my red light. As the train slowed up he said:

"You needn't try to sell that trinket; I will be down here in a week or so and will redeem it by paying you cash for the ticket. Much obliged to you. Good night."

The sleeve-button was a large topaz in a quaintly wrought silver setting. Apart from its intrinsic value it was quite a curiosity on account of its evident age. As I had but one shirt sleeve it was as valuable to me as a pair would have been to any other man, and I wore the button accordingly.

A month later another strange visitor came to Big Lick, this time a lady. The train which daily made the round trip on the branch line from Riverville to the Junction and return one morning brought a very beautiful young lady. She was rather tall, with a perfect figure, and a face which, while it was handsome in the extreme, was particularly noticeable for its determined expression. It was a fascinating face.

This young lady, who apparently came to Big Lick with no particular object, loitered along the road which led over the mountains, loitered back again and prepared to take her seat in the car which she had left but an hour or so before.

She was very pleasant, said she was staying at Riverville, but thought she would like to sketch the wild scenery in the neighborhood of the Junnction.

After the main line trains had cleared away I assisted her to the car. As I did so I displayed the sleeve button on my cuff, and as she caught sight of it I fancied that she started.

However, I thought nothing much of that, because twenty people had each asked twenty different questions about it since it came into my possession.

Well, the next day the lady came again, this time bringing a complete artist's outfit. For two weeks Miss Milner—she had introduced herself—had been a regular passenger on the Riverville accommodation. She talked to me a great deal more than she sketched, and always about war. I suppose at the end of those two weeks I had told her of every item of interest (or otherwise) which had come in my way during my army life. But she never tired, and would ask a thousand and one questions of things I should never myself have thought of.

Then for two whole weeks I saw nothing of my amateur artist, when one morning Miss Miner alighted from the train and shook me most cordially by the hand. The conductor had a letter for me. It was addressed to "The Station Agent, Big Lick Junction." I opened it and read:

"Please have the trinket left with you by a stranger two months ago, handy on Tuesday night. He will be on hand to keep his promise, and will want to take the express for Nashville."

This was Tuesday, so that I had only a short time to wear the button, which I had l[illegible]an to regard as my own. Miss Mil[illegible]r s[illegible]ood near while I read my letter, [illegible]d when I was through asked me if I could give her ten minutes of my time where we could talk without fear [illegible] disturbance. We went into my i[illegible] office and I locked the door. [illegible] drew from her pocket a small r[illegible] and the mate to my sleeve b[illegible] laying them upon my desk. A cu[illegible] s smile overspread her face as [illegible] said: "Mr. Norton, the first [illegible] I came to Big Lick, I [illegible] with no particular purpose, [illegible] to while away an ho[illegible] o of a summer day. Every [illegible] have come since, until to-day, I have carried this pistol, being pursuaded at first that you deserved to be shot. I have been eager to identify you, that I might have the satisfaction of shooting you, and, believe me, I should not have hesitated for a moment had I been convinced that you were indeed the man I at first supposed you to be. The last day I was here I had some doubts as to my being on the right track. I am now satisfied that my suspicions were totally unjust. Before I go any further, will you forgive me, and promise me your friendship and aid in the future?"

I felt, to use a vulgar expression, "all in a heap." Seeing my hesitation Miss Milner continued:

"I will satisfy you that I had good reason for my conduct, and can only reiterate that I am very sorry now that my suspicions should have fallen on you."

She then told me the following story:

Five years or more ago, when the war was almost at its close, my father, who was Colonel in a cavalry regiment in the Union army, was seriously wounded. Our house was not very far from the seat of war, so he was brought to the old homestead to die—as we all thought. But he rallied and in a few weeks appeared to be in a fair way to recover. When, one evening, a soldier called at the house, saying that he must see my father at once and alone on important military business, he was admitted to the sick chamber and left with my father. An hour passed, when the doctor, thinking my father would be worse after so long an interview, decided to go to the room and request the soldier to withdraw. To his horror he found my father upon the floor unconscious, his head badly bruised. His bureau was open and emptied of all money and other valuables. The robber and murderer had decamped. I say murderer, because my father died that night, though not before he was able to tell something of his assailant. My father had struggled manfully, though of course feebly, for his life, and in the scuffle had torn away this curious sleeve button from his murderer. That, to me, horrible yellow jewel I have carried ever since, as the only clue by which I hope to find the man whom I have sworn to be revenged upon. I was only a very young girl when my father died, but I had no mother, sister or brother and concentrated all the ardent affection of my nature upon my dear good father. So, young as I was, I then and there determined and solemnly vowed to shoot that father's murderer if I ever found him, on sight. Revenge is now the ruling passion and only aim of my life, and you can imagine my emotion when I saw you wearing the mate to this horrible sleeve button."

"Will you tell me where you got that sleeve button, for I am certain that you never owned the pair?"

I related all I knew of the jewel and then added:

"Read this letter which has just come, but remember that the man who gave me the button may be, and probably is, as innocent as I am. Do not be too hasty, as you may misjudge a second time, and in any case, my dear young lady, do not shed blood, even though it be guilty blood —let the law do that."

She said nothing except to request me to unlock the door, and soon I saw her walking away up the mountain side. The Riverville train left without Miss Milner, and I was once more alone in the deserted depot.

About 10 o'clock she sauntered into the station.

"Let me stay inside there, out of sight, but where I may see and hear this man who wrote that he would be here to-night."

I agreed on condition that she gave up her pistol, which she did after hesitating for an instant.

It was just such a night as when two months before, I had sold a ticket for a sleeve button. I began to wish I had never seen the unlucky trinket. As my custom was on fine evenings, I drew my chair out to the platform and lit a cigar. Just as on that other evening, about five minutes before the express was due my man hurried up.

"Good evening, Mr. Agent. Please let me have a ticket to Nashville and my sleeve fastening, and take enough out of this bill for two tickets. That will make us square, I believe, and I'm everlastingly obliged to you."

"Stay a minute," I said. "I have taken a fancy to this old button, and would like to buy it of you."

"Don't want to sell it," he said rather curtly.

"Oh, come, I'll give you a fair price for it. Will let you have another ticket and give you $5 to boot."

"Can't do it—hurry up. I can hear the train."

"Why, is there any little history attached to the button?" I asked.

"Yes, there is, but look above, man."

"Lots of time," I said, as I gazed at my watch. There was only three minutes. "Any objection to telling me what it is?" this as I slowly rose from my seat.

"Yes, I have a decided objection to telling you my private affairs."

He was now getting out of temper. He was a powerful looking man, but I had never known fear, so I resolved to try his mettle a little.

"Must be something not very good to tell connected with this button," as I twirled it between my fingers.

"Curse you! can't you hear the train coming?" he muttered. "If you won't give me the cursed trinket keep it, but for God's sake stop the train."

"I will when you tell me where you got it or where the mate to it is," I answered. My "monkey" was up now and I was game to see the end of the play. The stranger's "monkey" was up, too, for he whipped out a large seven shooter and shouted: "D—n you, get your lantern and flag that train, or, by G—d, I'll send you to follow the man who took the mate to that button from me. Look lively, now; I warn you it's unlucky to keep that trinket from me!"

The train was coming along rapidly. In about a minute it would pass unless stopped at once. By this time we were both in the ticket office, and as the stranger uttered his last words he was confronted by Miss Milner. It was a strange sight to see that beautiful girl, clad in a white summer dress, walk up to him with a huge revolver in his grasp.

"Give me that pistol," she said very quietly, but firmly and quickly. The man seemed dazed and handed the weapon to her in a mechanical sort of way.

"Murderer!" she hissed rather than spoke, "your own words have condemned you. I am Colonel Milner's daughter, and this is the happiest moment I have known since you killed my father."

Before I could interfere she raised the pistol and fired. The man dodged the bullet and ran quickly out of the door. As he reached the track the express thundered by, and the locomotive carried with it, for a quarter of a mile, the corpse of the man who had escaped shooting only to die a more horrible death. Colonel Miner was avenged, but I was thankful that his daughter had been spared the crime of murder, however justifiable it might have been. I managed, too, to keep the story hushed up, and the country newspapers devoted a short paragraph to the description of an accidental death on the railroad tracks.

The next day Miss Milner went away, and I have never seen her since. I am still agent at the Big Lick Junction, but no ripple has disturbed the stillness of my quiet stream of life since that eventful September evening. I have the pair of sleeve-buttons and the two revolvers in my possession yet, but I never wear the buttons, because, although not given to superstitious ideas, I imagine they may carry with them ill luck.—Philadelphia News.

English Tram Car Manners.

"Tram car manners" continues to be a subject of excited controversy in Manchester. Up to the present it has taken the form of rather fierce recrimination between the two sexes and we regret to say that the ladies appear to be getting the worst of it. That may, however, be because the male pens are more active. One "Manchester man" who rides frequently in cars appears from his account to have suffered greatly at the hands of female passengers. Only the other day he was sitting in a full car waiting to start when a lady got on the step and "stalked—he "can bring himself to use no other word" —into the vehicle.

Of course the Manchester man could not do less than offer his seat which the lady accepted. Of this he does not complain; but what does vex his soul is the thought that this lady never condescended to return a kindly smile or even a word of thanks, though her benefactor was compelled to continue the journey outside in the pouring rain. It was not always thus. "Alway in the dim vista of memory," says the Manchester man, bursting almost into poetry at the thought, "I have a recollection of one day giving up my seat to an angel in an empire robe, and she said, "Thank you." That day marked an era in my life." It is only fair to say that the lady correspondents protest that the thankless lady passengers are quite exceptional.—London News.

Daisy's Pure Cussedness.

Of course there is no limit of the stories told of bright and mischievous children, and brighness and mischief always, somehow, seem to go together. I have two anecdotes of a little 4-year-old, who was taken to the country in the spring to help leaven existence somewhat for her grandmother; and at the same time gather a few roses for her own dimpled cheeks. The second day after the little tot's arrival from the city the grandmother missed her great bunch of keys. Where could they be? Nobody knew. Strangely enough, nobody at first asked the youngster about them, and she played with her dolls during all the excitement of the general search, looking up occasionally in an interested way, but saying nothing. Finally someone suggested that Daisy might know where were the keys.

"Oh, yes, I know," said the child; "why didn't you ask me before?"

"Well, where are they?"

"Oh, I just throwed them in the rain barrel this morning."

After the rain barrel was emptied and the keys were discovered, "Daisy" was asked what on earth made her throw the keys in the barrel.

"I don't know," she replied, "unless it was 'pure cussedness.'"

And now her pious parents wonder where she picked up this particularly apropos expression.

A few days later a package of brass-headed tacks was missing. This time "Daisy" was called in at once, and asked if she had seen them.

"Oh, yes," she said; "I took them out and fed them to the chickens."—From the New York Star.

Are You Five Feet Eight Inches Tall.?

What is there about the figure 5 feet 8 inches that is so attractive to policemen? Did you ever notice a description of a drowned man who was not just that tall? Maybe you have, but just notice and see if the vast majority of them do not conform to that rule, and also are reported as wearing congress gaiters. Whether men measuring 5 feet 8 inches high and wearing congress gaiters are more prone to drowning than others, so far as is known, has not been determined, but it is certainly an odd suggestion which comes to the mind of many who constantly watch such cases.—New York Tribune.

Galls on the necks and hocks of horses or other similar abrasions, should be washed with castile soap and tepid, soft water, and afterwards with salted cold water. It will toughen the skin. Any indolent sores should be kept clean with soap and water. If galls do not respond to this treatment, apply tannin which may be had at any drug store.

Nearly every article sold is cheapened, in cost of production, at expense of quality. Dobbins' Electric Soap is exactly to-day what it was in 1865, absolutely pure, harmless and uniform. Ask your grocer for it. Look out for imitations.

The steam fitters of Chicago to the number of between 300 and 400 have struck. Their demand is for an advance of about 10 per cent. in wages and eight hours work.

VASELINE.

FOR ONE DOLLAR sent us by mail, we will deliver, free of all charges, to any person in the United States, all the following articles carefully packed in a neat box:
One two ounce bottle of Pure Vaseline, 10cts.
One two ounce bottle Vaseline Pomade, 15 "
One jar of Vaseline Cold Cream..........15 "
One cake of Vaseline Camphor Ice.........10 "
One cake of Vaseline Soap, unscented.....10 "
One cake of Vaseline Soap, sented.........25 "
One two ounce bottle of White Vaseline..25 "
—$1.10
Or for stamps any single article at the price.
If you have occasion to use Vaseline in any form be careful to accept only genuine goods put up by us in original packages. A great many druggists are trying to persuade buyers to take VASELINE put up by them. Never yield to such persuasion, as the article is an imitation without value, and will not give you the result you expect. A bottle of Blue Seal Vaseline is sold by all druggists at ten cents.
Chesebrough M'f'g Co., 24 State St, New York.

Tutt's Pills
The dyspeptic, the debilitated, whether from excess of work of mind or body, drink or exposure in Malarial Regions,
will find Tutt's Pills the most genial restorative ever offered the suffering invalid.
Try Them Fairly
A vigorous body, pure blood, strong nerves and a cheerful mind will result.
SOLD EVERYWHERE.

BARLEY
RYE
BUCKWHEAT
SEND LARGE SAMPLE TO WOODWARD & Co.,
GRAIN COMMISSION,
406 and 408 Corn Exch., MINNEAPOLIS.
THEY WILL WIRE YOU CASH◆◆◆◆
◆◆◆◆◆ OFFER AT YOUR STATION
Consign your wheat to them and get TOP PRICE.

SYRUP of FIGS

ONE ENJOYS
Both the method and results when Syrup of Figs is taken; it is pleasant and refreshing to the taste, and acts gently yet promptly on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels, cleanses the system effectually, dispels colds, headaches and fevers and cures habitual constipation. Syrup of Figs is the only remedy of its kind ever produced, pleasing to the taste and acceptable to the stomach, prompt in its action and truly beneficial in its effects, prepared only from the most healthy and agreeable substances, its many excellent qualities commend it to all and have made it the most popular remedy known.
Syrup of Figs is for sale in 50c and $1 bottles by all leading druggists. Any reliable druggist who may not have it on hand will procure it promptly for any one who wishes to try it. Do not accept any substitute.
CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
LOUISVILLE, KY. NEW YORK, N.Y.

FOUND · AT · LAST
PLOWING BY STEAM IS NO LONGER AN EXPERIMENT.
Will turn six fourteen-inch furrows six to sixteen inches deep. The only steam-gang plow manufactured. For description, prices, catalogue, etc., apply to Western Machinery Co.
Gen'l Western Agts., 1412 17th St.,
DENVER, COLORADO.
Send 4 cents in stamps for mailing Catalogue.

PEERLESS STEAM PLOWS.

A PRESENT.
SEND us your address and we will make you a present of the best Automatic WASHING MACHINE in the World. No wash-board or rubbing needed. We want you to show it to your friends, or act as agent if you can. You can COIN MONEY. We also give a HANDSOME WATCH to the first from each county. Write quick. Address N. Y. LAUNDRY WORKS, 5 Dey St., N. Y.

"Dirt defies the king."—If the old proverb be true, SAPOLIO is greater than royalty itself: Try it in your next house-cleaning: Grocers keep it.
DO YOU LIVE IN GREASE?
As a true patriot and citizen you should naturalize yourself by using the best inventions of the day for removing such a charge. To live in Grease is utterly unnecessary when SAPOLIO is sold in all the stores, and abolishes grease and dirt.

BIG G
Cures in 1 TO 5 DAYS. Guaranteed not to cause Stricture.
M'f'd only by the Evans Chemical Co. Cincinnati, Ohio.
Trade Mark
I prescribe and fully endorse Big G as the only specific for the certain cure of this disease.
G. H. INGRAHAM, M. D., Amsterdam, N. Y.
We have sold Big G for many years, and it has given the best of satisfaction.
D. R. DYCHE & CO., Chicago, Ill.
$1.00. Sold by Druggists.

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION
25 CTS
Best Cough Medicine. Recommended by Physicians. Cures where all else fails. Pleasant and agreeable to the taste. Children take it without objection. By druggists.
25 CTS

"No other Weekly Paper gives such a Variety of Entertaining and Instructive Reading at so low a price."

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION

SPECIMEN COPIES AND FULL ANNOUNCEMENT WILL BE SENT ON APPLICATION.

Illustrated Serial Stories.
The Serial Stories engaged for the year will be of unusual interest and Finely Illustrated.
Through Thick and Thin; by Molly Elliot Seawell.
Nepigon; by C. A. Stephens. Kent Hampden; by Rebecca Harding Davis.
Suleika; by Hjalmar Hjorth Boyesen. The Heygood Tea Service; by Elizabeth W. Bellamy.

Army Life and Adventure.
A Phenomenal Scout; by Gen. O. O. Howard.
Reading Indian "Sign;" by Gen. John Gibbon.
Hunting Large Game; by Gen. John R. Brooke.
In Big Horn Canon; by Gen. James S. Brisbin.

Naval Life and Adventure.
Adventures of a Middy; Admiral David D. Porter.
Powder Monkeys; by Admiral S. B. Luce.
A Chat about Samoa; by Admiral L. A. Kimberly.
Overland in a Man-of-War; Admiral J. H. Gillis.

Latest Discoveries in Science.
This Series of Papers explains in a simple manner the recent researches of the greatest Specialists in Science.
The Stars; by J. Norman Lockyer, F. R. S.
The Moon; by Prof. E. S. Holden. The Earth; by Prof. N. S. Shaler.
The Ocean; by Camille Flammarion. The Sun; by Prof. C. A. Young.

College Athletic Sports.
By Harvard, Princeton and Yale Captains.
College Boat-racing; by R. W. Herrick.
Foot-Ball at Princeton; by E. A. Poe.
Base-Ball: Matches Lost and Won; by A. A. Stagg.

How to Choose a College.
Four Articles of great value to any young man considering a College Education; by Pres. Seth Low. Hon. Andrew D. White.
Prof. Goldwin Smith. Pres. Merrill E. Gates.

Important Articles.
The Success at the Bar of Famous Lawyers; by Lord Coleridge, Chief Justice of England.
Incidents in the Lives of Famous Surgeons; by Sir Morell Mackenzie, M. D.
Railway Stories by Railway Men; by Prominent Railroad Officials.
Jules Verne's Boyhood, telling how he became a Story Writer; by Jules Verne.
Among the Highland Peasantry; by The Marquis of Lorne. Illus. by The Princess Louise.

The Girl with a Taste for Music.
How can She make the most of Her Voice?
A remarkable series of papers written expressly for THE COMPANION by the following famous singers:
Madame Albani. Miss Marie Van Zandt.
Miss Emma Juch. Miss Emma Nevada.
Madame Lillian Nordica.

Thrown on Her Own Resources.
What can a Girl of Sixteen do?
A Series of Four practical and helpful Articles, which will prove suggestive and valuable to any girl; by Amelia E. Barr. "Jenny June."
Mary A. Livermore. "Marion Harland."
And other Favorite Writers.

Weekly Editorials on Current Events at home and abroad. A Charming Children's Page Every Week. Household Articles will be published frequently, giving useful information in the various departments of home life,—Art Work, Fancy Work, Embroidery, the Decoration of Rooms, the Care of Plants, Cooking, and Hints on Housekeeping.

THIS SLIP
FREE TO JAN., 1891.
To any New Subscriber who will cut out and send us this slip, with name and Post-Office address and $1.75, we will send The Youth's Companion FREE to January 1, 1891, and for a Full Year from that Date. This offer includes the FIVE DOUBLE HOLIDAY NUMBERS and all the ILLUSTRATED WEEKLY SUPPLEMENTS. Send Check, Post-office Order, or Registered Letter. 40
WITH $1.75

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION, Boston, Mass.
Comes Every Week.—Finely Illustrated.—Read in 450,000 Families.

THE NEWS.
Entered at the post office at Red Lake Falls as second-class mail matter.

Official Paper of the County.

Official Paper of the City.

JAS. MEEHAN, JR. Editor and Prop.

A Revolution.

As we go to press the returns are sufficiently definite to insure the success of the alliance in Polk county. The whole ticket is undoubtedly elected with the exception of sheriff, and the invincible John Paterson may get there, though chances are against him. The vote has surprised not only the democrats, but also the republicans; more especially the latter. The large falling off of the Merriam vote in Polk goes a long way towards electing Wilsen. Kittle Halvorson may pull a sufficient number of votes from Comstock to defeat him, but it is generally conceded that Comstock will be elected with a small majority. Our own P. J. McGuire, who for years has worked for the interests of Polk county farmers has been rejected and the gratitude of the voters has dwindled down to such an infinite quantity that it is imperceptible. How the farmers are the gainer by the new county ticket can only be deduced from the promises they have made the voters. The first and primary object is economy in county affairs—to reduce the salaries of the officials whom it is claimed have robbed the taxpayers heretofore. The farmers being taxpayers it is natural to suppose they will, unlike parties in control in the past, live up to their promises and be a party of reform. Reduce the taxes—and students of political economy as they all are, they cannot but enact reforms beneficial to the whole people. If they but do what they have promised, all men, regardless of party, will hasten to their rescue and endorse their every action: but alas! we feel that the very men who have been elected to office, will, as if by magic, change their views on this matter of economy, they will conclude that the other fellows have had the salary grab so long that we will try our hand and the voters and tax payers may remedy the evil two years hence. Two years in office is a long time for an hungry office-seeker and it is reasonable to suppose he will look to his financial interest. The life of the alliance in Polk county depends upon the fulfillment of their promises. Should they fail in this they are doomed to political defeat in the future. In the meantime, God help Polk county.

It is to be hoped the bonds of the county officers elect will be raised to a sum probortionate to their intelligence.

C. P. De Mars was cut, slashed carved, haggled, traduced, swaped and downed by his friends, the alliance candidates.—We told you so.

It cannot be said to the discredit of the newly-elected officers that any of them were "born in a bank," but we might remark with considerable propriety that it would be to their credit were some of them educated in a bank.

After the salaries of the county officers elect have been cut down to an alliance basis and these men have worried their brains over the intricate affairs of their respective offices, some of them, at least, will wish both "their feets" were in the plow furrow instead of on the alliance platform.

The defeat of the republican congressmen in the state of Minnesota is a rebuke to the McKinley tariff bill which will make the Republican party shake from centre to circumference. The republican party can read the handwriting on the wall as it appears in '92. The farmers, laborers and middle classes don't want protection. The farmer doesn't want it upon the products of the soil he tills. We doubt it. In the Fifth district, the farmers want a tariff for revenue only. The sentiment here is free trade open and untrammeled. As they want binding twine free, so do they want every other article which they consume placed upon the free list. The ballot is the silent dictator, more potent than Reed, McKinley or the protectionists of the east: unless it be heeded, down comes the republican apple cart in '92.

The manner in which some voters were obliged to vote the alliance ticket in some precincts of Polk county is more disgraceful than the shot gun policy of the South or the labor slave driven by his protection master in the east. Men were not allowed to vote according to their wishes but were compelled to vote at the dictates of the alliance bosses. This is reform with a vengeance. Tickets were taken from voters, others given them and then they, the voters, were shoved bodily to the ballot box and compelled to vote straight. Is this intimidation or reform? Ah! but the new party are about to give us the australian ballot system. Let them hasten it,—but bear in mind that charity begins at home.

BRUIN'S REVENGE.

How a Tame, Unoffending Bear Got Even with Two Pugnacious Dudes.

A dozen years ago a garden was located in the eastern end of that long and narrow southern watering place, Hot Springs, Ark. As all visitors to that little city among the delectable Ozark mountains at the time indicated will remember, this garden contained a bear, which served as the principal attraction to draw a crowd.

One hot day in July, after bruin had "rasseled" down Black Dan, a burly African employed for the purpose, and had robbed a beehive, the rightful proprietors of which lacked the spirit to defend their rather limited stock of sweets, an amusing incident occurred.

"It's a swindle, a hippodrome!" growled a youthful Hebrew, conspicuous for his white duck suit and shiny silk hat. "I'll bet that those lazy old drones will call around after their share of the rake off." Then he and a friend followed Bruin as he was led away to an open space among the pine trees and fastened to a stake by a chain something like thirty feet in length. Left to himself the animal began traveling round and round in the largest circle his tether permitted.

"The stupid brute!" growled the white suited Israelite as he poked the animal with his silk umbrella.

The bear receded a little and then continued his circular tramp, swinging his head slowly. Each time he approached the twain the one with the umbrella struck him, and the two laughed in unison. Soon various onlookers observed that Bruin was dragging a good deal of slack chain behind him, and that his annoyers were standing upon his beaten track. Suddenly, with a quickness hardly to be expected from an animal of his ungainly motions, the bear rose to a standing posture, and seized his tormentor in his enormous arms. The next instant they were rolling over and over across the circular plot of ground. Soon Bruin released his victim and ambled to the stake in the center of his domain, beside which he sat in indisputable enjoyment of the scene.

The tramping ground of a bear is not the most cleanly place imaginable, and though the man was not hurt physically his white clothing and fine feelings had suffered sad injuries. He left that night for his home.—Chicago Special Press Bureau.

A Snow White Swallow.

Ornithologists in Paris are much interested in the discovery of a rare bird in the shape of a snow white swallow. This novel specimen of the feathered tribe came to life lately in a nest which was built by the parent under the eaves of a glass roof covering a court in the extensive manufactory of a tradesman residing in the district of Grenelle. The white bird was born with two black specimens, one of which flew away as soon as it was fledged, whereupon the tradesman, in order to keep the other two, transformed the glass roofed court into a temporary aviary.

Photographs have been taken of the snow white swallow, and will be sent to the leading naturalists of the city, one of whom went to Grenelle in order to study the feathered curiosity. This gentleman was, however, too late to see the bird alive. It perished probably because too much care was taken of it, or through fright at the numbers of people who came to stare at it as a natural curiosity. The dead bird will now be stuffed and sent to the museum at the Botanical Gardens, where there is already a white magpie, which still lives and hops about among its companions, from which it only differs in color.—Paris Letter.

The English Dame's School.

The only school in which I can remember being taught to bow upon entering or leaving was a village dame's school kept by one Pleasant Allen. The curriculum there was of the simplest kind. It consisted of the Church Catechism, the alphabet and easy spelling, "pot hooks" (on a slate) and "unpicking." This last—the unraveling of worsted stuffs afterward used by the dame in the making of patchwork cushions—by the sale of which she eked out her living—occupied most of our time. While we boys "unpicked" the bigger girls would sew the patchwork covers. If we learned little else, however, we were at least taught deportment, and I believe my "first first-love" was excited by the beautiful courtesies of little Annie Allen, a granddaughter of the dame. Such courtesies are rarely seen nowadays, but I have seen them occasionally within the last few years.—Notes and Queries.

A Veteran Mule.

At Centreville, in Dauphin county, is a veteran mule that deserves to be placed on the government pension list. He is 47 years old, but notwithstanding his age shows a great deal of endurance when driven by his owner, B. F. Balsbach. This ancient mule was in the service of the United States during the Mexican war. When the rebellion broke out he again entered the service of Uncle Sam, but before the war was over he was captured by the Confederates and made to do duty for them. This is why the letters "C. S. A." as well as "U. S." are yet plainly visible where they were branded on him more than a quarter of a century ago.—West Chester News.

What Becomes of the Old Ties.

You see those men putting in new railroad ties? I am sometimes asked what becomes of the old ones. A long time ago the company had them saved up and they were burned. But that is not done now. As a rule these old ties are stacked up in the section where they are removed and used for posts. You know we are fencing a great deal nowadays. These ties make excellent posts. This use is a great saving to a railroad company.—Interview in Chicago Tribune.

Great Success Due to Diet.

Who were the great victors of the Eighteenth century? Voltaire, who lived on coffee, and had too weak a stomach to bear much food; Washington, who was spare and abstemious, and at the revolution the people of Paris, who were starvelings. Stanley greatly explains his success when he says that all he wants is a crust of bread, a mouthful of meat when he can get it and a cup of tea.—Mrs. Crawford in London Truth.

If the Ocean Should Dry Up!

The depth of the sea presents an interesting problem. If the Atlantic were lowered from 6,564 feet the distance from shore to shore would be half as great, or 1,500 miles. If lowered a little more than three miles, say 19,680 feet, there would be a road of dry land from Newfoundland to Ireland.—Ocean.

A False and Stupid Proverb.

There is a bit of proverbial philosophy afloat to the effect that "a watched kettle never boils." False philosophy this, whether taken literally or figuratively. In the one case it is an idiotic superstition, in the other a stupid mistake; in either a humbug and a cheat.—New York Ledger.

TRICKS OF OPERATORS.

RAILROAD TELEGRAPHERS USED TO GET A LITTLE SLEEP.

A Possible Explanation of Some Terrible Wrecks—Most Men Realize the Grave Responsibility Which Is Upon Them—A Boy's Costly Sleep.

The most undesirable work and the least remunerative among telegraphers is that of night operator at some lonely station on a railroad. The rules of the company require that these men shall remain awake at their posts from 7 p. m. till 7 a. m. to report passing trains, and to receive and deliver such orders as it may be necessary to convey to engineer and conductors to regulate the movement of their trains. On double track roads their presence at their posts is of great importance only in emergencies, and to be sure they are always on hand. A system of signaling is in vogue on most roads by which every operator is required to report by wire to headquarters every half hour during the night.

On the Central Railroad of New Jersey fifteen years ago the headquarters of the night dispatcher was at Elizabeth, the wire signal of the office being "K I." Every half hour in the night the dispatcher's operator would sound on the wire the signal "Six, six, six, K I," and each operator on the line from Jersey City to Phillipsburg would have to sound his office signal in turn, beginning with "J C" and ending with "P." If all the responses came the operator at "K I" would say "O. K." and another half hour of dreary silence would intervene.

ONE SCHEME TO SLEEP.

The operator at Somerville was on terms of intimate friendship with the one at Hampton Junction, and they arranged to sound each other's signals on alternate nights, so that the one for whom the other acted could sleep. Each, however, had to attend to the reporting of the trains that passed his station. The station at Somerville was between the north and south bound tracks, and the operator there invented an ingenious device by which he could go to sleep and yet be awakened whenever a train should pass.

Taking two stout cords, he ran one out over the window and under the platform to one of the rails of the south bound track, to which he tied it. The other was run in a similar way, and tied to the north bound track. Inside the office he made a loop in each of the cords at a convenient height. Leaning back in his chair, with his head pillowed on a shelf, he put his right foot through one loop and his left through the other, both feet being about on a level with his head. Then he slept.

A north bound train came along, cut the string, and his left foot fell down with a jerky suddenness that would have thrown him out of the chair had his other foot not been tied. Then a message would go to headquarters like this, "S. O. K., 1: N. 6., No. 23, eng. 45. 1:18," meaning that Somerville reported, north bound train No. 23, drawn by engine No. 45, passing at 1:18 a. m. The string was tied to the rail again, another loop made, and the operator soon was dreaming once more. If the left foot fell it was a north bound train; if the right one, a south bound—a glance at the clock showing what train was due according to the schedule.

Another operator used to fill a coal scuttle with coupling pins, old scraps of iron and tin, and fasten it high from the floor to a string tied to the rails. When a train came along the scuttle would fall with a crash loud enough almost to be heard at the dispatcher's headquarters.

A BOY'S NEGLIGENCE.

On the Belvidere Delaware division of the Pennsylvania road, where balloon signals are used, such devices are not available, and the operators must remain awake every moment of the long night. The "Bel. Del.," as it is called, is a single track road, and orders are frequent during the night to regulate the movement of trains. It is over this division that the Pennsylvania's heavy coal traffic is brought down to Trenton and to Perth Amboy. The balloon signal is an oblong hollow canopy made of red flannel, and kept in shape by circular iron hoops.

By a double cord attachment connecting with the operator's table it can be lowered or raised at will. If lowered it is a danger signal that no train dares to pass. If raised the signal is "No orders; go ahead on schedule time." At night a white lantern is hung under the balloon, which when lowered shows a red light through the red flannel. If raised the white light shows, signaling that everything is "all right."

The orders of the company are that the balloon must be kept down at all times, day and night, showing the red signal, and only raised when a train approaches for which no orders have been received. Thus a terrible responsibility falls upon the operator who has complete control of the signal. If he receives an order for a train and forgets it, or becomes confused and raises the signal, the result is sure to be a collision. Fortunately the operators on that division are faithful men, who evidently never sleep on duty. Perhaps a sense of the responsibility keeps them awake. The operator at Washington crossing, just above Trenton, nearly a score of years ago was a young boy, who could not resist the temptation to run about to picnics and on excursions during the day. As a rule he was most powerfully inclined to sleep at night. Twice he did so, and was then discharged.

The first occasion resulted in the wreck of a coal train, and the other in breaking a freight train in two. The coal train stopped on the heavy grade, seeing the signal down, and the engineer coming in for orders found the boy sound asleep. He woke him roughly, and in deep anger started again for his engine. Being angry he started up too quickly, and broke a coupling on the tenth car, the engine and the ten cars starting down the grade very fast. "Off brakes" had been whistled, and the second section coming on crashed into the first, piling up a dozen cars. Almost the same thing happened to the freight, and the young operator was allowed to look for a day job—on some other road.—New York Tribune.

Several Versions of a Maxim.

Popular maxims credit certain individuals with criminal proclivities. The Roman says, "Little beard and little color—there is nothing worse under heaven." In French it is, "God preserve me from a beardless man," and in Tuscany, "Salute from afar a beardless man and a bearded woman," and in Venice, "Trust not the woman with a man's voice."—New York Times.

Shaving a la Mode.

Barbers on the French steamers arriving at New York are said to have regular patrons among their compatriots, who visit the steamers upon every arrival, bent upon having their beards kept trimmed in the ultra fashion of the boulevards.—Philadelphia Ledger.

There was a woman at the Union depot one morning who chewed. This assertion is not limited entirely to the time during which she masticated her daily bread, nor must be construed to mean that she closed her face successively upon a monthful of the newest brand of gum. In that respect she was unlike the great mass of women and girls, and instead worked away upon the finest brand of fine cut. The woman had just arrived from the Ozark regions, and having no better occupation she chewed tobacco while she awaited the departure of the train that was to take her west.

She carried about a pound of fine cut in a small hand basket, and seeking a variety was seen to take a good sized piece of plug tobacco from her pocket and bite off a comfortable "chew." The Colorado madura gentleman who looks after the condition of the depot floors sighed as he contemplated the woman, who evinced a dislike for cuspidores. He asked her when her train departed, and handed in his resignation, effective at noon, when she replied that she had about concluded to remain there all day.—Kansas City Star.

Greek Merchants.

On the first floor of the old Delmonico's was the bar and the coffee room. In the latter, between 11 a. m. and 2 p. m., you would always find a lot of Greek merchants sipping coffee and smoking cigarettes, which they rolled on the spot. They were enormously rich and did business in this way: "Oh, you want some Algerian wool. I think I have a few thousand bales of Oran and Sfax over in Brooklyn; but you must see my brokers—and—it is in their hands entirely." It was the same with coffee or hemp. The brokers had everything to say that was to be said. Let the owner enjoy his coffee and cigarettes and the society of his polished associates from the land of Socrates; but when it came to payment—cash or paper that would sell at sight; no confidence business, if you please. The ancients used to say that "Greek credit" was to deliver the goods with one hand and receive the price with the other.—New York Star.

Saw Aaron Burr Married.

American history is a matter of only recent record. One of the witnesses of the marriage between Aaron Burr and Mme. Eliza Jumel, when he was 78 and she 60, is still living in New York city and well remembers the event. His name is Jacob Fried, and he was Mme. Jumel's gardener and coachman. He says the old gallant was refused three times by the dame, and only got her at last by bringing a clergyman with him.

Fried drove them away across the country on their wedding tour, and according to him "Burr was a little man with gray hair and not at all good looking." But the old coachman's testimony on the latter point will not weigh against that of the fascinated dames of Burr's time, who handed down to their daughters and granddaughters such glowing accounts of his powers over the sex.—Boston Herald.

An Awkward Position.

A precocious little rascal was noticed on Jefferson avenue the other day making his best endeavor to ring a door bell just beyond his reach. A well known minister happened along, and with the impulses of a good Samaritan wanted to help the boy.

"Like to ring the bell, sonny?"

"Yes, sir; but I can't reach it."

The divine stepped to the veranda and gave the bell a vigorous pull, as he patted the interesting juvenile on the head.

"Now run like the devil!" shouted the kid as he shot down the street at top speed. All the man of cloth could do was to laugh at this deplorable bit of worldliness and make explanation when the call was answered.—Detroit News.

Exercise Your Stomach.

Stomachs are not unlike people. They need hard things to develop them sometimes. Lobsters and Welsh rarebit and ices at unholy hours have their purpose in the physiological world just as well as dumbbells and rowing machines and chest weights. Trust the stomach to tell you when you have carried your heroism too far. But don't make a molly-coddle of it, or it will make a dyspeptic or a corpse out of you. There is sound sense and real wisdom in the voracious but ungodly taste which prompts the small boy to make an ostrich of himself. Let him do it if you want to make him strong.—New York Evening Sun.

An Interesting Exhibition.

Women of culture and refinement all over the world are taking up the work of nursing with commendable ardor. A movement is on foot now in England to hold an exhibition of the new and improved apparatus in the shape of beds, chairs, clothing, dishes, etc., which have been invented for the comfort and convenience of invalids. The exhibition will be under the direction of the Association of Trained Nurses.—London Letter.

Cables of the North Atlantic.

The north Atlantic is spanned by no less than eleven cables, all laid since 1870, though I think not all are working at the present time. Five companies are engaged in forwarding telegrams between North America and Europe, and the total length of the cables owned by them, including coast connections, is over 80,000 nautical

---

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage containing a power of sale dated April 5th, 1887, duly recorded in the office of register of deeds of Polk county, Minnesota, on April 8th, 1887, in book 30 of mortgages on page 393 whereby Wilfred Cyr and Emma Cyr, his wife, mortgagors, mortgaged to F. T. Day, mortgagee, the west half (w½) of the south east quarter (se¼) and the south east quarter (se¼) of the south west quarter (sw¼) and lots nine (9) and ten (10) all in section twenty-five (25) in township one hundred and fifty one (151) of range forty-five (45) in Polk county, Minnesota containing one hundred and seventy-four and 25-100 acres, by which default the power of sale has become operative and no action or proceeding at law or otherwise has been instituted to recover the debt remaining secured by said mortgage or any part thereof and there is claimed to be due on said mortgage at the date of this notice, the sum of $87.30.

Now, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of said power, said mortgage will be foreclosed and said premises will be sold at public auction by the sheriff of said county or his deputy on the 11th day of December, 1890, at 10 o'clock a. m. at the front door of the court house in the city of Crookston in said county, to pay said debt and interest and taxes and twenty-five dollars attorney's fees and disbursements allowed by law.

Dated June 1st, 1890,

F. T. Day, Mortgagee.

De Forest Bucklen,
Attorney for Mortgagee,
Crookston, Minn.

Land Office at Crookston, Minn., October 7,1890.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the register of U S Land Office at Crookston, Minn., on Dec. 6, 1890, viz, Arthur Toupin, hd 12,187, for the w½ se¼ and e½ sw¼ sec 15, tp 151, r 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of, said land, viz,

Damas Lachance Moses Guerard, Philias Descautel, Cyrille Lussier, all of Brooks P. O., Minn.

H. H. Dickmann, register.

Things Worth Remembering.

That it is dangerous to stand near a tall tree or spire during a thunder storm.

That the southwest corner of the cellar is the "cyclone safety point."

That there is no medicine so universally applicable to sickness as fresh air and sunshine."

That blowing out the gas before retiring is funny—to every one except the one who tries it.

That you may swear as hard as you please but it will not remove grease spots.

That the Wisconsin Central is the most popular line between Minneapolis and St. Paul and Milwaukee and Chicago.

That its fast train leaves Minneapolis daily at 6:25 p. m., St. Paul at 7:15 p. m., with through Pullman sleepers, arriving in Milwaukee at 7:27 and Chicago at 9:59 the following morning, serving breakfast in dining car.

That before starting on a trip always get information from some reliable ticket agent, and that nowhere will such information be more cheerfully given than at the city ticket offices of the Wisconsin Central, No. 19, Nicollet House block, Minneapolis, and 162 East 3d st, cor. Jackson, St. Paul. Address letters to Chas. E. Dixon, acting city passenger and ticket agent, St. Paul, F. H. Hanson, Gen. Northwestern Pass. agent, Minneapolis, or Louis Eckstein, Assistant General Passenger and Ticket agent, Milwaukee.

RALPH & BOURDON,
Proprietors of the
CITY
DRAY
LINE.
WOOD & COAL
Anything in our line done
Promptly and at very Reasonable
Rates.
GIVE US A CALL

TONSORIAL HALL!
N. MORISETTE, Prop.
Everything First Class!
SHAVING,
HAIR-CUTTING,
SHAMPOOING!
☞Shaving 15 cents.
Haircutting 25 cents.☜
Main Street, Red Lake Falls.

Roller Mill "B"

BEST PATENT	$2.25
BEST STRAIGHT	2.00
SECOND "	1.75
FAMILY BAKER'S	1-40
GRAHAM	2.00
RYE FLOUR	2.00
MIDDLINGS	1.00
SHORTS	.55
BRAN	.45
BEST GROUND FEED	.80
2d " "	.65

Fine corn meal per pound, 2½c.

MAJERES BROS.
Proprietor of the
City Meat Market.
A full line of market supplies, such as
BEEF, PORK,
MUTTON, POULTRY
AND SAUSAGE.
A first class meat market where everything is kept as clean as can be.
Main, near 1st st. Red Lake Falls

JOHN WATSON,
PHYSICIAN & SURGEGN,
Office in residence, Sixth street, Red Lake Falls, Minn.
4-6

VIOLINS, GUITAR, BANJOS' FINEST Assortment, Largest Stock, Lowest Prices, Best Strings for all instrument, assorted to suit, $1,50 per dozen, postpaid. Cash with order. Anything in the music line sent C.O.D. to any part of the United States. Write pp Allmendinger Piano And Organ Company, Ann Arbor, Mich. Orders from teachers and the professional solicited. Live Agents wanted for our Pianos & Organs.

NORTHERN PACIFIC
RAILROAD
The New Dining Car Route
BETWEEN
WINNIPEG,
GRAFTON,
GRAND FORKS,
RED LAKE FALLS,
ST. PAUL,
MINNEAPOLIS,
DULUTH,
AND ALL POINTS EAST.
The Direct line to
MONTANA, IDAHO,
WASHINGTON TERRITORY,
OREGON, BRITISH COLUMBIA
PUGET SOUND AND ALASKA.
EXPRESS TRAINS DAILY.
To which are attached Pullman Palace Sleepers and Elegant Dining Cars. On overland trains, Emigrant Sleepers Free. The only line to the Yellowstone Park.
All trains daily.
Pullman Palace Sleeping Cars between Grand Forks and St Paul. Dining cars on all trains
Coupon tickets on sale to all points Southeast and West
For further information regarding rates, routes maps, etc., address
CHAS. S. FEE,
G. P. & T. Agt.,
St. Paul, Minn.
J. A. DUFFY
Local Agt

Green Bay,
Winona
& St. Paul
Railroad. Best and most Direct Line Between LACROSSE,
WINONA,
Neillsville,
Eau Claire,
Grand Rapids,
Stevens Point,
New London,
Appelton,
Neenah,
Menasha,
Oshkosh,
Fon du Lac,
GREEN BAY,
And all Points in
EASTERN WISCONSIN,
Iron Districts of Northern Michigan and Lake Superior Regions.
Close Connections and Quick Time.
See That Your Ticket Reads Via
GREEN BAY, WINONA & ST. PAUL Railroad.
S. W. Champion,
Superintendent, Green Bay, Wis.
J. B. Last,
Ass't Gen. Pass. Agt., Green Bay, Wis.

$100,000
To Loan on Farms
—AT—
10 pr Cent
Interest. No bonus—no delay, at
THE FIRST NAT. BANK
Red Lake Falls - - Minn.

FREE LANDS. Homeseekers will find the last of the public domain of agricultural and grazing value along the Great Northern Ry in North Dakota and Montana.
New Towns 100 or more, along the Great Northern Railway Line. Business chances. Write F. I. Whitney, St. Paul, Minn., for Books, Maps, etc. Write now.
Low Rates Settlers on Free government lands along the Great Northern Railway Line in North Dakota and Montana get low rates and fine markets for products.
Hunting, Fishing Finest resorts in America along the Great Northern Ry. Line in Minnesota, Dakotas and Montana. Best climate for health seekers.
Horses, Cattle Montana produces the finest horses and cattle. Free ranges yet in the Mouse, Milk and Sun River Valleys and Sweet Grass Hills.
Health, Wealth In Montana. Free Lands, New Towns New Railways, New Mines, Low Rates. Largest area of good, vacant land.
Sheep Hogs Sweet Grass Hills, Milk and Sun River Valleys, Montana, reached only by the Great Northern Railway Line. The stock raisers' paradise.
Gold, Coal The Regions tributary to the Great Northern Railway Line in Montana, produce all the precious and baser metals. New towns and railways are being built.
Milk River Go to the Great Reservation of Montana and get a good free homestead. Low rates and free sleepers on Great Northern R'y Line. Go now.
Herds, Mines. These have made Montana the richest state per capita in the Union. Plenty of room for more miners and stock raisers.
Young Man Along the Great Northern Line in Montana are free ranches and pasturage, mines of precious metal iron and coal, and new cities and towns. Now is your opportunity.
Great Falls Surrounded by a fine agricultural and grazing country, close to mines of precious metals, iron and coal possessing a water power unequaled in America, it is Montana's industrial centre.
G. N. R. L. The valleys of Red, Mouse, Missouri Milk and Sun Rivers reached by Great Northern Ry Line. Half rate excursions Sept. 9, 23 and Oct. 14, 1890. Write F. I. Whitney, St. Paul

THE LADIES FAVORITE
THE LIGHT RUNNING
NEW HOME
SEWING MACHINE
THE FINEST WOODWORK
THE BEST ATTACHMENTS
NEW HOME SEWING MACHINE CO. ORANGE, MASS.
CHICAGO, ILL.
28 UNION SQUARE, N.Y.
ATLANTA, GA.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
ST. LOUIS, MO.
FOR SALE BY DALLAS, TEX.

Railroad Time Table.

WAY FREIGHT	LEAVE P. M.	PASSENGER	ARRIVE A. M.	WAY FREIGHT
	8.00	St. Paul,	7:05
	8:35	Minneapolis.	6:35
	8:00	Duluth	7:00
	8:30	Ashland,(p m)	6:30
	3:30 a m	Wadena a m	12:02
WAY FREIGHT	A. M.	....	P. M.	WAY FREIGHT
1:00 p m	6:25	WINNIPEG JCTION	9:10	2:00 a m.
2:55 "	7:35	Twin Valley	8:30	11:42 pm
4:22 "	8:22	Fertile	7:14	9:54 "
6:20 "	9:20	RED LK FALLS	6:20	7:47 "
2:00 "	9:40	Crookston	6:00	10:00 am
7:42 "	10:10	Buffington	5:39	5:55 p m
8:30 "	10:35	Grand Forks	4:45	5:00 "
DAILY	P. M.	....	P. M.	DAILY
	12:50	Grafton	2:45
	2:45	Pembina.	12:55
	5:30	WINNIPEG, Man.	10:05

All trains daily.

The NEWS has prepared a grand benefit for its readers. We are desirous of adding new names to our subscription list, and settling up with those already there. A grand inducement is offered in the following proposition: Every person who pays up all arrearages on subscription and one year in advance, will be given a ticket in the drawing of the following articles: Four beautiful steel engravings, valued at from $15 to $20 each, the size being 8½x2½ feet, and one new gig, valued at $20. Each ticket has the chance of winning one of these grand prizes, the aggregate value of which is nearly $100. Not content with the above magnificent offer, the NEWS presents FREE, to its farmer friends who take advantage of the above offer and request it. The American Farmer, a farm magazine. To those who desire one of the very best American magazines at a greatly reduced price, we offer the Cosmopolitan, (if the premium offer is accepted) at $1.50 cents, the regular price being $2.40. You can hardly afford to let this opportunity pass. It is open for a month.

ECHOES OF THE RAPIDS

A MEMORY OF THE OLD FARM.

If you're been a happy rover
Through the fields of fragrant clover,
Where life is all a simple round of bliss,
When at eve the sun is sinking
And the stars are faintly winking
You can call to mind a picture such as this:

Hark! the cows are homeward roaming
Through the woodland pasture's gloaming,
I can hear them gently lowing through the dells,
And from out the bosky dingle
Comes the softly tangled jingle
And the oft repeated echo of the bells.

Strange how memory will fling her
Arms about some scenes we bring her,
And the fleeting years but make them stronger grow;
Though I wander far and sadly
From that dear old home, how gladly
I recall the cherished scenes of long ago.

Hark! the cows are homeward roaming
Through the woodland pasture's gloaming,
I can hear them gently lowing through the dells,
And from out the bosky dingle
Comes the softly tangled jingle
And the oft repeated echo of the bells.

—Chicago Post.

Black Rier went republican as usual.

John M. Boyle has decided to move to Tacoma.

The great and only Abbott at Grand Forks Tuesday.

H. B. Davis took the election returns to Crookston yesterday.

Joe Bray was at Crookston in attendance at the firemen's ball.

Hector Langevin is back again after a brief stay at McCaulyville.

This election makes "landslide" and "democracy" synonymous.

Thanksgiving time is approaching. Have you fattened your dorkey?

J. H. Marcil returned from Roam to day after an absence of about a year.

The fifth st sidewalk is about finished. Mr. Christianson has the contract.

Carl Kretzschmar was over from Thief River Falls Satuday on business.

Joseph Smith drove to Crookston yesterday in company with Arthur Toupin.

Harry Ives, ye editor of the St. Helaire Spectator, spent Sunday in this city.

C. W. Mead went to Crookston yesterday. The election has gone wrong for Charley.

The school report was handed in too late for publication this week. It will appear next week.

When Minnesota goes democratic it is time for the redublicans of the union to wince.

The NEWS wants some wood on subscription. Bring in enough to secure a ticket on the raffle.

Arthur Toupin will buy wheat at Roller mill A. Few are more popular among the farmers than Archie.

Tuesday was a cold day for the race—the political race—and the wind blew hrough many a whisker.

Owen's vote in this city was a surprise to everybody. They did not expect it to be above ten, at the most.

The Swedish Ladies' Octette were at Crookston yesterday. They give a grand usical entertainmnet.

Erve McCaffrey arrived from Augusta, Wis., Saturday morning and is now in charge of Roller Mill B.

Now watch the state alliance papers crow. They have been working for Wilson and have succeeded.

Joseph Grover returned from Dakota Wednesday evening, where he has been cooking for a threshing crew.

Miss Roxy Todd has decided to discontinue her class in music here. She was over from Grandin, Monday.

Mrs Jas. Meehan Jr. is expected home to-morrow. Her mother is rapidly recovering from her serious illness.

Roller Mill A has its night and day force at work. This gives employment to several good men, among whom is Duff Zaiser.

Wanted, at the NEWS office 1,000 subscribe to take advantage of she premium offer. Read it over. It is a grand opportunity.

Jas. McCaffrey started for Augusta Wis., Monday evening, to arrange business matters preliminary to moving his family here.

E. H. Draper's threshing crew wound up this season's work to-day. This outfit has had a fine season's run, having started out with the first crews.

Jas. I. Wyer's household furniture was auctioned off Monday by Jas. F. Holmes The sales were lively and it did not take long to clear out the goods.

Mr. D. Zaiser has not been improving and is seriously ill. His daughter, Miss Polly, was over from the Forks a couple of days this week attending him.

The township hustlers were in their element Tuesday; and the men who carry their friends' vote in their hip pocket. It was their day and they gloried in it.

Messrs. W. T. Spillane, J. W. Lowe, J. E. Redmond, H. B. Davis and Wm. Findeison were judges of election. It was past 1 p. m. when they had completed their labors.

Napolean Marleau started for Crookston with a lot of beer kegs. We think they were empty. We will, however, be able to tell our readers more accuratily when he returns.

The N. P. offers to run an excursion train to Grand Forks Tuesday evening at $1.10 for round trip if 100 tickets are sold; or at $2.20 if 50 are sold. It is doubtful if so large a number will go.

Father Thomas, of Red Lake, says the road which has just been completed to Red Lake will be the cause of the bulk o' the Indian trade coming here. He thinks the benefits will be of no mean order.

The community was surprised last week to hear of the death of one of our former residents, Adam Suttner, at West Superior, of typhoid fever. Mr. Suttner leaves a wife and four children in destitute circumstances.

Mrs. Joseph Laurence, who has been visiting relatives here and in Crookston the past month leaves to-day with the Williams-Smith party for her home in Tacoma. Her friends here wish her visits may be more frequent hereafter.

St. Joseph's church and parsonage is undergoing some changes. All the petitions in the lower floor are being taken out, to convert that part of the house into a good-sized church room. The upstairs will be occupied as the priest's residence.

St. Joseph's church people will give a fair about Jan. 1. They are making efforts to clear the property of the $2,000 encumbrance. The mortgage is already foreclosed. They should be encouraged in their work, having had hard odds to contend against.

The organization of the choral society is being perfected. The membership is about complete. The club will prove pleasant and entertaining to members and their friends during the long winter months. Such institutionrst end to make life happier and ought be encouraged.

The women better stop talking about their downtrodden rights as suffragists. They will not vote when they have the opportunity. Can the men be blamed for taking little interest in an agitation which is kept up by a minority too small to be termed representative?

The Emma Abbott Opera company's presence in Grand Forks the coming week will be the topic of leading interest there. Tuesday, Nov. 11th, it is thought an excursion will be run up from here which a large number of our citizens will take advantage of.

The number of votes received by A. R. Holston in the city is due more to a desire on the part of the voters to get him out of town than to any other cause. Crookston is to be congratulated on the acquisition of so good a citizen.

Rev. Ig Balluff goes to Argyle to officiate Sunday. He intends stopping off at East Grand Forks to see what can be done in religious work there. Rev. Fr. Arpin will officiate at St. Mary's church Sunday beginning at the usual time, 10:30.

Trade is lively with our merchants Thep wear smiling faces and are seen to rustle continuously. Money is plentiful amnog the farmers, and they are investing more largely this year, as they have been deferring every purchase other than absolute necessities, for the past two years.

A vote was taken in the principal's room Tuesday. The result was eleven democratic votes, two alliance and one republican—a slightly democratic tendency on the part of the youthful diplomats. We can't account for it in any other way than the effect of the McKinley bill on chewing gum.

Willie Grambeau, aged about fourteen years, passed away Thursday night from typhoid fever. his funeral took place from St. Joseph's church Sunday afternoon. Willie was well known in town, having attended school here last winter, and his death lends sorrow to the memories of many of his schoolmates.

Mrs. Wm. Smith, Miss Anna and Mrs D. D. Williams visited at the residence of Joseph Smith the latter part of the week. They took their departure for Crookston, Monday, from whence, they will leave Thursday for their home in Oregon. All regret their departure and hope at some future day they may return to renew the acquaintance of those they have often made happy.

List of letters remaining uncalled for at the post office at Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, for the month ending Oct. 31st, 1890. If not called for in thirty days they will be sent to the dead letter office: Carroll Eusta, Hamman Michael, Williams R. R. In calling for any of the above letters plesse say "advertised."

F RANK E. HUNT.

Thief River Falls parties make profitable traffic in moose, elk and deer. They purchase them and keep them till an agent comes from New Hampshire and pays large prices for the animals. There is a farm where all these animals are bred, the proprietors having in mind the object of perpetuating these species of American animals, which are so rapidly becoming extirct.

A dance was given at tne residence of Mr. and Mrs. Nopoleon Poulliot Monday night. It proved to be a highly successful affair, everyone in attendance having enjoyed himself exceedingly. Mr. and Mrs. Poulliot, even when taken by surprise, showed themselves to be capable entertainers. The merriment continued till a late hour, when with a sigh at the fleetness of pleasure, the guests dispersed for their little beds.

The Orpheus is a musical journal published at Minneapolis: It is the only periodical of the kind in the Northwest, and the people of the section represented feel a special interest in it. It is issued semi-monthly. Each issue contains a large variety of interesting musical reading and a couple of new songs or selections. Subscription price is 75c a year with premium of music. Send for sample copy.

Dr. I. Lemieux returned from his home in Canada, Monday morning. He was called home by a telegram announcing the critical illness of his father. He immediately started on the long journey, expecting to reach his destination at the end of three days. He was nearing his father's house when a funeral procession passed; it was his father's—a sad termination to his hurried journey. He could but join the solemn procession and pay the last sad tribute at the grave.

That silk quilt the ladies of St. Mary's church have been working at for several decades, more or less, will soon be finished. The quilt is a graud conglomeration of feminine fancies and each block represents the artistic ideas of the makers. Eccentricity, ordinarity, art and genius—all these qualities will be represented in the grand make-up, and this maniac or crazy quilt will surely be a prize worth chancing a quarter of a dollar on. The value, using the crazy idea as a criterion, may be anywhere from 50 cents to $500; but anyone will have the privilege of his own estimate.

D. D. Williams was in town Monday having just returned from St. Paul where he had been arguing a case in the supreme court for the Farmers' Mutual Elevator company. Mr. Williams paused for a short time at his former home to bid adieu to his many friends, preparatory to taking his departure for Baker City, Oregon, whither he goes to engage in the law business with William Smith. D. D. has ably and conscientiously filled the office of county attorney the past two years and this is no small task in a county the size and with the population of Polk. Baker City must throw out some very flattering indncements to make Mr. Williams leave his lucrative practice here. The best wishes of his many friends go with him to his western home—a proper recommendation to an honest lawyer, a perfect gentleman and good citizen.

Abbott at Grand Forks.

The demand for seats for the opening night of the Metropolitan Theatre in Grand Forks has been simply unprecedented. Residents of that thriving city have been striving to see who should be most liberal in the recognition of the enterprise which places such a magnificent temple of amusement at their disposal So far not a seat has been sold for less than twenty-five dollars and some have sold as high as three hundred dollars for two. In addition to this, the demand for seats from neighboring towns has been very pressing, and wishing to give their out of town patrons just as good an opportunity of obtaining the best seats as is enjoyed by residents of Grand Forks, a night has been reserved for them, for which not a single ticket will be sold in Grand Forks until the demand from neighboring towns has been supplied. Tuesday, Nov. 11th, has been selected, and will be called "Visitor's Night."

On Visitors' Night the opera presented will be Balfe's "Rose of Castile" in which Miss Abbott and the full strength of the company will be in the cast. This opera was selected for various reasons, the principle ones being that it is entirely new, and that Miss Abbott has a role which gives ample scope for the display of her brilliant powers, both as a singer and as an actress, and which enables her as the Queen of Castile to display some of the most magnificent costumes ever seen on the stage. And it here may be mentioned the that costumes of the Abbott company are exciting the greatest admiration wherever the company appears. The critics in New York, Chicago, Cincinnati and St. Louis pronounce them the most elaborate ever seen on the stage, and speak of the costumes worn by Miss Abbott and the entire company in their production of their "Rose of Castile" as a revelation of the costumer's art. It is safe to say that such an opera, presented by a company as complete in every respect as the Abbott company, in a theatre as beautiful and perfect as the Metropolitan, will not be seen in this section again in a quarter of a century.

The schedule of prices for Visitors' Night is extremely moderate considering the magnitude of the enterprise and is as follows:

Parquette and first two rows of parquette circle	$5 00
Balance of parquette circle	4 00
First row of balcony	4 00
Second row of balcony	3 00
Third and fourth rows of balcony	2 00
Fifth and sixth rows of balcony	1 50
Remaining five rows of balcony	1 00

Every seat in the house is reserved and applications by mail to the Grand Forks Opera Company will receive prompt attention. To secure good seats, however, an early application will be necessary as orders are coming in very radidly.

Improved Passenger Service

Under the new time schedule of "the North-Western Line," C., St. P., M. & O. Ry., all passenger trains of this line make the trip between St. Paul and Chicago in less than 14 hours.

The Pullman and Wagner Vestibuled Limited, leaving St. Paul at 7:30 p. m. makes the trip to Chicago in 13½ hours and from Chicago to St. Paul in 13 hours and 25 minutes.

The Daylight Express leaving St Paul at 7:45 a. m. makes the trip to Chicago in 13 hours and 50 minutes and from Chicago to St. Paul in 13 hours and 45 minutes.

This is the only line running all its trains in less than 14 hour between St. Paul and Chicago, and while this time is quick trains don't have to run at as high speed to make their time as on other lines, because this is shorter than any other line.

In addition to these facts this is the only line by which connections are assure in Chicago with all fast line trains from Chicago to the East and South in the morning and at night.

Note.—Fares by this line are always as low as by any other.

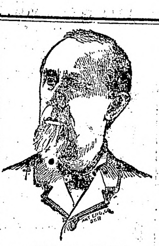
For Map Folder of the line address T. W. TEASDALE, Gen'l Passenger Agent St. Paul, Minn.

How íes Voted.

For governor: Wilson, 89; Merriam, 30; Owen, 39. Congress: Whiteman, 90; Comstock, 39; Halvorson, 38. Senator E. E. Lommen, 35; McKinnon, 71, Cromb, 53. Auditor: Gilly, 72, Cornelius 56; C. U. Webster, 31. Treasurer, John T. Beaudry, 70; Moreau, 69. Sheriff, Paterson, 117; Norveson, 17; Grundyson, 25. Register of deeds: Kirsch, 78; Rosnaen, 51; Locken, 28. Clerk of court: Nurveson, 48; Walsh, 84; Muns, 29. Judge of probate: Russell, 115; Christianson, 25; C. M. Benson, 10. Attorney: George, 73; Montague, 10; Holston, 66. Surveyor, Hamery, 108; Ralph, 46. Commissioner: Langevin, 167; Gigstud, 10; DeMers, 10.

Bleak autumn, with its sighs and groans, is here in sober earnest—banking of houses is now in progress.

Geo. Brunelle's place was the scene of the typical after-election-night, Tuesday evening. The boys were treated to special returns every half hour and George raked in many a shekel.



THOMAS A. WILSON.

As we go to press, indications point to the election of Wilson by the small majority of 758.

An Ideal Employment.

"Supposing one had to work," said the idler, "what would be the ideal employment to choose?"

"Horticulture," answered the professor promptly. "In the first place, it is a healthful calling, but that is the least of its advantages. It affords abundant opportunity for meditation, and unlike most work which has this merit it is not tedious or mechanical. It is full of valuable suggestions for thought. Best of all, it admits, as does no other occupation, of unalloyed satisfaction in the results of labor. No industry, art or profession produces anything which so nearly justifies pride as the work of even the mediocre gardener."—Kate Field's Washington.

Of Good Blood.

Col. T. W. Higginson says of himself that the printers' ink in his blood is really 300 years old, his first American progenitor, Rev. Francis Higginson, of Salem, having come to America about 1629, and published a book, "New England's Plantation," which is still reprinted. At Harvard college Col. Higginson's literary training was committed to Professor Edward Channing, the admirable teacher who instructed so many good writers, including Emerson, Motley, Holmes, Edward Everett Hale and others.—Harper's Bazar.

JHN OLEVEQUE.
PRACTICAL BLACKSMITH,
Horse and ox shoer. Manufactures wagons, buggies, etc: Shops on Main street, opposite bank.

JOHN M. BOYLE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
Practices in all the State and Federal courts Collections and insurance.
Office in NEWS, Main St.

I. LEMIEUX,
PHYSICIAN & SURGEON,
Office in residence, First street, Red Lake Falls, Minn. 3-6

Unprecedented Record

The Minneapolis Times has attained the largest measure of success in the short time it has been before the people of any paper in the Northwest.

WHY ? ? ?

Because it is Bright Newsy, Ably Edited, Fair to all Parties and Gets the News.

Since the first guns of the preliminary campaign in July The Times'

POLITICAL NEWS

has set the pace for its contemporaries. It has gone to the front on its Local News, Market Reports, Telegraphic Specials, Regular Press (Press News) report.

The Times

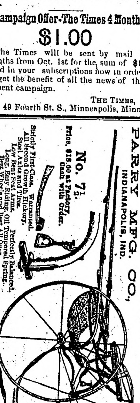
Is independent politically and prints all the news about politics and candidates, but does not deal in abuse of any man who has the misfortune to run for an office.

A Campaign Offer-The Times 4 Months

$1.00

The Times will be sent by mail 4 months from Oct. 1st for the sum of $1. Send in your subscriptions now in order to get the benefit of all the news of the present campaign.

THE TIMES,
49 Fourth St. S., Minneapolis, Minn.



PARRY MFG. CO.,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.
No. 7½.
Price, $15.00 at Factory Cash with Order.
Strictly First-Class. Warranted.
All Second Growth Hickory.
Steel Axles and Tire.
Low Bent Seat Arms. Perfectly Balanced.
Long, Easy Riding, Oil Tempered Spring.
Best Wheels and Best All Over.
IF YOU CAN'T FIND THEM FOR SALE BY YOUR MERCHANTS, WRITE US

BETTER AN ENGLISH RESIDENT THAN AN AMERICAN CITIZEN.

One of the singular results of this wonderful system of protection, which there are strong indications, this country is not enjoying, is that it is actually better, in some lines of business, for a man to be a British subject, resident here, than to be a citizen of the republic. This is notably so in that important branch of the industries of our nation which is engaged in transporting the products of this country over the oceans and bringing back to us the products of other countries for which ours are exchanged. While it is true that very few steamers engaged in foreign commerce float the American flag at their peak, it is nevertheless true that a number of lines of steamers, sailing under foreign flags and register, are largely if not entirely owned by American capital. These ships, however, have been built abroad, and under our benign navigation laws are denied American register and the privilege of floating our flag. If one of our citizens wishes to have our flag float over his vessel, the vessel must be built in American shipyards. But the cost to the American, owing to the tariff on iron, steel and cordage, makes his steamer so much more costly that he cannot compete in the carrying trade with foreign built ships. The privilege which, by the operation the tariff, is denied to our citizen, can be enjoyed by any foreigner resident here. How this can be done the Hon. Earl S. Youmans, of Winona, makes very clear in a communication to The Republican of that city.

"On a recent visit to Philadelphia," he says, "I met an English gentleman who is manager of the Earn steamship line. I presume that the fact that there is a line of steamships running from American to foreign ports, with headquarters at Philadelphia, is as new to the readers of The Republican as it was to me. There are eighteen steel ships in the line, all foreign built, and six of them ply regularly between Philadelphia and South American ports, while several others run to the West India Islands. They receive no subsidy and ask none. The company is composed of astute Englishmen who saw the two Americas lying contiguous, full of natural resources, developed and rapidly developing, and they did not see any good reason why the 100,000,000 inhabitants peopling these countries should not trade with each other. They had observed the unfolding of commerce, and the phenomenal growth and carrying trade between England and all civilized nations of the world in the last forty years, and they could see no reason, inferring from English experience, why commerce between North, Central and South America should not increase to an extent that would insure large profits for transporting their products under the legitimate demands of exchange. Moreover, the business has grown beyond the capacity of the line, and the manager told me they expected to have three new ships built during the coming year. I remarked: 'You will contract for them to be built on the other side.' He replied: 'Not necessarily. From the negotiations we are having it seems probable that we can get as favorable terms from American as from foreign shipbuilders.' He observed my surprise at the statement and said: 'Let me explain. An American could not. I am an Englishman. Under your protective system, you are probably aware, that an imported article paying a duty, if exported, the duty is paid back to the exporter from the national treasury, less a very small fraction. I contract with one of your shipbuilders. On the completion of a vessel I am obliged to sail it under a foreign flag. The amount the builder collects from the United States treasury for rebate of duties is the discount he has made to me below what an American, who sailed the vessel under an American flag, would have to pay. You see then that I can get my ship built in an American shipyard under conditions of free trade.'"

RUINOUS TO OUR BEST INTERESTS.

Ex-President Hayes, whose administration, it has been pithily said, it is the province of that of Harrison to make illustrious, said of the McKinley bill, in an interview in New York on the 4th inst:

"I can not find words to express my regret at the passage of the measure," said Mr. Hayes to a reporter. "It is ruinous to all our best interests, and it will do an infinite amount of harm."

"What do you think of the letters written against it by Mr. Blaine?"

"I second every word Mr. Blaine wrote in the matter. I can not understand how public men can be so blind to the interests of the country at large as to pass such a bill. It is annihilating to the Republican party. It is the most terrible blow that has been struck at that party during its existence. I can only say that I hope such a policy will die out, surely and soon; but I can not shut my eyes to the evil that will be done before such protection as this finds a grave."

What Mr. Blaine said about it was that "it is a measure in favor of the East and against the West," and Senator Pettigrew, of South Dakota, voted against the bill, giving the same reason.

WILL THEY COME INTO LINE.

Senator Pettigrew, of South Dakota, who was one of the three P's who left their party on the passage of the McKinley bill, says, in explanation, that he did it because he believed "it is too distinctively an Eastern measure; that the men who framed it believed that the West would come into line anyway and vote for it." Well, it remains to be seen whether these Western men, fooled two years ago, will again be fooled.

THE PEOPLE ARE DANCING NOW.

Tariff reform is an economic necessity. It will come, and it makes no difference to the American people which party fiddles if only the people can dance.—The North (Scan.-Am.).

Red Lake Falls News.

BOYLE & MEEHAN, Editors & Proprietors.

TERMS, $1.50 A YEAR.

A BOSTON girl has furnished her bald-headed lover with a wig made from her own hair.

OSCAR WILDE has grown quite stout and looks like a successful butter merchant.

AN association of Philadelphia house-wives will abolish kitchens in their homes and start a co-operative central cooking house.

BERLIN drank in 1889 269,247,100 quarts of beer—that is about 150 quarts to every man, woman and child.

CONGRESSMAN MILLER, of South Carolina, has only a slight strain of negro blood in him. He has a son who is red haired and freckle faced.

GEN. NATHANIEL P. BANKS began his career a s a factory boy. He is still tall and stately, though midway between 70 and 80 years of age.

THE Boston Globe doesn't believe that base ball is dead, but thinks the enthusiasm for the national game has been spread around too thin during the past season.

A BEREAVED husband in North Carolina put the touching inscription on his departed wife's tombstone, "A little while." In a "little while" —three weeks—he married again.

IN 1850 there was one criminal in the United States to every 3,410 people. In 1890 there is one criminal in the United Stated to 680 people.

MENTION is made of a London man who won a wager by retaining a serious face while a noted wag was firing a dozen jokes at him. If the jokes were from Punch the man had a walk-over,

THE instructor in physical culture at the Oswego state normal school has forbidden the young women of that institution to wear the encircling garter. This is sumptuary legislation of the worst kind.

CHRISTINE NILSSON'S husband has been made under secretary to the new Spanish cabinet, and the duties will come easy to him on account of his long service as under secretary in the Nilsson cabinet.

AT least 200,000 barrels of Malaga grapes are expected to reach the American market from Spain this year. This grape has grown in popularity since last winter, when physicians prescribed it for sufferers from la grippe.

A YOUNG locomotive engineer on the Southern Pacific Railroad is the son of a millionaire of Terre Haute, Ind. The son voluntarily chose his present life on account of a quarrel with his father. The family is trying to induce him to return.

THE fur of seals is concealed by a coat of stiff overhair, which must be laboriously removed before the skin is ready for use, Seals from two to four years old have skins weighing from 5¼ to twelve pounds, and three of these skins are required for a lady's sacque.

OVER 15,500 applicants have been turned away from the New York public schools since they were opened, for want of room. If this discredible state of affairs continues there will ere long be a lamentable lack of room in the New York houses of correction, too.

STATISTICS furnished by the British customs officers at the ports British Columbia show that during the year of 1889 something like 180,000 pounds of smoking opium was smuggled into the United States, causing a loss of revenue amounting to $1.800,000.

A CHATTANOOGA lawyer has peculiar views of the duties of policemen. He wrote to Cincinnati for information about his missing son. He wants the policeman that finds him to obtain for him a situation in some lawyer's office, the boy being a good stenographer. The salary must not be less than $10 a week. More than that, the officer is to see that the boy pays his board and behaves himself, and is then to report the lad's progress to his father.

NEWS SIFTINGS.

Criminal, Personal, Foreign and Other Interesting News Items.

WASHINGTON.

Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Spaulding says he has no information that the Mexican government has levied a duty of $500 per car load on cattle from the United States.

State department officers say the published statement that the Behring sea fisheries question has been submitted to arbitration is untrue, as the arbitrators have not yet been selected. Correspondence is still passing between the United States and Great Britain on the subject, and a conclusion is not yet in sight.

PERSONAL.

Judge John C. Sherwin, of Iowa, who was among the first to render a decision in the original package case allowing importers to sell in the state, now instructs his grand jury to indict all parties found selling within the state and holds that the Iowa prohibitory law is in full force and effect, the recent decision of the Kansas court to the contrary notwithstanding.

ACCIDENTAL.

While driving across the track of the Milwaukee & Northern near Fredonia, Wis., Rev. Father Frank, pastor of the Evangelical Lutheran church, and his daughter were struck by a train and seriously injured.

While standing in the Carnegie blast furnaces at Pittsburg Robert Washington laughingly said he was not afraid of electrocution, and, reaching high over his head, he grasped an electric lamp. Instantly he fell to the floor dead.

At Eureka Springs, Ark., fire started in H. S. Collins' jewelry store and consumed property valued at $200,000; insurance, $7,000. The Perry house, Springfield house, Ohio house and thirty-five other buildings and dwellings were destroyed.

The Hudson river showed the highest tide in forty years. The brick yards suffered enormously. Millions of brick are lost. The yards between Roseton and Albany are submerged, and the green brick awaiting burning were thrown down by the flood. It is estimated that 4,600,000 brick have been lost in the Kingston district. The fires were put out in the kilns in process of burning. Green kilns were thrown down, and the brick underneath sheds were washed away.

John Jacob Searley was found dead near West Superior, Wis. The cause of death was apparent. He had set a trap for deer, and had fallen into the snare himself. The dead man was seventy-six years old and came from Elkader, Io., two years ago with his son. He settled on some land eight miles south of this city, and being a vigorous man for his years he gave a good deal of time to hunting. He had set two rifles on deer trails and fastened them so that a body passing on the trail must touch the string attached to the trigger and explode the gun. It is supposed that he encountered one of the strings in the dim light of the early morning. The rifle was fixed with deadly precision and the ball, piercing his body at the hip and passing right through, caused hemorrhage which resulted in his death from loss of blood.

Gov. Hill, of New York, was traveling on a special through West Virginia. The train was to have stopped at all stations between Wheeling and Harper's Ferry for from five to twenty minutes to allow the governor to make advertised addresses. The programme, however, was abruptly interfered with by a collision at Moundsville, where the train had stopped for a few minutes. Behind the train was a heavy freight and accommodation train, and next to this a heavy freight, all standing about twenty-five feet apart. Just as Gov. Hill's train was pulling out the Chicago express came thundering in from the opposite direction. The two trains collided, forcing the governor's train back into the accommodation, and this into the freight, the four trains being jammed together. Although the passengers in the front car of the governor's train were thrown from their seats, no one was injured, and the shock in the car in which Gov. Hill and party were seated was very light.

SINS AND SINNERS.

Frank Losse who is wanted in St. Louis for stealing $70,000 from G. D. Latch & Co., has left Toronto for St. Louis in charge of a detective.

At San Francisco Lawrence Roach, Republican was shot and insanely killed by James J. Allen, Democrat. The killing was the result of politics.

George B. Fitzpatrick, a young man from Seattle, Wash., arrived in Boston and was swindled out of $290 by a confidence man before he had been in the city thirty minutes.

Zina P. King, ex-treasurer of the University of Michigan Alumni association, who a year ago embezzled $17,000, has been arrested. He refunded $10,000, but failed to restore the balance.

At White Plains, N. Y., Dr. C. C. Crolly, a druggist, recently lost two children by diphtheria. Crolly walked to his family, plot, dug a hole, took laudanum and then lay down in the grave dug by himself. He will probably die.

Charles W. Robinson, a well known stock broker in the Home Bank building in Brookville, Mass., and who had been doing business through John Stetson's banking house in Boston, is a self-confessed forger. The amount will not fall short of $85,000.

While walking from Picketts, Wis., on the Illinois Central road, to Browntown a Chicago traveling man, whose name is unknown, was met by two men, who held him up at the muzzle of a revolver while they robbed him of $400 and a gold watch. The robbers have not been caught.

A lunatic named Blais, who claimed to have escaped from a Michigan asylum, was arrested at Lacolle, Canada. Next morning he secured an ax at the lock-up and after probably fatally wounding Constable Larrean and Joseph Lajeusse, made his escape. Being armed with the ax he defied arrest, and the citizens had to disable him with guns. He is now in jail.

Four men went to the house of an old man named Griffin, near Allegna, Mich., with the intention of paying off an old grudge. They met with stout resistance from a man named Hale and Griffin. Hale shot one o' the men and felled another with an ax. He then went for assistance, and upon returning found Griffin still alive but badly used up and his assailants gone, having taken their wounded away in a wagon.

A small band of Arizona Apaches, evidently not more than four in number have been terrorizing settlers along the Arizona-New Mexico line for the past few weeks in Western Sierra and Grant counties. Several posses have been organized to hunt them, and the two troops of the United States cavalry have been scouting the Mogollon mountains and the Passe range for weeks, but without result. The band being so small as to readily elude its followers.

Miss Lizzie Phelps, a society belle and heiress, who lives near Binghamton, N. Y., was married to William Slattery, the family coachman. Miss Phelps is a niece of the late Judge Sherman D. Phelps, concerning whom and whose relatives there has been unlimited newspaper gossip. The bride, who is one of three sisters, is about twenty-seven years of age and is worth $100,000. The groom is illiterate, but of good appearance. He states that Capt. L. L. Olmstead, of the Twentieth Separate company, has threatened to shoot him if the marriage occurs.

The "Jack-the-Ripper" scare has again caused a sensation among the police and the residents of the south Hampstead locality in London. In a secluded part of that neighborhood, passers-by were shocked by finding in an obscure alley the dead body of a woman whose head had been very nearly severed; while her body showed evidences of kicks and bruises in themselves sufficient to cause death. While up to the present time no knowledge has been obtained as to who the victim was, it seems very evident that she was a woman of low repute, and this was sufficient to start the "Jack the Ripper has been at work again." Police actively began operations in a search for the murderer, but thus far no arrests have been made.

The trial of Antley, Pascale and Pierre Paul, the three Indian murderers and outlaws, was ended at Missoula, Mont. Antley was one of the three Indians who murdered two prospectors on the mouth of Flat creek two years ago, the other two being lynched at Demersville a year ago. Pascale murdered a man named Dunn on the Joco river a year ago. He is said to have made the remark to Pierre Paul: "Let's go out and shoot some white man." Going out they met two men on the railroad track. Pascale began to talk to one of the men, and when his back was turned shot at him with a revolver, but missed. The man grappled with him and failed to wrench the weapon from him, and the Indian fired three times, killing him with the third shot. The other man started to run and was also killed by Pierre Paul. The Indians were captured about three months ago. Pascale, Antley and Pierre Paul were found guilty of murder in the first degree, and sentenced to be hung Dec. 19 1890.

FOREIGN GRIST.

Austrian and British ambassadors have remonstrated with the sultan of Turkey on the cruel treatment of Armenian prisoners, several of whom, including the young Armenian who attempted to murder the arch-priest Succkias, have been tortured to death in the prisons of Constantinople.

Grave international complications may arise from the condemnation at Sherbrooke, Canada, to one year's imprisonment for contempt of court of Leda Lamontague, who was extradited some time ago from the United States upon a charge of arson. Leda's brother was being tried for murder, and the Canadian authorities sought to use her as a witness against him, but she absolutely refused, contending that she had not been surrendered by the American authorities as a witness, but on the charge of arson, for which she was ready to stand her trial. Leda's counsel contends that her condemnation for contempt was a breach of faith with the American authorities, who consented to her extradiction for an entirely different purpose, and if he fails to have her sentence annulled he will take the case to Washington, and the secretary of state will be asked to remonstrate with the Canadian authorities, and to demand an explanation of the apparent breach of international faith involved in the sentence.

OTHERWISE.

Again it is rumored that the Great Northern is to absorb the Chicago, Burlington & Northern road.

Dr. C. T. Cooke, who mysteriously disappeared from Chicago a short time ago, has been found in Cincinnati in a demented condition.

The Oklahoma council has passed the house bill changing the location of the territorial capital from Guthrie to Kingfisher. It goes back to the house now, and a special session is called to consider the same.

The commission appointed by the Pennsylvania state legislature to survey a route or report on the practicability of building a ship canal between Lake Erie and Pittsburg has decided to recommend such an enterprise

Adjutant General Klee of Colorado is holding the state troops in readiness to rush to the front if the depredations of the Ute Indians continue. The Utes are growing more aggressive daily and the settlers are alarmed.

An extensive strike has been begun by the dockmen at Plymouth, against the employment of non-union men. The new federation of employes in all the shipping industries embraces 370,000 men.

The Alaska Commercial company has commenced suit against the North American Commercial company to recover $100,000, the value of 4,000 seal skins claimed by both companies.

The trial of the action for divorce brought by Capt. O'Shea against his wife, in which Mr. Parnell is named as co-respondent, has been set down for the middle of November. Counter allegations will be made against Capt. O'Shea by his wife.

The still hunt which O. W. Potter has been carying on to secure control of the Illinois Steel company, at Chicago, has ended successfully. The New Bedford stockholders have sold out 15,000 shares to the Potter syndicate.

The Ohio house of representatives passed the Soucrant bill. The bill provides that the present board of public affairs shall be abolished, and a new one appointed by the mayor of Cincinnati. The board thus appointed will serve until next April, when their successors will be elected by the people. The legislature adjourned sine die.

Bishop Hurst, of the Methodist Episcopal church, has reached home after having crossed the Atlantic four times within as many months. The bishop is very enthusiastic over the proposed Methodist university which is to be located near Washington, and believes that the money for the site, $100,000 will be secured during the coming winter. Already between $45,000 $50,000 have been subscribed.

In his instructions to the grand jury Judge Leggett, at Bloomfield, Iowa, said that under the decision of the United States supreme court, it was not a crime to sell liquors imported from another state in the original packages, until the Wilson bill was passed by congress and became a law, but that after that time it was a violation of the laws of this state to sell any liquor without a proper permit, whether imported in the original package or not.

The gradual but constant decrease in the price of the Ohio oil product by the Standard Oil company has at last forced all the independent producers and refineries of Northeastern Ohio to combine. It is the intention to at once construct a pipe line from the fields to Toledo, where the Crystal and the Paragon refineries are now ready for operations as will soon be the refinery of the Manhattan company. These refineries will be enlarged at once so as to be able to handle the immense product of the consolidation.

The November number of the Contemporary Review contains an article written by Dr. Peters upon the authority of Emin Pasha, which asserts that Stanley more than once threatened to force Emin to accompany him to the coast. While delivering King Leopold's offer to Emin, Stanley at the same time urged the pasha not to accept, alleging that the Congo state was in a bad way, and, to further influence Emin to decline, hinting that King Leopold had treated him (Stanley) badly. Dr. Peters also accuses Stanley of having drunk wine at a dinner served in European fashion while others of his party at the same table were served with negro fare and had no wine.

A DOUBLE TRAGEDY.

George Robarge of South St, Paul Instantly Kills Besen F. Rogers.

As a Climax to the Tragedy He Uses the Weapon on Himself.

ST. PAUL, Special Telegram,—Nov. 3. One of the most horrible tragedies ever occurring in this vicinity makes the Sunday just passed a sadly eventful one in South St. Paul. At 10:30 yesterday morning Benjamine F. Rogers, of the live stock commission firm of Rogers & Rogers, was assassinated by a man named George Robarge near the residence of the latter, on the hill at a point a mile and a quarter distant from the stock yards.

A few moments later the news was heralded among those about the stock yards by a young man on horseback. Within a minute from thirty to forty men were in saddle armed with Winchester rifles and galloping up the hill for the scene of the tragedy. It meant death, immediate and inglorious, for the assassin. But they were robbed of the pleasure of riddling the creature with bullets. After they had scoured the woods in the locality for a half-hour it was found that Robarge had stolen into his barn, taken off his shoes and stockings, laid down in one of the stalls, put the muzzle of the shotgun to his head and pulled the trigger with his toes. Half of the top of his head was blown off, and his brains were spattered upon the sides of the stall and upon the manger.

Ben Rogers, for by that name the deceased was familiarly called near and far, was one of the most popular commission men in Minnesota. Though but thirty years old, he was regarded as one of the very best judges of cattle in the West. The firm to which he belonged is styled Rogers & Rogers, and the members of the firm are William E. Rogers, father of the deceased; John Rogers, brother of William E. Rogers, and Nat P. Rogers, brother of the deceased. The members of the firm were all cattle men, and the success of the firm has been generally accredited largely to the excellent judgment and shrewdness of Ben Rogers.

The details of the terrible affair of yesterday, as told by a member of the Rogers family, who was present and was wounded at the tradas, is about as follows:

Ben had placed Loren Mickle, a boy of seventeen, out on horseback in charge of a herd of cattle belonging to the firm. The Robarge residence is about half a mile southwest of the residence of Ben Rogers. Mickle started with the cattle for grazing grounds which could only be reached by passing through the premises of Robarge. When the cattle got into Robarge's yard the anarchist ran out of doors and assaulted Mickle.

Little Wallace Rogers, the five-year-old son of the deceased, had playfully followed the herd part way on foot, and had halted just in sight of the Robarge residence, which is over a hill from the Rogers place. The little boy saw the assault and ran back and told his father. The father at once spoke to his younger brother, William E. Rogers, Jr., and asked him to go with him (Ben) over to Robarge's and see what was the trouble. The two accordingly started out. As the place was reached Robarge was found outside talking to Miekle in a furious passion.

"Good morning, Mr. Robarge," said Ben; "what appears to be the trouble?"

"Your cattle have been bothering me long enough, and I want them taken away."

"Won't you please to point out to me, Mr. Robarge, the line of the boundary of your premises?"

"It don't make any difference where the line is. You've got to keep your cattle away from here. I ain't going to fool around and point out lines."

"You go straight to h—," remarked Ben.

Robarge had a shovel in his hand and was handling it in a threatening way. Ben said: "I didn't come out here to fight. I came to find out what was the matter and remedy the trouble if possible."

At that Robarge struck a furious blow at Ben. Ben grabbed the shovel and wrenched it away from Robarge, and then the two clinched. Ben got the best of his antagonist, and hit him two or three stinging blows with his fist.

Robarge broke away and rushed into the house and brought out a shot-gun, Billy Rogers attempted to prevent him shooting, whereupon he fired at Billy, but not hurting him seriously he then turned and fired at Ben, the charge took effect in his left ear and tore away a portion of his head killing him instantly.

Hardly Creditable to Key West.

KEY WEST, Fla., Nov. 3—The mayor of Key West has received the following communication from the Spanish consul:

> I have to inform you of the fact that by superior authority I am placed in the absolute necessity of retiring from the consulate under my charge, and under protest, a copy of which I enclose, in consequence of there being no guarantee to life in your city, due to the excitable condition of Cuban refugees in said city. In consequence I reserve the right, in the name of my government, of closing and sealing the consulate until the government of the United States will give sufficient guarantees to the government which I represent that the consulate of Spain will obtain the privileges due to it. Under these circumstances, I must request of you that you order the police to guard these seals, which I have, under this date, affixed to the doors of the consular office. For the breaking of said seals, your government and those whom it may concern will be held responsible.
>
> FRANCISCO DE BAQUER.

Severe on Stanley.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—Jameson's brother writes to the Times asking its assistance in prevailing upon Stanley to pursue an honorable course by publishing the whole of his case against the rear guard, instead of waiting until everything has been said from the other side.

"His present course," the writer says, "gives Stanley the advantage of presenting a case for dead men to answer. Had they been living, Stanley would have been compelled to substantiate his insinuations in a court of law; but now there is no appeal except to the bar of public opinion. I have had too sad an experience of his consideration for others to risk an appeal to it."

As a Protest.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 3.—A crowd of Cephalonians forced their way into the Greek church at Galeta to-day and performed their devotions by themselves in the absence of the priest as a protest against the recent general closing of the Greek churches. The police at first offered resistance, but soon yielded to the people.

Mr. Becker Accommodating.

LUVERNE, Special Telegram, Nov. 3.—A. M. Becker of Adrian, the Democratic nominee for state senator in the Seventh senatorial district, has withdrawn in favor of Jay La Due, the Alliance nominee.

BY A DUMMY.

Ingenious Escape of a Missouri Desperado From Jail.

BOONVILLE, Mo., Nov. 3.—John C. Turlington, the noted desperado, who has been confined here in the county jail for the past six months, effected his escape last night in a clever manner. After the guards gave him him his supper, it has been their custom to allow him the freedom of the jail for the purpose of exercising until 8 o'clock. Deputy Sheriff Nicholson took him his supper at 6 o'clock last night and left Turlington's cell open so that he might have his usual exercise.

As soon as he was left alone the desperado rigged out a dummy with the pillow and blanket from his bed and an old shirt. He placed the dummy in the bed so that it would appear to be lying with its back to the door. He placed his supper dishes outside the door and arranged the cell for the night in the usual way, and proceeded to the room in the lower part of the building occupied by Deputy Sheriffs Nicholson and Garretson. There he hid himself under the bed, and awaited a favorable opportunity to make his escape, which presented itself when the two deputies went into the room, prepared for their supper and went into the dining room.

Then Turlington emerged from his place of concealment, and escaped by the window. When Nicholson went to Turlington's cell to secure the prisoner for the night he found the supper dishes outside the door, and, mistaking the dummy for his sleeping charge, locked and bolted the door. Turlington's clever ruse was not discovered until 9 o'clock this morning, when the guard attempted to arouse the dummy for breakfast.

The alarm was given and the search for the fugitives was begun. At 8 o'clock to-night one of the searching party returned and reported that no trace of Turlington could be found, except, perhaps, three horses which had been stolen during the night at different points on the road to Jefferson City. It is thought that the fugitive may have taken this means to get away.

Turlington was regarded as one of the most dangerous men in the Southwest. He was the murderer of ex-Sheriff Cranmer of this county, and was a confessed train robber. He was convicted of Sheriff Cranmer's murder and was sentenced to be hanged. He was granted a new hearing, and was awaiting trial when he escaped last night.

CARVED BY A GAMBLER.

A Chicago Man Uses His Stiletto Upon a Butcher.

CHICAGO, Nov. 3.—W. V. Hobbs, gambler, armed with a stiletto, suddenly entered a room to-night in which William Snider, a butcher, was sitting with Bessie Howard, a former mistress of Hobbs. Nearest to the gambler was the woman, and he made a savage thrust at her with the slender steel blade. She dodged and ran screaming from the room. Hobbs did not follow, but at once turned his attention to Snider. The two men at once grappled and Snider attempted to take the knife from his antagonist. The struggle was short, for by a tremendous effort Hobbs released his arm from Snider's grasp, and, with a lightning-like movement, drew the blade across Snider's throat, leaving a gaping wound four and a half inches long. As his victim fell Hobbs stabbed him again in the shoulder, and, giving the prostrate body a kick, coolly wiped his knife and left the house. The stiletto barely missed Snider's jugular. He is in a precarious condition. The gambler was not captured.

HANGED HIMSELF.

The Brother of Fischer, the Executed Anarchist, Commits Suicide.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Nov. 3.—Charles Fischer, a brother of the notorious Adolph Fischer, the Chicago anarchist, who was hanged for the Haymarket crime, committed suicide in this city to-day. Fischer was a compositor on the Freiheit Freund, a Pittsburg German newspaper, and for some time had been suffering from ill health. Yesterday he asked a fellow boarder for his revolver, but was refused. He at once entered his own room and closed the door.

A few minutes afterwards he was found lying dead on the floor, strangled, like his brother, the anarchist, but by his own hand. He had knotted a silk scarf about his neck, tied it above the low bedstead and thrown his entire weight upon it, strangling to death in ten minutes. He left a letter saying that in case anything happened to him to-day, his second brother at Edgewoodville, Pa., should be notified. Among his personal goods were found several books upon socialistic topics.

Important Gains Made by the British Liberals in Municipal Election.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—Municipal elections were held in England and Wales yesterday. Where the results turned on politics the Conservatives gained fifty-nine and the Liberals eighty-seven seats.

A leading feature of the returns from the elections is the fact that not a single dissident Liberal success is yet recorded. Labor candidates won some seats from the Conservatives. The Chronicle says that the results of the elections make a bad outlook for the government, and show what will happen in the event of an appeal to the country.

In a New Campaign.

PARIS, Nov. 3.—Pere Hyacinthe to-day commenced a campaign against clericalism in his own church, with a vigorous address. He said that the republic was firmly established, but that after leaning toward atheism, there was now danger of its lapsing into clericalism. Pupils of the Jesuits, he said, were beginning to swarm in the military colleges, and the republic threatened to become a clerical government after the most bigoted pattern of the South American republics. He thought this was due to the republicans shutting their eyes to the power of religion in society, and he advocated the national churches rejecting the authority of the pope, allowing priests to marry and abolishing the confessional.

An Anarchistic Celebration.

CHICAGO, Nov. 3.—Representatives from fifty societies who are to take part in the memorial exercises in commemoration of the execution of the five anarchists met at Greif's hall to-day to make final arrangements for the celebration. The following programme was arranged to be carried out Nov. 9: Societies to meet at Market square at 10 a. m.; procession to march by a circuitous route to the Wisconsin Central depot, where they are to take a special train for Waldheim cemetery. At the cemetery speeches will be made by Prof. Garside of New York, Moses Schultz and Jack Nicolanda. There will be a mass chorus by the entire delegation. It was announced that 5,000 men would take part in the celebration. A mass meeting will be held in Cavalry armory the evening of Nov. 1.

For a Woman's Smiles.

CHICAGO, Nov. 3.—Jealousy over a girl brought on an exciting encounter at 1 o'clock this morning between Frank Hogan and John McCarty. Both young men were attending a dance on Milwaukee avenue. Rivalry over the smiles of a young lady whom Hogan had brought to the party resulted in a quarrel, and the two men were ordered out of the hall. No sooner was the sidewalk reached than they drew knives and began slashing each other in a most desperate manner. McCarty plunged his blade deep into Hogan's stomach, and, jerking it upward, disemboweled his antagonist. McCarty received several gashes about the body, but none of them fatal. Hogan will die.

WOMAN'S INTUITION.

Nearly Always Right in Her Own Judgment in Regard to Common Things.

An old gentleman over seventy, came into the city from his farm, without his overcoat. The day turned chilly, and he was obliged to forego his visit to the fair.

To a friend who remontrated with him for going away from home thus unprepared, he said: "I thought it was going to be warm; my wife told me to take my overcoat, but I wouldn't. Women have more sense than men anyway."

A frank admission.

Women's good sense is said to come from intution; may it not be that they are more close observers of little things. One thing is certain, they are apt to strike the nail on the head, in all the ordinary problems of life, more frequently than the lords of creation.

"According to Dr. Alice Bennett, who recently read a paper on Bright's disease before the Pennsylvania State Medical Society, persons subject to bilious attacks and sick headaches, who have crawling sensations, like the flowing of water in the head, who are 'tired all the time' and have unexplained attacks of sudden weakness, may well be suspected of dangerous tendencies in the direction of Bright's disease.

The veteran newspaper correspondent, Joe Howard, of the New York Press, in noting this statement, suggests: "Possibly Alice is correct in her diagnosis, but why doesn't she give some idea of treatment? I know a man who has been 'tired all the time' for ten years. Night before last he took two doses of calomel and yesterday he wished he hadn't.

A proper answer is found in the following letter of Mrs. Davis, wife of Rev. Wm. J. Davis, of Basil, O., June 21st., 1890:

"I do not hesitate to say that I owe my life to Warner's Safe Cure. I had a constant hemorrhage from my kidneys for more than five months. The physicians could do nothing for me. My husband spent hundreds of dollars and I was not relieved. I was under the care of the most eminent medical men in the State. The hemorrhage ceased before I had taken one bottle of the Safe Cure. I can safely and do cheerfully recommend it to all who are sufferers of kidney troubles."

Gen. Hardee and a Raw Recruit.

Gen. Hardee, the famous tactician and confederate commander, was a strict disciplinarian, says the Boston Traveler. One day, while commanding in the southwest, he rode out on the picket line and, much to his surprise, found a sentry, a raw recruit, sitting on a rail-fence munching a piece of bacon. The general appeared not to see him until he got abreast of him and then drew his horse up, expecting to find the sentry at a present. He was nothing of the kind, but sat munching away as unconcernedly as though he was in his native mountains. "Do you know who I am?" demanded Gen. Hardee in his severest tones. "Stranger, I 'lowed I don't." "I am Gen. Hardee, and—," Without stopping to hear the remainder of his sentence the raw recruit slowly climbed down from the fence, and, shambling into the road, extended his hand as he said: "How air yer, gineral? I'm mighty glad to see yer lookin' so peart."

A Story from Ammergan.

An Irish priest at Ammergan told the following story of his bishop: His lordship and a chaplain came to see the Passion Play. They would fain have had a room each, but this was not possible. They knelt down separately to say their prayers by their little cots and presently it crossed the mind of the chaplain that it would not be well to make his orisons shorter than the bishop's, presumely anxious not to scandilize his chaplain by shortness of his prayers, also glanced over his shoulders and waited. The process was repeated several times. Both suppliants were very tired, and in time both fell asleep. They were found in the morning on their knees still and sleeping—Pall Mall Gazette.

When baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had children, she gave them Castoria.

The steamer Arisng from Havana has been detained at Quarantine, near Boston, with yellow fever on board, she being fumigated.

ST. JACOBS OIL
CURES SURELY.

SPRAINS.	BRUISES.
Ohio & Miss. Railway, Office President and General Manager, Cincinnati, Ohio "My foot suddenly turned and gave me a very severely sprained ankle. The application of St. Jacobs Oil resulted at once in a relief from pain." W. W. PEABODY, Prest. & Gen'l Man'gr.	746 Dolphin Street, Baltimore, Md., Jan'y 18, 1890. "I was bruised badly in hip and side by a fall and suffered severely. St. Jacobs Oil completely cured me." WM. C. HARDEN, Member of State Legislature.

THE CHARLES A. VOGELER CO., Baltimore, Md.

THE NORTHWEST.

A Summary of the Important Events of the Week in the Northwestern States.

MINNESOTA.

The constitutionality of the lien law of 1889 has been disputed in the courts.

The corrected returns of the census give Faribault a population of 6,524, instead of 5,511, as first reported.

It is probable the receipts of coal at Duluth up to the close of navigation will reach 1,450,000 tons.

Burglars broke into William Powell's hardware store at St. Cloud and lugged off revolvers and cutlery valued at $100.

Wolves are killing off the sheep in Alba township, Jackson county, and the farmers are preparing for an extensive hunt to rid the neighborhood of the pests.

Alma Anderson, a girl 13 years of age, disappeared from her home in Red Wing, and all efforts to discover her whereabouts have proved fruitless.

A steam thresher exploded on the farm of Dennis Kielly, near Litchfield, instantly killing a 12-year-old son of Mr. Kielly and severely injuring several other persons.

Pat Kenney, indicted by the grand jury at the last term of court for manslaughter in the second degree, broke jail at Madison. Officers are scouring the country for him.

The people of Fon du Lac, Minn., are excited over the discovery of a rich vein of silver ore near that place. Samples have been examined by experts, who pronounce it a good grade of silver.

John Salvisberg, a farmer living near Andrea, Wilkins county, committed suicide by blowing his brains out with a shotgun. He left a note stating as the reason for the rash deed that he was discontented and in debt.

Yuh Hoy, a Chineman from South Dakota, became suddenly insane while on a visit to St. Paul, the other day and is held to await the action of the commissioners of insanity.

At Crookston a young son of Ole Phudy, while feeding pigs was attacked and bitten by a vicious boar. A piece of the femoral artery was broken and the boy died in twenty minutes.

Henry Leslie, a horse thief from Wadena, was caught trying to escape from jail at Fergus Falls with a file and wrench furnished by a woman who travels with him. The bars were too hard for him.

The iron camp bedstead used by Gen. Joseph Hooker in his campaigns during the War of the Rebellion was shipped by Gen. W. G. Le Duc to Libby prison at Chicago. The latter was chief quartermaster under him and has preserved the article as a relic of war.

William Sondermann reports that assays have been made showing that samples of sand from his premises at Hastings yield from $520 to $1,030 of gold to the ton, and some of them contain silver. He is rather sanguine over his find.

The village council of Pipestone sometime ago ordered an electric light plant, a part of which was received. An injunction has been served on the council by some of the leading business men, forbidding further action.

A serious stabbing affray occurred at Fergus Falls, in which Charles Detman stabbed Julius Mueller in the abdomen, inflicting a serious wound. Both are well-to-do farmers living near Erhard's Grove and were intoxicated. Detman is under arrest.

One day recently Cargill Bros., of Mankato, shipped to Philadelphia 86,000 pounds of wool, gathered at their warehouse in Mankato. It filled eight freight cars, and the rate was 85 cents per hundred pounds, a pretty good bill, amounting to $731.

Joseph Plouty, a man about forty years old, was found dead in bed at Mankato. He was at the house of M. A. Gilmore, a farmer living about three miles east of that place. Death is supposed to be due to heart disease. He leaves a large family who are left in poor circumstances.

A peculiar disease has attacked a number of hogs recently shipped into Chatfield from Dakota. The lungs are found to be affected and in some cases large worms are found in the stomach. A deputy state veterinary has been making an investigation, and has ordered a strict quarantine of the diseased animals.

Owen Riley, of Rochester, and his daughter, Mrs. W. H. Lanigan, of Faribault, are accused of having brought an infant 4 weeks old, from Rochester and left on the steps of the Sisters' school at Owatonna after nightfall. Before they got away they were arrested and Riley bound over to the next term of court.

The other day the men employed by the Great Northern in laying steel rails on the St. Cloud branch of that road became dissatisfied with the "grub" furnished them in boarding cars of the company and broke up housekeeping with picks and crowbars, completely wrecking the cars and demolishing the contents. Thirty of the prominent ones in the affair were discharged.

A case of black diphtheria is reported in the family of McLane Bridgeman, at St. Cloud. The authorities built a temporary house some distance from the town and removed the family there. One boy died shortly after and the disease has broken out in other members of the family. The other house, with contents, was burned to prevent the spread of the disease.

The report of the state auditor of the railroad taxes for 1888-89 shows the following totals: For the fiscal year ending July 31, 1889, the taxes on the gross earnings of all roads operated within the state amounted to $685,433.02. For the year ending July 31, 1890, the total amount $702,367.73. These are 1, 2 and 3 per cent. taxes, but mostly 3 per cent.

NORTH DAKOTA.

W. Bills, of Grand Forks, has been arrested for driving a dray without first obtaining a license.

The rooms of the athletic and social club, at Jamestown, were formally opened recently.

The latest fad in the sociables is a so-called clothespins social. The ladies bring the clothespins and the gentlemen their pocketbooks.

Pot hunters are spoiling the shooting for the local sportsmen. It is claimed that they are making a business of shipping game out of the state, in direct defiance of the state laws.

The Northern Pacific company proposes to build a new hotel in Fargo next spring. It will be on the site of the old Headquarters hotel, will be built of brown stone and pressed brick and will cost $200,000.

Wolf killing is a lucrative pastime and one that is being taken advantage of by a great many persons this fall. The bounty of $3 for each wolf killed makes it an object for those so disposed to turn out and kill as many as possible.

Two children, a boy and girl arrived in Bismarck from Sweden. They came the distance without escort—nothing but cards tied to their clothing, with the inscription, "Bismarck, N. D. Going to Aunt Franklin." Mrs. Franklin, of the Franklin house, was at the depot to meet them.

The executive committee of private bankers, in session at Bismarck, has had under consideration the test suit against Banker Goodsill of Steele, and has decided to appeal the case to the supreme court of the United States, on the constitutional questions involved.

A few days ago the two-year-old child of Charles Bushee died. Bushee is a farmer living three miles south of Grand Forks in Minnesota. Complaint was made to the authorities of East Grand Forks that Bushee had choked the child to death. Coroner Shepherd, of Crookston, was notified and came to make an investigation. Undertaker Caswell, who buried the child, was sent to exhume the body in order that a postmortem might be held, but found the grave empty. Bushee and his wife are both under arrest and some sensational developments are expected.

There is much of interest in the annual report of the Northern Pacific which has not yet been given to the general public. There was a decrease in the shipment of beef cattle from the Montana and Western Dakota ranges of 28,056 head. This was due in part to the lingering results of the severe winter of 1886-87, in which great inroads were made upon the supply of young cattle, and also in part to the poor market, which discouraged cattle men from culling their prime beeves closely at the fall round-up. The hop shipments decreased from 4,815 to 4,600 tons. The indications are, however, that the crop of this year will exceed that of 1888, which was the largest ever raised. According to the report of Land Commissioner Lamborn there were sold by his department during the year, 393,110 acres of land, for $1,870,059; town lot sales netted $398,907, and timber sales, coal royalties, etc., $109,261, making the total receipts of the department $2,378,227. Divided according to the states the land sales were:

	Acres.	Amount.
Minnesota	48,896	$141,512
North Dakota	85,049	344,905
Montana	98,124	236,612
Idaho	4,697	38,002
Washington	208,059	1,327,267
Oregon	3,596	7,191

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Hutchinson county is in good condition financially. It has on hand in cash and notes $16,313.48, and owes but $4,050.21.

There is a town at the junction of the Cheyenne and Northern and the Elkhorn consisting of a saloon and two shacks. The founders ask $250 a lot, and claim they will have 50,000 people inside of a year.

The report is current that J. George Wright has been suspended as agent at Rosebud agency as the result of the investigation relative to the Indian census. The Indians have been uneasy and the result of this suspension is awaited quite anxiously.

S. G. Newell, who lives three miles south of Howard, raised this year fifty bushels of oats, forty bushels of barley, twenty-seven of rye and fourteen bushels of wheat per acre. This grain was all sown with a drill and sowed deep.

An old gentleman, a foreigner, led his little boy into the East Pierre school house one day recently, into one of the primary rooms, where the little fellow pointed out another boy as one who "did it," and right then and there the old man pounced upon him and choked the little fellow hard.

N. P. Broomley, of Redfield, has done some farming after all this year—rain or no rain. He threshed about 1,900 bushels of wheat from about 200 acres. Besides, he obtained 500 bushels of barley from twenty-five acres, a fair crop of corn from 100 acres and cut a good crop of millet from sixty acres and cut a fair crop of sowed corn from forty acres.

Indians on Indian creek, in the Black Hills county, about 200 in number, on a hunting excursion are engaged in stealing cattle and horses. They took a horse belonging to Zoeckler Bros., painted him for the purpose of disguising him, but the Zoecklers were able, notwithstanding, to identify the animal and took possession of him.

Erik Ellefson, a prosperous farmer living in the Lone Rock neighborhood, Moody county, died last spring. His widow was appointed administratrix of the estate. At the time of his death he had bargained for a piece of land for which he was to pay $1,000, but had not paid for it. Mrs Ellefson has out of this year's crops paid for the land, having raised nearly enough flax on that identical piece to pay for it. Judge Pratt says she has handled the business of the estate in far better shape than the average administrator and that the instances are very rare where the accounts have been kept in as good shape as Mrs. Ellefson has done.

WISCONSIN.

James Brazell, of Beaver Dam, was a brother of the victim of the recent Chicago murder.

Walworth County juries are unusually severe with railroad companies, it is said in law suits.

Le Roy Clarke shot a golden eagle at Lake Koshkonong, which measured seven feet from tip to tip of wings.

About $7,000 is to be received by persons in the town of Rushford from the overflow payments by the government.

Lucius J. Rodgers, wanted at Indianapolis, Ind., for embezzlement, was caught in Racine.

Platteville's City Council refuses to allow an elecric light mast to be erected on Main Street.

O. B. Hutchinson, of Appleton, emptied a kerosene can upon a red-hot fire. The zephyrs will not dally with his beard any more.

At Madison the owner of a vacant lot who allowed bill posters to put up bills on his fence drew the line at paper for a "blonde" show.

Mrs. F. T. Riley, of Superior, ran away from home after a quarrel with her husband, but was detained at St. Paul, when she attempted suicide.

Fourteen Winnebago Indians from Black River Falls have been induced to go to Pennsylvania to attend the government school.

La Crosse liquor men say they will make more money out of the original package business. Their agents have already gone to work, and liquor can be had in any of the prohibition states in bottles, jugs and kegs.

Superior was terribly swindled a few days since. A couple of fellows went to the people living outside the free delivery limit and sold them mail boxes at $1 each. To those who refused to buy they said the law imposed a penalty for failure to do so. They disposed of 400 to 500.

The secretary of the interior has approved the proceedings of the council of the Menominee Indians in Wisconsin, assenting to the provisions of the act of June 12, 1890, for the sale of their timber, and has appointed George W. Gans of Tomahawk, as superintendent of the logging operations of the Indians.

When a train came along the other day and killed John Caldhun the latter was standing in Eau Claire County, but when the engine struck him he was hoisted across in the Chippewa district. The officials of the latter county took the case in hand, but Coroner Shaver went over from Eau Claire and successfully insisted that it was his case.

The little babe of Frank H. Wosang, of Center, Rock county, was attacked by a vicious chicken of the leghorn variety. The child, who is about a year and a half old, was out in the yard when the rooster attacked her, knocking her down and inflicting with his spurs two deep gashes over the left temple, and making an ugly wound over the right eye-ball.

IOWA.

Burlington lays claim to an organized gang of burglars.

An electric light company is being organized at Spencer, and it is expected the plant will be completed and in operation before snow flies.

The Cedar Rapids board of health declares that diphtheria is not prevalent in that city, although there have been a great many deaths from the disease.

A chemists' mortar, made of some kind of white metal and bearing a Latin inscription and the date of 1657 was found in a mass of old scrap iron at Dubuque the other day.

Patrick Hanley, aged 106, died at Davenport. It is believed he was the oldest person in Iowa. His faculties were retained in a wonderful degree to the last.

Mr. Ganz, of Dubuque shot a large timber wolf while hunting near that city the other day, being the first wolf seen in that vicinity for many years.

Near Glidden the other day well diggers struck a flowing well at a depth of 113 feet. The water is spouting with great force thirty feet into the air, and hundreds of people are looking to see the wonder.

John Hinch, a farmer living near Kingsley, this year harvested 2,400 bushels of potatoes from fifteen acres of ground, for which he received 70 cents per bushel, or $1,680 for the whole crop, considerable over $100 per acre.

Some Cedar Rapids parties who owned a large area of land in the north part of the state had it sowed to flax last spring. The expense of raising and harvesting the crop was very small, but the net profits on the 1,800 acres of land will amount to about $25,000.

While threshing on the farm of Chester Gordon, near Marion, Grant McCreery fell from a stack of grain onto an upturned pitchfork, the tines entering his abdomen and making a wound which renders his recovery extremely doubtful.

Carmen Sylva.

Harpers' for September: Modernity, indeed, is always somehow a charming thing when you get it skilfully expressed in a picture or a story, or in some such piece of personal history as Baroness Deichmann's translation of Baroness Stackelberg's life of Carmen Sylva, the queen of Roumania. When you think of the figure that royalty once cut in the awed imaginations of men, wrapped round with mists of twilight, it is sufficiently striking to have it electric-lighted, even to its intimate life and its recondite emotions by such a memoir as this. Happily, the queen of Roumania, if a poet of less effect than feeling, is a person whose life is as noble and beautiful as that of most women in the humbler walks of love and duty, and bears knowing as well. We are aware that this is saying a good deal for a queen; but we think it may be hazarded. We think the great attraction, the great use of the book is that it shows how little a princess of forty or fifty descents is characterized by lineage, and how little a good and gifted woman is embellished by royalty. You discover that she was like any number of other impulsive, cultivated, gifted girls, and is like any number of other self-sacrificing, heroic women, tried by love, by sorrow—the wives of lawyers, doctors, ministers, mechanics and laborers. Her father and mother were excellent people, and there was talent in the family; but her training was no better, some one might almost say it was no other, for it could not well be any other, than such as intelligent and conscientious people now give their daughters in ethics and æsthetics; though perhaps the average American girl, from being a Protestant all her life, might have some misgiving in adapting herself to the Greek religion as soon as she became queen of Roumania. But we are not sure that Carmen Sylva did not do wiselier in bringing herself close by all possible means to the hearts of the people she desired to love and has greatly befriended; it is hard for a sovereign to be of any real use, with all the advantages.

Was a Father Himself.

Exchange: He was an old man, bent and gray. In spite of his unkempt appearance and his poor, faded clothes there was a certain nobility in his face that could not but attract the casual observer. He sat in the ante-room of the police court, together with a score of other prisoners. Upon his knees he held a little girl, whose uncared for appearance could not hide her childish prettiness. She leaned against his breast, and on her head there fell, now and then, a great tear.

"What oo cryin' for, popper?" the little girl would say, when some of these tears crept beyond her tumbled curls and crept down her forehead. Even the sottish crowd about them grew respectful. The two were so pathetic.

Finally the man's name was called, and he appeared before the judge. He stated his case. The charge was some minor offense. Just then the little girl, who began to realize that her father was in some danger, crept near. The judge caught sight of her. The child crept up, in spite of the gaze fixed on her from the bench, and clung to her father's hand.

"Is that your child?" asked the judge.

"It is, your honor; my motherless child."

The sternness died out of the eyes of the judge, and a moist tenderness took its place. He was a father himself. He raised his handkerchief, without shame, to wipe away the gathering dimness.

"I cannot do it," he said within himself. Then, looking at the prisoner before him, he said, in a voice choked with feeling:

"Thirty days."

Annoying, Very.

Louisville Courier-Journal: The abominations in human conversation are many, but one has come out of late that is peculiarly tiresome. Whenever you say anything that agrees with the opinions of the person with whom you are talking he answers, "That's right." When anything is explained to him he says, "That's right." In fact, on the slightest opportunity he will say, "That's right." In every conversation of twenty minutes there will be fifty "That's rights." It would be just as well if he would occasionally say, "That's true," or "That's so," or "I think so, too," or "I agree with you," or even "You're mighty accurate." Anything would be better than the "nauseous iteration" of "That's right." The new constitution cannot provide against such outrages, but every man with the good of his fellow citizens at heart can avoid using one expression incessantly.

SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT.

COLUMBIA COLLEGE LANDS.

[CONTINUED FROM LAST ISSUE.]

All of this might have been had the people retained and held inalienable their ownership in the land that from time to time has been held by Columbia and devoted its proceeds to higher education. Had the same policy been applied to all the land insanely and criminally given away by the people's representatives, Columbia university might have realized vastly more than has thus far been suggested. Free instruction under existing conditions might not bring to such an institution any larger number of students than now are found in its various schools and in the two free city colleges; but how would it have been had the monopoly of natural resources by the few never been allowed to impoverish the many? To the half-educated and wholly ignorant society savior this query will suggest nothing further than a sneer, but to those who understand the demands that labor makes for the exemption of children from work and the assurance of more leisure to the mass of men, it will call forth a vision of the possible that will fill their minds with pleasure. There is nothing more remarkable in the present labor movement than its steadfast recognition of the value and necessity of education. Even as it has gone along it has educated those concerned in it in political economy and political organization in a way that now and then astonishes the ignorant and self-sufficient society saviors, and yet the work has merely begun. Under the new dispensation of applied democracy, when the people enjoy their own and abject poverty shall cease, there can be no surplus of educated men, and a higher education will be sought, not for money-making purposes, but for the expansion of man's capacity for enjoyment. The necessary work of mankind can be done with ever-decreasing effort as invention prefects machinery under conditions that benefit all. Should the jocular story of a newspaper writer that a man down South is importing apes and training them to pick cotton ever come true, there would be no cause for anger and regret among any member of the human family. All would recognize in this utilization of the beast merely a new force added to the many already working for the public good, and thousands would see in the consequent further release of all from physical toil so much more opportunity for study. Nor would there be any lack of remunerative employment for educated men under such a system. The wants of man are multitudinous as the seas, and they increase by gratification. In a land where no man was abjectly poor, where all had much leisure and an even increasing number had cultivated tastes to be gratified, there could not be too many highly educated people, even if education were regarded simply as a means toward gaining a better livelihood, Columbia college, as the chief institution of learning in the metropolis of such a nation, would be a university such as mankind has never seen. Its halls would be thronged by eager tens of thousands of students, while its honors would be the highest distinction that could be won by the men and women of a regenerated republic that had at last succeeded in forming a perfect union of the people under conditions that established justice, insured domestic tranquility, provided for the general welfare and secured the blessings of liberty to a people needing no defense against a foreign foe and having no enemies in its own household against whom provision need be made.

THE LAND SHALL NOT BE SOLD FOREVER.

A Powerful Sermon by Rev. Mr. Rollinson, of Rahway, N. J.—God's Law and Human Statutes.

Rev. Mr. Rollinson, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Rahway, N. J., recently preached the fourth of a course of lectures on social subjects, his topic being "Land Monopoly." His text was Lev. 25:23. "The land shall not be sold forever, for the land is mine."

"It may be safely assumed," said the preacher, "that a law enacted by God must be wise, righteous and beneficent, and that any antagonistic law would possess opposite characteristics. The passage read announces a law of perpetual authority, which stands unchanged in the only civil code which ever has been clothed with divine sanction. By all believers it is acknowledged to be a law given by infinite wisdom for the well-being of a nation specially favored. Yet the nations of modern Christendom—our own among them—have by antagonistic statutes practically nullified this law of God and placed their fallible and selfish judgments in opposition to the wisdom of the Most High, with the disastrous results which might be expected.

"It can not be denied that the present generation is confronted by the startling fact that the entire surface of the earth is rapidly passing into the hands of a limited number of its inhabitants, and that existing laws give to them the absolute control of the land they possess, with all that it contains of mineral or other forms of wealth; and that by these laws the natural rights of any other than this limited class to the use of the earth or any of its resources is practically denied.

"The frivolous foundation on which is based a claim so stupendous in its magnitude and results is evident the moment the exisiting titles to private ownership of land are traced back to their origin, when almost invariably the assumed right is found to be derived from original seizure by the hand of power. An example of this was given in the grant to the Duke of York, by the King, of the whole land now comprised in the State of New Jersey, on which grant, made without a shadow of right, it is probable that the validity of every land title in the State depends. And what is true here is, in the main, true everywhere."

The speaker drew attention to the rapid and constantly increasing monopolization of the land in this country, the immense tracts that have been bought for speculative purposes by British noblemen and foreign syndicates; tracts which already aggregate more than twenty millions of acres, and which are constantly being increased. Attention was called to the immense government grants to railroad corporations; to the vast tracts owned by private speculators and purchased as investments by the growing class of millionaires; to the extensive cattle ranges of the far west and to the rapid increase of grain farms numbering thousands of acres each, so that the time can not be far distant when the whole of the great public domain will have passed into the hands of a limited number, who will be virtually lords of the land.

"Already one seeking a homestead on the public lands must go nearly two thousand miles, from the seaboard in search of it, and perhaps then seek in vain for a desirable spot. Even under the shadow of the Colorado mountains all land capable of cultivation has been absorbed, while in that portion where irrigation is needed to produce crops, the water as well as the land has been monopolized. There the unfortunate immigrant, after having bought a right to earn his bread by the sweat of his brow from the monopolist of land, finds himself compelled to pay a heavy tribute yearly to the monopolists of the water, who have seized the sources of supply, turned the streams from their natural channels into artificial "ditches," and exact for their use prices so extortionate as to swell the dividends of those corporations to eighty, ninety and one hundred per cent. annually on the capital invested. Of the millions of acres of public land yet remaining, large portions are included in the great American desert; in the barren alkali lands; in tracts too mountainous and sterile for cultivation; and comparatively little remains outside of the Indian reservations and the tracts set aside for railroad selections, that is sufficiently inviting to tempt speculative investment.

"Considering this condition of the land into which by the will of God we have been brought, can one turn to the Holy Scriptures and read a declaration such as that made in the text: 'The land shall not be sold forever; for the land is mine;' or can he read that 'the earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof;' and that 'the earth hath He given to the children of men,' without having forced on him the conviction that the beneficent purposes of God are being set at naught and frustrated by the greed and selfishness of those whose grasping avarice and lust of power prompts them to appropriate what the Father of all made for the equal use and benefit of all?

"Is it possible for anyone to believe that the merciful Creator made the earth that greed and avarice might seize on its best portions, and through their possession enable the idle to revel in luxury on the fruits of the poor man's toil? Has God given any generation of men the right to disinherit their successors to the very end of time, and in doing this deny that 'the earth hath He given to the children of men?' No! What the Creator did was the reverse of this. His law, immutable as Himself, is announced in my text: 'The land shall not be sold forever; it is Mine, and ye are strangers and sojourners with Me.' To generation after generation, as they should come and go, the right to the use of the land—that only—was given, while the creator of the land kept and still keeps the ownership in His own possession. 'The land is mine,' saith the Lord.

"If I am told that this divine law of land was given to the Jews only, I reply that so the moral law of the ten commandments was given to the Jews only; both laws, that of life and that of land were given by the same God, and are invested with equal authority. What was good, right and just for a Jew is good, right and just for a Christian also. If I am told, as I may be, that the moral law is binding on all men because of its nature, I reply that the same is true of God's law of land. It is so eminently wise and, in the nature of things, so just, as to have commanded the assent of the clearest thinkers of the world. Mr. John Stuart Mill, whose reputation as a political economist is world wide, says: 'The land of every country belongs to the people of that country.' Thomas Jefferson said: 'It is a self-evident truth that the land belongs in usufruct to the living.' Herbert Spencer, confessedly among the profoundest thinkers of the age, says: 'Equity does not permit private property in land. For if one portion of the earth's surface may justly become the property of an individual, then all the earth's surface may be so held.' 'The world,' he says, 'is God's bequest to mankind. All men are joint heirs to it.' In saying this the first thinker of the age tells us that pure reason vindicates the dictum of revelation by leading up to the very statement made in our text—the land belongs to the Creator, who gives the use of it to the creatures he places on it, as in their successive generations they come and go, and to no generation has He given the right, nor can they in any other way have gained the right, to so dispossess the generations to succeed them as that a limited number of mankind may claim to own the planet on which all must live and from which the distressed must derive food, water, raiment and shelter. Yet be who, to-day, reading in God's word the declaration that the earth and its fulness—its ample resources—is the Lord's should turn from the sacred oracles to human laws, would find himself confronted with what men esteem as a higher scripture—yet a man-made one—which dominates the Inspired Word and gives the 'earth and the fulness thereof' into the hands of a single class, disinheriting all others."

Please Get Down to Business.

We have been much disappointed in the general character of the answers and criticisms we have seen of Henry George and his philosophy. They are full of laugh, ridicule and prejudice; but we have thus far failed to see any thing like what we would term a substantial, orthodox answer. We wish some body would get down to business and dish up the fallacy, if it is one.—Kellogg, Ia., Enterprise.

THE RETURN OF THE BUFFALO.

Indians Still Expect Their Reappearance from the Center of the Earth.

Indians all over the west—that is, Indians of the plains—are looking, longing and making immense quantities of complex and "heap big medicine" for the return of the buffalo. They regard this coming as imminent and near. It was never the Indian idea that the buffalo wintered in Southern Texas. I speak of such northern tribes as the Sioux, Blackfeet, Cheyennes and Pawnees, and it was believed by them that every fall at the coming of the first snow their shaggy friends retired to the interior of the earth via an opening which leads down into a canyon of the Palo Duro in the Texas panhandle and came back by the same route in the spring. The opening in question is a dark, narrow gorge, and to see the buffalo for weeks crowding through in solid unbroken procession was very impressive to an Indian. He regarded the buffalo as an especial gift from the Great Spirit. He supposed they were sent each year marked "For good Indians only," and that on coming up out of the Palo Duro they were directed to those tribes most favored by the Great Spirit. To-day the Indian does not understand why the buffalo do not come back. It does not enter into his theory that they have been killed and extinguished by white men; but rather that they are withheld by the Manitou because of some displeasure on his part and as a punishment. Nothing so interests an Indian as the sight of a buffalo. E. S. Hewins at his ranch near Cedarvale has a bunch of four. They are by odds the handsomest specimens I ever saw. I have seen a band of Osages or Sacs stop in the road for hours looking fixedly at these buffalo and conversing in low hushed tones and with an air of reverential interest.—Major Inman.

Ill-Gotten Gains Burn the Pocket.

A man who is usually fortunate enough to carry away from the races more money than he brought with him says that he finds winning more disastrous than losing. When he loses money it is lost, and that is the end of it. He simply has to shut himself off in cigars and other things that he is better off without, for a week or more. But the winning is quite another affair. It costs him so much to spend it. "Perhaps I come off two or three hundred better," he says: "it's never much more than that, for I only bet small sums. The first thing I do is to blow in a large share of it on some piece of foolishness or other. Then I'll spend the rest of it on something else I don't want. But I don't stop there. The very next day I do the same thing over—spend that same money, I mean. Perhaps this time it will be for something that I really need, but I will buy a little too much of it or a little finer quality than I would have done if I hadn't had that windfall the day before, and when prudence urges me to be careful, I find myself saying: 'O, well, I'll put this down on the winnings from the races.' And the next day I spent some more money foolishly, and I put that down too. And for a clear week I'm spending the paltry hundred or two that I won—as long, in fact, as I've got any money left to spend. And it's all race winnings—salary, and savings, and all. And so I've got to quit going to the races. Not because I can't afford to lose, but because I can't afford to win."—New York Sun.

POPULAR SCIENCE.

The latest discovery in the way of cures for Bright's disease is a diet of fresh buttermilk.

Utilizing scrap steel rod by welding it and drawing it into fence wire is one of the recent successes of eletric welding.

A feature of the Frankfort-on-the-Main International exhibition will be the transmission of electrical power over copper wires from a distance of 140 miles.

From geological observations on the Alps, vegetation on the higher portions seems to be retreating, and the poplars that at one time adorned the crest of the hills are now nearly all dead.

The disagreeable effect produced on the eyes by the ruby light used in dry plate photography can be obviated by placing a plane of ground glass between the eyes and the ruby light.

The majority of fatal lightning strokes occur in the level, open country. Trees, villages and thickly built-up towns, by their numerous projections into the air, and their net-work of wires and rails, serve to neutralize or scatter the electric forces of the clouds, thereby protecting the inhabitants from direct strokes.

The Russian weather observing system is the most extensive on the globe, and embraces most remarkable climatic contrasts. It has two principal observatories and 255 subordinate stations, and its latest report gives rainfall observations for 650 localities. Many of the stations have lately been added, and one of these, Werchojansk, in Siberia, is now recorded as the coldest point known on earth. The mean temperature for the year 1885 is 29° below zero F., and for January and December it was 62.9° below and for July it rose to 60.6° above zero. The lowest temperature in July was 39.2° above, while in January a fall to 88.6° below zero was experienced. Werchojansk is in latitude 67° 34, longitude 133° 51.

[illegible] The co-operation of the club members sells us 38 watches in each $38 Watch Club, and we get cash from the Club for each watch before it goes out, though each member only pays $1 a week. This is why we give you more for your money than any one else and why we are doing the largest watch business in the world. We sell only first quality goods, but our prices are about what others get for second quality. Our $10 Silver Watch is a substantial Silver (not imitation of any kind) Stem-Wind American Lever Watch—either hunting case or open. Our $25.00 Watch is a Stem-wind Open Face, first quality, stiffened Gold American Lever Watch, guaranteed to wear 20 years. It is fully equal to any watch sold for $38 by others. We find a first-class Stiffened Gold Case much more satisfactory and serviceable than any Solid Gold Case that can be sold at less than double the money, as cheap solid cases are invariably thin, weak, of low quality, and worthless after short use. Our $38 Watch contains numerous important patented improvements, of vital importance to accurate timing—Patent Dustproof, Patent Stem Wind, &c., which we control exclusively. It is fully equal for accuracy, appearance, durability and service, to any $75 Watch, either Open Face or Hunting. Our $43.00 Railroad Watch is especially constructed for the most exacting use, and is the best Railroad Watch made, Open Face or Hunting. All these prices are either all cash or in clubs, $1.00 a week. An Ajax Watch Insulator given free with each Watch.

The Keystone Watch Club Co
Main Office in Co's Own Building
904 WALNUT ST. PHILADA. PA.
Agents Wanted.
Ajax Watch Insulator, $1.00
A perfect protection against magnetism. Fits any Watch. Sent by mail on receipt of price. We refer to any Commercial Agency.

WEBSTER

THE BEST INVESTMENT
For the Family, School, or Professional Library.

WEBSTER UNABRIDGED DICTIONARY
A LIBRARY IN ITSELF

Has been for years Standard Authority in the Government Printing Office and U. S. Supreme Court.

It is highly recommended by 38 State Sup'ts of Schools and the leading College Presidents.

Nearly all the School Books published in this country are based upon Webster, as attested by the leading School Book Publishers.

3000 more Words and nearly 2000 more Engravings than any other American Dictionary.

SPECIMEN TESTIMONIALS.

The New York World says: Webster is almost universally conceded to be the best.

The Boston Globe says: Webster is the acknowledged standard in lexicography.

The Atlanta Constitution says: Webster has long been the standard authority in our office.

The Chicago Inter Ocean says: Webster's Unabridged has always been the standard.

The New Orleans Times Democrat says: Webster is standard authority in our office.

The New York Tribune says: It is recognized as the most useful existing "word-book" of the English language all over the world.

Sold by all Booksellers. Pamphlet free.
G. & C. MERRIAM & CO., Pub'rs, Springfield, Mass.

THE FAVORITE WASHER

LEADS THE WORLD.

FAVORITE WASHER
EARL

It proves a blessing wherever used, and it will sell on its merits. The rub board in the Favorite Washer is constructed differently from any other. There are no pins to tear the clothes.

AGENTS WANTED.
☞ Liberal Discounts Allowed.
Send for Circulars.

P. A. HOLT,
Manufacturer,
NEW RICHLAND, MINN.

GOLD
FREE
WARRANTED

FREE. OUR NEW $85 Solid Gold Watch Worth $100.00. Best $85 watch in the world. Perfect timekeeper. Warranted heavy, SOLID GOLD hunting cases. Both ladies' and gent's sizes, with works and cases of equal value. ONE PERSON in each locality can secure one free, together with our large and valuable line of Household Samples. These samples, as well as the watch, are free. All the work you need do is to show what we send you to those who call—your friends and neighbors and those about you—that always results in valuable trade for us, which holds for years when once started, and thus we are repaid. We pay all express, freight, etc. After you know all, if you would like to go to work for us, you can earn from $20 to $60 per week and upwards. Address, Stinson & Co., Box 812, Portland, Maine.

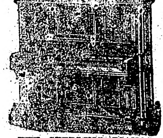
THE STERLING CO.

Manufacturers of



THE STERLING PIANOS,

WHICH FOR
Quality of Tone, Beauty of Design, FINISH and adaptability for standing in Tune have no equal.

Every Piano Warranted for Five Years

And satisfaction guaranteed to every purchaser.
Also Manufacture the WORLD-RENOWNED

STERLING ORGAN
Factories, Derby, Conn.

Take a policy in one of the reliable

Old Line Co's.

I represent several first class Insurance Companies and can

Guarantee Security

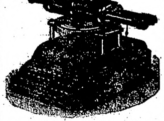
Satisfaction

To the Insured. Give us a call

John M. Boyle.

THE—

INTERNATIONAL TYPEWRITER!



A strictly first-class machine. Fully warranted. Made from very best material, by skilled workmen, and with the best tools that have ever been devised for the purpose. Warranted to do all that can be reasonably expected of the very best typewriter extant. Capable of writing 150 words per minute—or more—according to the ability of the operator.

Price - $100.00.

If there is no agent in your town, address the manufacturers,

THE PARISH MFG. CO.,
Agents Wanted. PARISH, N. Y.

FREE. STENOGRAPHY and TYPEWRITING FREE. First class facilities and best of teachers. Address, with stamp for return postage, THE PARISH MFG. CO., PARISH, N. Y.

WHAT IS GOING ON FOR MANY MILES IS ALL UNCOVERED TO THE EYE, AYE MORE

FREE One of the BEST Telescopes in the world. Our facilities are unequaled, and to introduce our superior goods we will send FREE to ONE PERSON in each locality, as above. Only those who write to us at once can make sure of the chance. All you have to do in return is to show our goods to those who call—your neighbors and those around you. The beginning of this advertisement shows the small end of the telescope. The following cut gives the appearance of it reduced to about the fiftieth part of its bulk. It is a grand, double size telescope, as large as is easy to carry. We will also show you how you can make from $3 to $10 a day at least, from the start, without experience. Better write at once. We pay all express charges. Address, H. HALLETT & CO., Box 880, PORTLAND, MAINE.

SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN

ESTABLISHED 1845

Is the oldest and most popular scientific and mechanical paper published and has the largest circulation of any paper of its class in the world. Fully illustrated. Best class of Wood Engravings. Published weekly. Send for specimen copy. Price $3 a year. Four months' trial, $1. MUNN & CO., PUBLISHERS, 361 Broadway, N.Y.

ARCHITECTS & BUILDERS
Edition of Scientific American.

A great success. Each issue contains colored lithographic plates of country and city residences or public buildings. Numerous engravings and full plans and specifications for the use of such as contemplate building. Price $2.50 a year, 25 cts. a copy. MUNN & CO., PUBLISHERS.

PATENTS may be secured by applying to MUNN & Co., who have had over 40 years' experience and have made over 100,000 applications for American and Foreign patents. Send for Handbook. Correspondence strictly confidential.

TRADE MARKS.

In case your mark is not registered in the Patent Office, apply to MUNN & Co., and procure immediate protection. Send for Handbook.

COPYRIGHTS for books, charts, maps, etc., quickly procured. Address

MUNN & CO., Patent Solicitors.
GENERAL OFFICE: 361 BROADWAY, N. Y.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Oct 17, 1890.
Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the clerk of district court at Detroit, Minn., on Dec. 3rd, 1890, viz: Charles Durand, pre-emption D. S. No. 5991 for the sw¼ sec 34 tp 150 rg 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz:

James C. O'Brien, John Moylan, Hugh Dean, Felix O'Claire, all of Red Lake, Minn.

oc23nov27 A. Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Oct. 17, 1890.
Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the clerk of the district court at Detroit, Minn., on Dec. 3rd, 1890, viz: Felix O'Claire, pre-emption D. S. No. 5987 for the e½ nw¼ nw¼ ne¼ sec 33 and lot 4 sec 28 tp 150 rg 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land. viz:

Charles Durand, James C. O'Brien, John Moylan and Hugh Dean, all of Red Lake Minn.

A. Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Oct. 17, 1890.
Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the clerk of Dist Court at Detroit, Minn., on Dec. 3d, 1890, viz:

James C. O'Brien, pre-emption D S No. 5984 for the se¼ sec 23 tp 150 rg 32.

He names the following witness to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz:

Felix O'Claire, Charles Durand, John Moylan, Hugh Dean, all of Red Lake, Minn.

A. Barto, Register.

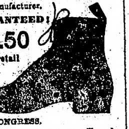
Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Oct. 17, 1890.
Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the clerk of District Court at Detroit, Minn., on Dec. 3d, 1890, viz:

Hugh Dean, Pre-emption D. S. No. 5983 for the nw¼ nw¼ sec 23 e½ nw¼ & lot 1 sec 22 twp tp 150 rg 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz:

James C. O'Brien, John Moylan, Charles Du- Felix O'Claire, all of Red Lake Minn.

A. Barto, Register.



$2.00 SAVED

by buying your Shoes of the Manufacturer.
SATISFACTION GUARANTEED!

ONLY $2.50

for Shoes that usually retail at $4.00 and $5.00.

BUTTON. LACE. CONGRESS.

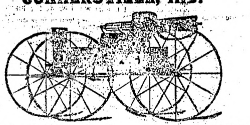
On receipt of $2.50 and twenty-five cents to pay expressage we will send one pair of our Fine Calf Shoes, Seamless Vamps, either Button, Lace or Congress. We Use only selected stock and the best workmanship. Every pair Warranted. Try our Shoes once and you will buy no others.

☞ Mention Size and Width wanted. Send postal note or N. Y. draft. Write your address plainly,—Town, County and State.

CUSTOM BOOT & SHOE CO.,
EAST WEYMOUTH, MASS.

McFARLAN CARRIAGE CO.

CONNERSVILLE, IND.



LARGE VARIETY. BEST STYLES.

LOW PRICES.

WRITE FOR CATALOGUE AND PRICE LIST.

McFARLAN CARRIAGE CO.,
Mention this paper. Connersville, Ind.

Red Lake Falls Iron Works.

P. & J MEEHAN, Proprietors.
J. Z PERRON, Manager.

SAW AND GRIST MILL

MACHINERY MADE AND REPAIRED.

Repairing Thresher Engines

AND BOILERS AND

AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS.

Circular Saws Hammered. Satisfaction Guaranteed, Correspondence Solicited.

BRING IN YOUR WORK

Scrap Brass and Copper Bought

Hunt & McClatchie

—DEALERS IN—

Heavy and Shelf Hardware.

DEERING FARM MACHINERY

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn, Nov 4, 1890
Notice is hereby given, that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the clerk of the Dist. court at Detroit Minn., on Dec. 29, 1890, viz James Dean, pre-emption d s 5982, for the se¼ sec 1 tp 150 rg 32,

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz

Peter Lonson, James McMahon, James Wiley, James C O'Brien, all of Red Lake, Minn.

A. Barto, Register.

Land Office at Crookston, Minn., Oct. 27th, 1890. Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the register or receiver U. S. Land Office at Crookston, Minn., on Dec. 13th, 1890, viz:

Joseph Patnode, Hd No 10934, for the w½ ne¼ sec 27, tp 151, r 43.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuos residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz:

Exerie Chatel, Sam Miller, John Deforge, A. Lafontaine, all of Red Lake Falls, Minn.

nov7d13 H. H Dickmann, Register.

Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the clerk of District Court at Detroit, Minn., on December 29, 1890, viz Peter Lonson, pre-emption d s No 5986, for the s½ ne¼, and n½ se¼ sec 26, tp 150, r 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz

James Wiley, James McMahon, James C. O'Brien, James Dean, all of Red Lake, Minn.

A Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Nov. 4, 1890.
Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the clerk of District Court at Detroit, Minn., on Dec. 29, 1890, viz James McMahon, pre-emption D S No 5988, for the se¼ sec 33, tp 150, rg 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz

James Wiley, Peter Lonson, James C O'Brien, James Dean, all of Red Lake, Minn.

A Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Oct. 3, 1890.
Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the clerk of the district court at Detroit, Minn., on November 20, 1890, viz: Edward J. Garceau, preemption D. S. No. 5990 for the n½ sw¼, sw¼ nw¼, sec 33 and lot 2, section 32 tp 150 r 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz: Michael Burns, John F. Crawford and Felix O'Claire, all of Red Lake, Minn.

A. Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Oct. 6, 1890.
Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the judge or in his absence the clerk of the district court at Detroit Minn. on Nov. 20, 1890, viz: Michael Burns, H E No. 14,905, for the s½ se¼, nw¼ se¼ and sw¼ ne¼ sec 34, tp 150 r 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz: Joseph P. Dargan, John F. Crawford, Edward J. Garceau, Felix O'Claire, all of Red Lake Minn, oct9-nov13 A. Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn. Oct. 3, 1890.
Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the clerk of Dist. court at Detroit, Minn., on November 20th, 1890, viz: John F. Crawford, pre-emption D S No. 5985 for the e½ nw¼ nw, nw¼ sec 34, and sw¼ sw¼ sec 27, tp 150 r 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz: Machael Burns, Edward J. Garceau, Joseph P. Dargan, Felix O'Claire, all of Red Lake, Minn.

A. Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Oct. 3, 1890.
Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the clerk of the District court at Detroit, Minn., on November 20, 1890, viz: Joseph P. Dargan, preemption, D S No 5989, for the e½ ne¼, sw¼ ne¼, sec 33 and sw¼ nw¼ sec 34 tp 150 rg 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of, said land, viz: Michael Burns, Edward J. Garceau, John F. Crawford, Felix O'Clair, all of Red Lake, Minn. A. Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Nov. 4. 1890
Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the clerk of district court at Detroit, Minn., on Dec. 29, 1890, viz: James Wiley, pre-emption d s No. 5,992 for the s½ se¼, nw¼ se¼, and se¼ sw¼ sec 35 tp 150 rg 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz:

Peter Lonson, James McMahon, James Dean, James O'Brien, all of Red Lake, Minn.

nov6dec11 A. Barto, Register.

P. & J MEEHAN,

(SUCCESSORS TO J. J. HOWE & CO)

Manufacturers and Dealers in

LUMBER,

LATH,

SHINGLES

Sash, Doors, Moldings, Building Paper,

Yards and Office on Main St.

We Would Like to Call the Attention of

Capitalists

Manufacturers and Others Desiring a Place for

INVESTMENT

—To the—

Superior Advantages of

RED LAKE FALLS,

Is Many Water Powers and other natural advantages. It is only a question of a few years until this will be one of the leading cities of Minnesota. Investment in real estate or water privileges are sure to secure to the investors handsome returns.

—WE RE—

In the Center of Vast

Farming District.

Yearly consuming large amounts of imported products of manufactures. This vast tract of land is watered by the Red Lake and Clearwater rivers. Within the limits of the city are

12 DISTINCT WATER POWERS.

The only natural water powers on these streams. There are fine openings for paper and pulp mills, woolen and other factories. Parties outside desiring any information concerning property, address

BOYLE & MEEHAN.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY

RED LAKE FALLS NEWS.

JAMES MEEHAN JR., EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR

OFFICIAL PAPER OF CITY AND COUNTY.

Vol. VII. No. 49.

RED LAKE FALLS, POLK COUNTY, MINNESOTA, NOVEMBER 13 1890.

TERMS, $1.50 PER YEAR

> SPECIAL <

CLOAK - SALE

>THIS WEEK<

JOSEPH SMITH & CO.

TO MAKE ROOM FOR

Fall and Winter Goods

WE WILL OFFER

For : the - Next : Fifteen - Days

AN ENTIRE STOCK OF

Spring and SummeR

CLOTHING AT COST

This Includes Youths' Boys' and Men's Suits.

Our Stock of

FUR - COATS

Will Arrive About Sept. 26.

A SPECIAL REDUCTION IN

Ladies' Oxfords and Summer Footwear.

ALL THIS WEEK.

A SNAP—A Ladie's Fine Shoe For $1.50.

We Have Just Received a Line of

LADIES' FRENCH KID SHOES.

Which w Sll Very Chap.

School Shoes, School Shoes, School Shoes.

W. A. SCHREITER.

ON EARTH ONCE MORE
RACINE, WIS.
THE BEST FARM EXPRESS LAUNDRY AND BUSINESS WAGONS OF EVERY DESCRIPTION
BUCKBOARDS BUGGIES CARTS
LOG, LUMBER YARD & CITY TRUCKS
SPRING WAGONS of ALL STYLES.
HUGGINS PATENT LADIES CHAISE.
PATENT CHAISE BRAKE
FISH BROS WAGON CO.
RACINE, WIS.

CHARLES LANGEVIN

—DEALER IN—

GENERAL MERCHANDISE,

RED LAKE FALLS, MINNESOTA

Bangs & Co.,

GENERAL : MERCHANTS,

Red Lake Falls, Minn.

Dry Goods, Groceries,

Men's and Boys' Clothing,

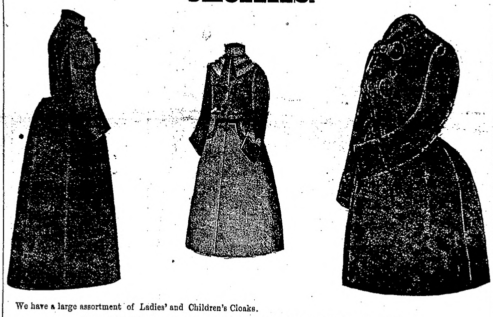
Ladies' and Children's Cloaks,

Boots and Shoes, etc.

We have a full stock and can offer some very attractive prices.

Granulated sugar, 13lbs for $1.00.	Prints, from 4½c.
Good light brown sugar, 14 lbs. for $1.00.	Gingham 8 and 10c.
Good clean rice, 14 lbs. for $1.00.	Good, yard-wide sheeting, 7c.
New dried grapes, 12 lbs. for $1.00.	Best shirtings, 12½c.
A pound can of good baking powder 15c.	Good shirtings, 10c.
Twenty pounds new jelly, $1.15.	Wool flannels, from 25c.
Pail of new syrup, (2 gals) $1.	Heavy double width from 65c.
Good Roasted coffee, 25c.	36-inch dress tricots, 28c.
Water-white oil, per gal., 15c.	Horse Blankets, $1.

CLOAKS.



We have a large assortment of Ladies' and Children's Cloaks.

Ladies' Plush Sacques, $14.00. $20.00. $23.50 Ladie's Cloth Ulsters, from $5.00 up.

Misses' and Children's cloaks in all sizes and prices.

Overcoats-

Men's and Boy's in great variety.

Boys' Sizes from $2.00 to $10.00, Men's Sizes from $5.07 to $35.

Clothing, Clothing, Clothing.

Our Stock is too Large to Describe—Come and see it.

- Blankets.
- Comforters.
- Dress Tricots.
- Cashmeres.
- Wool skirting.
- Shawls.
- Nubias.
- Wool hoods.
- Jeans and Cassimeres.
- Overalls.
- Lined Jackets.
- Leather Coats.
- Underwear.
- Gloves and Mittens.
- Carpet Warp.
- Weaving Yarn.
- Boot Packs.
- Shoe Packs.
- Wool Boots.
- Moccasins.
- Arctics.
- Trunks.
- Valises.
- Grain Bags.

Mackinaw Flannels in Great Variety.

We Have :—

ONLY ONE CASH PRICE

—: To all Alike.

Bangs & Co.

How Severe Colds are Broken up in Montana.

When we find a medicine we know to possess genuine merit, we consider it a duty and take pleasure in telling the public what it is. Such a medicine we found Chamberlain's Cough remedy, last winter, when la grippe was prevailing We are satisfied that we warded off several attacks that were threatening by the use of this syrup and we have since relieved in a few hours, severe colds, and in the course of two or three days, entirely broken them up by its use, as have several of our friends to whom we have recommended it. It is all that it is represented to be by the manufacturers. If you have cough and want to stop it Chamberlain Cough remedy will do the work, for sale by W. A Schreiter.

A Preventive For Croup.

The discovery of preventive for croup, is one of the most important made in recent years. Since first discovered it has been used in many cases and with unvarying success. Its being within the reach of all makes it the more valuable. It is only necessary to give Chamberlain's cough remedy freely as soon as the first indications of croup appear, and it will dispel all symptoms of the disease. Full directions are given with each bottle. For 50 cents at Schreieters.

There may be persons in this community who are at times troubled with colic, or subject to attacks of bowel complaint If so, they should try Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera aud Diarrhoea Remedy. It will afford almost immediate relief, and when reduced with water is pleasant to take. If taken as soon as the first indication of the disease is felt it will ward off the at tack. Many people use it in this way, and find that it never fails them. A 25 or 50 cent bottle may be obtained a W. A. Schreiter's.

THE

WISCONSIN CENTRAL LINES

RUNS

Fast trains with Pullman Vestibuled Drawing Room Sleepers, Dining Cars and Coaches of latest design, between Chicago and Milwaukee and St. Paul and Minneapol.

Fast train with Pullmant Vestibuled Drawing Room Sleeping Dining Cars and Coaches of latest design between Chiacgo and Milwaukee and Ashland and Duluth.

Through Pullman Vestibuled Drawing Room and Colonist Sleepers via the Northern Pacific Railroad between Chicogo and portland, Ore.

Conveniete Trains to and from Eastern, Western, Northern and Contril Wisconsin points, affording unequalled service to and from Waukesha, Fond du Lac, Oshkosk, Neenah, Menasha, Chippewa Fall, Eau Claire, Hurley, Wis., and Ironwood and Bessemer, Mich.

For tickets, sleeping car reservations, time tables and other information, apply to Agents of the line, or to ticket Agents anywhere in the Unitsd States or Canada.

S. L. Ainslie, Gen. Man., Milwaukea.
J. M. Hanaford, Gen. Traf. Man. St. Paul.
H. C. Barlow, Traffic Man. Chicago.
Louis Eckstein, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, Chicago.

In conjunction with the Erie System operates Fast Vestibuled Trains between Chicago and the Atlantic Seaboard. you may travel in the most Elegant and complete Pullman Vestibuled Trains ever constructed and save $1.50 to Buffalo and Niagara Falls, $2.00 to New York $2.85 to Albany and Troy, and $8.00 to Boston and New England Cities.

No rival line offers the advantages of a system of throuh first and second-class day coaches and Pullman Dining cars chicago to New York.

It is the only line operating pullman cars to Boston and New England via Albany.

Entire trains are lighted by gas, heated by steam. Pullman dining cars run through in either direction.

Pullman chair and sleeping cars to Columbus, O., and Ashland, Ky., Daily.

No extra charge for fast time and unsurpassed accommodations afforded by these luxurious trains.

CAPTAIN BRAND

OR

THE PIRATE SCHOONER.

A TALE OF THE SEA

PART II.

CHAPTER XLIV.

ON A BED OF THORNS.

Meanwhile the girlish schooner tripped away, far out of sight, and when the fog lifted and the breeze came to blow it to leeward she was once more tidily dressed in snowy white, and splashing the water from her black eyes, as the last rays of the setting sun showed her the Tiger's Trap in the distance.

"Henri. my boy. put your arms around me again, as you did when I lay in torture on the trestle on that island. Have no fears for me; we shall meet again. There! now listen to me. Here is a packet which I wish you to carry to Port Rico with this letter. The old judge is alive, I think, to whom this letter is addressed, and it may perhaps soothe his declining years, I wish to take your little gig, with Banou and Ben Bown—no more force—and if, as I believe, that villain has returned to his former haunt, I will fulfil my oath to its very letter. Meanwhile, so soon as we have shoved off, while the breeze still holds, run down to the frigate—she is not three leagues off—and you will be in your yearning parents' arms and those of the girl you love before they sleep. There! I know you will think of me. Farewell!"

"Ho, ho!" said Captain Brand, as he stretched out his straight legs, in their canvas casings on the sand of the little cove, "safe and sound. and not a soul to share the nice supper of that good old man Miguel!"

"Ho! ho!" continued he; "here at last! No Babette to cook for me, no schooner, nothing but that staunch little boat presented to me by that generous fisherman, who, I fear, is drowned by this time. Well, let us enjoy ourselves! Excellent red snapper this! Sausage, rather too much garlic, perhaps; but the brown bread and the aguardiente unexceptional. Blaze away, my little fire, your sticks cost me much labor to dig out of my once comfortable house; but you are better than gun powder any day.

"Just to think of the years that have passed! That great bank of sand there, over the sheds, nearly as high as the crag where my brave fellows once caroused, the young cocoa-nuts springing up on the crag itself—not a vestige of my old habitation left, or the bright blades or pleasant guests to dine with me!" Here there was something of the old cold murderous scowl on the captain's face as he twisted the point of his nose.

"Ah, yes! there may be my wary-eyed Sanchez left, though the last I heard of him was in the Capilla, dungeon of the Moro. And that"—grating his teeth and glaring with his icy eyes at the fire as if those two blocks of ice would put it out—"doctor who pursues me!"

"Well. well, neither of those old friends are here yet, and before another sun sets I shall bequeath the old den to them both! Ho, ho! with those solid bags of chinkling metal I shall leave them with as much sand and rocks as they chose to walk over. What a sly devil I was to stow that treasure away for a rainy day! Never told a living being. Poisoned the fellow, too, who made the lock! Capital joke, 'pon my soul!"

This was the very last of the very few jokes that Captain Brand ever enjoyed.

"And now I think of it, I wonder if my thirsty old mate's bones are yet lying there in the vault. What was his name? such a bad memory I have! oh, Gibbs—Bill Gibbs—with one leg! Ho, ho!"

Here Captain Brand drained some more aguardiente out of a cracked earthen pot and slapped his fine legs with raptures.

"And those dear girls who married me! Lucia, too?"

The dirty wretch started as the wing of a sea-bird swooped down over the pure inlet; and he thought he saw a white forefinger beckoning him on to his doom.

"Pshaw!" said he, smoothing down his filthy, tattered shirt with the finger of his mutilated left hand. "How nervous I am! But what a bungle Pedillo made of that marriage! And my good Ricardo, too! What a feast the sharks must have had on his oily. well-fed carcase! Misericordia! Ho! ho! I believe I'll bid my friends good-night."

Captain Brand stretched himself out at full length on the shelly strand, his boat secured by a clove hitch around his right leg and riding calmly on the little inlet; his bald head, with the few dry grey hairs on his temples, resting on Miguel's sennit hat; and the thin scum of frosty eyelids drawn over his frozen eyes—cracking their covering at times—until at last the pirate, aided by fiery aguardiente, slept.

A few late Cormorants and sea-birds sailed over him in his fitful slumber, and uttered a cold cry as if their pecking time had not come yet, but would shortly as they sought their silent retreats on the wall of rocks opposite.

And Captain Brand dreamed too!—of the old laird, his father in prison; his mother weeping over forged notes: the sleeping unsuspecting people he had treacherously murdered: the pillages he had committed; the men he had slain in open conflict; those he had executed with his own private cord; the poor woman who had died in worse torments, when, indeed. even knife or pistol, rope or poison, would have been a mercy; the agony and sufferings of those who survived him: with all the concomitant horrors which makes the blood run cold to think of, and which made the pirate's blood almost freeze in his veins—living years in minutes—did Captain Brand, as he lay there on the chill sand in his troubled nightmare of a sleep.

"Ah! ah! ah!" chattered the Senora Banana pancha, at the other outlet to the inlet. rolling over on the ledge of the rocks at the Tiger's Trap.

"What has become of my Ig—Ig—nacio—the one-eyed old villain who has persecuted me for forty years? Why did I cut the old launch adrift before I got in myself? And here I am alone and desolate on this cursed island, and my Ig—Ig—nacio—bless his spark of an eye—not come back to me! Ah, Dios! Dios! what has become of the little man? He will kill me, cierto, when he comes back and finds the boat gone with all the money, which nearly broke his thin back to bring here; but, cierto! I am dying of thirst, and not a shred of dried fish or jerked beef has gone into my old mouth——"

Yes, there has, Donna Pancha, for just then a piece of hawser-laid rope—rather dry, perhaps, for mastication—was placed across your crying mouth that you might bite upon, if you would only stop your old tongue.

For while you were screaming on the rocks, and yelling for your Ig—Ig—nacio, who went back for the last bag of gold that wasn't there. a light gig glided in like a black-fish. and a bigger black-fish jumped up and stopped your old mouth, Pancha, with that bit of hide rope. But if you will keep quiet, Pancha, and not exercise Banou for the Evil One, that old nigger will give you a cup of liquid, and treat you also to some white biscuits to nibble upon,

Ah! you will, eh? and tell about that thin curl of smoke, which you believe to have been made by that coal-eyed Ig—Ig—nacio, away up there by the inlet? Now keep quiet again, old Lady Banana; and while your screaming mouth is gagged, don't cut this small gig away, or else she may navigate herself out to sea, as did your Ig's launch, and you be left desolate again.

The tropical night was still; the lizards wheetled, the breakers roared on the outer ledge, the ripples washed musically on the shelly shore, the alligators flapped about on the surface of the lagoon, the insects buzzed around the mangrove thickets; and as the grey dawn of morning appeared, and the rain began to fall, a steaming hot mist arose, through which the sea-birds flapped their wings, and sailed away in search of their morning's meal. The sharks and the deep sea-fish, however, lay still and motionless low down by the base of the reefs, and watched with their cold, round eyes. Captain Brand, too. arose, and opening his green-bluish eyes, smoothing his moulting feathers, and splashing his fins in the wet sand, took an observation.

This was the rainy day for which Captain Brand had laid by all that money to spend it in!

It was a Monday morning—Black Monday for Captain Brand—when, after divesting his leg of the clove hitch, he secured old Miguel's boat to a large stone, and then, according to his own ancient practice, he clambered with difficulty up the venerable crag. Captain Brand had no spy-glass, and there was a good bit of rain falling, but yet he thought he saw a large ship. a brig, and a small schooner in the offing.

So Captain Brand scrambled down again, a good deal disconcerted, knowing it would be hours and hours before those vessels got up to the island, even were they so inclined; but nevertheless he bestirred himself. Fortifying his inner man with the last half-pint of aguardiente for breakfast, which quite refreshed him, he went to work.

First, he took Miguel's copper coffee-pot, into which he emptied that disciple of the the net's shark-oil jug, which Miguel himself used for a torch to attract the fish. Then, with a strap of old canvas—part of one leg to Captain Brand's trousers, to such straits was he reduced—seized like a ball on the end of a stick, and a match-box, he was already for Black Monday's work.

Captain Brand, however, made one serious omission; he snugly stowed away his beautiful pistols in a locker of the boat to keep them dry, never having been wet but twice before in all his marine excursions—the first time at Cape Garrote, and the next when he jumped overboard from the brigantine at St. Jago. He set great store by those valuable implements, for they had done him good service in time of need. Miguel came into possession of them afterward, and sold them for almost their weight in gold.

But Captain Brand, there had been three pairs of open eyes watching you through every mouthful of snapper you snapped, and every drop of fiery white rum you swallowed. Ah! and while you tossed about on the shelly beach, with the red glow of the embers of the fire lighting up your cold blooded, wrinkled face—while, twisting your nose, you muttered "Ho! ho's!" of murderous satisfaction—there was not a bird that swooped over you, or a lizard on the rocks with jet beads of epes, that watched you so sharply as did those attentive beholders from the crag.

What caused our brave captain to reel and stagger as he plunged with a bound out into the matted cactus, without his tattered hat, like a wolf flying from the hounds? Had he trodden on a snake. or seen his compadre, or had that white finger waved him away? Yes, all three. But his interview with his one-eyed compadre had shocked him most.

On he came driving the hot, wet sand before him, toward the Padre Ricardo's chapel. There he paused for breath, though it was only by a spasmodic effort that he could unclose his sheet-white lips, where his sharp teeth had met upon them, and held his mouth together as if he had the lock-jaw, while he snorted through his nostrils.

"Oh!" he gaspad, "the spying old traitor has sacked the cavern, and the gold must have gone in that launch I saw the night I came over the reef. Ho! the traitor has found the torture I promised him; but I would like to have killed him a little more slowly."

Here Captain Brand having regained some few faculties and some energy, moved on beyond the church. till he came to the white coral head-stone, where he stood still.

It was his last walk on deck or sand!

Shading his still horror-stricken eyes with both hands, he glared to sea-ward.

"Ho! ho! there you are my Yankee commodore, with that old brig under convoy, and that pretty schooner! Reminds me of my old schooner. Bueno! there are other schooners, and I must begin the world anew. I am not old; there is my strong right arm yet; and who can stop me?"

Captain Brand made these remarks in a loud tone, as if he wanted the whole world to hear him, and as if he had failed in early life, and come to a strong resolution to retrieve his past errors.

As he waved his strong right arm aloft, while, in imagination, blood rained from the blade of his cutlass after cleaving the skull, by a blow dealt behind the back of an unsuspecting skipper. or mate, suddenly he paused, and the arm fell powerless at his side, where it hung dangling loose like a pirate from a gibbet on a windy day.

He caught sight of the old broken cocoanut trunk to which he had hitched the green silk rope, with its noose around his victim's neck and he squirmed to prevent himself falling to the sand.

"Ho!" he choked out, his jaws rattling like dry bones, "I see it all now. The column was snapped just where the rope was hitched, and the trestle must have been torn to pieces by the hurricane. Ho, ho! That's the way my man escaped, to dog me all over the world. Ho! I have no time to lose; he may be here at any moment."

This was the last connected speech that Captain Brand ever made; for at the last word Paul Darcantel, rose in all his terrible reality before him. With folded arms he bent his dark, stern eyes upon the pirate, wherein the retribution of twenty years was gleaming with a concentrated power.

"You palsied villain! the oath I took to you, and for which I have been wretched, expired yesterday! I took another myself, when we stood here last together; and I come to fulfil that oath, and—strike!"

His terrible voice and words came back in an echo from the crag, and they seemed with their intense energy to pierce and shrivel the man before him into sleet. And the pirate would have fallen had not two huge, black lignum-vitæ paws grappled him about the body, pinioning his arms to his sides as if they had been bolted through and through; while at the same moment another pair of tough, sea-weed flippers wound a lashing round his straight legs, and then laid him gently down on the sandy esplanade.

"The trestle, Banou! And you, Ben, bring the hide strands, the faded old cord, and that black altar-cloth!"

The pirate lay on his back, his eyes wide open—for he could not shut them since the lids had gone in frost—but the solid balls, light-green now in the light rolled from side to side. He recognized the old apparatus, too, though it was in different hands than those of Pedillo and his confederate. and he saw also that, though the pale-green rope was rotten, yet his knowledge of nautical matters taught him that it yet might bear a taut strain; and that those coils of hide thongs never gave way by any amount of tugging, and he saw as well that they had been recently dipped in grease.

But what was to be done with that rotten moth-eaten old cloth, which the men used to play monte on Saturday nights, in the shed, and on which the good padre played his cards likewise in the chapel? It was not to keep the cold air away from him, or shield his half-naked body from the poisonous insects. Then what could it be for?

"Lift him up, men, and when you lash him down, leave only that little finger free!"

Ben Brown squatted himself on a stone beside the bier, and with his cutlass unbuckled and laid on the sand, and sleeves rolled up, began his work as if he had a chafing mat to make for the dead eyes of the frigate's lower shrouds, and though in a hurry, still intended to make a neat job of it. He had a small and rather sharp-pointed marlin-spike, too, which he wore, habitually, like a talsman, round his neck, and which stood him in hand in the intricate parts of his task,

Taking in at a glance the exact amount of hide stuff he required he middled the coils, and passing each strand fair and square, his old bronzed arms went backward and forward, under and over—sometimes pricking a little whole by accident in the pirate's own thin hide, as he passed the strips by the aid of his marlin-spike, but always apologizing in his bluff, rough way.

"Beg parding, ye murdering pirate! but that stick will do ye no harm. It'll heal much sooner than the iron spike one of yer crew drove through both cheeks of my watch-mate when you gagged him on board the brig.

"I say old nigger. hand us a little more of that slush, will ye? this 'ere straud won't lie flat. Thankee old darkey! Kitch hold on that lower end, will ye? and draw it square up between his pins, and straighten out that knee-joint a bit—so fashion.

"I wouldn't hurt ye, you villain, for a chaw of tobaccy."

"Now," continued Ben, "I'll take a spell till the doctor and the old nigger comes back."

Ay, the job was done, and the mat over the dead-eyes of the shrouds!

During this neat and seaman-like operation, Paul Darcantel wandered away on the tracks of the flying wolf till he came to the cleft in the rock. There he picked up and lighted the torch stalked on. Presently he came to the stone before the low cavern, and pushed his way in with the blazing torch before him. Had Paul Darcantel had nerves, they would have been shaken at what he saw; but having none to shake, he calmly fixed his eyes upon the sight.

There lay the head of the ancient Ignacio, caught, as he tried to creep out of the treasure chamber, by the falling of the stone slab. It must have been sudden, for the stump of a paper cigar was still seized in his wrinkled lips, while the snake-like curls twined about his ears, and his wary eyes still looked out with its usual suspicious intensity, and seemed to throw out a spark of fire in the reflection of the torch. Rising from a coil in a slimy bed of sand before the head, was a venomous serpent, with his graceful neck curved into the broad flat head, all like an ebony cane, straight, motionless, and elegant to the curved top—fascinated by that single dead orb of the dead man.

The human intruder left this well-matched pair to their own venomous devices, and winding his way on, he soon came to the open door to the vaults. A powerful kick smashed in the door of the dungeon, and while the rusty bolts were still ringing on the stone pavement, Paul Darcantel entered the loathsome chamber.

He saw nothing at first, save a few fragments of broken crockery and a rusty metal pot, not even a rat. But flaring the torch down upon the mouldy floor, something sparkled in the light, This he snatched, and it was the long-lost locket and chain which had last rested around the baby-boy's neck.

When the doctor strode back to the esplanade of the chapel, he found Benjamin Brown and Banou taking a friendly sip out of the tiny pot.

"Well, sir," said Ben, as he got on his pins, and strapped on his cutlass, "there he is, sir! and as neat a piece of cross-lashing as ever I did. He looks as if he had growed there, jist like a hawk-bill turtle a-bilin' in the ship's coppers only he can't paddle about.

And what did that doctor propose to do with him, in case he was not to be stung to death by insects. sand-flies, mosquitoes, and what not?

"Lift the trestle for the last time, men, and fix it here over this thick bed of cactus, so as the little finger may touch the letter on this white tombstone."

Now Captain Brand's doubts were relieved. and he knew what was coming. O ho! ho!

"There! that is right! Now collect stones and rocks, and wall this trestle up solid to the edge of the frame so that a hurricane can't losen it."

Big Banou went to work now, and presently his job was done; coral rocks and loose headstones of pirates, well packed down with sand, made the sides of the living tomb. Then the black pall was drawn over the body, and they left the pirate to his inevitable doom.

Soon the three executioners reached the Tiger's Trap.

"Banou, take this locket and chain—eh, you know it well—to your young master. Brown, the two thousand dollars will be placed in your and Greenfield's hands for distribution among the schooner's crew; make a good use of it! Tell the commodore that I shall take an old woman we have found here away with me in a stolen fisherman's boat to Manzanillo, and within the year I shall be at home! There! shove off, my lads!"

Vain boast! Paul Darcantel had forgotten that "Vengeance is mine, I will repay," saith the Lord. And he was punished for the torture he inflicted on the infamous pirate, by never again beholding his home or Henri. Neither the doctor nor Ignacio's widow were ever heard of again.

As the gig skimmed through the Tiger's Trap, Paul Darcantel with the widow of her Ignacio, sailed out by the Alligator's mouth; and as they crossed that roaring ledge, the sun sunk in its unclouded glory in the west, and the young moon, with its pearly crescent, looking timidly down upon the island.

And the night passed, and the next, and the next, with scorching days and blazing suns between them; while the mangrove. the palm, the cocoa-nut, and the cactus—ah! that luxuriant plant—throve apace, shooting up its steel-pointed bayonets two inches of a night in thorny neddles as thick as pins in a paper; growing clean through the hide of ox or man like blood, till their hard-edged leaves met resistance, when turning flat side up they put forth a score for one of the neddle bayonets! No escape from them! From shoulder to heel one long, hopeless agony. The fierce sun flaming down, absorbed by the black pall of death! The moon glimmering in pale white rays of splendor through the moth-eaten holes upon the finger and the white tombstone! All the day and all the night!

Was it a dream, Captain Brand? No! A frightful reality! Don't you feel a fresh thorn at every slow pulse of the heart they are aiming at? And don't you hear those dread croakings of gulls and cormorants, flapping in the air, who have left their prey on the reef to join their vultures in their feast on the shore? You may always catch the grating sounds of the rasping jaws of the sharks, as they crowd into the inlet, and rest their cold noses on the shelly cove where you stept!

Flesh and blood, and pinions and beaks can endure it no longer! A cloud of carnivorous birds swoop down at last. snap the black pall in their talons and bills, and fly, fighting and screaming away with it. Another cloud, darker than the rest, lights upon the body, and while the needle points pierce the palpitating heart, and the breath flutters on the still, clenched lips and nostrils, the eyes are picked out, and the flesh is torn piecemeal, hide strands and all, till nothing is left but a hideous white skeleton, with the long, bony finger pointing to the letter L.

THE END OF "CAPTAIN BRAND."

Sprats Whitebait, Sardines.

Cornhill Magazine: Nothing is more common than to hear it asserted that sprats are only immature herring. This is a complete mistake. Believe it not. Sprats are a very distinct species of the herring genus, and they never grow much bigger than when they appear, broches, at table. The largest adult sprat measures only six inches, while full-grown herrsng may attain as much as fifteen. Moreover, herring have teeth on the palate, always wanting in sprats, by which means the species may be readily distinguished at all ages. When in doubt, therefore, do not play trumps, but examine the palate. On the other hand, whitebait, long supposed to be a distinct species, has now been proved by Dr. Gunther, the greatest of ichthyologists, to consist chiefly of the fry or young of herring. To complete our discomfiture, the same eminent authority has also shown that the pilchard and the sardine, which we thought so unlike, are one and the same fish, called by different names according as he is caught off the Cornish coast or in Breton, Portuguese, or Mediterranean waters. Such aliases are by no means uncommon among his class. To say the plain truth, fish are the most variable and ill-defined of animals; they differ so much in different habitats, so many hybrids occur between them, and varieties merge so readily by imperceptible stages into one another that only an expert can decide in doubtful cases, and every expert carefully reverses the last man's opinion. Let us at least be thankful that whitebait by any other name would eat as nice; that science has not a single whisper to breathe against their connection with lemon, and that whether they are really the young of Clupea harengus or not, the supply at Billingsgate shows no symptom of falling short of the demand.

Escaping Sheol.

Nineteenth Century: According to the Talmudic idea certain persons are mentioned who will escape hell or have their torment therein lightened. Whoever articulated every letter while reading the Shema (Deut. vi., 4-9) will have hell cooled for him. Three kinds will never see the face of hell—those who are ground down by poverty, those who suffer from bowel sickness, and those who lie at the mercy of creditors. To those three some rabbis whose experience of matrimony was perhaps unfortunate, add those who have a shrew to wife. Charity to the poor, by feeding them and otherwise, opens the door of escape from hell. Whoever shears a portion of his goods for the poor, and is charitable, is released from the judgment of hell. A passage in Gittin likens the charitable and the uncharitable to two ewes passing through a river to water: The ewe which is shorn reaches the opposite bank in safety, but the ewe which remains unshorn is drowned. It is also said, Prov. x., ii., and Prov. xi., iv., charity (A. V., "righteousness,") "delivereth from death." This is sometimes recited at the present day at a burial by the keeper of the ground or other person, when money is commonly given for the use of the poor.

A Good Voice.

One afternoon Ethel attended a matinee where there was much fine music. On the way home she heard her mother remark to another lady that one of the singers, a noted tenor, sang unusually well. "Yes," said the lady, "he went up to high C without making any fuss about it."

Ethel often heard music talked about at home, so that she knew that "high C" meant one of the upper notes on the musical scale, within the compass of the human voice, but so high that some singers could not reach it. Therefore she asked no questions.

A few weeks afterward Ethel went into the country for a visit. On the morning after her arrival at the farm she got into the chicken yard, where she caused much commotion among the fowls. The hens cackled and the roosters screeched, while she chased them hither and thither to her heart's content, thinking it fine fun.

"Oh, I've had a lovely time playing tag with the chickens!" she told her mother afterward, and she added: "I 'most know that gray rooster went up to high C, but he made a dreadful fuss about it."—[Youth's Companion.

A Gentle Boy.

"Be gentle with little Gracie, Charlie," said his mother as she tucked up the little girl in her carriage, all ready for a ride. "Be a gentle boy."

"Oh, mother, boys are never gentle," answered Charlie. "I don't want to be called a gentle boy."

"Yet a few years from this time, if you should not be called a gentleman, you would feel very badly," answered his mother. "And you cannot be a gentleman unless you are a gentle boy first; kind and considerate to all around you, gentle to the weak, and courteous to those whom you meet every day. You are forming your character now, my boy, and it will be too late for you to change when you are grown up. You will want to be considered a gentleman then, so try to be a gentle boy now. There is nothing unmanly in being gentle and courteous. Now, think about this while you are giving Gracie her ride, and don't think it unmanly to be gentle with your little sister."

I hope that all little boys who read this paper will remember that gentlemen are made of gentle boys.

A Sardonic Smile.

It is an easy thing to laugh when there is something to laugh at. But when nothing funny has happened, laughing to order is a very different matter. The other day a certain German gentleman urged an amateur to photograph his two children when they were laughing. On a certain afternoon the amateur came with his camera, but on hunting up the children it was discovered that, while the little girl was quite willing to smile, the boy was in a very bad humor. In fact, the boy had just been punished by his father, and when he was asked to laugh never felt less humorous in his life. But the camera was there and the father was set upon having the performance proceed. He repeatedly urged the boy, whose mouth did not get beyond a slight twitching at the corners. Then, becoming exasperated, the father shook his finger and exclaimed "You laugh now, or I vip you again!" And under this awful persuasion the boy made a heroic effort.—[St. Nicholas.

WHAT CURES?

Editorial Difference of Opinion on an Important Subject.

What is the force that ousts disease; and which is the most convenient apparatus for applying it? How far is the regular physician useful to us because we believe in him, and how far are his pills and powders and tonics only the material representatives of his personal influence on our health?

The regular doctors cure; the homœopathic doctors cure; the Hahnemannites cure; and so do the faith cures and mind cures, and the so-called Christian scientists, and the four-dollar-and-a-half advertising itinerants, and the patent medicine men. They all hit, and they all miss, and the great difference—one great difference—in the result is that when the regnlar doctors lose a patient no one grumbles, and when the irregular doctors lose one the community stands on end and howls.—Rochester Union and Advertiser.

Nature cures, but nature can be aided, hindered or defeated in the curative porcess. And the Commercial's contention is that it is the part of rational beings to seek and trust the advice of men of good character who have studied the human system and learned, as far as modern science lights the way, how far they can best avoid obstructing her.—Buffalo Commercial.

It is not our purpose to consider the evils that result from employing the unscrupulous, the ignorant, charlatans and quacks to prescribe for the maladies that afflict the human family. We simply declare that the physician who knows something is better than the physician who knows nothing, or very little indeed about the structure and the conditions of the human system. Of course "he does not know it all." —Rochester Morning Herald.

I have used Warner's Safe Cure and but for its timely use would have been, I verily believe, in my grave from what the doctors termed Bright's Disease.—D. F. Shriner, senior Editor Scioto Gazette, Chillicothe, Ohio, in a letter dated June 30, 1890.

Reminded of Johnny's Watch.

Mr. Hankinson (waiting for Miss Irene)—"That's a pretty little watch you carry, Johnny."

Johnny (temporarily entertaining Mr. Hankinson)—"Yes, Irene says she always thinks of you when she sees it."

(Highly pleased)—"Did she say that, Johnny?"

"Yep. That's what she said."

"Its—its—a—h'm!—a good, reliable kind of watch, isn't it, Johnny?"

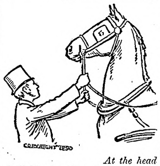
"Nope. It doesn't go."

(Mr. Hankinson puts Johnny down, and thinks and thinks.)

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria,

In Washington Street Cars.

It is very odd to see the white men in a car eagerly scan the face of a lady who enters, and who is unable to find a seat. If she is at all dark the chances are a seat will not be readily forthcoming. The men are staring at her, and as soon as they have concluded she has no African blood in her veins there will be more seats than she has need of. But if the verdict happens to be the other way she will not get a seat through the courtesy of her fellow passengers.



At the head of all blood-purifiers is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. But it's different from all of them. Whatever is claimed for this, it's guaranteed to do. The money is refunded in every case where it fails to benefit or cure. It's because it is different that it can be sold so. All diseases originating from a torpid liver or impure blood yield to it. It cleanses and purifies the system, freeing it from all manner of blood-poisons, no matter from what cause they have arisen. For Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Scrofula, Salt-rheum, Tetter, Erysipelas, or any blood taint or disorder, it is an unequaled remedy. Nothing else can take its place.

"Golden Medical Discovery" contains no alcohol to inebriate and no syrup or sugar to derange digestion.

It's a concentrated vegetable extract; put up in large bottles; pleasant to the taste, and equally good for adults or children; works equally well all the year round.

EVERY SKIN, SCALP, & BLOOD DISEASE Cured by Cuticura

EVERY SKIN AND SCALP DISEASE, whether torturing, disfiguring, itching, burning, bleeding, scaly, crusted, pimply, or blotchy, with loss of hair, from pimples to the most distressing eczemas, and every humor of the blood, whether simple, scrofulous, or hereditary, is speedily, permanently, and economically cured by the CUTICURA REMEDIES, consisting of CUTICURA, the great Skin Cure, CUTICURA SOAP, an exquisite Skin Purifier and Beautifier, and CUTICURA RESOLVENT, the new Blood Purifier and greatest of Humor Remedies, when the best physicians and all other remedies fail. Thousands of grateful testimonials attest their wonderful and unfailing efficacy.

Sold everywhere. Price, CUTICURA, 50c.; SOAP, 25c.; RESOLVENT, $1. Prepared by Potter Drug and Chemical Corporation, Boston. Send for "How to Cure Skin Diseases."

Pimples, blackheads, chapped and oily skin prevented by CUTICURA SOAP.

Rheumatism, Kidney Pains, and weakness relieved in one minute by CUTICURA ANTI-PAIN PLASTER. 25c.

A bedstead owned and used by Oliver Cromwell for many years, has been sold in London for £50.

For a stengthening medicine take Allen's Iron Tonic Bitters. All genuine bear the signature of J. P. Allen, Druggist, St. Paul, Minn.

Floated, but Died.

The story of a fat man who fell overboard in New York harbor and floated around for an hour or two until he was mistaken for a whale and towed to shore unhurt has set the old watermen and wharfmen all agog with reminiscent talk. They tell peculiar tales of happenings to fat men which have occurred under their eye, and in which they took a part.

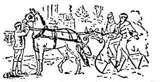
John McClain, the veteran watchman on the Thomas Clyde pier, above Chestnut, told a number of incidents concerning the floating tendencies of fat men.

During the war Mr. McClain was a night watchman on the piers at Washington avenue. One dark night a government receiving vessel came up the river, and when it neared the Washington pier two sailors jumped overboard to make their escape. One was a gigantic fellow and the other a man of medium size.

Before jumping overboard the fat man fastened $200 in double gold eagles in a leather belt which was strapped around his waist. He could not swim a stroke. When he touched the water he floundered around, but did not sink. Shortly afterward a tremendous swell carried him under the pier, where he was knocked senseless by the piling. When the body was found, several hours afterward, it was not at the bottom of the stream, but plump against the planks of the pier, with the head above the water. The man never sank, but was drowned while insensible. Superstitious sailors concluded that it was the gold that kept him on the top of the river.—Philadelphia Record.

A BOSTON importer who took too much stock in the statements of the newspapers that he read spent a neat sum in cable tolls in order to get a large consignment of needles over before the McKinley bill went into effect, and then discovered that they had been placed on the free list.

ST. JACOBS OIL
TRADE MARK
THE GREAT REMEDY FOR PAIN
CURES PROMPTLY AND PERMANENTLY
RHEUMATISM,
Lumbago, Headache, Toothache,
NEURALGIA,
Sore Throat, Swellings, Frost-bites,
SCIATICA,
Sprains, Bruises, Burns, Scalds.
THE CHARLES A. VOGELER CO., Baltimore, Md.



When You Drive,
Cold feet are dangerous. They bring Chilblains, Coughs, Colds, Pneumonia, Consumption, and Doctors' Bills. Keep your feet warm—not with warming pan nor with brick, but with

WOONSOCKET

Arctics. Uppers are made of the best woollen fabrics, bottoms and foxing of purest rubber.

BEWARE of inferior Rubbers sold under other brands. Insist on Woonsocket Rubber Boots and Shoes. They are the best. Sold everywhere. Manufactured by the WOONSOCKET RUBBER CO., PROVIDENCE, R.I. Send for Catalogue.

CHICHESTER'S ENGLISH
PENNYROYAL PILLS
RED CROSS DIAMOND BRAND.
Safe and always reliable. Ladies, ask Druggist for Diamond Brand, in red, metallic boxes, sealed with blue ribbon. Take no other. All pills in pasteboard boxes, pink wrappers, are a dangerous counterfeit. Send 4c. (stamps) for particulars and "Relief for Ladies," in letter, by return mail. Name Paper. Chichester Chem'l Co., Madison Sq., Phila., Pa.

PENSIONS Old or new Law Bounty and pay Cases collected.
FEES CONTINGENT. MILO B. STEVENS & CO., Attorneys, 1419 F St., Washington, D. C. Branches, Chicago, Detroit, and Cleveland. Three Years army service. 26 Years practice.

MOTHERS Dr. Snyder's Kidney Specific cures BED-WETTING. For sale by all Druggists. Circulars and testimonials address with stamp, Dr. O. W. F. SNYDER, 243 State St., Chicago.
Ask your Druggist to order it for you.

SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT.

THE DEVIL TO PAY.

The King was puzzled, for his treasury was empty, and he knew not how to fill it. While he pondered this mighty question of state, the devil came to him, not in a dream, but in sober earnest. And the devil, as is his habit, went at once to business.

"You are in trouble, sir," said he to the King; "shall I help you out of it?"

"No, thank you," replied the King, "you charge too much for your help. I do not forget that my father is still working out a debt to you which was beyond all proportion to your service."

"Yes," said the devil. "I did charge the old man about all the traffic would bear; but I have tried to be considerate, and although he is still working out the debt, let me assure you that his position is the most comfortable, in winter, in all my dominions. But that is beside the question. Your treasury is empty, and I can fill it. I will make no conditions. You may command me freely. What say you?"

"And has the devil turned saint?" the King inquired.

"Not by a long shot. I shall get my pay; though not from you, from your subjects."

"My subjects be ——."

"Stop!" interrupted the devil, "that sentiment is not original with you. It is the motto of my kingdom, and I won't permit it to be appropriated with impunity. Come, what do you say; shall I tell you how to fill your treasury?"

"Yes," the King whispered.

"Then, listen. All your subjects have plenty, have they not?"

"They have. There is not a poor man in my kingdom, except myself."

"How do they get it?"

"They work for it."

"Why do you allow them to work?"

"It is the command of God ——"

"Silence!" the devil screamed, his face purple with rage and his tail lashing the floor of the palace till the air was laden with sparks.

"Well, then," gasped the frightened king, "they would starve if I stopped them, and what good would that do me?"

"It would do you no good if they starved," the devil answered, as he gathered his tail under his left arm and opened the window to let out the stifling fumes. "But it would do you some good to charge them for working, wouldn't it? They would pay rather than starve, eh?"

"Good idea!" exclaimed the king.

"I thought so," said the devil. "Now, suppose you issue a proclamation that no one may work without a royal charter."

"Yes," the king interrupted, impatiently.

"And then suppose you sell charters to one man to work in a certain territory and to another man to work in another territory, and so on."

"Yes."

"And suppose you allow the owners of these charters to farm out the privileges under them."

"Yes."

"And suppose you issue no charters at all for some of the best territory; don't you see that you will get a lot of ready money from the sale of charters and have a permanent income from the territory reserved, and be favored with a wealthy leisure class in whose society you may enjoy yourself?

"Capital!" exclaimed the King, but before the word was out of his mouth the devil had vanished.

The King lost no time. Having issued his proclamation forbidding his beloved subjects to weary themselves with work, he sent for his attorney-general and ordered that functionary, on the basis of a contingent fee, to draft a form of charter. It read in substance like this: Be it known that his pious and gracious majesty, Impecunious X, having from love of his faithful subjects forbidden them to work without his command, does now, by these presents, confer upon his well-beloved Bylighote, lord of Towmaytokahn hill, his heirs and assigns forever, full power and authority to permit the good people of all that territory known as Quad, and bounded, etc., etc., etc., to work or not to work, as to him may seem best, and on such terms as to him may seem just. Signed, sealed, etc., etc., etc.

The proclamation caused an uproar among the people, for the seeding season was just opening; but when Lord Bylighote appeared with his charter in Quad, quiet was restored and terms were made. "I will give so much a year to be allowed to work," said one, and "I will give so much," said another. And in this way it went, until Lord Bylighote had arranged with all the people in his territory. And while Lord Bylighote was adjusting things in Quad, Lord This and Lord That and Lord Tother were doing the same in Quam and Quim and Qurl. And so it was that the King's treasury was full from the sale of charters, and the Lords, instead of working as they used to do, lived on what the people paid them for the privilege of being allowed to work, while the Attorney General's contingent fee was big enough to make a shyster respectable. And between them the King, the Lords and the Attorney General enjoyed their leisure amazingly.

But as the King's subjects increased a great many could not buy the right to work and had to hire themselves to those who could, and many of these could not find men to hire them, and many more found it easier to follow the example of the Kings and lords and live on plunder than either to buy the right to work or to hire themselves out. And it came about that there were paupers in the kingdom, which was something novel, since the King had theretofore been the only pauper; and there were criminals there, which was also novel, for when nobody had to pay to be allowed to work, and everybody got rich by working, no one ever thought of being a criminal.

And so things went on for many and many a year. The King was lazy and happy, for he had nothing to do and plenty to eat. The lords were lazy and happy for the same reason. The people, though, were far from being lazy and happy; the beggars were lazy, but they went hungry; the criminals were neither lazy nor happy, and the people who worked had no time to be lazy, and after paying the lords for the right to work had little left on which to be happy.

In the course of time the king died and the lords died but the charters lived and new kings and new lords profited by them.

At last the people got so restless and made such grim threats that the lords were frightened, and when a rebellion was imminent the lords were on the point of burning up their charters. But this did not meet the views of the devil, and he put it into the heads of the people who were paying for the right to work to buy the right of their lords for a lump sum. Of course the lords were glad to compromise in this way, and it came about that each man who worked in a certain place bought the right of his lord to work there forever, him and his children after him, and to sell the right to others. It took a good many years to complete this change but when it was done the devil rubbed his hands and switched his tail gently, now this way and now that, saying: "Surely the devil will be to pay!"

And it was so.

Some of the purchasers from the lords found that where they had the right to work they could make a good deal with only a little effort, and others found that where they had the right to work they could only make a little with great effort; and thus it happened that the first and those who bought of them grew rich and the others remained poor. And those that grew rich did just what the lords had done before them; they sold permission to work to the poor who had no charters, and this proved so profitable that they were able themselves to obey the old proclamation against working and yet to live in great comfort. Like the lords from whom they had bought, they were lazy and happy.

But the people were constantly begging to be allowed to work, and the more they begged the less attention was paid to them. And when they did get a chance to work they were not allowed to receive, no matter where they worked or how much they made, any more than the people who had charters to work in the very poorest places in the kingdom. And that was little enough, as every body knew.

Withal the people increased and multiplied, and to help them out of their trouble they invented great machines, which did marvelous work; but neither the people nor the machines could work without permission of a charter owner, and the more the people worked and the more marvelous their machines the more the charter owners charged them for the right to work, until even the machines fell into the hands of a few, and the people could not make new ones, because charters to work had become so valuable that except in the very poorest places only the few were able to buy the right to work, and the poor were trying to hire themselves out. And so it appeared that, happen what might to make work easier and more fruitful, the charter owners got all the benefit.

In these days a prophet arose who told the people that the charter owners had no right to forbid them to work nor any right to make them pay for working. But the charter owners railed at the prophet as a devil (the devil having put it into their heads to do so), saying, "Have we not bought and paid for these charters?"

And then arose a priest who, seeing how the people were oppressed and robbed by the charters, denounced the charters and demanded that they be abolished; but the devil ordered the priest to be put down, and he was put down.

And yet every one marveled that there were so many poor and that the poor increased. But the priests taught that it was not marvelous, for God willed it, whereat the devil again rubbed his hands together and gently switched his tail, now this way, now that, saying to himself, "It won't be long now until the devil is to pay!"

And he was right.

Pretty soon everything was in readiness, and from advising King, and lord and charter owner the devil turned to advising the poor.

"See how the rich revel in the wealth you have created!" he said to them "Why do you not burn and murder and pillage? Is there no manhood in you? Are you slaves?"

But at first the people protested that they were opposed to murder and pillage, and asked why they should not abolish the charters, as the prophet and priest advised, which would need neither murder nor pillage.

"Away with your prophet and your priest!" shouted the devil. "They are in league with the rich. Make no halfway measures! Let there be no compromise! Lay waste! Lay waste! See, I will set you an example," and with that the devil touched the tip of his tail to the palace of a charter owner and instantly it was ablaze; and then the devil's scheme, so patiently planned, culminated. Like rats from their holes rushed a million debased and desperate men. Half famished and all in rags, aiming at nothing and caring for nothing, spurred on by revenge, hitting right and left, burning, killing, plundering, they laid waste the land.

The devil was indeed to pay!

LEWIS FREELAND.

The True Doctrine.

By "land"—as used by Henry George and political economists generally—is meant unimproved land, the unimproved resources of nature which were created by no man, but which are of right the common heritage of the race. This is the "land" in which Henry George, Herbert Spencer, and others deny the right of private property. The value to land which is added by labor is of right the private property of him who creates it, and of this right Henry George is one of the strongest defenders—and this improved value created by labor he would exempt from taxation wholly, putting the whole burden on the unimproved or ground rent values. In other words, he who holds a special privilege in the resources of nature, should pay in taxes to the government, as the trustees of the community, a fair price for this special privilege.—Grand Rapids, Mich., Workman.

Forced To Drop 100 Feet,

What might have resulted in a serious accident accurred to some workmen engaged in building the extension to the Smithfield street bridge. While the James G. Blaine was passing under the bridge, on her way up, her smokestacks came in contact with a platform which swung from the bottom of the bridge. Capt. Cock saw that the boat must strike the platform, and called to the pilot to sound the whistle. The men realized their dangerous position, and got off the platform and caught hold of an old iron bar which runs from pier to pier not a moment too soon, as the smokestack of the Blaine struck the obstuction as the last man stepped off the platform. One of the steamer's stacks was broken in two by the force of the collision, and the swinging platform snapped from its fastenings and fell to the water.

The four men remained hanging by their hands, their only means of rescue being to let go of the stringer and drop to the water below, nearly 100 feet. Several men were attracted and pushed out skiffs to rescue them.

Finally one of the four was compelled to relinquish his hold through exhaustion, falling into the water. He disappeared beneath the water, arose again and tried to swim to the skiff, but before reaching it the little strength which he retained gave out and he sank. He arose for the second time, and the occupants of the skiff succeeded in catching hold of him and pulling him into the boat.

The poor fellow became unconscious, but the rescuers could not give their attention to him, as the other three workmen were still hanging to the iron bar. All three held on for dear life for fully ten minutes, when they could no longer retain their grasp, and one by one they fell to the water and were rescued by the men in the skiff, who were by this time re-enforced by another boat from the shore. The first man who fell soon recovered, and was taken ashore where all four received medical attention on the Brownsville wharfboat. After resting awhile they were sufficiently strong to resume work again.

During the excitement a large crowd gathered on the shore and shouted at the men to do different things, which badly disconcerted them, and if they could have held to their positions a few moments longer they would have been rescued without getting a ducking. The workmen would not give their names, but say it is their own fault, as they should not have blocked the channel with the ladder.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Kilgore's Jump.

Congressman Kilgore, of Texas, tells this story about himself: "During the war, while on furlough, I once pulled up at a cabin in Louisana. There was no one there but a woman. I had $1 in my pocket which I offered to pay her for a chicken which was smoking on the table. She refused to sell, but was willing to wager the chicken against the dollar that she could beat me jumping, I to make the first jump, starting from the doorstep. I took a survey of the very short woman. I was a long-legged cuss, and I put the dollar on the table by the chicken. I then took a position on the doorstep, swung my hands to and fro, pluming for my flight through the air. Then I lit out. By the time I hit the ground and turned to see the woman follow, she had shut the door and fastened it on the inside. The only thing I could see was the muzzle of a double-barreled shot gun."

Stonewall Jackson's Death,

Historians always stop to describe the dying of Wolfe and Montcalm, the two opposing commanders in the battle of Quebec. But their deaths were simply heroic compared with the christian death of Stonewall Jackson.

About 1:30 on the day of his death he was told that he had about two hours to live, and he answered feebly but firmly: "Very good; it is all right."

A few moments before he died he cried out in his delirium: "Order A. P. Hill to prepare for action. Pass the infantry to the front rapidly. Tell Major Hawks —" then stopped, leaving the sentence unfinished.

Presently a smile of ineffable sweetness spread itself over his pale face and then he said quietly and with an expression of relief: "Let us cross over the river and rest under the shade of the trees." And then, without pain or the least struggle, his spirit passed.—Philadelphia Press.

Indiana School Rules.

The following is said to be a literal copy of the rules posted on a schoolhouse door up in the Big Bend country: "Each pupil is required to make a bow on entering the School House of morning, also on leaving of the School Room of evening. There shall be no profain language used in School nor on the play ground nor shall there be no pinsticking, pinchin, scratchin, or no taggin, nor no uneasy Whisperin in School. No pupil shall leve the School house without permission of the Teacher. No uneasy moven from seat to seat. No fitin on the road from nor to School nor no Nick-namin. Every pupil over eight years shall be subjec to these rules, and the teacher is to make allowense for all pupils under eight, and enforse the rules accorden. If any scholar brakes these rules tha shall be punished by switchen."

A Station-Master Astonished.

An amusing incident lately occured on a Southern railroad in England in connection with the Duke of Norfolk and the Marquis of Bute. The Duke and the Marquis were fellow travelers, and when the train stopped at—Station a companion joined them in the person of the station-master himself, who was going for a aunt some twenty miles further up the line. The Duke and station-master, who were both diminutive men and therefore fond of talk, soon got into conversation, while the Marquis—a tall, robust man—was inclined to be reticent, until he found his friend the Duke up to his ears in conversation, when he himself joined, addressing most of his conversation to the stranger.

At length the train arrived at B——, and the Marquis bid a hearty farewell to the Duke, and, with a kindly adieu and a shake of the hand from the stranger, the Marquis quitted the carriage, while his dispatch-box and wraps were secured, to the surprise of the station-master, by a tall, powerful footman, and the train soon glided again out of the station. Silence was not, however, long maintained, the station-master breaking out with the question; "I wonder who that swell was?" "That," replied his companion, "was the Marquis of Bute." The answer seemed to dumbfound the station-master for a time, but presently he exclaimed: "So that were a Marquis, was he? Well, now, I do think it kind of him to talk to two such snobby little chaps as us, don't you?" The Duke nodded his assent, and had a good laugh. When the train drew up again his Grace affably bid his companion "Good-bye," and on alighting on the platform, was received with the greatest deference by a number of Jesuit priests, this incident again setting the station-master the task of inquiry, who inquisitively asked a brother official, "Who that little bloke was?" "That," replied the guard, "Is the Duke of Norfolk." The station-master, after this, declared he would never travel first-class again as long as he lived.

They Weren't His Mules.

I was in the smoking-car of a train on the Louisville & Nashville road running from Decatur to Montgomery, Ala. Just as the train started a man came bouncing in, breathing hard and evidently pretty well tired out. After sitting down for a couple of minutes he rose and came over to me. We were alone in the car.

"Stranger," he said, as he sat down in half of the seat. "I am dead-broke and want you to pay my fare to Guntersville."

"Very well; here's the change, and you can hand it to the conductor."

"Thanks. I see you have an overcoat lying on the seat. Would you have any objection to my slipping it on for five minutes?"

"None at all."

"You are very, very kind. Suppose we exchange hats for a minute?"

"Certainly."

"Now lend me your glasses and that book."

"Here they are."

He had just got settled when the conductor came in. The stranger said: "Guntersville" and handed out the fare, and the official received it and passed out. The man hadn't another word to say until the whistle blew for his station. Then he got out of the overcoat, handed over the other effects, and shook hands and said:

"I can't tell how much I thank you. They weren't two minutes behind me."

"You were fleeing, eh?"

"I ran two miles."

"And the—the cause?"

"Couldn't prove my ownership to a $250 mule team. Good-by, old chap. If you ever go into mules and get brought up short send for me."—Detroit Free Press.

He Found the Bishop.

That others besides boys and girls sometimes make mistakes as to the things they can or cannot do is shown by an anecdote told of happening to a young man who thought he would like to work with the late Bishop Patterson in the islands of the Pacific. The story as told in the New York World, runs as follows:

Mr. A., came from England to be ordained by Bishop Patterson when the headquarters of the mission was at Kohimarama, a few miles from Auckland, on the coast of the land-locked harbor. Soon after his arrival in Auckland he hired a boat to take him to the mission station, there, to his surprise, he found no wharf, no imposing row of buildings, no pier, and he had to wait in the boat until someone could be got to carry him ashore through the water. In response to his shouts a man in a flannel shirt and trousers waded out at last from the shore and "gave a back" to the newcomer, landing him dry on the beach. In answer to inquiries for the bishop's palace, a small building close by was pointed out, and to a further question of "Where is the bishop?" the man in tucked-up pants said, "I am the bishop!"

IN cutting a big cypress tree near Astor, Fla., a living alligator seven feet long was found therein. As the opening in the tree was not half large enough for the 'gator to get through, the presumption is that it crawled in when quite young and lived on other animals and reptiles that sought refuge there.

The Russian government has exiled to Siberia Fathers Dnochovski and Jendrzowski for spreading the Catholic faith.

"Merrily, merrily, shall I live now," the little girl said, "for I'm not to be kept in because of that horrid neuralgia. My mamma has bought a bottle of Salvation Oil from the druggist and it cost only 25 cents a bottle."

New Jersey has a Baptist minister who claims to have baptized more people than any other man in his church. The community in which he resides has been grieved over his stubborn cough that has interfered with his pastoral duties. A physician recommended Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, and consequently there will be baptism in his church next Sunday,

Venezuela asks the good offices and mediation of the United States in settling its boundary dispute with Great Britain.

Left Destitute!

Not of worldly goods, but of all earthly comfort, is the poor wretch tormented by malaria. The fell scourge is, however, shorn of its thong in advance by Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, its only sure preventive and remedy. Dyspepsia, biliousness, constipation, rheumatism, nervousness and kidney complaints are also among the bodily afflictions which this beneficent medicine overcomes with certainty. Use it systematically.

Filemaker, at the American Horse show in Chicago, beat the world's record for high jumping. He cleared the hurdle at 7 feet, 1½ inches.

SYRUP OF FIGS,

Produced from the laxative and nutritious juice of California figs, combined with the medicinal virtues of plants known to be most beneficial to the human system, acts gently, on the kidneys, liver and bowels, effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds and headaches, and curing habitual constipation.

The first session of the fifth annual convention of the Christian workers in the United States and Canada has opened in Boston with a large attendance.

Do your clothes last as they used to? If not, you must be using a soap or washing powder that rots them. Try the good old-fasioned Dobbins' Electric Soap, perfectly pure to-day as in 1865.

Elaborate preparatins are being made in Italy to celebrate the attainment of his majority by the Prince of Naples, heir to the throne, which accurs on the 11th inst.

DR. FRANK POWELL, (White Beaver) will open an office in St. Paul, next Jan. Diseases of women exclusively.

Mr. Gladstone having been tendered a nomination for the office of lord rector of the University of Aberdeen, has felt compelled to decline the honor owing to advancing age.

A WONDERFUL PAPER,

When you were reading the large Prospectus of THE YOUTH'S COMPANION, published last week in our columns, did you stop to consider what a wealth of talent was engaged in producing this remarkable paper? Its success is phenomenal, and it is read in 450,000 families because it is the best of its kind. Now is the time to send your subscription. $1.75 sent at once will secure you the rest of this year free, including all the Holiday Numbers. THE YOUTH'S COMPANION, Boston.

Since the outbreak of cholera in Japan, there have been 38,000 cases and 25,000 deaths. The epidemic has almost subsided.

The Japanese budget for the ensuing year, places the revenue at $80,000,000, and expenditures at about the same amount.

Catarrh in the Head

Originates in scrofulous taint in the blood. Hence the proper method by which to cure catarrh, is to purify the blood. Its many disagreeable symptoms, and the danger of developing into bronchitis or that terribly fatal disease, consumption. are entirely removed by Hood's Sarsaparilla, which cures catarrh by purifying the blood; it also tones up the system and greatly improves the general health. Try the "peculiar medicine."

"For 25 years I have been troubled with catarrh in the head, indigestion, and general debility. I never had faith in such medicines, but concluded to try a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla. It did me so much good that I continued its use till I have taken five bottles. My health has greatly improved, and I feel like a different woman." MRS. J. B. ADAMS, 8 Richmond St., Newark, N. J.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

A Planters Experience.

"My plantation is in a malarial district, where fever and ague prevailed, I employ 150 hands; frequently half of them were sick. I was nearly discouraged when I began the use of

Tutt's Pills

The result was marvellous. My men became strong and hearty, and I have had no furthur trouble. With these pills, I would not fear to live in any swamp." E. RIVAL, Bayou Sara, La.

Sold Everywhere.

Office, 39 & 41 Park Place, New York.

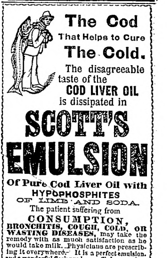
SICK HEADACHE

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Positively cured by these Little Pills. They also relieve Distress from Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Too Hearty Eating. A perfect remedy for Dizziness, Nausea Drowsiness, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Coated Tongue, Pain in the Side. TORPID LIVER. They regulate the Bowels. Purely Vegetable. Price 25 Cents.

CARTER MEDICINE CO., NEW YORK.

Small Pill, Small Dose, Small Price.



The Cod That Helps to Cure The Cold.

The disagreeable taste of the COD LIVER OIL is dissipated in

SCOTT'S EMULSION

Of Pure Cod Liver Oil with HYPOPHOSPHITES OF LIME AND SODA.

The patient suffering from CONSUMPTION, BRONCHITIS, COUGH, COLD, OR WASTING DISEASES, may take the remedy with as much satisfaction as he would take milk. Physicians are prescribing it everywhere. It is a perfect emulsion, and a wonderful flesh producer. Take no other

PATENTS obtained. Fees moderate Information free J. R. Littell Washington D. C

CANCERS Cured without the use of the Knife at the Iola Cancer Infirmary. Iola, Waupaca, Co. Wis. Write for book of treatment.

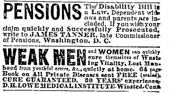
GARFIELD TEA cures Constipation and Sick Headache; restores the Complexion; saves Doctors' Bills. Sold by Druggists.

LADIES can have smaller feet. Solid comfort. Pamphlet free. Sample pkg., 10c. The Pedine Co., New York.

PENSION JOHN W. MORRIS, Washington, D.C. Successfully Prosecutes Claims. Late Principal Examiner U. S. Pension Bureau. 3 yrs in last war, 15 adjudicating claims, atty since.

PENSIONS The Disability Bill is a Law. Dependent widows and parents are included. If you wish your claim quickly and Successfully Prosecuted, write to JAMES TANNER, late Commissioner of Pensions, Washington, D. C.

WEAK MEN and WOMEN can quickly cure themselves of Wasting Vitality, Lost Manhood from youthful errors, &c., quietly at home. 64 page Book on All Private Diseases sent FREE (sealed). CURE GUARANTEED. 30 YEARS' experience. D. H. LOWE MEDICAL INSTITUTE. Winsted, Conn.



Cures in 1 TO 5 DAYS. Guaranteed not to cause Stricture. Mf'd only by the Evans Chemical Co. Cincinnati, Ohio. Trade Mark

I prescribe and fully endorse Big G as the only specific for the certain cure of this disease. G. H. INGRAHAM, M. D., Amsterdam, N. Y.

We have sold Big G for many years, and it has given the best of satisfaction. D. R. DYCHE & CO., Chicago, Ill.

$1.00. Sold by Druggists.

VASELINE.

FOR ONE DOLLAR sent us by mail, we will deliver, free of all charges, to any person in the United States, all the following articles carefully packed in a neat box:

One two ounce bottle of Pure Vaseline. 10cts.
One two ounce bottle Vaseline Pomade, 15 "
One jar of Vaseline Cold Cream..............15 "
One cake of Vaseline Camphor Ice..........10 "
One cake of Vaseline Soap, unscented.....10 "
One cake of Vaseline Soap, sented...........25 "
One two ounce bottle of White Vaseline..25 "
—$1.10

Or for stamps any single article at the price.

If you have occasion to use Vaseline in any form be careful to accept only genuine goods put up by us in original packages. A great many druggists are trying to persuade buyers to take VASELINE put up by them. Never yield to such persuasion, as the article is an imitation without value, and will not give you the result you expect. A bottle of Blue Seal Vaseline is sold by all druggists at ten cents.

Chesebrough M'f'g Co., 24 State St, New York.

Ely's Cream Balm Cures COLD IN HEAD RELIEVES INSTANTLY.

ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren St., New York. Price 50 cts.

THE CURE FOR CATARRH COLD IN HEAD HAYFEVER DEAFNESS HEADACHE ELY'S CREAM BALM 50c

"He had small skill o' horse flesh who bought a goose to ride on." Don't take ordinary soaps for house cleaning. THE PROPER THING is SAPOLIO

Try a cake of it, and be convinced.

Common Soap fails to accomplish satisfactory results in scouring and cleaning, and necessitates a great outlay of time and labor, which more than balances any saving in cost. Practical people will find SAPOLIO the best and cheapest soap for house-cleaning and scouring.

THE VAN DUSEN-HARRINGTON CO.,

GRAIN COMMISSION.

MINNEAPOLIS. - DULUTH.

SELL BY SAMPLE.

Best Prices. Prompt Returns. Write for quotations. Execute orders Chicago, New York or Milwaukee.

PISO'S REMEDY FOR CATARRH.—Best. Easiest to use. Cheapest. Relief is immediate. A cure is certain. For Cold in the Head it has no equal.

CATARRH

It is an Ointment, of which a small particle is applied to the nostrils. Price, 50c. Sold by druggists or sent by mail. Address, E. T. HAZELTINE, Warren, Pa.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

[illegible]

Official Paper of the City

[illegible] Editor and Prop.

Johnny's Ruse.

Johnny Bennett is only 4 years old, but he already believes that what man has done man can do. Not long ago, when his mother was ill, he saw the hall servant admitting a gentleman whom he had never seen before. "But, Mary," he exclaimed, "mamma can't see any one!" The stranger was already half way up the stairs. "I'm the doctor," he remarked, without turning his head.

A few days afterward Johnny and several of his small friends were playing out of doors, when Johnny said, "Let's go and see Lucy Fielding."

"Lucy has the measles. She can't have any visitors. They wouldn't let us in," was the answering chorus.

There was a moment's silence; then Johnny went to the door of the Fielding house, disregarding the remonstrances of the small procession which followed him. Evidently a plan of action had occurred to him. He rang the bell.

"Miss Lucy is ill. You can't"—— began Bella, the servant who opened the door.

But a small figure darted by her and began to climb the stairs, remarking impressively, "I'm the doctor."

Whether or not Bella doubted this statement, she was too much overcome to interfere with Johnny's triumphal progress, and had only just enough presence of mind to shut the door on "the doctor's" friends, who seemed disposed to follow him.—Youth's Companion.

Rest Restores Health.

Weariness is generally a physiological "ebb tide" which time and patience will convert into a flow. It is never well to spur a worn out horse, except in the direst straits. If he mends his pace in obedience to the stimulus every step is a drop drawn from his life blood.

Idleness is not one of the faults of the present age; weariness is one of its commonest experiences. The checks that many a man draws on his physiological resources are innumerable, and as the resources are strictly limited, like any other ordinary banking account, it is very easy to bring about a balance on the wrong side.

One day's holiday in the week and one or two months in the year for those who work exceptionally hard usually bring the credit balance to a highly favorable condition, and thus with care and management physiological solvency is secured and maintained. But a physiological fortune is as good a thing, or even a better thing than a money friend.

Stored resources well invested keep the mind easy and the body youthful. If, however, a man have not these, but only enough of strength to go on steadily from day to day he should watch carefully against excessive weariness. A feeling of prostration is the dark thunder cloud that portends a change in the atmosphere.—Hospital.

A Colony for Idiots.

An agricultural colony for idiots has been established near Kharkov, Russia, on a piece of land of about one hundred acres, which the citizens' council of that government has bought for the purpose from the Countess Shoovalova. Two large pavilions have been built for the accommodation of forty-five men and thirty-five women. Seventy-two patients have already been received there. The land is laid out in gardens, orchards and fields for sowing grain, and the patients will be trained to cultivate them.

The outside appearance of the place is that of a wealthy farm, and the pavilions are fitted out with all that is required for the care and comfort of the patients. Besides agricultural work they will be trained to take care of cattle and fowls and to light manual work, such as spinning and weaving of baskets in the winter time. A staff of three physicians and men and women superintendents have been engaged to take care of the institution.—Chicago Herald.

An Electric Hand Lamp.

A fireman's electric hand lamp is being introduced in England. The battery and lamp are contained in a copper case, similar to a fireman's ordinary lamp, and fitted with a handle for convenience in carrying. Very powerful parabolic reflection is provided, and the lamp, which has a duration of from two to three hours, after which it can easily be recharged, forms an important adjunct to the outfit of a fire brigade. The lamp is also suitable for use in mines, gas works, gunpowder and chemical factories. The advantages claimed for it are portability, facility in charging, capability of resting the battery when the light is not required and extreme safety.—New York Telegram.

The Wheelbarrow Is Ancient.

At present the wheelbarrow is known to be at least 600 years old, and not two centuries, as was at one time supposed. The next step is to show that William the Conqueror carried wheelbarrows with him when he moved his quarters across the channel from Normandy to England in the Eleventh century.—Exchange.

Cure for Bachelors' Eccentricities.

Eccentric bachelors, if you want to be cured of your oddities and become polished Christians, marry! You, sir, with the slouching gait, the pocketed hands, the ill-tailored frame, just pair off with a neat, smart little damsel who has an eye for the picturesque, and before the honeymoon is over she will so transfigure you that you will scarcely know yourself in the looking glass.

"Beauty and the Beast" is no fable. Many a "monster" has been transformed into a gentleman by the necromantic influence of a pretty woman. You, Sir Nimrod, whose talk is of double barrels and setters, of deer shooting on the Adirondacks or moose hunting in the Canada wilds, do you wish to be civilized and socialized? Doubtless you do. Then marry a true gentlewoman, and she will soon make you as gentle and gallant a cavalier as ever shawled a lady at ball or opera. Even the miser may be won from his golden pagod by a generous wife, though it must be confessed that of all eccentricities the greed of riches is the most difficult to eradicate.

The fact is that every eccentric bachelor is like a helmless ship that has yawed more or less out of her proper course. A good wife's advice is the tiller that he needs to bring his head round and steer him safely and happily over the sea of life.—New York Ledger.

ROYAL BACK NUMBERS.

THE KINGS UNCROWNED UNKNOWN AND UNHONORED.

Retired Gentlemen and Genteel Deadbeats All Claiming Thrones—A King Who Is a Waiter—Genuine Blue Blood in Hard Luck—An American King.

A full list of royal and imperial pretenders would include all sorts of people in all sorts of society, from the retired and wealthy nobleman, such as the Comte de Paris, to Orelie, the self styled king of Araucania, who is a sort of genteel deadbeat, and Francesco, the titular king of Armenia, whose royal predecessor was a waiter in Milan, who himself pursues the same honest, if not kingly, occupation in a restaurant at Versailles. As a rule nearly every king nowadays outside of the darkest part of the Dark Continent has a snug sum to his credit in English or American securities, so that in the event of being put out of a job he may have the wherewithal to keep the wolf of poverty from the door.

The Comte de Paris, Bourbon pretender to the throne of France, and now an exile, is worth about two millions of dollars. The bulk of his fortune is in British consols, and he also draws interest on United States bonds.

Prince Jerome Napoleon, the leading representative of the imperial house of Bonaparte, lives in luxurious exile at Prangins, Switzerland. He has a splendid residence there, and owns among his treasures various relics of the Bonaparte family, including an Egyptian saber which the great Napoleon carried in the first of his Italian campaigns. Prince Napoleon is wealthy and ambitious. The Bonapartes as a rule are not in good financial circumstances, and the purse of Prince Jerome is taxed to keep his friends and relatives from need.

REAL PRETENDERS.

The ex-queen of Spain, Isabella, takes life comfortably, even luxuriously, residing in fashionable style in Paris, with occasional trips to Nice and Boulogne.

Italy has a host of pretenders deprived of their toy crowns by the union of the Italian peninsula. Of these the house of Tuscany is the most fortunate, as Austria takes care of them, and the Archduke Francis Salvator has recently married the flower of the imperial family, the Archduchess Valerie. The heir of Bomba's crown of Naples is a quiet, harmless young man, strictly devoted to religion, and without any apparent design upon his ancestral dominions. Indeed the deposed Italian princes generally acquiesce in their fate, as hopeless of any change. All, without exception, are fairly well provided for.

Dom Pedro, the deposed emperor of the Brazils, is the most unhappy of ex-rulers. The death of his wife was a terrible blow to him, and he hungers to be permitted to go back to Brazil to die. As he has never formally renounced his claim to the crown he can fairly be called a pretender. Dom Pedro is far from wealthy. While in circumstances that should dictate close economy, he is so tender hearted that he hesitates to dismiss the retinue that is eating up his substance, and consequently he grows poorer every day. It would not be surprising should the old gentleman be compelled to accept the generosity of republican Brazil.

AN AMERICAN KING.

Few have heard of that other and rather amusing American pretender, resident in Paris, Orelie I, king of the Araucanians. Orelie is a Frenchman, a cheap lawyer, with a taste for adventure. His travels brought him to Chili, in South America. There he made his way by accident or design to a remote section of the republic, where the Araucanian Indians have for ages maintained their independence. He lived among these Indians and won their good will to such a degree that the chieftains elected him king of Araucania, and he was formally crowned with that title. As king Orelie led the Araucanians in forays, more or less successful, against their Chilian neighbors.

When he got tired of the masquerade, which involved some peril, as the Chilians followed the new king up sharply, he started for the coast, reaching it by the way of Peru, and returned to Paris. Here he still calls himself king of Araucania, and he has instituted two or three orders of nobility, which he confers for a consideration. The validity of these orders and his right to bestow them came up not long ago before a Paris tribunal, the point at issue really being whether Orelie was a king or a swindler.

The court decided that, inasmuch as he had been accepted as king by a community which exercised independent rights and which would probably be willing to recognize him again if he could get there, he was justified in using the royal prerogative of conferring orders of nobility. Since this decision the king's business has flourished more than ever, and his decorations go off like buckwheat cakes and maple sirup.

A KING AS WAITER.

The king of Araucania is a good deal more fortunate than poor Francesco of Armenia, to whom I have before alluded. His full name and title is Francesco, king of Armenia, prince of Jerusalem, and hereditary guardian of the Holy Sepulcher. At present his majesty is head waiter in one of the small restaurants that dot the vicinity of Versailles. It is many years since Francesco's ancestors were driven by the Turks from the throne of Armenia; but there can be no doubt of the antiquity and purple blood of the family. Descended from a bold Crusader, they held their kingly rank for ages, until the renewed aggressiveness of the Mohammedans and the decline of Latin power in the east made them fugitives.

Russia for a long time afforded them an asylum, and gave the titular prince a pension. But this was dropped about forty years ago, and since then the royal house of Armenia has had to take its chances with the multitude. The late king was a waiter at Milan; the present king is a waiter at Versailles. Singularly enough the restaurant is one favored by the radicals, and the waiter of the bluest of blood is called on to serve wine and refreshments to the ardent opponents of thrones and titles. Few visitors, however, are aware that the sous they hand to the waiter are thankfully accepted by a king, for Francesco does not parade either his pedigree or his misfortunes.

You may see here in Paris a prince of Georgia driving a cab, and one of the best police agents in a scion of the royal house of Poland. To go through the roll of royal pretenders would occupy much time and space. It is probably longer than that of monarchs who have crowns on their heads.—Paris Cor. Chicago Herald.

Genuine Turkish Rugs.

Smith—Well, Pat, what are you doing for a living now?

Pat—Begorrah, I have an illigant job on the Bowery makin' genuwine Turkish [illegible]

[illegible] the mother [illegible] as they [illegible] can't carry Johnnie [illegible] supporting under his head and looked ready to drop. She was twice as big as he.

"John, you are selfish. Johnnie is tired to death."

"So am I. He can wake up and walk."

"He cannot. He has been running in the sand all day and is worn out."

"Yes, and I've been running after him."

"If you wake him up he will cry."

"Let him cry."

"Let that poor child cry? Haven't you any feeling for your own son?"

"I should think I have. He weighs enough to inspire me with feeling. I positively won't carry him."

"You will."

"If you don't take him I will drop him, and he can cry his lungs out."

"If you drop him I will take him in my arms, sit down on that step and not budge an inch."

"But I won't carry him. I can't."

"John Henry Smith, don't you tell me that you can't carry that dear boy. If you put him down and wake him up you will be turned out of the house to-night. You can spend the night in the streets and see how you like it. Don't you dare to put Johnnie down."

John Henry Smith was open to argument, for he did not put the dear boy down.—New York Tribune.

A Familiar Face.

When Congressman Thomas W. Updegraff was making a speech at Canton, O., in 1878 he was frequently interrupted by a man in the audience who shouted, "What about resumption?"

Finally Mr. Updegraff said: "There are a great many people in the country who are raising a terrific to-do about resumption. They talk about it as if it had teeth and claws and a hooked tail. My friend over there wants me to talk about resumption. I will tell him a story. A very worthy old lady, who had spent all her life on a farm in the Western Reserve, visited the state fair for the first time last year. Her son took her around and she admired the sights.

"Presently they came to a tent on which was placarded an invitation to the public to enter and behold a most wonderful bird —'the Melanerpes Erythrocephalus'—for the small price of ten cents. The old lady persuaded her son to take her in. She found an old friend in the small bird within a big cage. She repressed her emotion until they were outside the canvas again, and then she said with great emphasis, 'Why, John, that ain't nothin' but a red-headed woodpecker.'" — Pittsburg Dispatch.

A Great Preacher's Cradle.

The old cradle. We all rocked at that.

For fifteen years the cradle was going much of the time. When the elder child was taken out the smaller child was put in. The crackle of the rockers is yet pleasant in my ears.

There I took my first lessons in music as mother sang to me. I have heard what people would call far better singing since then, but none that so thoroughly touched me. She never got $500 per night for singing two or three songs at the Academy, with two or three encores grudgingly thrown in, but without pay she sometimes sang all night and came out whenever encored, though she had only two little ears for an audience. It was in a low, subdued tone, that sings to me yet across more than forty years.

The edge of the rocker was worn quite deep. That was where her foot was placed when she sat with her knitting or sewing on a summer afternoon, while the bees hummed at the door and the shout of the boy at the oxen was heard afield.—Dr. Talmage in New York Journal.

An Actor's Coincidence.

The following instance may be regarded by the superstitious as sufficient warning against all jests on such a grim subject as grim death. It is related by Bolton, the English actor and author. Sim Reeves, the famous tenor, was once playing Squire in the "Mother Goose" pantomime, and at the very moment he was walking off the stage singing,

> My wife is dead, there let her lie,
> She's at rest and so am I,

a man tapped him hurriedly on the shoulder and whispered, "Sorry to tell you, Mr. Reeves, that Mrs. Reeves is dead. Mrs. Balyntyne directs me to tell you to come home immediately." Reeves was completely prostrated by the suddenness of the announcement, and was first to notice the odd coincidence that connected the little wayward song with his wife's death.—St. Louis Republic.

A Very Old Horse.

"Old Kate," a horse burned to death in Cincinnati, was, her owner alleges, 45 years old. She was born in Wales of thoroughbred stock. She was shipped to Canada in 1846, being only a yearling. The voyage had a bad effect upon her, and the importer sold the stunted colt to a farmer, who kept her until she was 8 years old, when she began to grow.

The farmer sold her to Hugh Morgan, a lumber dealer of this city, and he kept her up to his death, in 1861. She was of a jet black at that time, and served as a carriage horse. At Mr. Morgan's death the mare went to Mr. Lanning, who ran a planing mill on Canal street. He in turn sold her to a fish and oyster dealer on Linn street, and it was of this man her last owner bought her seven years ago. She was then 38 years old, but lively as a kitten.—Cincinnati Times-Star.

The Queen of England's Table Linen.

Her majesty's table linen is still made by hand; indeed all the finest linen is so. The queen's tablecloth has for its center the Star of the Garter, bearing in its midst the royal arms, and having woven on the larger rays of the star the names of the great dependencies of the crown, and on the lesser rays the names of the smaller dependencies, while the border is formed of the rose, shamrock and thistle entwined, and the crown imperial appears in the corners.—Dry Goods Chronicle.

Only in Figures.

Every time a cow moves her tail to switch a fly she exerts a force of three pounds. In the course of the summer a single cow wastes 6,000,000 pounds of energy. The cows of America throw away power enough to move every piece of machinery in the world. This is exclusive of kicking milkmaids off the stools.—Detroit Free Press.

Wouldn't Do.

Committee Man (to public school teacher)—We was thinkin' of puttin' up a nice motto over your desk to encourage the children. How would "Knowledge Is Wealth" do?

School Teacher—That wouldn't do. The children know how small my salary is.—[illegible]

A PECULIAR DISEASE.

A MAN WHO IS ALWAYS TEN SECONDS AHEAD OF HIMSELF.

His Nerves Are Awry, and He Always Acts One-Sixth of a Minute After He Ought—He Is a Neighbor of Jay Gould and Is Very Wealthy.

I was walking down Forty-seventh street the other day, attentively regarding Jay Gould's new parlor curtains, when the door of a house very near his opened, and a fine looking, middle aged gentleman stepped out, walked deliberately out to the edge of the brown stone steps and fell headlong into the street.

An instant later a colored man rushed out of the house, ran down the steps and lifted the fallen one, saying as he did so: "You should not venture out alone, sir. You know you have fallen so many times."

Now this was more remarkable than the fact that Jay Gould had new window curtains, so I at once transferred my attention. Was he an invalid? Surely not, with such a color and such a physique. Ah, I had it. He was a victim of the disease called locomotor ataxia, so named, a flippant medical student once said, "because when it attacks you, you can't locomote." But when the gentleman began to ascend the steps he walked with a step that was perfectly firm and steady, though very deliberate.

I was wrong again, for people afflicted with the above mentioned disease have a wobbly, uncertain gait that is painful. By this time the object of my attention had entered the house, the door was closed, and as there was nothing particularly communicative about the closed front of a stone house I was not likely to have my curiosity satisfied.

A REMARKABLE AFFLICTION.

But fortune favors even the ubiquitous news gatherer sometimes. As I stood waiting—I knew not for what—a carriage drove up, a doctor's carriage, and from it stepped the eminent physician Dr. Davis, a man skilled above his fellows in the treatment of nervous diseases.

The next day, during the doctor's first office hour, I called upon him.

The learned man was very non-committal until I explained to him that I had at one time been a student of medicine, and was therefore entitled to know whatever he could tell me that would be of benefit.

Thus reassured Dr. Davis proceeded to explain the nature of his patient's strange malady.

"It is a case of great interest," said he, "to every man in the profession who knows anything of it. There is not another case on record that is the least like it. The disease of this gentleman, whom I will call Mr. Andrews, is an affection of the nervous system resulting from injuries received years ago in a railway accident. It is of a nature that has no parallel in medical history.

"Those nerves which telegraph to the brain the sensations of touch, taste, smell, hearing and sight are so deranged that the transmission of sense is not, as in a healthy person, instantaneous. As nearly as we can calculate five seconds elapse before Mr. Andrews is conscious of any sensation, and five seconds more before he can make any response.

"The medical man is baffled in this case for the reason that this affliction manifests itself only in those movements of the body that require conscious direction from the brain. Actions which are termed involuntary, such as winking or gaping, are performed the same as by a well person, and that makes it a question whether it is the nerves or certain portions of the brain that are affected.

HE ENJOYS EXCELLENT HEALTH.

"Mr. Andrews is in perfect physical condition. He eats heartily, sleeps well, and has an unimpaired digestion. Nor is he fully alive to the terrible possibilities of his position.

"Think of going through life ten seconds ahead of yourself! There is scarcely any calculating the things which might happen."

Mr. Andrews is a rich man fortunately, and therefore can keep an attendant constantly with him, so that as yet he has experienced no serious injury. He never knows when he is approaching an obstacle or a danger. As in the case of his falling down the steps when his belated sight deceives him just so it is when a cab or a car approaches him. He neither hears nor sees them until five seconds after any one else would, and it is another five seconds before he can guide his movements by means of thought and get away.

When he is walking the action becomes mechanical, but he is constantly ahead of where he seems to be, and in order to find out exactly where he is he has to stop and catch up with himself.

When he converses with those about him it is a very peculiar fact that when a question is put to him it is ten seconds before he responds. Now this might be very embarrassing.

Suppose, on the other hand, a man were to take from him his watch; before he would have the power of preventing him or before he could give any alarm the thief might be far and away, indeed he might be away before the man could know that he had been robbed. A friend salutes him on the street, but he does not see the salutation until it is too late to respond, and of course the friend thinks he has been snubbed.

When Mr. Andrews first recovered from his accident he used to attend the theatre. His taste was for comic opera and melodrama. But he does not go any more. The peculiar manifestations of his malady caused much embarrassment to his friends who accompanied him. Appreciation of jokes and ludicrous situations came to him just ten second after everybody else. His hearty laugh would not be noticed in a general chorus. But his explosive ha ha's when the audience was quiet were startling.—New York Press.

The Pride of Matrimony.

In his recently published "Trials of a Country Parson" Dr. Jessup tells some amusing anecdotes picked up in Arcady. As thus: It is very shocking to a sensitive person to hear the way in which the old people speak of their dead wives or husbands exactly as if they'd been horses or dogs. They are always proud of having been married more than once. "You didn't think, miss, as I'd had five wives, now, did you? Ah, I have, though—leastways I buried five on 'em in the churchyard, that I did—and tree on 'em bewtles!"

On another occasion I playfully suggested: "Don't you mix up your husbands now and then, Mrs. Page, when you talk about them?" "Well, to tell you the truth, sir, I really du! But my third husband, he was a man! I don't mix him up. He got killed fighting—you've heerd tell o' that, I make no doubt? The others warn't nothing to him. He'd ha' mixed them up quick enough if they'd interfered wi' him. Lawk ha! He'd 'a' made nothing of them!"

Things Worth Remembering.

That it is dangerous to stand near a tall tree or spire during a thunder storm.

That the southwest corner of the cellar is the "cyclone safety point."

That there is no medicine so universally applicable to sickness as fresh air and sunshine."

That blowing out the gas before retiring is funny—to every one except the one who tries it.

That you may swear as hard as you please but it will not remove grease spots.

That the Wisconsin Central is the most popular line between Minneapolis and St. Paul and Milwaukee and Chicago.

That its fast train leaves Minneapolis daily at 6:25 p. m., St. Paul at 7:15 p. m., with through Pullman sleepers, arriving in Milwaukee at 7:27 and Chicago at 9:50 the following morning, serving breakfast in dining car.

That before starting on a trip always get information from some reliable ticket agent, and that nowhere will such information be more cheerfully given than at the city ticket offices of the Wisconsin Central, No. 19, Nicollet House block, Minneapolis, and 162 East 3d st, cor. Jackson, St. Paul. Address letters to Chas. E. Dixon, acting city passenger and ticket agent, St. Paul, F. H. Hanson, Gen. Northwestern Pass. agent, Minneapolis, or Louis Eckstein, Assistant General Passenger and Ticket agent, Milwaukee.

RALPH & BOURDON,

Proprietors of the

CITY

DRAY

LINE.

WOOD & COAL

Anything in our line done

Promptly and at very

Reasonable

Rates.

GIVE US A CALL

TONSORIAL HALL!

N. MORISETTE, Prop.

Everything First Class!

SHAVING,

HAIR-CUTTING,

SHAMPOOING!

☞ Shaving 15 cents.

Haircutting 25 cents. ☜

Main Street. - - Red Lake Falls.

Roller Mill "B"

BEST PATENT	$2.25
BEST STRAIGHT	2.00
SECOND "	1.75
FAMILY BAKER'S	1-40
GRAHAM	2.00
RYE FLOUR	2.00
MIDDLINGS	1.00
SHORTS	.55
BRAN	.45
BEST GROUND FEED	.80
2d " "	.65

Fine corn meal per pound, 2½c.

MAJERES BROS.

Proprietor of the

City Meat Market.

A full line of market supplies, such as

BEEF, PORK,
MUTTON, POULTRY
AND SAUSAGE.

A first class meat market where everything is kept as clean as can be.

Main, near 1st st - - Red Lake Falls

JOHN WATSON,
PHYSICIAN & SURGEON,

Office in residence, Sixth street, Red Lake Falls, Minn. 4-6

VIOLINS, GUITAR, BANJOS' FINEST Assortment, Largest Stock, Lowest Prices, Best Strings for all instrument, assorted to suit, $1,50 per dozen, postpaid. Cash with order. Anything in the music line sent to any part of the United States. Write to Allmendinger Piano And Organ Company, Ann Arbor, Mich.

Orders from teachers and the profession solicited. Live Agents wanted for our [illegible]

NORTHERN PACIFIC
RAILROAD

The New Dining Car Route
BETWEEN

WINNIPEG,
GRAFTON,
GRAND FORKS,
RED LAKE FALLS,
ST. PAUL,
MINNEAPOLIS,
DULUTH,
AND ALL POINTS EAST.

The Direct line to
MONTANA, IDAHO,
WASHINGTON TERRITORY,
OREGON, BRITISH COLUMBIA
PUGET SOUND AND ALASKA.

EXPRESS TRAINS DAILY.

To which are attached Pullman Palace Sleeping and Elegant Dining Cars. On overland trains, Emigrant Sleepers Free. The only line to the Yellowstone Park.

All trains daily.
Pullman Palace Sleeping Cars between Grand Forks and St Paul. Dining cars on all trains
Coupon tickets on sale to all points Southeast and West.
For further information regarding rates, routes, maps, etc., address

CHAS. S. FEE,
G. P. & T. Agt.,
St. Paul, Minn.

J. A. DUFFY
Local A.gt

Green Bay,
Winona
& St. Paul

Railroad. Best and most Direct Line
Between

LaCROSSE,
WINONA,
Neillsville,
Eau Claire,
Grand Rapids,
Stevens Point,
New London,
Appelton,
Neenah,
Menasha,
Oshkosh,
Fon du Lac,
GREEN BAY,

And all Points in
EASTERN WISCONSIN,
Iron Districts of Northern Michigan and Lake Superior Regions.

Close Connections and Quick Time.

See That Your Ticket Reads Via
GREEN BAY, WINONA & ST. PAUL
Railroad.

S. W. Champion,
Superintendent, Green Bay, Wis.
J. B Last,
Ass't Gen. Pass. Agt., Green Bay, Wis.

$100,000

To Loan on Farms

—AT—

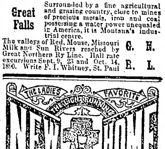
10 pr Cent

Interest. No bonus—no delay, at

THE FIRST NAT. BANK

Red Lake Falls - - Minn.

Homeseekers will find the last of the public domain of agricultural and grazing value along the Great Northern Ry in North Dakota and Montana.	FREE LANDS.
New Towns	100 or more, along the Great Northern Railway Line. Business chances. Write F. I. Whitney, St. Paul, Minn., for Books, Maps, etc. Write now.
Settlers on Free government lands along the Great Northern Railway Line in North Dakota and Montana get low rates and fine markets for products.	Low Rates
Hunting, Fishing	Finest resorts in America along the Great Northern Ry. Line in Minnesota, Dakotas and Montana. Best climate for health seekers.
Montana produces the finest horses and cattle. Free ranges yet in the Mouse, Milk and Sun River Valleys and Sweet Grass Hills.	Horses, Cattle
Health, Wealth	In Montana. Free Lands, New Towns New Railways, New Mines, Low Rates. Largest area of good, vacant land.
Sweet Grass Hills, Milk and Sun River Valleys, Montana, reached only by the Great Northern Railway Line. The stock raisers' paradise.	Sheep Hogs
Gold, Coal	The Regions tributary to the Great Northern Railway Line in Montana produce all the precious and baser metals. New towns and railways are being built.
Go to the Great Reservation of Montana and get a good free homestead. Low rates and free sleepers on Great Northern R'y Line. Go now.	Milk River
Herds, Mines.	These have made Montana the richest state per capita in the Union. Plenty of room for more miners and stock raisers.
Along the Great Northern Line in Montana are free ranches and pasturage, mines of precious metal, iron and coal, and new cities and towns. Now is your opportunity.	Young Man
Great Falls	Surrounded by a fine agricultural and grazing country, close to mines of precious metals, iron and coal possessing a water power unequaled in America, it is Montana's industrial centre.
The valleys of Red, Mouse, Missouri Milk and Sun Rivers reached by Great Northern Ry Line. Half rate excursions Sept. 9, 23 and Oct. 14, 1890. Write F. I. Whitney, St. Paul	G. N. R. L.



THE LADIES' FAVORITE

NEW HOME

THE FINEST WOODWORK

THE BEST ATTACHMENTS

28 UNION SQUARE, N.Y.

ATLANTA, GA.

ST. LOUIS, MO.

Railroad [illegible]

	LEAVE	PASSENGER	ARRIVE
	P. M.
	8.00	St. Paul	[illegible]
	8:35	Minneapolis	[illegible]
	8:00	Duluth	[illegible]
	8:30	Ashland	[illegible]
WAY	8:30 a	Wadena	12:01	WAY
FREIGHT	A. M.		P. M.	FREIGHT
1:00 p m	6:25	[illegible]	9:50	5:00 a. m.
2:55 "	7:35	Twin Valley	8:25	[illegible] pm
4:22 "	8:22	Fertile	7:11	8:5[illegible] "
6:90 "	9:20	RED LAKE FALLS	6:3[illegible]	7:27 "
2:00 "	9:40	Crookston	6:00	10:00 am
7:42 "	10:10	Buffington	5:59	5:55 p m
8:30 "	10:55	Grand Forks	4:45	5:00 "
DAILY	P. M.		P. M.	DAILY
	12:50	Grafton	2:15
	2:45	Pembina	12:55
	5:30	WINNIPEG, Man.	10:05

All trains daily.

The NEWS has prepared a grand benefit for its readers. We are desirous of adding new names to our subscription list, and settling up with those already there. A grand inducement is offered in the following proposition: Every person who pays up all arrearages on subscription and one year in advance, will be given a ticket in the drawing of the following articles: Four beautiful steel engravings, valued at from $15 to $20 each, the size being 3½x2½ feet, and one new gig, valued at $20. Each ticket has the chance of winning one of these grand prizes, the aggregate value of which is nearly $100. Not content with the above magnificent offer, the NEWS presents FREE, to its farmer friends who take advantage of the above offer and request it. The American Farmer, a farm magazine. To those who desire one of the very best American magazines at a greatly reduced price, we offer the Cosmopolitan, (if the premium offer is accepted) at $1.50 cents, the regular price being $2.40. You can hardly afford to let this opportunity pass. It is open for a month.

ECHOES OF THE RAPIDS

Jimmy Brady was riding horseback yesterday. His horse stumbled, feel, and threw him, thereby injuring his leg.

Merriam is elected by a little over 1,000 majority.

J. Z. Perron and E. H. Draper went to Red Lake this week.

Deer stories seem to be in order. One man says he killed two with an ax. They had been fighting, gotten their horns entangled and were fast together. Another man choked two to death.

Rev. Ig. Balluff officiates at Euclid again Sunday. This is the last till spring.

Some of the boys in town have been gaining renown as hunters. Hec Langevin and Murray Sanders went out for a few hours Monday and brought back two deer, shot only a couple of miles from town. E. E. Fletcher has shot six the past two weeks and John Thompson one. It seems almost incredible that deer are so plentiful such a short distance from town.

The republican and democrats of Polk county are at present engaged in that great past political industry of sawing wood and saying nothing.

Gov. Merriam is to be congratulated for the splended run he made with odds so much against him.

H. M. Ames, the Terrebonne miller, was in town yesterday. He reports business good at his mill.

Rufus Poirier and wife rejoice over the arrival of a young heir.

The grand opening engagement at the new Metropolitan theatre at Grand Forks was the event of the week there and in a large radius of neighboring territory beside. The Emma Abbot company, with their elevated prestige, their tuneful voices, grand wardrobe, homely girls and glittering diamonds, first tread the boards at the Metropolitan Theatre, opening one of the coziest, and most nearly perfect opera houses outside of the seven great cities. The opera, Rose of Castile, was presented. This opera gives full scope to the grand abilities of the company, and especially to Abbott, whose powers as a songster were brilliantly displayed. No doubt she merits and has earned her fame. Her voice is marvellous, almost above the comprehension of the ordinary mortal, and yet to hear it in some of those delicious cadences that demand its full possibilities, is a pleasure almost painful in its intensity. Of the others in the cast, Lizzie Annandale and Wm. Broderick are accorded high ecomiums. If Michelena receives them as a tenor, we must say emphatically that he does not deserve them in the slightest degree. As a chorus singer or a fair baritone he would pass; but as a tenor supposed to compare with Miss Abbott's soprano, he is abominable, simply ludicrous, and we cannot conceive the object of retaining him. As a whole, we suppose this company's productions are entitled to the verdict of grandeur which accorded them.

The party from Red Lake Falls that went with the excursion to Grand Forks Tuesday [illegible] was small, but sprightly [illegible] very [illegible] of the trip [illegible] Metropolitan [illegible] reached Grand Forks [illegible] comprising the party were, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Smith, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Spillane, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Marshall, Mrs. John Duffy, Misses Tilise Kaufer, Lizzie A. Boyle, Musetta Fletcher, Mollie Duffy, Louisa Ralph; Messrs. Jos. Paradis, Hector Langevin, Phil Kaufer, Louis Labissonniere, James Mead, Fred Lowe, Tellesfore Brunelle and J. Stacey. Mr. Sprague and Miss Maria Ralph should have been numbered with the excursionists, but owing to a misunderstanding as to time of starting were late for the train. As it was through Mr. Sprague's efforts that the train was procured, this was doubly regretted. The number taking advantage of the excursion was very small, but there had been no definite understanding in the matter, which accounted for it.

Terrebonne.

Merriam received one vote here.

Election is over and universal peace reigns over the victors and the vanquished.

Give us the Australian system. If the newest party is the party of reform, they should not shove men up to the polls and vote them.

Nemo got in his hand as one of the clerks of election, and helped to count a vote for every candidate on the state ticket except the prohibitionist.

On the 16th we are to have the holy bread given by Mr. Leo Laurent. The sponsors are the Misses Mathilda Cromp, Annie Montpetrit and Ida Champoux. The names of the gentlemen wh will accompany the ladies are as yet unknown. The giving of the holy bread is a rare ceremony in this country, I believe. The mass of Bordeaux will be celebrated with accompaniment of orchestra. The high mass will be sung by Rey. Father Guillaume, of Lambert, who will also give the sermon for the occasion. In that case Rev. Fr. Feige will preside at the organ and lead the choir. The three days following, 17, 18 and 19, the fair, announced before, will take place. Several beautiful articles will be raffled. Among hundreds of others we see a cutter valued at $30, a fur cape (the gift of Bangs & Co.,) valued at $17, a shovel plow valued at $16, a harness, etc., etc. There are $200 worth of articles. A 16 shot carabine will be voted to the most popular gentleman. Messrs X. Sauve and August Moreau are the candidates There will be various amusements every night. By appearances, those four days the 16, 17th, 18th and 19th, will be a grand success for our beloved Father Feige. Come one, come all.

NEMO.

Council Proceedings.

Council meeting Nov. 3. 1890.

All members present except J. A. Duffy. Minutes of last meeting were read and approved.

On motion the bid of P. & J. Meehan for building sidewalk on south side of 5th street was rejected and that the recorder be instructed to advertise for new bids to build said sidewalk.

On motion the account of Jos Helm for $8.72 was allowed out of general fund.

Council adjourned to meet in two weeks.

Special meeting Nov. 1 1890.

Members present Schreiter, Langevin and Davis.

Minutes of last meeting were read and on motion an ordinance regulating village auctioneers license was adopted making the license $10 per annum and the number of auctioneers limited to two. Ayes, Langevin, Schreiter and Davis. Noes none.

On motion the resignation of J. M. Boyle as village attorney was accepted. J. A. Duffy entered and took his seat in council.

On Motion the Recorder was instructed to draw an order for $15. on the general fund in favor of J. M. Boyle as salary to date.

On motion the recorder was instructed to draw an order on the poor fund in favor of Mrs. Kings for $5.

On motion the Recorder was instruted to draw an order for $90 interest at 7 per cent from July 1st 1890, to pay interest on three R. R. Bonds now in 1st National bank.

On motion council abjourned to meet in one week.

Remarkable Rescue

Mrs. Mitchel Curtain, Plumfield, Ill., makes the statement that she cought cold which settled on her lungs; she was treated for a month by her famiy physician, but grew worse. He told her she was a hopeless victim of consumption and that no medicine could cure her. Her druggist suggested Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption; she bought a bottle and to her delight found herself benefited from first dose. She continued its use and after taking ten bottles, found herself sound and well, now does her own housework and is as well as she ever was Free trial bottle of this great discovery at Schrieters Drug Store, large bottles 50c. and $1 00

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by W. A. Schreiter.

A Present to our Subscribers.

It is with pleasure that we announce to our many patrons that we have made arrangements with that wide-awake, illustrated farm magazine, the American Farmer, published at Fort Wayne, Ind., and read by nearly 200,000 farmers by which that great publication will be mailed direct, FREE, to the address of any of our subscribers who will come in and pay up all arrearages on subscription and one year in advance from date, and to any new subscriber who will pay one year in advance. This is a grand opportunity to obtain a first-class farm journal free. The American Farmer is a large 16-page journal of national circulation, which ranks among the leading agricultural papers. It treats the question of economy in agricultnre and the rights and privileges of that vast body of citizens—American Farmers—whose industry is the basis of all material and national prosperiy. Its highest purpose is the elevation and ennobling of Agriculture through the higher and broader education of men and women engaged in its pursuits. The regular subscription price of the American farmer is $1.00 per year. IT COSTS YOU NOTHING. From any one number ideas can be obtained that will be worth thrice the subscripion price to you or members of your household, YET YOU GET IT FREE. Call and see sample copy.

A Good Offer.

Do you read The Cosmopolitan, that bright, sparkling young magazine? The cheapest illustrated monthly in the world. 25 cents a number. $2.40 per year. Enlarged, October, 1889, to 128 pages. The Cosmopolitan is literally what the New York Times calls it, "At its price, the brightest, most varied and best edited of the magazines." An unusual opportunity for new subscribers for one year only:

The Cosmopolitan, per year....	$2 40
The NEWS, per year............	1 50
The price of both..............	3 90
We will furnish both for only....	3 00

This offer is only to new subscribers to the Cosmopolitan, and only for one year. Tha Boston Journal says "It has more articles in each number that are readable, and fewer uninteresting pages, than any of its contemporaries." The Cosmopolitan for the first time in magazine literature, a splendidly illustrated Periodical at a price hitherto deemed impossible. Try it for a year. It will be a liberal educator to every member of the household. It will make the nights pass pleasantly. Send $3.00 to this offite and secure both the Cosmopolitan and the NEWS.

The Queen Pays All Expenses

The Queens last free Trip to Europ having excited such universal interes ts the publishers of that popular magazine offer another and $200 for expenses to the person sending them the largest list of English words constructed from letters containing the three words British North America. Additional prizes consist ing of Silver Tea Sets, China Dinner Sets, Golb Watches, French Music Boxes' Portier Curtians, Silk Dresses Mantel Flakes and many other useful and valuable articles will also be awarded in order of merit. A special prize of a Seal Skin jacket to the lady, and a handsome Shetland Pony to boy or girl (delivered free in Canada or United States) sending the largest lists Everyone sending a list of twenty words will recieve a presen send six U. S. stamps for complete rules, illustrated catalogue of prizes, and sample numbers of the Queen. Address The Canadian, Queen Toronto, Canada.

Do you know it is less than two weeks to Thanksgiving? If you have forgotton it your wife and children have not. "She" has already made up a mentle programme for the dinner that day, and interviewed frequently the butcher, baker and grocer, while the kids have nightly dreams of pie and pudding in mountains. This is on the supposition that your thanksgiving will be spent at home. But if have an old father and mother somewhere why not visit them then? Your wife would like to go to the home of her girlhood and sit with father and mother, brothers and sisters, in the evening firelight from the old hearthstone. Why don't you drop business for a few days and take her to a re-union? Do so, and remember that wherever you may wish to go, "The Burlington either by its own line or its connections, reaches any city, town or village you can name. It is the fast line the best line, the comfortable line, the vestibuled line, the dining car line, the direct line. For any information, apply to nearest railroad agent or write to W. J. C. Kenyon Gen. Pass. Agent C. B.&N. C.R. St. Paul Minn.

Had Merriam been defeated soreheads would have reason to rejoice. As it is they will go down in history with a political scab on their respective craniums. Their offspring will point back to them with a degree of pride akin to that with the mule looks upon his ancestry.

Proposals For Bids,

Bids will be received by the recorder of the village of Red Lake Falls until Wednesday Nov 19th, 1890 at 12 o'clock for building a sidewalk of one inch boards four feet wide nailed on three 2x6 stringers and probaly blocked.

Said sidewalk to be built from a point on south side of 5th street 56 feet east of Kretzschmars avenue west to main street of O. E. Buses addition excepting there from such portions of sidewalk as has already been built by the lot owners, them selves. The right to reject any or all bids is hereby reserved

Dated Red Lake Falls Nov 11 1890.

H. B. DAVIS
Recorder

Ordinance No. 23.

Regulating the licensing of auctioneers and limiting their number.

The common council of the village of Red Lake Falls do ordain.

Section 1. That the amount of auctioneers licence in the village of Red Lake Falls, be fixed at ten dollars per annum.

Section 2. That the number of auctioneers for the remainder of the ensuing year be limited to two.

Section 3. That all acts or parts of acts or ordinance in consistence herewith are hereby repealed. This ordinace shall be inforce and take effect on and after its adoption.

Adopted November 10th. 1890.

H. B. Davis,
Recorder.

Improved Passenger Service

Under the new time schedule of "the North-Western Line," C,. St. P.,M. & O.Ry., all passenger trains of this line make the trip between St. Paul and Chicago in less than 14 hours.

The Pullman and Wagner Vestibuled Limited, leaving St. Paul at 7:30 p. m. makes the trip to Chicago in 13½ hours and from Chicago to St.Paul in 13 hours and 25 minutes.

The Daylight Express leaving St Paul at 7;45 a. m. makes the trip to Chicago in 13 hours and 50 minutes and from Chicago to St. Paul in 13 hours and 45 minutes.

This is the only line running all its trains in less than 14 hour between St. Paul and Chicago, and while this time is quick trains don't have to run at as high speed to make their time as on other lines, because this is shorter than any other line.

In addition to these facts this is the only line by which connections are assure in Chicago with all fast line trains from Chicago to the East and South in the morning and at night.

Note.—Fares by this line are always as low as by any other.

For Map Folder of the line address T. W. TEASDALE, Gen'l Passenger Agent St. Paul, Minn.

To Stock Owners.

Horses' Teeth, The Cause of Numerous Diseases and Disagreeable Habits.

Horses having diseased teeth are hard to keep in condition, and if poor it is impossible to fatten them. After having undergone my treatment they become good condition.

More horses are blind from diseased and sharp-edged and irregular molars than from all other causes. By my operation on their teeth I have saved many horses from going blind,

Many diseases can be cured and disagreeable habits overcome by my operation on the horses' teeth. I have cured them of coughing, drooling, stopping short, starting suddenly, frothing, loss of flesh, weak eyes, and especially from driving on one rein or pulling. I remove all rough edges from their molars and level the mouth, thereby enabling the horses to properly masticate his food Improper grinding of food produces indigestion, and indigestion produces hidebound, swollen limbs, staring or dead-like coat of hair and loss of appetite. Young as well as old horses require this operation,

I will visit any point when a sufficient number of horses are ready to be operated upon, and am always ready to explain my method to any one interested in the welfare of his horses.

My prices are reasonable, and my operation prolongs the life of the horse.

Yours Truly,
DR. I. TURCOT.

Happy Hoosier.

Wm. Timmons, Postmaster of Idaville Ind., writes: "Electric Bitters has done more for me than all other medicines combined, for that bad feeling arising from Kidney and Liver trouble." John Leslie, farmer and stockman of same place says: "find Electric bitters to be the best Kidney and Liver medicine made me feel like a new man," J. W. Gardner hardware merchant, same town says: Electric Bitters is just the thing for a man who is all run down and don't care whether he lives or dies; he found new strength, good appetite and felt just like he had a new lease on life. Only 50c a bottle at Schreiters.

Cash paid for barley, oats, flax, hides, pelts. All kinds of coal for sale—at Hoskins & Co's elevator.

41 W. T. SPILLANE.

Mr. Owen in his interview says the Red River Valley was very partisan before election. He might have added, and very Norwegian siore.

A teacher holding a first grade certificate would like to secure a school, to begin after the 20th of Nov. Address or inquire at this office.

Mr. C. P. Demers was in town yesterday and received advice from auditor McGuire of his election to the office of county commissioner. Mr. Demers made a splendid and successful run notwithstanding the fact that some of his alliance friends traded him on election day, as they thought, for their own benfit. He got there just the same and will make a competent and trustworthy representative of the whole people.

School report for month ending Oct.31 The figures after each name denote, respectively, present membership, average daily attendance, cases of tardiness, not absent or tardy, number of visitors:

Mr. Hortvet,......	27,	21,	6,	6,	1.
Miss Fairweather,..	40,	42,	3,	11,	1.
Miss Duffy......	25,	20,	4,	0,	3.
Miss Boyle......	42,	35,	11,	5,	5.
Mrs. Emard,......	50,	40,	1,	18,	2.

P. Paradis, a brother of Joe Paradis, is in the city, from Minneapolis to spend the winter.

State of Minnesota, county of Polk, ss.
District Court, fourteenth judicial district.
Winnie Eason, plaintiff, against Theodore Eason, defendant.

The State of Minnesota, to the above-named defendant,

You are hereby summoned and required to answer the complaint of the plaintiff in the above entitled action, which is on file in the office of the clerk of the district court in and for the county of Polk and state of Minnesota and to serve a copy of your answer to the said complaint on the subscribers, at their office in the city of Crookston in said county, within thirty days after the service of this summons on you, exclusive of the day of such service; and if you fail to answer the said complaint within the time aforesaid, the plaintiff in this action will apply to the court for the relief demanded in said complaint.

Dated Oct. 31st, 1890.

Montague & Bucklen,
Plaintiff's attorneys, Crookston, Minn.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk—ss.
In probate court, special term Oct., 1890.
In the matter of the estate of William J. Bahnson, deceased,

Letters of administration on the estate of said deceased being this day granted unto De Forest Bucklen of said county.

It is ordered, that all claims and demands of all persons against said estate be presented to this court, for examination and allowance, at the probate office in the city of Crookston in said county on Tuesday the 18th day in May, A. D. 1891 at 10 o'clock a. m.

It is further ordered, that six months from the date hereof be allowed to creditors to present their claims against said estate, at the expiration of which time all claims not presented to said court, or not proven to its satisfaction, shall be forever barred, unless for cause shown further time be allowed.

Ordered further, that notice of the time and place of the hearing and examination of said claims and demands shall be given by publishing this order once in each week, for three successive weeks prior to the day appointed for such examination, in the Red Lake Falls News, a weekly newspaper printed and published at the village of Red Lake Falls, in said county.

Dated at Crookston, Minn., the fourteenth day of October, A. D. 1890.

By the Court: C. O. Christianson,
Judge of Probate.

Unprecedented Record

The Minneapolis Times has attained the largest measure of success in the short time it has been before the people of any paper in the Northwest.

WHY???

Because it is Bright Newsy, Ably Edited, Fair to all Parties and Gets the News.

Since the first guns of the preliminary campaign in July The Times' POLITICAL NEWS has set the pace for its contemporaries. It has gone to the front on its Local News, Market Reports, Telegraphic Specials, Regular Press (Press News) report.

The Times

Is independent politically and prints all the news about politics and candidates, but does not deal in abuse of any man who has the misfortune to run for an office.

A Campaign Offer-The Times 4 Months $1.00

The Times will be sent by mail 4 months from Oct. 1st for the sum of $1. Send in your subscriptions now in order to get the benefit of all the news of the present campaign.

THE TIMES,
49 Fourth St. S., Minneapolis, Minn.

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage containing a power of sale dated April 5th, 1887, duly recorded in the office of register of deeds of Polk county, Minnesota, on April 8th, 1887, in book 30 of mortgages on page 398 whereby Wilfred Cyr and Emma Cyr, his wife, mortgagors, mortgaged to F. T. Day, mortgagee, the west half (w½) of the south east quarter (se¼) and the south east quarter (se¼) of the south west quarter (sw¼) and lots nine (9) and ten (10) all in section twenty-five (25) in township one hundred and fifty one (151) of range forty-five (45) in Polk county, Minnesota containing one hundred and seventy-four and 25-100 acres, by which default the power of sale has become operative and no action or proceeding at law or otherwise has been instituted to recover the debt remaining secured by said mortgage or any part thereof and there is claimed to be due on said mortgage at the date of this notice, the sum of $87.30.

Now, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of siad power, said mortgage will be foreclosed and said premises will be sold at public auction by the sheriff of said county or his deputy on the 11th day of December, 1890, at 10 o'clock a. m. at the front door of the court house in the city of Crookston in said county, to pay said debt and interest and taxes and twenty-five dollars attorney's fees and disbursements allowed by law.

Dated June 1st, 1890.

F. T. DAY, Mortgagee.

De Forest Bucklen,
Attorney for Mortgagee,
Crookston, Minn.

Land Office at Crookston, Minn., October 7, 1890.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the register of U S Land Office at Crookston, Minn., on Dec. 6, 1890, viz, Arthur Toupin, hd 12,187, for the w½ se¼ and e½ sw¼ sec 15, tp 150, r 42. He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz. Damas [illegible], Moses [illegible], Philias [illegible], Cyrille [illegible], all of Brooks P. O., Minn.

M. E. Dickinson, register.

Mr. Blaine and the Reporters.

One day when Mr. Blaine was President Garfield's chief adviser he was seated in company with several gentlemen who had come together by chance. The conversation was of a social nature, and reminiscences prevailed. Something reminded Mr. Blaine of an experience, which he proceeded to relate with all the interesting details He had not gone far when one of his friends left the room and sent an attendant to call the secretary out. In the hallway the friend said:

"Are you not aware that there are two newspaper men in that room?"

"Of course I am," answered Mr. Blaine.

"Well, do you want to see this conversation in print?"

"Nonsense," said the secretary; "they won't print a word of it." And he returned and took up his story where it had been interrupted. At the close of it, when he had laid himself wide open, he simply said, with a smile, "I needn't say that no part of this is for publication."

Not a word of it was ever printed, though one of the correspondents was then and still is reputed to be utterly conscienceless in such matters.

It is also one of Mr. Blaine's practices never to make a man promise that he will not publish a story. He merely tells him it is not for publication, or, as in the case of correspondents who have enjoyed his confidence, he takes for granted that they will not publish any part of a private conversation without first receiving his expressed permission to do so. Nor are these confidences reserved for correspondents of papers friendly to him. In more than one case those who are closest to him are in the employ of papers which lose no opportunity to hit him a lick, and in some cases he confides in men who persistently write against him and his plans. As one of his political friends puts it:

"He shows his hand first and bets afterward."—Cor. Savannah News.

An Incident at the Play.

One evening while the audience at the Baldwin were listening spellbound to the scene where Barrymore is discussing the foibles of women a couple of San Mateo rustics in the front row of the dress circle began an earnest discussion as to the merits of a certain prize sow one of them had for sale.

Despite the angry look and s-s-s-h's of those near by the controversy waxed louder, until at last a gentleman sitting behind the talkers touched one of them on the shoulder and quietly said:

"Excuse me, my friend, but what will you take for that sow of yours?"

The granger stared for a moment and then said:

"About $6, I s'pose."

"Exactly," said the gentleman, taking out his pocketbook and handing over a greenback.

"Here is a twenty. Now that sow's mine; just let her alone, if you please."

The audience snickered, and though the countryman made a woful attempt to turn the joke by gravely pocketing the note and handing over the $14 change the snub was crushing in its effect, and in the dead silence that followed the philanthropic millionaire leaned back and modestly enjoyed his popularity.

But what the delegation from up the bay said when, after the performance, they tried to buy a drink with the twenty and found it a bad counterfeit is unfit for publication.—San Francisco News Letter.

A Hot Needle for Warts.

I have always had warts on my hands ever since I was a boy, and have tried a thousand remedies for them, including all the charms known to the oldest darky in the country. The only thing that would suppress them even temporarily was a red hot needle. Somebody told me about it ten or fifteen years ago, but I never tried it for a long time, dreading the pain. At last I had a big wart on the knuckle of my left forefinger, where I was always knocking it against something and keeping it raw and sore.

I determined to try the hot needle. So I had a large needle fixed in an awl handle, heated it red hot in the flame of a lamp, and thrust it through the big wart at one punch. The pain was no greater than I had been enduring from striking the wart against everything I touched, and after the needle had cooled I took it out. The wart began to dry up, and in three or four days I picked it off with my thumb nail. Since then whenever one makes its appearance I take a needle to it, and the remedy never fails.—Interview in St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

School "Sundries."

In 1889 the Cincinnati school board furnished 1,200 wash basins at a cost of forty cents a dozen, making $40. Tin cups to the number of 1,800 were bought and distributed to the different schools, making thirty to each house, and about six to eight cups to each room. Eight barrels, or 320 gallons, of ink were used, and it was put into 38,257 ink wells. Boxes of crayon chalk to the extent of 800 were used, and they cost in all $32.75.

Each box contains one gross of crayons, making 115,200 in all, and they were used at the rate of 571 a day, or ten in each school house on an average. It must be remembered that not half the rooms use chalk. Of pens 288,000 were distributed, or seven to each pupil. They cost the city thirty-five and one-half cents per gross, or in all $710. One hundred and forty-four thousand penholders were distributed at a cost of about $500.—Cincinnati Times-Star.

Art of Gem Cutting.

The art of cutting gems lingered on in Constantinople after the fall of the empire, but few stones were cut in western Europe. Charlemagne used as his seal an antique gem with the head of Jupiter Serapis; Pepin le Bref one with a Bacchus on it. In 1555, however, Giovanni Bernardi cut stones so beautifully for Lorenzo de Medici that he was called Giovanni delle Carniole, and a contemporary of his was named Domenico dei Kamei. The Picklers, Tyrolese artists, settled in Rome in the Eighteenth century, cut gems so perfectly that they had to sign them to prevent their passing as veritable antiques.—London Letter.

Antiquity of the Needle.

Mention of the needle is made in The Sanhita of the Rig Veda (Wilson's translation), and the Vedic word "Suchi" is identical with that now used to indicate a needle. This notice of needles dates back as far as six centuries before Christ. The Rig Veda says: "Clothes and the like wrought with the needle last a long time." In ancient times needles were made of wood, bone, ivory, bronze and iron, and were very coarse in quality and dimensions.—Dry Goods Chronicle.

A Risky Business.

First College Student—What are you going to strike for, wealth or fame?

Second College Student — Wealth. I would strike for fame, but the trouble is you can't never tell nowadays what sort of fame is going to be in fashion.—Good News.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

Red Lake Falls News.

BOYLE & MEEHAN, Editors & Proprietors

TERMS, $1.50 A YEAR.

INDIANA now lays claims to the heaviest man in the world in the person of a Hoosier who tips the scale at 907 pounds.

A BOSTON traveling man told a New York reporter that the most remarkable things he saw in the west were the artesian wells of South Dakota.

OF THE 150 new manufactories now being organized in this country, between forty and fifty are to be located west of the Ohio and between thirty and forty in the south.

Two hundred and four American carpet mills, running 11,000 looms, employing 43,000 hands, made, in the year of 1889, 76,800,000 yards of carpet.

A SAN FRANCISCO undertaker has fitted up a large and handsome funeral parlor where funerals may be held. It is intended to meet the needs of families who live in hotels,

THE American locomotives sent from this country to China a few months ago are proving so superior to the English locomotives that nothing but the American make will now be used.

ROBERT BURDETTE, the humorist has almost abandoned writing for the newspapers. He devotes his time now to lecturing, and says that he has become comparatively a gentleman of leisure.

A SEA lion in the zoological gardens at Paris has distinguished himself by saving the life of a little boy who tumbled into the water and couldn't get out in consequence of the high basin. The seal held him up until help was at hand.

GERMANY employes 5,500,000 women in industrial pursuits; England, 4,000,000; France, 3,750,000 and Austro-Hungary about the same number, and still women are the weaker sex, the lesser half, the clinging pensioners on man's beneficence.

ONE of the shortest names in the country is possessed by Mr. Ye, who is secretary of the Corean legation at Washington. Mr. Ye has just been made happy by the arrival at his home of a little daughter, and the child has been christened "Washou Ye," which in English means "Washington." This child is the first born of the Corean nationality in this country.

THE torpedo boat Adler, constructed in Germany for the Russian Black sea fleet, is described by the Russian papers as the fastest war vessel afloat, having attained during its trial trip a speed of 26.55 knots. The boat is 150 feet long and 17 feet broad, with a displacement of 150 tons. Three gunboats, one of which—the Narghen—is finished, are being constructed in German shipyards for the Baltic fleet, and these will be almost as fast steamers as the Adler.

THE generosity of even generous foreigners to working people is illustrated by the German Baron von Eckardstein. At a recent harvest festival he addressed his workmen, and at the close of his remarks announced that he would reward two of them who had worked on his farm over forty years with a present which, he hoped, would stimulate all of them to do their best in the future. The present consisted of 15 marks for each of the workmen, which, being divided by forty years, makes a gratuity of 9 cents a year.

ROSWELL P. FLOWER boasts that he represents in congress a district that is richer than any state in the Union except New York and Pennsylvania. It is richer than Massachusetts, or Illinois, or Ohio, or California. In it live the Vanderbilts, the Rotkefellers, Jay Gould, Russell Sage, D. O. Mills, and, in fact, almost all the very rich persons in the city except the Astors. The united wealth of the residents of the Twelfth congressional district must be more than $4,000,000,000. Illinois is valued at about $3,000,000,000, and Ohio and Massachusetts at $1,500,000,000.

NEWS SIFTINGS.

Criminal, Personal, Foreign and Other Interesting News Items.

WASHINGTON.

The census office has finally announced the population of the United States, as shown by the first count of persons and families, exclusive of white persons in Indian territory, Indians on reservations and Alaska, to be 62,480,540. These figures may be slightly changed by later and more exact compilations, but such changes will not be material, In 1880 the population was 50,155,783.

PERSONAL.

Gen. Palmer of Illinois claims that the legislature is Democratic on joint ballot, and that his election to the United States senate is certain.

Edwin Norton has returned to Chicago from the East, but will neither affirm nor deny the report that he with other Chicago captalists are about to establish a large tin can manufactory at Baltimore.

Mrs. Elizabeth A Leebrick is dead at Quincy, Ill., aged 91 years. Her father was a soldier in the Revolutionary war, and suffered with Washington at Valley Forge. During the Civil war she was identified with the work of the "Good Samaritans."

ACCIDENTAL.

Claude Brown and Levi Hiles were hunting deer near Dead Lake in Otter Tail county, Minn. Hiles was in front of Brown who saw a deer, and in bringing down his gun it was accidently discharged. The ball struck Hiles on the right side of the backbone and went clean through him. At last accounts he was living but is expected to die.

One of the most horrible accidents that has endangered human lives occurred at Daughtarty & Behan's stone quarry, half a mile west of Louisville, Neb. Seven men were at work tamping dynamite into a huge stone preparatory to a blast when by accident a premature explosion occurred, and did bodily injury to nearly all the workmen. Henry Alsen, a young man of family, was terribly mangled and will die.

SINS AND SINNERS.

A young woman throws two little girls off a high bridge at Akron, N. Y., killing one and breaking the arms and legs of the other. The murderess vainly attempts suicide.

A sad suicide is reported from the home of George Neilson, a farmer living four miles west of Lyons, Iowa. His wife aged fifty, in a fit of momentary insanity, hanged herself and was dead when discovered.

Herman Heller, a German farmer, took paris green while at his son's residence at Wausau, Wis., He died before medical aid could be obtained. Heller was sixty years old and owned a large farm. Drink was the cause of the suicide.

In Twiggs county, Ga., a young lady was assaulted by a negro named Owen Jones. A privilege was allowed him, and that was to select the limb of the tree from which he was to be hanged. His body was left hanging for twenty-four hours. It was then cut down and now lies in a fence corner.

Mike Lynch, the base ball player, accidentally stabbed William Fitzner at Spokane Falls. Lynch was showing a dirk knife that he had just sharpened, and it is said that while Lynch was flourishing the weapon Fitzner stumbled forward and fell upon the blade. It entered the abdomen on the left side and he died in half an hour. Lynch is in jail.

Delasee, the Indian charged with murder two white men near Ravalli in September, 1887, was found guilty of murder in the first degree at Missoula, Mont. He is the fourth Indian found guilty of murder in Missoula this year, and the third the past week. Pierre Paul, the last of the noted outlaws recently captured, will be placed on trial for murder.

At Columbus, Ga., Will Wallace, a notorious desperado from Harris county, got into a difficulty with Coon Harramore and Frank Huckabee in a private house, which will probably result in two deaths. Huckabee cut Harramore in the abdomen, inflicting a frightful wound, and Wallace shot Huckabee three times through the body. Harramore and Huckabee are not expected to live. Wallace was arrested.

Thomas Churchill, eighty-five years old, lived with his wife in his own house at Schuylersville, N. Y. Early in the morning Michael Henshaw and Patrick Hughes rapped at the door and demanded admittance, which was refused. The old couple tried to hold the door, but the men smashed it in. As the two entered the house, the old man stabbed each of them with a bayonet, badly wounding them. The men then fired three shots, killing Churchill instantly. The men were arrested, one being taken to jail and the other to the hospital. A man named Donnelly has also been arrested on suspicion. Henshaw has been a cowboy and only recently returned from the West.

A lone highwayman held up and robbed four men near Texarkana, Texas. Two men named Markham took two bales of cotton to New Boston, where they sold them. On the way back they were confronted on the road by the robber, dressed as a tramp, who emphasized his demand for their money and watches by thrusting a revolver in the face of one of the men. After his demands were acceded to the man compelled one of the men to dismount, and jumping upon the horse rode away. Shortly afterward Hon. W. Hudgins and Rollins Rogers came along, and to them the Markhams related their experience. The story was received with laughter, the attorneys saying that the bravery of two men who allowed one man to rob them might be questioned. Two hundred yards farther on the two attorneys were stopped by the same man, and the experience of the Markhams was repeated and a considerable sum of money and their watches were secured. Hudgins hired a horse from a livery and set out after the man.

FOREIGN GRIST.

A plot to murder the king and loyal family of Corea is reported to have been discovered. The brother of the king is implicated.

A large number of arrests of rioters have been made at Lugano, Switzerland. The belief is prevalent that Ticino will be divided into two cantons.

High Japanese officials express regret because Corea is turning from China to seek the protection of Russia and predicts trouble from such a policy.

The Cuban revolutionists in Key West, Fla., are very active and daring just now, and it looks as though they will make trouble in the island before long.

A new bank, to be known as the Asiatic bank, will be established in St. Petersburg. The capital of the institution will be $25,000,000 roubles.

As a result of Mr. Balfour's Irish tour, the British government has given £3,000 for the purpose of deepening the harbor of Ballina, for which an appropriation has been desired for a long time.

It is reported in Paris that Dom Pedro has notified the government of Brazil that he no longer wishes to be considered as making any claim to the crown. He only desires to be permitted to die in Brazil.

It is stated that a special institute will be erected in Berlin at the cost of the government for Dr. Koch's experiments with his announced cure for consumption, the establishment being conducted on the same general plan as the Pasteur institute.

The Swedish lawyer Cedercantz, appointed chief justice of Samoa under the recent agreement between Germany, England and the United States, is visiting the London legations, on route for his new post of duty. He will call on President Harrison while on his way across the American continent to take a ship for Apia.

Another conflict has occurred at Spandau, England, between the soldiers of the garrison and the citizens. Eighteen of the latter were wounded and a number of the soldiers were hurt. The fight was occasioned by the soldiers taking umbrage at some action on the part of the citizens, which was not, however, intended to give offense. A similar encounter with still more bloody results occurred a few weeks ago.

Herbert Ward, in a lecture in London on his experience in Africa with the Stanley expedition, said that Jameson literally died of starvation and privation. Both Jameson and himself had to live on mouldy biscuits and rice full of maggots, while stores of luxuries were reserved for the advance column. Major Barttelott added Ward in depriving himself and his associates of these luxuries, might have been Quixotic, but he certainly did his duty.

During a circus performance at St. Petersburg, which was attended by the czar and some members of the royal family, one of the trained horses suddenly and viciously attacked M. Ginizelli, the manager of the circus. The manager was knocked down, bitten and trampled upon by the maddened animal; which, in full view of the audience, mangled him in a horrible manner. The czar and his party abruptly left the building. The audience stampeded as the preformance terminated.

OTHERWISE.

Charles Blythe, the negro who murdered Surgeon General Jones, of the Ohio national guard, died of consumption in the penitentiary.

At Denver, the big dry goods house known as the "Alcazar" has passed into the hands of the sheriff on attachments amounting to nearly $100,000.

The Cherokee legislature has convened at Tallequah, Ind. Ter. Steps will be taken to consumate the sale of the surplus Cherokee lands to the United States.

The steamer Belgravia has arrived in New York, having over 1,000 emigrants on board, most of whom are Italians. A number of cases of smallpox have developed among the passengers.

Judge Pratt of New York, handed down a decision in the sugar trust case in which he says a receivership is proper and necessary, and that not only one but two receivers should be appointed.

The Arkansaw Traveler of Chicago, edited by Opie P. Reed, the humorist, has been taken possession of by the sheriff on an execution issued on judgments aggregating nearly $1,500 in favor of the Eagle Paper company.

Miss Lizzie O. Smith, widely known as the "Modern Martyr," died at Willimantic, Conn. She was born in 1832. When she was eleven years of age she was prostrated by a violent cold, which developed a disease that settled in her limbs, making her a helpless invalid. She was confined to her bed nearly fifty-five years.

The steamer Teutonic, which arrived at New York from Liverpool, had amomg her passengers Henry M. Stanley and Mrs. Stanley and Lieut. Jephson, one of Mr. Stanley's companions on his last trip to Africa. The Teutonic had a rough passage and was slightly damaged. During the voyage Mr. Stanley was slightly ill but is now recovering.

Five more of the crew of the sunken steamer Vizcaya were rescued from floating wreckage. Eight of the crew of the Hargraves and twelve of the Vizcaya were rescued, a portion of them being taken to Philadelphia and the remainder brought to New York. The list of the rescued foots up forty-two, leaving sixty-seven persons missing. It is possible that other survivors have been cast ashore below Barnegal.

The bill disfranchising any member of the Choctaw Indians, either by blood, adoption or marriage into the tribe, who has taken or may hereafter take the oath of allegience to the government of the United States, has passed both houses and has received the approval of the governor. It disqualifies from holding any office of trust or profit in the Choctaw Nation, or to sit as jurors in any of its courts, and is in direct opposition to section 43 of the Oklahoma bill.

W. G. Bell & Co. of Boston have made an assignment. Although no definite figures can be given yet, it is believed the firm's liabilities will amount to very nearly $500,000. The only other firm known to be effected by the failure is that of Frederick D. Maynard & Co., dealers in coffee, teas and spices. This firm and William G. Bell & Co. have endorsed for each other to quite an extent, and it is so involved in the failure of the Messrs. Bell that it has also failed.

The corner stone of the magnificent Masonic temple to be erected at the corner of Randolph and State streets was laid at Chicago by Grand Master John M. Pearson with the solemn and impressive ceremonies of the masonic order. The ceremony of laying the corner stone was preceded by a parade of the local lodges, in which 5,000 men participated. The temple when completed will be twenty stories high and will be the largest building of the kind in the world.

New York supervisor, who as mayor Grant's representative, brought to Washington the police census enumeration books, and who refused to surrender them to the secretary, returned to New York with his books and documents, after reiteration in a note to Secretary Noble that he could not part company with them. The next step by mayor Grant and Mr. Kenney will be an appeal to President Harrison for a recount of New York City.

A curious mistake has been made by an official at Carlsbad. An American gentleman who had been traveling in Bohemia, arrived at the Spa and entered his name as "James I. King of Buffalo." This was conveyed to the local press as "James the First, King of Buffalo," and Mr. King was besieged as "his majesty" by such a shoal of tradesmen, beggars and tuft hunters that he was obliged to leave Carlsbad sooner than he had intended.

A Fargo-Jersey Divorce Case.

Chicago Tribune's Passaic (N. J.) Special: No little surprise was caused in this city by a dispatch from Fargo, N. D., announcing that Mrs. Howland, the wife of Rev. William Howland, rector of St. John's Episcopal church in this city, has secured a divorce from her husband, awarding her the custody of their bright little six-year-old daughter and alimony of $5,500 a year. The pastor's salary is but $1,500. How he can be expected to pay the alimony set by the far-away court no one knows. Mrs. Howland is the daughter of Mrs. Henry of Flushing, L. I., and was married to Rev. Mr. Howland ten years ago. With tastes that led her to parties and all gayeties rather than church work, she steadily drifted away from her husband. Her temper brooked no opposition, much less control. In April, after a period during which she would neither sit at the table with him nor come to his room, she left him altogether. He had refused to co-operate with her in her determination to secure a divorce, but when a Brooklyn lawyer came here and proposed a separation he agreed to an arrangement of that nature. Not satisfied with this, she has now secured a divorce.

MERRIAM ELECTED.

Additional Official Returns Received Insure His Election.

A Few Counties, Which Will Not Change the Result to Hear From.

The official returns from Wabasha, Winona, Douglas, Benton, Redwood, Polk, Pipestone and Washington counties have added ninety-two to Merriam's plurality and deducted 164 from Wilson, so that with the official returns of twelve counties yet to hear from the totals are: Merriam, 87,354; Wilson, 85,173; leaving a plurality of 2,191 for Merriam. The official votes yet to be announced are those of Carver, Cass, Grant, Hennepin, Hubbard, Kanabec, Lake, Otter Tail, Ramsey, Renville, Sherburne and Stevens. Assuming that the gains and losses will be about equal on both sides, it is safe to conclude that Merriam's plurality will not be far below 2,000. Additional official returns by counties:

FIRST DISTRICT.

WABASHA, Special Telegram, Nov. 10.—Official: Wilson 1,781, Merriam 1,332; Harries 2,006, Dunnell 1,490; senator, Burkhardt, Rep.; representatives, Greer, Rep., French, Dem.

WINONA, Special Telegram, Nov. 10.—The official count of Winona county: Governor, Merriam 2,090, Wilson 3,562, Owen 225; auditor, McGuire 2,324, Bierman 3,429; congress, Dunnell 2,374, Harries 3,350.

SECOND.

REDWOOD FALLS, Special Telegram, Nov. 10.—The following is the official vote of Redwood county: For governor, Merriam 849, Wilson 378, Owen 463, Pinkham 94; congress, Lind 935, Baker 752, Reynolds 91.

PIPESTONE, Special Telegram, Nov. 10.—The official vote of Pipestone county: Republican, Merriam 426, Ives 455, Brown 462, Bobleter 461, McGuire 460, Clapp 456, Holcomb 456, Lind 495, Miller 476, Wilson 458, Lockwood 503, Colburn 461; Democratic, Wilson 113, Dahl 113, Foote 109, Lindholm 109, Bierman 663, Calhoun 109, O'Hair 109, Becker 37, Shepherd 130, Rork 107; Alliance, Owen 586, Barrett 580, Wesenberg 556, Mathison 559, Taylor 576, Kohlars 558, Baker 595, Ladue 617, Pemberton 569, Gildea 562, Gustafson 525.

FOURTH.

ALEXANDRIA, Special Telegram, Nov. 10.—The official count of Douglas county: Governor, Merriam 736, Wilson 286, Owen 1,463, Pinkham 118; congress, Comstock 875, Whiteman 321, Halverson, 1,407; state senate, H. H. Wilson (Rep.) 961, Kortsch (Dem.) 104, Grafe (Alliance) 1,500; house, J. W. Nelson (Rep.) 1,064, S. G. Lewis (Alliance) 1,528.

SAUK RAPIDS, Special Telegram, Nov. 10.—The official count of Benton county gives Merriam 200, Wilson 558, Owen 392; for congress, Comstock 219, Whiteman 650, Halverson 277.

CROOKSTON, Special Telegram, Nov. 10.—The official canvass of the vote of Polk county was completed to-day. The vote: Owen 4,284, Wilson 856, Merriam 683; Halverson 4,081, Whiteman 945, Comstock 794.

ERRORS OF JUDGES.

Returns From Two Districts in Washington County Being Corrected.

STILLWATER, Special, Nov. 11.—The work of the county auditor and the board on the election returns to-day was tedious and also unsatisfactory, owing to manifest errors made by the judges of election in Oakdale and also in the Second precinct of the First ward in this city. The Oakdale returns were mixed, the Democratic vote being given to the Republican and visa versa. The returns as received from all the polling districts show on their face a plurality of 158 for Merriam, but when the corrections are made his plurality is placed at 32. But this may be changed somewhat. The vote between Daly and Durant for the legislature is close—Daly 787, Durant 764—and a recount of the ballots will be demanded. The vote as shown by the returns is: For governor, Merriam 1,869, Wilson 1,711, Owen 1,017, Pinkham 59; lieutenant governor, Ives 2,181, Pahl 1,668, Barrett 753; secretary of state, Brown 1,794, Lindholm 2,328, Weisberg 451; auditor, McGuire 2,163, Bierman 2,314, Kron 83; treasurer, Bobleter 2,154, Foote 1,722, Matheson 645, Frost 75; attorney general, Clapp 2,174, Calhoun 1,696, Taylor 729; clerk of supreme court, Holcomb 2,061, O'Hair 1,846, Kolars 608, Dean 92. For congress, Snider 1,959, Castle 2,426; state senator, Searles, 2,059, O'Brien 2,011, Richmond 447; legislature, Daly 787, Durant 764; city district, Borenen 728, Rowan 351, Keefe 121; Southern district, Zelch 1,046, Dornfeld 719; first amendment to constitution, yes 891, no 741; second amendment, yes 524, no 1,052. The contest for county coroner between Dr. T. C. Clark, chairman of the Republican county committee, and Dr. Voigt is very close—2,273 to 2,243—and this Oakdale may change in Dr. Voigt's favor. The board adjourned until to-morrow, when the corrections for Oakdale and the Second precinct of the First ward will be on hand, special messengers being sent to see the judges and clerks.

DEMOCRATIC OBSTRUCTIONS.

An Attempt by Democrats to Throw Out a Big Republican Vote.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., Special Telegram, Nov. 11.—The session of the county commissioners for a canvass of the election returns broke up in a row this evening. One of the commissioners is a candidate on a ticket, therefore disqualified from acting. This leaves four members, two of whom are Democrats and two Republicans. Returns from three wards of Sioux Falls were locked up in the ballot boxes as returned to the commissioners. The Democrats refused to open the boxes, intending thereby to throw out the large Republican majority of those wards. Auditor Stanfield, nevertheless, opened the boxes and laid the poll books before the board. But the board adjourned until morning without action. Mandamus proceedings will be commenced at once to compel the count of the vote as returned if the Democrats continue to obstruc the count.

Still a North Dakota Resident.

FARGO, Special Telegram, Nov. 11.—Senator Pierce spent to-day in Fargo on his way to Grand Forks to be present at the opening of the new opera house. He refused to talk about the result of the Burleigh county campaign, but furnished the Argus with a statement denying ever having moved his residence from North Dakota, and showing business engagements he had here during the time it was alleged he was out of the state. In regard to not paying taxes, he presents a statement showing about $140 per year paid upon Bismarck bank stock standing in his name.

THURSTON'S OPINION.

Off-Year Apathy and the McKinley Bill Caused the Upheaval.

CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—Hon. J. N. Thurston, the president of the Republican League clubs of the United States, arrived this morning from Omaha, fresh from the Nebraska campaign. In response to the query as to what were the causes which led up to the recent political upheaval in Nebraska and elsewhere, Judge Thurston said:

> Several causes led to the so-called defeat, viz.: The apathy of an off year in politics and the principal thing among voters being the McKinley bill. The natural tendency of prices were upward, among which can be named boots and shoes, iron, lumber and other commodities, although the tax was reduced upon these and other commodities. The [illegible] endeavored to explain, but nobody knows why. We struck a rising market with the passage of the McKinley bill, and all of this is laid to it.
>
> Nebraska has not gone Democratic, as the entire Republican state ticket is elected except the election of Boyd for governor. Boyd ran 6,000 votes ahead of his ticket in Omaha, on the prohibtion issue, and had Richards received his party vote in Omaha he would have been elected. Of course the Farmers' Alliance is just now at the height of its power. It is organized and bound together as closely as any secret organization, and this party cast a surprisingly large vote. I think there will be a revival of stalwartism in the Republican party, such as to make 1892, the coming presidential election year, a great Republican year.
>
> The Republican workers all over the country did not take an active part in this campaign just passed. They felt as though their services to the Republican party had been undervalued. But in 1892 these persons will be at work in support of some candidate who will arouse enthusiasm, and these very men will lead to victory as heretofore. The result of the recent elections has not put an end to the presidential chances of either William McKinley or Thomas B. Reed, but it has probably postponed their dates. Blaine or Alger would be winners at the head of the ticket in 1892.

AN OFF YEAR.

Mr. Bayne's Opinion as to the Cause of the Democratic Victory.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Representative Bayne of Pennsylvania, who helped frame the McKinley tariff bill as a member of the ways and means committee, is in Washington. He says that ignorance and misrepresentation were great factors in the election, but the cause of the Democratic victories was the fact that this is an "off year." The federal election bill, he said, had an effect secondary only to the off-year cause, while misrepresentations about the new tariff helped to produce unfavorable results in Republican districts. There is no likelihood of the Republican party undoing what it has done in the way of a consistent revision of the tariff simply because that revision has been misunderstood. Said Col. Bayne:

> In the next congress the Democrats will be tumbling over each other with free trade propositions. The senate, with a small Republican majority, will be looked upon as a bulwark against this sort of legislation, yet it may not answer the purpose in every instance. The votes of certain Western senators on the McKinley bill makes that fact clear.

A number of Democratic congressmen who will not be members of the Fifty-second congress have announced themselves as candidates for offices at the disposition of the house. Congressman Lawler, the defeated Democratic candidate for sheriff of Cook county, Ill., will be a candidate for sergeant-at-arms of the house. John Quinn of New York is being pushed for the house clerkship. Other congressmen have heretofore announced their candidacy.

LOOKS LIKE PALMER.

An Error Gives the Democrats Control of the Illinois Legislature.

CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—An error has been discovered in footing up the returns of the Second senatorial district, and it now appears that Kinney, the Democratic candidate for representative, was elected instead of Hoppin, the Republican, as reported.

Owing to the fact that the two parties have been thought to be a tie in the legislature, this discovery is of considerable importance. If the official count verifies the election of Kinney, the Democrats will have 101 votes in the assembly, and the Republicans but 100, thus making the election of John M. Palmer to the United States senate next thing to a certainty.

THE COLOR LINE.

An Important Subject Discussed in World's Fair Circles.

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 11.—The principal and most important subject now discussed in world's fair circles, is that as to whether the colored people shall have a separate exhibit or any show at all at the coming exposition.

The representative colored people of Chicago will hold a meeting on next Wednesday at Bethesda church to discuss that question. Protests are coming from all over the United States against the fact that President Harrison, in his world's fair appointments, has not recognized the colored race. A lengthy communication from a colored society to President Palmer says, among other things:

> Colored men do not desire that the exposition shall set apart for them a separate department in order that they may compete with the other exhibitors at the exposition, or in any wise appear in contrast with other exhibits. Their sole object is to show to the entire world, which will have representatives here, as well as to their countrymen, what the one time slave has really accomplished since be was given his freedom.

The demand is made that a bureau for colored exhibits be established.

Majority for the Republican.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 11.—The official count of Allegheny county, completed today, shows a majority for Stewart (Rep.) for congress over Craig (Dem.) of 2,661. This gives Stewart a majority of 34, in the district—the Twenty-fourth—over Craig, whose election has heretofore been claimed. The district in 1888 gave Ray (Rep.) 4,338 majority. The delegation from the state in the next congress will consist of eighteen Republicans and ten Democrats—a Democratic gain of three.

Merriam and Minnesota All Right.

CHICAGO, Special Telegram, Nov. 11.—Gov. Merriam of Minnesota arrived at the Hotel Richelieu this morning, and without leaving his autograph on the register was assigned to a room. After being found by a reporter he was interrogated as to what he thought of the recent election and his reply was:

> "Minnesota is all right and so am I. Now," he continued, "I am travelling privately. I don't see why you newspaper men come around and interview me in this way, and I would rather not be mentioned by the newspapers as being in this city."

Choked to Death.

EAU CLAIRE, Special Telegram, Nov. 11.—A three-year-old son of John Fulton choked to death by a piece of boiled cabbage at the supper table, dying before assistance could be rendered.

Two Trains Robbed.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Nov. 11.—Two night trains on the Georgia railroad, one leaving Atlanta for Augusta and the other leaving Augusta for Atlanta at the same hour were robbed last night. The Southern Express company takes no way packages, it being a through run and the messengers sleep on cots in the express car. The train leaving Augusta was robbed of about $40. The messenger is in Atlanta, and his story has not yet been received. Messenger Ficklen, who reached here this morning, is a heavy loser, as a telegram from Atlanta says his packages amounted to $12,000.

HOW ELEPHANTS FIGHT.

A Terrible Battle to the Death Fought by Two Monster Tuskers.

It was my good fortune, writes a correspondent to a Karachi paper, for some years to spend some months every season in a fine forest and hill country, where my duties gave me chances of seeing a great deal of elephant, bison, and other big game that frequented those parts. Our camp was on a partially isolated hill, a good deal above the surrounding country. We had been some days in camp, but had not been visited as usual by our friends, the elephants, when one afternoon the sudden bellow of one, evidently in pain, roused every one in the camp. A hill man presently came up to say that two large tuskers were hard at it close by. Every one turned out onto the hillside, from where it was easy, even with the naked eye, to see what was going on, while with a glass even the movements of a startled deer could be made out.

About 700 or 800 yards below the crowd watching the fight were the two tuskers. The one somewhat nearer us, a burly, stout-built beast, with short, powerful tusks, was evidently getting much the worse of the combat, and the white and red furrows in his sides and rear plainly indicated seams run by his antagonist's tusks. Blood could be seen trickling down his head and shoulders. On the rise of the hill was the rival, a still larger animal, possessing the advantage of longer, gleaming tusks. It was a lost fight, and in a few minutes the victor, with a quick rush at the other, made a good thrust at the side, and though there was a severe struggle the tusk went its full length into the now beaten brute, and, using all his weight, the victor pressed him down the hill, where they disengaged themselves and prepared for another bout.

The wounded tusker's roars of pain and rage were pitiful to hear, and, though he would have escaped if he could, the other kept close behind and administered thrust after thrust, but not in any vital part. Presently wheeling round they raced and came together with a might smash. This was about the only stand made, and was quickly overpowered by the more powerful and fresher victor. The thrusts now put behind the shoulder and into the body quickly disabled the poor brute, and in fact in a few minutes the combat was finally over, the conqueror, with one rush, completely rolling his enemy over, and, by repeated thrusts into the prostrate form, finishing the fight amid moanings and trumpeting.

Next morning, on our proceeding to look for the tuskers, we found a large herd in an excited state, almost on the spot where the finish had occurred. In it were several small tuskers, besides the big conqueror of the evening before, who seemed to instil a great deal of fear into the youngsters. He came now into the open glade with a fine young female, and as he approached even the other cows there was a general stampede out of his way.

We came on the dead beast, which had been butted and rolled, after it was killed, into a clump of bamboos. It had been a fine, burly animal, but was marked from forehead to rear and top to foot by ribs and cuts. He measured nine feet six inches at the shoulder, and the tusks, which were taken by the hill men, proved slightly over 100 pounds the pair. The victor, which in the fight appeared to tower over his foe, must have been quite ten feet high, and had the longest tusks I have ever seen clear of their sockets. I tried to get him, but what with his harem about him, and the difficulty of getting a clear view in the long grass, I failed to get a shot.

Adam's Boyhood.

Adam was as mischievous as boys generally are, probably. Darwin says he was "a perfect little monkey," which, I believe, is a synonym for mischief the world over. But unfortunately for Adam, he had no comrade in his gambols. What fun could he have ringing door-bells at night or skylarking around all by himself? He might whistle and sound discordant calls after dark, but no other little boy would come dashing around the corner to join him.

I can imagine little Adam, plated with human nature two inches thick, looking about for some way in which to divert himself, and whimpering, "Can't have any fun!" Of course he couldn't have any fun, such as boys like. No fun running away from school, 'cause school hadn't been invented. No fun stealing away to "go in swimming", all alone by himself. He couldn't play "tag," for he might yell, "I've got the tag" all day and there would be no other boy to come and try to take it away from him. "High-spy" had little charm for him, because a boy soon gets tired of hiding when he is compelled to find himself.

The Eight-Hour System.

An eight-hour man on going home the other evening for his supper found his wife all dressed up in her Sunday best sitting on the front door step reading a French novel.

"How is this?" he angrily exclaimed. "Where is my supper?"

"I don't know," replied his wife. "I began your breakfast at six o'clock this morning, and my eight hours were up at 2 p. m."

HIGHLY HONORED.

Members of the Irish Nationalist Party Given an Ovation at New York.

An Appeal for Aid From Liberty-Loving Americans Receives a Response.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—Rarely has the Metropolitan opera house held such an audience as it did to-night when the Irish societies of the city of New York gave a public reception to the Irish representatives, Messrs. O'Connor, O'Brien, Dillon, Sullivan, Harrington and Gill. There were about 4,000 people in the house, 3,200 were seated and the remaining 1,800 were on the platform and were standing around the hall.

Broadway, from the Hoffman house at Twenty-fifth street to the Metropolitan opera house at Thirty-ninth street, was thronged with crowds who waited patiently for an hour to see the distinguished Irishmen pass on their way to the meeting. Many of these people had tried to purchase tickets for the demonstration but were turned away.

Among the early arrivals on the stage who were recognized by the audience and warmly applauded were Gov. Abbett of New Jersey, Eugene Kelly and ex-Chief Justice Charles B. Daly, Dr. McGlynn was also recognized as he took his seat in the audience. The boxes were on the first balcony, and were occupied principally by ladies. Mrs. O'Brien, Mrs. Sullivan and Mrs. O'Connor occupied the first box to the right of the platform. The list of vice presidents contained among others these names:

Hugh J. Grant, Grover Cleveland, Levi P. Morton, Charles A. Dana, William M. Evarts, William C. Whitney, Judge Charles H. Van Brunt, Gen. W. T. Sherman, Leon Abbett, Chauncey M. Depew, William R. Grace, Joseph H. Choate, Carl Schurz, Whitelaw Reid, Noah Davis, Joseph J. Donohue, Bourke Cockran, John A. Cockerill, of the World; Oswald Ottendorfer, of the Staatz Zeitung; Postmaster C. N. Van Cott, Roswell P. Flower, Daniel Dougherty, Collector Joel P. Erhardt, Gen. Daniel E. Sickles, Seth Low, Thomas C. Acton, Thomas L. James, Eugene Kelly, Elbridge T. Gerry, John T. Agnew and Richard O'Gorman.

When the loud outburst of cheers had ceased Mr. O'Donohue called the meeting formally to order. It was no political gathering that he saw before him, he said, but one of patriotic people among the American people who had come to pay their respects and give welcome to Messrs. O'Brien, Dillon, O'Connor, Sullivan, Gill and Harrington They were there to express their reverence of these men, who have have spent all their time and energy, endured suffering and engaged in a long fight for home rule.

John Dillon opened his address with a high tribute to the late John Boyle O'Reilly. He said that he and his friends had come here to ask whether they had fulfilled the promises made to the people woo had put their trust in him. He stated that while thousands of people in Ireland are threatened with starvation about $100,000,000 worth of food as being exported out of that country this year into England to pay rents of the Irish landlords. He claimed that Ireland was losing 500,000 per year and that the chief business of the police was to pull down the heuses of the people.

O'Brien also spoke feelingly of John Boyle O'Reilly. He told the story of the battle against landlordism in Tipperary and strongly donounced the acts of Smith Barry. Sullivan, Harrington and O'Connor also made addresses.

This evening a meeting was held at the Globe theater which was crowded. O'Connor, Harrington, Dillon, O'Brien and Sullivan spoke. The box office receipts at the two meetings aggregated $5,100, in addition to which the audience pledged about $3,600.

James H. Stark, a member of the British-American association of this city, who has recently made a tour of investigation through Ireland, spoke in Music hall today. He asserted that people in Northern or "Protestant" Ireland appeared to be prosperous and that there was no potato famine. The suffering in Southern Ireland, he declared, is the result of the plan of campaign of which Messrs Dillon and O'Brien are the authors. He claims that the tenants bitterly regret the introduction of the plan of campaign, and would settle with their landlords if they were free agents.

CAPTURED AT LAST.

One of the Salem, N. D., Train Robbers Caught in Virginia.

CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—Postoffice Inspector Watkins of Chicago arrived here to-night, having in custody William E. Newberry, who is said to be the leader of the most daring train robberies of recent years.

June 6, Northern Pacific train was stopped at New Salem, N. D., by highwaymen. Two masked men climbed upon the engine and compelled the engineer and firemen to detach the engine from the train and then to pull out. Having taken the engine about twenty rods, the engineer was ordered to stop, and the engineer and fireman were taken back to the train, where they were ordered to batter down the door of the express car. With the first attack upon the car the express clerk escaped from it and saved the contents of the safes, since he carried with him their keys. Having entered the car the two robbers compelled the engineer, the fireman and the postal clerk to cut open the mail pouches and to carry the first-class registered mail matter to the robbers' horses. About five hundred packages, containing $5,000 in cash, were thus secured.

G. E. Bailey, one of the highwaymen, was subsequently captured, and is now serving a term in the North Dakota penitentiary. The search for Newberry has been carried on by the postal authorities ever since, and he was arrested at Plains, Va., Saturday. Newberry comes of an excellent Virginia family.

Riotous Strikers.

BERLIN, Nov. 11.—A blody conflict arose at Ottensen, a suburb of Hamburg, to-day between the striking glassblowers and 300 Polish "blacklegs." Revolvers were freely used, and one man killed and many were injured. A large number of arrests were made.

Several Workmen Killed.

PRAGUE, Nov. 11.—A portion of the roof of a house in course of erection in this city collapsed to-day, demolishing a scaffold upon which a number of men were working. Five dead workmen and six injured ones have been extracted from the ruins. Others are still buried in the debris.

Killed an Innocent Man.

MACON, Ga., Nov. 11.—Five citizens of Dodge county have been committed to jail on a charge of conspiracy in the murder of J. C. Forsythe at Normandale, Oct. 7. One of the prisoners is Wright Lancaster, sheriff of Dodge county, and another is Luther A. Hall, a Dodge county attorney, whose trial for perjury is now pending in the federal district court. A white man named Andrew Reneau was shot by a mob of which the prisoners were members, for the murder of Forsythe on the day after it occurred, but later investigations by United States special agents proved his innocence of the crime.

FIGHT OVER A BODY.

An Unfaithful Wife's Scheme to Secure Her Husband's Life Insurrnce.

PUEBLO, Colo., Nov. 11.—Four years ago fifteen conductors on the Rio Grande were laid off by a change in the management, which rendered their sevices unnecessary. Among them was W. A. Jimeson. Jimeson bade his wife and four-year-old girl goodby and went to Texas for work.

Soon after he left Mrs. Jimeson became very friendly with Tom Taylor, superintendent of bridges of the Denver & Rio Grande. She obtained a deed to their home on Abriendo avenue, mortgaged the property for $1,500, and left with Taylor on a trip to the northwest, visiting Seattle, Tacoma and other places, returning after a few months. Jameson heard of it, and returned with the intention of shooting the man who had betrayed him. He did not find him, and the the affair broke up the family and Jameson returned to Texas and the relations between Taylor and the woman continued.

Last Saturday Jameson was killed at Clarendon, Tex., by the cars and his body brought here for burial, and it was taken in charge by the Order of Railway Conductors and Masonic fraternity. The guilty wife asked that the body be taken to her house, but it was refused.

After much pleading with one of the leading Masons the woman was given an order on the undertakers for the body, which she desired to have remain in her house "but one night." The undertakers got the corpse and were halfway to Mrs. Jimeson's house when the conductors found out what was going on and by quick work stopped the hearse and ordered it back. After some controversy the hearse turned around and again placed the coffin in the Masonic temple. When the woman found this out she vowed that she would replevin the body.

Mr. Jimeson carried $2,500 insurance with the Order of Railway Conductors and $5,000 with the Masons. When the first trouble occurred he changed the papers from his wife to his daughter. By holding the body of the deceased in her house over night she would get control of this money. The two societies swore that the money should go to the child when she becomes of age, and if she replevins the body they will swear out a warrant charging her with adultery.

IDAHO DESERT LAND.

Large Amounts Being Taken Up for Speculative Purposes.

HELENA, Mont., Special Telegram, Nov. 11.—Within the last ninety days 50,000 acres of land have been taken up in the vicinity of Idaho Falls, Idaho, under the desert land act.

Special Agent Tyner, of the land department, suspecting that the land was being taken up for speculative purposes, investigated. He found that entries were being made by Eastern parties, who had been induced to file on claims by a Denver syndicate.

It is alleged that parties of Eastern people were taken to Idaho Falls on special excursions, and then taken by wagons across Snake river to some high point where the view is unobstructed for twenty miles. Parties then go the land office, and make affidavit that they had visited each tract upon which entry was made. The law requires that each person visit the tract entered upon and swear that the land is not taken up for speculative purposes. It seems that the provisions have been ignored, and the special agent thinks he can have all such entries canceled.

Bonafide settlers are complaining, as the land will be tied up and held back from settlement three years. The records of the land office in Idaho show that on one day twenty entries were made by Chicago parties. Large parties were also brought from Portland, Denver and Salt Lake.

If this is kept up all the desert land will be tied up within a short time, but the matter is to be brought before the department at Washington, and if the entries are ordered canceled. Eastern parties who have been taken into the scheme will be out the expense of the trip and fees paid the company inducing them to go. The affair has created much excitement.

A THRILL OF HORROR.

All England Shocked at the Revelations Made by Bonny.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—The story told by Bonny has caused a thrill of horror throughout England, and the sentiment is generally expressed that, while Stanley is vindicated as against the charges of Barttelot's relatives, he and his surviving associates should long ago have told the whole truth, in the interest of justice and humanity.

The Daily News says that if Bonny is able to substantiate one-tenth of what he has related Stanley will be completely justified, and it will only remain to ascertain the precise moment when Barttelot became raving mad.

The Pall Mall Gazette says that Mr. Stanley will prosecute Walter Barttelot and others who have brought charges against him in connection with the controversy regarding the rear guard of the Emin relief expedition. Mr. Stanley has retained Mr. George Lewis and Sir Charles Russell to conduct his case.

In an interview yesterday Mrs. Jameson denounced as a baseless fabrication the story that her late husband purchased a girl and turned her over to the natives to be killed and eaten, in order that he might have an opportunity of witnessing and sketching cannibalistic scenes. She says that Jameson sent her a number of sketches illustrative of the life of an African tribe. Some of these sketches depicted the cannibalistic habits of the natives, one showing two victims being sacrificed, but these were only incidents coming under his observation as a traveler.

WHALE HUNTERS LOST.

Six Sailors Towed Out of Sight by a Whale They Had Harpooned.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 11.—The whaler Charles W. Morgan, which has arrived from Okholsk sea, reports the loss of six of her crew. The men left the vessel in a small boat Sept. 1, in pursuit of a whale, which they succeeded in harpooning. The whale started off at a rapid rate, towing the boat, which contained the second mate and five seamen. Fog set in and they were soon lost from view. A search was made for them, but they were never found, and it is believed the whale smashed the boat, killing the occupants. The whaler Norwhal, from Fox Island, reports six men washed overboard during a gale, but two of the men were fortunately thrown back alive by a returning wave.

Afraid of Medical Students.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Nov. 11.—Birchall is growing despondent, and appears to be anxious for the fatal day. He frequently talks of his death, and says he regrets the possibility that the doctors will cut him open in their post mortem examination. He is anxious that his remains be securely entombed in a bricked vault, lest they be stolen by some members of the medical profession, whom he describes as rubbing their hands in anxious ecstacy to lay hold of him after he is dead and carve him up. He laughs at those who think he would attempt to cheat the gallows, and says he not made of the stuff that suicides are made of.

THE NORTHWEST.

A Summary of the Important Events of the Week in the Northwestern States.

MINNESOTA.

The state school of agriculture opened with seventy students in attendance.

Stillwater claims a population of 15,000, but the government census gives the city only 12,000.

The electric street railway system of Duluth will be completed and in operation within a month.

Jacob Searle, a hunter and traper hear Duluth was killed by a trapp gun set by himself.

Pat Kenney, under indictment at Madison for manslaughter, broke jail and is still at large.

Peter Harps, one of the oldest settlers in Traverse county, was kicked by his horse in the forehead, at Wheaton, and died instantly.

Henry F. Oxnard, the Grand Island sugar manufacturer, is looking over the state for a proper location for a beet sugar factory.

Chris. Langguth, an old citizen of St. Peter, committed suicide by shooting himself through the heart. Financial trouble is the cause alleged.

Charles Bushee and wife, living in Minnesota near East Grand Forks, are under arrest at Crookston charged with strangling their 12-year-old child.

An unknown man was run over and killed by a Milwaukee train between St. Paul and Minneapolis. A card in his pocket bore the name of Lewis Baker.

At Caledonia black diphtheria is raging to such an extent that the public schools have been closed. A number of children have died from the dread disease.

Murice Hafey, chief of the Duluth fire department, who assaulted a man named McNamara with an Indian club the other day, has been dismissed from the department in disgrace.

Mike Brennan, alias "New Orleans Murphy," has been convicted of murder in the first degree by the grand jury at Duluth. Brennan murdered a boy in that city on the 20th of July last.

A Duluth real estate company has donated a plot of eleven acres as a site for the proposed military academy. A bonus of $30,000 is asked for the location of the academy, and $10,000 of the amount has already been subscribed.

Mrs. Otto Walther, of St. Paul, committed suicide by deliberately jumping into the Mississippi. The act was witnessed by two young men, who were unable to rescue her in time to save her life. She had been married but a few weeks.

Harry Esterling, a young man of 20, attempted to board a freight train at Aitkin and lost his hold. He fell beneath the wheels, which passed over his neck, severing his head from his body. His parents live in Trout Brook, Mich.,

It is now thought that Herman Davids, the young bartender whose body was found in a small lake near St. Paul, was killed with chloroform by some enemy and thrown into the lake to create the impression that he had committed suicide.

The next two weeks will wind up the rafting season at Stillwater. The past year's cut amounted to 3,498,000 logs, scaling 452,287,000 feet. The mills are still actively at work with their successful cut. Great difficulty has been experienced in getting cars to deliver the lumber sold.

A serious fire occurred in the upper story of the Lake house at Starbruck. Two children of E. P. Byhee, the proprietor, were burned to death and two were badly burned and are not expected to live. The origin of the fire is unknown. The damage to the building is confined to a few rooms.

The record of longevity which Mr. and Mrs Ernest Holst, living in Belvidere township, Goodhue county, present, can probably not be equaled in the state. Mr. Holst is eighty-nine years of age, and his wife eighty-five years, and they have been married sixty-five years. Their eldest son is sixty-four years of age.

Judge Nelson held the first terms of court at Mankato under the Lind law. In the district court nothing came up, but Judge Nelson took occasion to overrule demurrers in the case of Ed A. Steven, Thaddeus S. Alickey, Ben Aarons and other Minneapolis enumerators. In the circuit court there were two cases, but both were continued.

Mrs. Nellie K. Green, wife of the late Joseph C. Green, of St. Paul, committed suicide by taking three ounces of carbolic acid. Joseph C. Green, who died recently, was a prominent resident of St. Paul for nearly thirty years. Mrs. Green has been suffering for the past three years with melancholia. She had been for a year in the insane asylum at Rochester.

NORTH DAKOTA.

The Congregational church at Grand Forks has extended a call to Rev. Wilcox, of Alexandria, Minn.

The new Metropolitan theater at Grand Forks is to be opened November 10. The sale of seats is already upwards of $7,000.

A member of a threshing crew at Jamestown, named Williams, recently got his hand caught in the separator and lost two fingers.

A Grand Forks man sent all the way to Scotland for a hired girl, after having a varied experience with the native queen of the kitchen.

A Northern Pacific brakeman by the name of J. F. McCarthy had his thumb and forefinger crushed by the cars at Grand Forks a few days ago.

The artesian well at Jamestown, has reached a depth of 1,485 feet. A small flow of water has been struck. It runs over the top of the pipe about 600 or 700 barrels a day.

A druggist named Meinhardt was found dead in his bed at Cogswell, Sargent county. He is supposed to have committed suicide, though no cause is assigned.

A 9-months-old baby was recently brought to a Grand Forks doctor to be treated for a fractured collar bone. The doctor states that this is decidedly a unique place for a fracture in a child so young.

Gen. Grant, acting secretary of war, has directed Gen. Miles, and, in case of his absence, Gen. Ruger to proceed to the Standing Rock Indian agency and investigate the causes leading to the threatened Indian outbreak.

Water was struck at Jamestown in the artesian well at the asylum. It flows about 150 gallons a minute. The water is soft and drinkable, and is the same as the city well, but not as great in volume. It is abundant, however, to supply the needs of the institution.

At Fargo, Mrs. Anna C. Howland was granted an absolute divorce from her husband, William Howland, an Episcopal clergy man of Passaic, N. J., on the ground of cruelty and inhuman treatment. She was given the custody of her daughter Florence Slidell, and $3,500 per year alimony.

Jamestown Alert: It is not at all unlikely that in a year or two the Red river valley will be howling for ditches to run the water off. Old timers who pause to reflect admit that the valley has suffered more from excess of moisture than it ever did for lack of the same.

A fire occurred at Devil's Lake, destroying the warehouse and stable owned and occupied by Stade & McKee; loss estimated at $2,000, insurance $1,000; the agricultural warehouse, owned by John Bell and occupied by Alex. Walker; loss about $1,200, insurance $700; and two dwellings, E. I. P. Stade owner; loss $1,500, insurance $700.

Bismarck Tribune: The steamer Batchelor ran aground on a sand bar. Capt. Ben Jewell, the veteran Missouri river pilot and renowned for his veracity, was at his post of duty. On finding the boat motionless, the master roared: "What the d—l's the matter up there?" "Say, captain," answered Ben Jewell, "them geese has got the water so d—d rily that I can't find the channel."

Coroner Shephard, of Crookston, arrived in East Grand Forks to hold an inquest on the remains of the child said to have been killed by its father, Pullett Bushee. The coroner satisfied himself from the evidence that the father was culpable at any rate and preparations were made to unearth the remains of the child and subject them to a medical examination to determine, if possible, the cause of death. The grave was opened and the astonishing discovery made that the body had already been disinterred.

Bismarck Tribune: Through information from H. C. Nygard, stage driver, it is learned that Carmichael, the boy who killed Bockhouse, in Emmons county, arrived at Snake Creek and spent the night with John Dwyer, and in the morning, when paying his bill, Perfecto Fernandez a Spaniard who stops with Dwyer, herding horses, ordered him to throw up his hands. His first question was, "What for?" They answered, "You must follow us." He then asked if anyone from Emmons county had been inquiring for him, and in almost the same breath confessed that he had shot a man there.

Harry Pettie wandered away from his home near Dunseith, October 18th, and has not since been heard from, though hundreds of persons have scoured the county in search of him. Although many of the party were convinced that the child had been spirited away, it was not until lately that kidnaping was the general belief. Harry Pettie the missing boy, was two and a half years old, large for his age, thick set and fleshy and thirty-five inches tall, He had dark brown eyes, light hair a fair complexion, a full fore head and small features. Those wishing to aid in the search can send to Rev. John Crumb of Dunseith. A reward of $500 is offered for the child alive.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

The first flow of water in Mitchell's new artesian well was reached at a depth of 375 feet and is very strong.

Silas Burton, Yankton county farmer, has raised a Hubbard squash that weighs fifty-four and a half pounds.

Bob Smith, the St. Paul kid, who has been posing as a prizefighter at Yankton recently swindled C. F. Smith out of $10 by means of a forged check.

Some of the Chamberlain men who went to Wisconsin to do railroad grade work have returned, as it was so disagreeable that they could not stand it, having to work in water up to their knees.

The first election among the Indians on the reservation occurred at Crow Creek to select a chief by ballot and White Ghost was so chosen by a large majority. This popular chief has held sway for many years, and is now legally invested with his desirable title.

J. J. West's hired girl, at Aberdeen, became asphyxiated from escaping gas from a gasoline stove. When the family arose in the morning she was found lying in an unconscious condition upon the floor. She will recover, but it was a close call.

Left Hand Thunder, a Lower Brule Sioux chief, who was recently married, was united in matrimony with his own wife with whom he had lived for three years in the most approved Indian fashion. He took this course so that his property would revert to her in case of his death.

John Pederson, at Red Lake Falls, was badly injured in a threshing machine. His coat became entangled in the cogs of the machinery and before the latter could be stopped his body had been drawn in and considerably bruised and wounded. He may pull through all right.

George H. Carey, of Sioux Falls, who suffered from sunstroke about a year ago, has been taken to the asylum at Yankton. Carey is 31 years old and he continually imagines that some one is being killed. His condition has grown worse of late and his friends think he will be better off in the asylum.

South Dakota can raise sugar beets. The Salem Special of the 25th says: "A. C. Patheal left a sugar beet at this office yesterday, raised from seed sent him from the agricultural department. He raised 115 pounds of them from two rows about one rod in length. The sample left at this office weighs 5½ pounds. Mr. Patheal says there is no question but what they can be very successfully grown here.

WISCONSIN.

Hans Olson, of Hurley, found a chunk of pure copper on his lot, weighing 115 pounds. He can get 10 cents a pound for it.

John Gallagher, of Shullsburg, is in possession of a clam worth $300 which he bought at a low figure from a traveling man.

J. D. Kast had to pay only $15 and costs to a Waupaca justice for "willfully and intentionally aiming and discharging a gun" at three men.

Secretary Noble has written to Indian Agent Leahy to the effect that no green pine can be cut this winter on the Indian reservations.

A farmer living near Oshkosh paid a butcher of that town $25 for getting him a wife. one would not "up and die in a little while."

Miss Annie Bentzen, of Christiana, Norway, a teacher in the Norwegian schools, is making a visit of the principal cities of the state. She is a trusted agent of the Norwegian government, sent here at public expense to investigate the schools and educational ideas of the United States.

The commissioners appointed to appraise lands condemned by Midland railroad for a right-of-way through Fond du Lac, have completed their work. The highest award was made to the Winnebago Furniture and Manufacturing company, the damage being fixed at $3,300.

People in the vicinity of St. Francis' Hospital at Superior were startled the other night by an apparition in its night shirt flying up the street and uttering frantic yells. When caught it proved to be a demented Frenchman named Talford who had escaped from the asylum.

The sheriff of Racine County has gone to West Bend after John Muehr, the Racine man who, when he was declared insane, demanded a jury trial, and who, before it came off, skipped out. Later he was picked up in the streets and taken to the poorhouse at West Bend.

William Walton had an experience at Superior the other day he will always remember. While walking down a railroad track he caught his foot in a frog and could not extricate it. A freight train came along and was almost upon him when a passer-by rescued Walton from his fearful dilemma.

George E. Jacobia, a wealthy citizen of Superior, is in St. Paul looking for a cattle buyer named Scott. Jacobia and Scott visited Durand to purchase cattle. The cattle were selected and paid for, after which Jacobia gave Scott $250 with which to buy sheep, and himself returned to Superior. Nothing since has been heard of the cattle or Scott.

IOWA.

The apple crop is not up to the average.

A freight car factory is talked of at Dubuque.

The good people of Warren county are contributing to a relief fund for Kansas drought sufferers.

At Indianola the other day Willie, the 7-year-old son of William Tilton, fell into the river and was drowned.

Frank Blomenthall, a Dubuque Hebrew, has disappeared, leaving a wife and a number of children in destitute circumstances.

Mrs. Alex. Cowdry, of Geneva, has fallen heir to over $300,000. She recently met with the other heirs in Kentucky for the purpose of dividing the legacy, which amounts to $60,000,000. A lawyer has been sent to the old country to secure the legacy and equalize the claims of each of the heirs.

The state superintendent of public instruction has complied and issued from his office a pamphlet embracing the complete statistics of the high schools. It gives all the information to be obtained about the instruction, courses, attendance and graduates; also the names of the instructors for 1890 and the branches taught. It is a fine compendium of information.

D. McMillan, of Birmingham, was here shipping back walnut logs, says the Washington Press. He got some 17,000 feet in this county to ship here, and 15,000 feet to load at Crawfordsville, paying $20 per 1,000 feet in the tree. He paid Mr. Maxwell $32 for one tree, $35 to John Graham for another, trees ranging from $5 to $50; has paid as high as $80 for three.

Capt. J. S. McKinley, of Osage; probably carries as many painful mementoes of the "late unpleasantness" as any veteran in the country—in fact his body is a network of scars. Since the war 111 pieces of bone have been taken from his body, eighty-seven being taken from the head alone. He is now 52 years of age, and notwithstanding the hard usage he has experienced still enjoys good health.

A young man slightly under age applied to the county clerk for a marriage license, but did not have the necessary written permission of his parents says the Davenport Democrat. The latter unfortunately lived in Sweden and were at home. There was only one way out of the difficulty. The house was finished and the wedding garments were all ready. So the young man applied for the appointment of a guardian, and one was appointed by the court. The guardian gave his consent to the marriage, in writing as required by law, and the wedding came off that evening. But it was a rather costly marriage license.

A Letter of Voltaire.

New York Sun: Speaking of the statue of Voltaire, a French paper has unearthed a letter of his upon precisely that subject, addressed to a friend, and here is the lesson which the philosodher gives:

"Enjoy life while you can, despise all the rest. I think I have already told you that I am not dignusque numismate vultus. I am no longer the possessor of what might be called a face. I look like a baked apple on the top of a crane's neck. It would never do to carve out that.

"Some little time ago the duchess of Brunswick begged so hard of the king of Prussia to send her his statue, made after the fashion of Louis XIV. in the Place des Victoires, that his majesty was unable to refuse her. He got himself sculptured in this fashion, astride on a tukrey cock, and instead of four slaves around the base there were four monkeys grinning. You will admit after all that it ill becomes small folks to be vain. But if you wish I will send you one of the monkeys of that statue, and you can put my name at the foot of it.

"My dear sir, let us esteem only health and repose. All the rest is smoke, and I have already spent too much of my life in running after smoke. I wish you a genuine happiness, if there is such a thing.

"VOLTAIRE."

A Chinese Suttee.

London Times: A case of suttee, which is unusual in China, although it is regarded as a great virtue, is reported from the neighborhood of Foochow. The victim was a young woman twenty-four years of age, whose husband died of leprosy early in the year. She was childless and had none except distant relatives to depend on for support. She had, therefore, she said, no alternative but to commit this act of self-sacrifice. As soon as her intention became known she received several invitations to grand banquets, all of which she accepted and enjoyed as if there were to be no sequel. After a special feast of this character she ascended a stage constructed for the purpose, where the village elders came to make their obeisances, each three times, as if she were already a canonized saint. The signal having been given by firing off a gun, she ascended a scaffold with her hands unpinioned, and there, in sight of all, strangled herself. Her body was placed in a coffin, which was duly prepared beforehand. It is said that the emperor will grant a tablet extolling her virtue as soon as the viceroy of the province represents the case to the throne.

Sleep Is Best.

T. DeWitt Talmage says: There is not one man or woman in 10,000 who can afford to do without seven or eight hours' sleep. All those stories written about great men and women who slept only three or four hours a night make very interesting reading; but I tell you, my readers, no man or woman ever kept healthy in body and mind for a number of years with less than seven hours' sleep.

Americans need more sleep than they are getting. This lack makes them so nervous and the insane asylum so populous. If you can get to bed early, then rise early. If you cannot get to bed till late, thus rise late. It may be as Christian for one man to rise at 8 as it is for another to rise at 5.

I counsel my readers to get up when they are rested. But let the rousing bell be rung at least thirty minutes before your public appearance. Physicians say that a sudden jump out of bed gives irregular motion to the pulse. It takes hours to get over a too sudden rising. Give us time after you call us to roll over, gaze at the world full in the face, and look before we leap.

She Searched the Grip.

The worst case of suspicion and jealousy in the northwest has just been cured, the patient being the wife of a well-known traveling man. She had noticed that her husband never brought his grip home with him, but always left it at the store when he came in from a trip, and in her jealousy she imagined it to be filled with love letters, appointments of meetings with fair ones, etc. A few days since while her husband was on a trip through Dakota, she went down to the store, and approaching the porter, said: "John, you like to make a dollar honestly when you can, don't you?"

"Oh, yes'm,"

"You know where my husband keeps his grip, don't you?"

"Yes'm; he throws it down in the corner of the office and leaves it there."

"Well, look here, John, he will be in on the Northern Pacific train tomorrow morning, and if, at the first opportunity, you slip his grip out of the house and bring it to me, I'll give you a dollar. You can bring it back in half an hour."

"The porter consented, and two days later pesented himself at the drummer's residence with the grip in his hand. He explained that he had not before had an opportunity to carry it away, and giving him a seat in the parlor the woman carried the prize to the bed-room, and with set teeth and pale face opened it. The first thing she encountered was a well-worn pocket bible, thumbed and showing the marks of much handling. Then she dug out a soiled shirt, some unchaste socks, comb, hair-brush, and then she found a letter folded within an envelope. This she opened eagerly and read as follows:

FARGO, Dak., Sept. 1.

MR. WILLIAM——: DEAR SIR—Your monthly assessment of 50 cents for the support of the young men's christian association (bible fund) is now due, and the earnest interest you have taken in the work assures me you will promptly remit the amount. You will be pleased to learn that the good cause progresses rapidly, as you predicted it would in your address delivered here a few weeks since. Yours, A. W. EDWARDS, Secretary.

"This drove much of the hard, stony look from her face, but she continued her search. She fished out three or four tracts, a bottle of pop, a Francis Murphy temperance badge, a bottle of Dr. Surepop's corn destroyer, and beneath all, in the bottom of the grip, a letter sealed, stamped and ready for the mail, addressed to "Miss Georgie Gray, St. Paul, Minn."

The superscription was in her husband's well known handwriting, and again the stony bolt came into her eyes.

"Oh, the wretch!" she cried in her anguish. "My suspicions are too well founded; Georgie Gray! Oh, that is too much!" and she gave way to a flood of tears.

When she calmed herself she tore the letter open and read as follows:

ST. PAUL, Minn., Sept. 19.

MISS GRAY—Your note asking me to meet you in Rice park Saturday evening was handed me by a district messenger boy this morning. In reply, permit me to say that you have mistaken the man. You may not be aware that I am a married man, and am blessed with the love and confidence of the greatest little wife in America. Rather than betray that confidence or dishonor that love I would suffer 10,000 deaths. In my eyes there is but one woman in the world, and she it is who greets me with a pleasant smile and a wifely kiss every time I come from a trip. WILLIAM——.

Then she lay down on the bed and sobbed awhile and then closed the grip, took it to the porter and asksd him to return it to the store and say nothing of what had occurred. As he entered the store the drummer stepped from behind a pile of goods and asked:

"Did she go through it, John?"

"Guess so. She took it into another room an' was gone half an hour before she brought it back."

"How did she act?"

"Well, she was smilin' awfully, and looked all teary around the eyes. She gimme another dollar an' said this would be a happy world if all men in this world were like her husband."

"That's business, John. Here's the V I promised you; and now let's go across the street and take something. When you come back dump that stuff and put my things back in my grip, for I go out to-morrow morning. I'll never forget you, John, for putting me on to this," and they slipped out and disappeared behind the green shade of a convenient saloon.

Did not Need the Car Ticket.

A benevolent lady, residing within sound of St. Aloysius' bells, was passing through Judiciary square recently when her attention was attracted to a wan-looking man sitting on one of the benches. The vagrant winds blew through his scanty hair, and, like Cassius, he was apparently weary of the world. The lady's kindly heart went out to the lone man and she spoke to him.

"Sir, you look tired. Allow me, at least, to give you car fare home," extending a nickel to him.

The old man looked quizzically at his benefactor, then smiled and quietly said:

"I am very much obliged for your kindness, madam, but I really won't need it. I am only waiting here for my carriage."

And just then an elegant coupe drove up and the object of her charity entered and drove away.—Washington Star.

$1 A WEEK
a Club System

[illegible] to the buyer as any installment system, is a wholesale cash system to us. The co-operation of the club members sells us 38 watches in each 1,000 Watch Club, and we get cash from the Club for each watch before it goes out, though each member only pays $1 a week. This is why we give you more for your money than any one else and why we are doing the largest watch business in the world. We sell only first quality goods, but our prices are about what others get for second quality. Our $10 Silver Watch is a substantial Silver (not imitation of any kind) Stem-Wind American Lever Watch—either hunting case or open. Our $25.00 Watch is a Stem-wind, Open Face, first quality, stiffened Gold American Lever Watch, guaranteed to wear 20 years. It is fully equal to any watch sold for $38 by others. We find a first-class Stiffened Gold Case much more satisfactory and serviceable than any Solid Gold Case that can be sold at less than double the money, as cheap solid cases are invariably thin, weak, of low quality, and worthless after short use. Our $38 Watch contains numerous important patented improvements, of vital importance to accurate timing—Patent Dustproof, Patent Stem Wind, &c., which we control exclusively. It is fully equal for accuracy, appearance, durability and service, to any $75 Watch, either Open Face or Hunting. Our $43.00 Railroad Watch is especially constructed for the most exacting use, and is the best Railroad Watch made, Open Face or Hunting. All these prices are either all cash or in clubs, $1.00 a week. An Ajax Watch Insulator given free with each Watch.

The Keystone Watch Club Co.

[illegible] Building
904 WALNUT ST., PHILADA., PA.

Agents Wanted.

Ajax Watch Insulator, $1.00
A perfect protection against magnetism. [illegible] Watch. Sent by mail on receipt of price. [illegible]

WEBSTER

THE BEST INVESTMENT
For the Family, School, or Professional Library.

Has been for years Standard Authority in the Government Printing Office and U. S. Supreme Court.

It is highly recommended by 38 State Sup'ts of Schools and the leading College Presidents.

Nearly all the School Books published in this country are based upon Webster, as attested by the leading School Book Publishers.

3000 more Words and nearly 2000 more Engravings than any other American Dictionary.

SPECIMEN TESTIMONIALS.

The New York World says: Webster is almost universally conceded to be the best.

The Boston Globe says: Webster is the acknowledged standard in lexicography.

The Atlanta Constitution says: Webster has long been the standard authority in our office.

The Chicago Inter Ocean says: Webster's Unabridged has always been the standard.

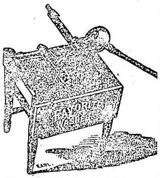
The New Orleans Times Democrat says: Webster is standard authority in our office.

The New York Tribune says: It is recognized as the most useful existing "word-book" of the English language all over the world.

Sold by all Booksellers. Pamphlet free.
G. & C. MERRIAM & CO., Pub'rs, Springfield, Mass.

THE FAVORITE WASHER

LEADS THE WORLD.



It proves a blessing wherever used, and it will sell on its merits. The rub board in the Favorite Washer is constructed differently from any other. There are no pins to tear the clothes.

AGENTS WANTED.

☞ Liberal Discounts Allowed.

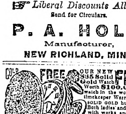
Send for Circulars.

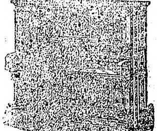
P. A. HOLT,
Manufacturer,
NEW RICHLAND, MINN.



FREE. OUR NEW $85 Solid Gold Watch FREE. Worth $100.00. Best $85 watch in the world. Perfect timekeeper. Warranted heavy, SOLID GOLD hunting cases. Both ladies' and gent's sizes, with works and cases of equal value. ONE PERSON in each locality can secure one free, together with our large and valuable line of Household Samples. These samples, as well as the watch, are free. All the work you need do is to show what we send you to those who call—your friends and neighbors and those about you—that always results in valuable trade for us, which holds for years when once started, and thus we are repaid. We pay all express, freight, etc. After you know all, if you would like to go to work for us, you can earn from $20 to $60 per week and upwards. Address, Stinson & Co., Box 812, Portland, Maine.

THE STERLING CO.

Manufacturers of



THE STERLING PIANOS,

WHICH FOR
Quality of Tone, Beauty of Design, FINISH and adaptability for standing in Tune have no equal.

Every Piano Warranted for Five Years

And satisfaction guaranteed to every purchaser.
Also Manufacture the WORLD-RENOWNED
STERLING ORGAN
Factories, Derby, Conn.

Take a policy in one of the reliable

Old Line Co's.

I represent several first class Insurance Companies and can

Guarantee Security

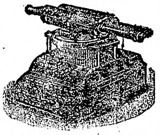
Satisfaction

To the Insured. Give us a call

John M. Boyle.

THE—

INTERNATIONAL TYPEWRITER!



A strictly first-class machine. Fully warranted. Made from very best material, by skilled workmen, and with the best tools that have ever been devised for the purpose. Warranted to do all that can be reasonably expected of the very best typewriter extant. Capable of writing 150 words per minute—or more—according to the ability of the operator.

Price - $100.00.

If there is no agent in your town, address the manufacturers,

THE PARISH MFG. CO.,
Agents Wanted. PARISH, N. Y.

FREE. STENOGRAPHY and TYPEWRITING FREE. First class facilities and best of teachers. Address, with stamp for return postage, THE PARISH MFG. CO., PARISH, N. Y.

WHAT IS GOING ON FOR MANY MILES ALL UNCOVERED TO THE EYE, AYE MORE

One of the BEST Telescopes in the world. FREE Our facilities are unequaled, and to introduce our superior goods we will send FREE to ONE PERSON in each locality, as above. Only those who write to us at once can make sure of the chance. All you have to do in return is to show our goods to those who call—your neighbors and those around you. The beginning of this advertisement shows the small end of the telescope. The following cut gives the appearance of it reduced to about the fiftieth part of its bulk. It is a grand, double size telescope, as large as is easy to carry. We will also show you how you can make from $3 to $10 a day at least, from the start, without experience. Better write at once. We pay all express charges. Address, H. HALLETT & CO., Box 880, PORTLAND, MAINE.

SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN

ESTABLISHED 1845

Is the oldest and most popular scientific and mechanical paper published and has the largest circulation of any paper of its class in the world. Fully illustrated. Best class of Wood Engravings. Published weekly. Send for specimen copy. Price $3 a year. Four months' trial, $1. MUNN & CO., PUBLISHERS, 361 Broadway, N.Y.

ARCHITECTS & BUILDERS
Edition of Scientific American.

A great success. Each issue contains colored lithographic plates of country and city residences or public buildings. Numerous engravings and full plans and specifications for the use of such as contemplate building. Price $2.50 a year, 25 cts. a copy. MUNN & CO., PUBLISHERS.

PATENTS may be secured by applying to MUNN & Co., who have had over 40 years' experience and have made over 100,000 applications for American and Foreign patents. Send for Handbook. Correspondence strictly confidential.

TRADE MARKS.

In case your mark is not registered in the Patent Office, apply to MUNN & Co., and procure immediate protection. Send for Handbook.

COPYRIGHTS for books, charts, maps, etc., quickly procured. Address

MUNN & CO., Patent Solicitors.
GENERAL OFFICE: 361 BROADWAY, N. Y.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Oct 17, 1890.
Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the clerk of district court at Detroit, Minn., on Dec. 3rd, 1890, viz: Charles Durand, pre-emption D. S. No. 5991 for the sw¼ sec 34 tp 150 rg 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz:

James C. O'Brien, John Moylan, Hugh Dean, Felix O'Claire, all of Red Lake, Minn.

oc23nov27 A. Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Oct. 17, 1890.
Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the clerk of the district court at Detroit, Minn., on Dec. 3rd, 1890, viz: Felix O'Claire, pre-emption D. S. No. 5987 for the e½ nw¼ nw¼ ne¼ sec 33 and lot 4 sec 28 tp 150 rg 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz:

Charles Durand, James C. O'Brien, John Moylan and Hugh Dean, all of Red Lake Minn.

A. Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Oct. 17, 1890.
Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the clerk of Dist Court at Detroit, Minn., on Dec. 3d, 1890, viz:

James C. O'Brien, pre-emption D S No. 5984 for the se¼ sec 23 tp 150 rg 32.

He names the following witness to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz:

Felix O'Claire, Charles Durand, John Moylan, Hugh Dean, all of Red Lake, Minn.

A. Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Oct. 17, 1890.
Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the clerk of District Court at Detrit, Minn., on Dec. 3d, 1890, viz:

Hugh Dean, Pre-emption D. S. No. 5983 for the nw¼ nw¼ sec 23 e½ nw¼ & lot 1 sec 22 twp tp 150 rg 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence oupon and cultivation of, said land, viz:

James C. O'Brien, John Moylan, Charles Du- Felix O'Claire, all of Red Lake Minn.

A. Barto, Register.

$2.00 SAVED

by buying your Shoes of the Manufacturer.
SATISFACTION GUARANTEED!
ONLY $2.50
for Shoes that usually retail at $4.00 and $5.00.

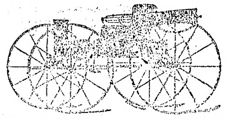
BUTTON. LACE. CONGRESS.

On receipt of $2.50 and twenty-five cents to pay expressage we will send one pair of our Fine Calf Shoes, Seamless Vamps, either Button, Lace or Congress. We Use only selected stock and the best workmanship. Every pair Warranted. Try our Shoes once and you will buy no others.

☞ Mention Size and Width wanted. Send postal note or N. Y. draft. Write your address plainly,—Town, County and State.

CUSTOM BOOT & SHOE CO.,
EAST WEYMOUTH, MASS.

McFARLAN CARRIAGE CO.
CONNERSVILLE, IND.



LARGE VARIETY. BEST STYLES.
LOW PRICES.
SEND FOR CATALOGUE AND PRICE LIST.
McFARLAN CARRIAGE CO.,
Connersville, Ind.

Red Lake Falls Iron Works.

P. & J MEEHAN, Proprietors.
J. Z PERRON, Manager.

SAW AND GRIST MILL
MACHINERY MADE AND REPAIRED.

◆

Repairing Thresher Engines
AND BOILERS AND
AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS.

Circular Saws Hammered. Satfaction Guaranteed, Correspondence Solicited.

◆

BRING IN YOUR WORK
Scrap Brass and Copper Bought

Hunt & McClatchie

—DEALERS IN—

Heavy and Shelf Hardware.

DEERING FARM MACHINERY

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn, Nov. 4, 1890.
Notice is hereby given, that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the clerk of the Dist. court at Detroit Minn., on Dec. 29, 1890, viz James Dean, pre-emption d s 5982, for the se¼ sec 1 tp 150 rg 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz

Peter Lonson, James McMahon, James Wiley, James C O'Brien, all of Red Lake, Minn.

A. Barto, Register.

Land Office at Crookston, Minn., Oct. 27th, 1890. Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the register or receiver U. S. Land Office at Crookston, Minn., on Dec. 13th, 1890, viz:

Joseph Patnode, Hd No 10934, for the w½ ne¼ sec 27, tp 151, r 43.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuos residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz:

Exeric Chatel, Sam Miller, John Deforge, A. Lafontaine, all of Red Lake Falls, Minn.

nov7d13 H. H Dickmann, Register.

Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the clerk of District Court at Detroit, Minn., on December 29, 1890, viz Peter Lonson, pre-emption d s No 5986, for the s½ ne¼, and n½ se¼ sec 26, tp 150, r 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz

James Wiley, James McMahon, James C. O'-rien, James Dean, all of Red Lake, Minn.

A Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Nov. 4, 1890.
Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the clerk of District Court at Detroit, Minn., on Dec. 29, 1890, viz James McMahon, pre emption D S No 5988, for the se¼ sec 33, tp 150, rg 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz

James Wiley, Peter Lonson, James C O'Brien, James Dean, all of Red Lake, Minn.

A Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Oct. 3, 1890.
Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the clerk of the district court at Detroit, Minn., on November 20, 1890, viz: Edward J. Garceau, preemption D. S. No. 5990 for the n½ sw¼, sw¼ nw¼, sec 33 and lot 2, section 32 tp 150 r 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz: Michael Burns, John F. Crawford and Felix O'Claire, all of Red Lake, Minn.

A. Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Oct. 6, 1890.
Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the judge or in his absence the clerk of the district court at Detroit Minn., on Nov. 20, 1890, viz: Michael Burns, H E No. 14,905, for the s½ se¼, nw¼ se¼ and sw¼ ne¼ sec 34, tp 150 r 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz: Joseph P. Dargan, John F. Crawford, Edward J. Garceau, Felix O'Claire, all of Red Lake Minn.

oct9-nov13 A. Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn. Oct. 3, 1890.
Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the clerk of Dist. court at Detroit, Minn., on November 20th, 1890, viz: John F. Crawford, pre-emption D S No. 5985 for the e½ nw¼ nw, nw¼ sec 34, and sw¼ sw¼ sec 27, tp 150 r 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz: Machael Burns, Edward J. Garceau, Joseph P. Dargan, Felix O'Claire, all of Red Lake, Minn.

A. Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Oct. 3, 1890.
Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the clerk of the District court at Detroit, Minn., on November 20, 1890, viz; Joseph P. Dargan, preemption, D S No 5989, for the e½ ne¼, sw¼ ne¼, sec 33 and sw¼ nw¼ sec 34 tp 150 rg 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of, said land, viz: Michael Burns, Edward J. Garceau, John F. Crawford, Felix O'Clair, all of Red Lake, Minn. A. Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Nov. 4, 1890
Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the clerk of district court at Detroit, Minn., on Dec. 29, 1890, viz: James Wiley, pre-emption d s No. 5,992 for the s½ se¼, nw¼ se¼, and se¼ sw¼ sec 35 tp 150 rg 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz;

Peter Lonson, James McMahon, James Dean, James O'Brien, all of Red Lake, Minn.

nov6do11 A. Barto, Register.

P. & J MEEHAN,

(SUCCESSORS TO J. J. HOWE & CO)

Manufacturers and Dealers in

LUMBER,

LATH,

SHINGLES

Sash, Doors, Moldings, Building Paper,

Yards and Office on Main St.

We Would Like to Call the Attention of

Capitalists

Manufacturers and Others Desiring a Place for

INVESTMENT

—To the—

Superior Advantages of

RED LAKE FALLS,

Is Many Water Powers and other natural advantages. It is only a question of a few years until this will be one of the leading cities of Minnesota. Investment in real estate or water privileges are sure to secure to the investors handsome returns.

—WE RE—

In the Center of Vast

Farming District.

Yearly consuming large amounts of imported products of manufactures. This vast tract of land is watered by the Red Lake and Clearwater rivers. Within the limits of the city are

12 DISTINCT WATER POWERS.

The only natural water powers on these streams. There are fine openings for paper and pulp mills, woolen and other factories. Parties outside desiring any information concerning property, address

BOYLE & MEEHAN.

RED LAKE FALLS NEWS.

JAMES MEEHAN JR., EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR

OFFICIAL PAPER OF CITY AND COUNTY.

Vol. VII. No. 50. RED LAKE FALLS, POLK COUNTY, MINNESOTA, NOVEMBER 20, 1890. TERMS, $1.50 PER YEAR

> SPECIAL <

CLOAK - SALE

> THIS WEEK <

JOSEPH SMITH & CO.

TO MAKE ROOM FOR

Fall and Winter Goods

WE WILL OFFER

For : the - Next : Fifteen - Days

AN ENTIRE STOCK OF

Spring and SummeR

CLOTHING AT COST

This Includes Youths' Boys' and Men's Suits.

Our Stock of

FUR - COATS

Will Arrive About Sept. 26.

A SPECIAL REDUCTION IN

Ladies' Oxfords and Summer Footwear.

ALL THIS WEEK.

A SNAP—A Ladie's Fine Shoe For $1.50.

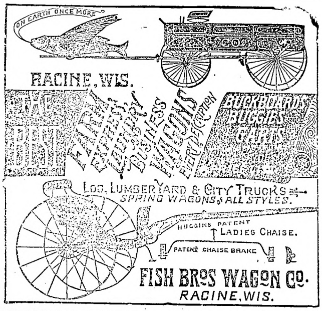
We Have Just Received a Line of

LADIES' FRENCH KID SHOES.

Which we Sell Very Cheap.

School Shoes, School Shoes, School Shoes.

W. A. SCHREITER.



CHARLES LANGEVIN

—DEALER IN—

GENERAL MERCHANDISE,

RED LAKE FALLS, MINNESOTA

Bangs & Co.,

GENERAL : MERCHANTS,

Red Lake Falls, Minn.

Dry Goods, Groceries,

Men's and Boys' Clothing,

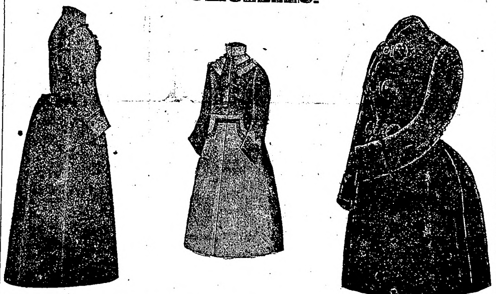
Ladies' and Children's Cloaks,

Boots and Shoes, etc.

We have a full stock and can offer some very attractive prices.

Granulated sugar, 13lbs for $1.00.
Good light brown sugar, 14 lbs. for $1.00.
Good clean rice, 14 lbs. for $1.00.
New dried grapes, 12 lbs. for $1.00.
A pound can of good baking powder 15c.
Twenty pounds new jelly, $1.15.
Pail of new syrup, (2 gals) $1.
Good Roasted coffee, 25c.
Water-white oil, per gal., 15c.
Prints, from 4½c.
Gingham 8 and 10c.
Good, yard-wide sheeting, 7c.
Best shirtings, 12½c.
Good shirtings, 10c.
Wool flannels, from 25c.
Heavy double width from 65c.
36-inch dress tricots, 28c.
Horse Blankets, $1.

CLOAKS.



We have a large assortment of Ladies' and Children's Cloaks.

Ladies' Plush Sacques, $14.00. $20.00. $23.50 Ladie's Cloth Ulsters, from $5.00 up.

Misses' and Children's cloaks in all sizes and prices.

Overcoats-

Men's and Boy's in great variety.

Boys' Sizes from $2.00 to $10.00, Men's Sizes from $5.07 to $35.

Clothing, Clothing, Clothing.

Our Stock is too Large to Describe—Come and see it.

Blankets.
Comforters.
Dress Tricots.
Cashmeres.
Wool skirting.
Shawls.
Nubias.
Wool hoods.
Jeans and Cassimeres.
Overalls.
Lined Jackets.
Leather Coats.
Underwear.
Gloves and Mittens.
Carpet Warp.
Weaving Yarn.
Boot Packs.
Shoe Packs.
Wool Boots.
Moccasins.
Arctics.
Trunks.
Valises.
Grain Bags.

Mackinaw Flannels in Great Variety.

We Have :—

ONLY ONE CASH PRICE

—: To all Alike.

Bangs & Co.

How Severe Colds are Broken up in Montana.

When we find a medicine we know to possess genuine merit, we consider it a duty, and take pleasure in telling the public what it is. Such a medicine we found Chamberlain's Cough remedy, last winter, when la grippe was prevailing. We are satisfied that we warded off several attacks that were threatening by the use of this syrup and we have since relieved in a few hours, severe colds, and in the course of two or three days, entirely broken them up by its use, as have several of our friends to whom we have recommended it. It is all that it is represented to be by the manufacturers. If you have cough and want to stop it Chamberlain Cough remedy will do the work, for sale by W. A Schreiter.

A Preventive For Croup.

The discovery of preventive for croup, is one of the most important made in recent years. Since first discovered it has been used in many cases and with unvarying success. Its being within the reach of all makes it the more valuable. It is only necessary to give Chamberlain's cough remedy freely as soon as the first indications of croup appear, and it will dispel all symptoms of the disease. Full directions are given with each bottle. For 50 cents at Schreieters.

There may be persons in this community who are at times troubled with colic, or subject to attacks of bowel complaint If so, they should try Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It will afford almost immediate relief, and when reduced with water is pleasant to take. If taken as soon as the first indication of the disease is felt it will ward off the attack. Many people use it in this way, and find that it never fails them. A 25 or 50 cent bottle may be obtained a W. A. Schreiter's.

THE

WISCONSIN CENTRAL LINES

NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD CO. LESSEE

RUNS

Fast trains with Pullman Vestibuled Drawing Room Sleepers, Dining Cars and Coaches of latest design, between Chicago and Milwaukee and St. Paul and Minneapol.

Fast train with Pullmant Vestibuled Drawing Room Sleeping Dining Cars and Coaches of latest design between Chiacgo and Milwaukee and Ashland and Duluth.

Through Pullman Vestibuled Drawing Room and Colonist Sleepers via the Northern Pacific Railroad between Chicogo and portland, Ore.

Conveniete Trains to and from Eastern, Western, Northern and Contril Wisconsin points, affording unequalled service to and from Waukesha, Fond du Lac, Oshkosk, Neenah, Menasha, Chippewa Fall, Eau Claire, Hurley, Wis., and Ironwood and Bessemer, Mich.

For tickets, sleeping car reservations, time tables and other information, apply to Agents of the line, or to ticket Agents anywhere in the Unitsd States or Canada.

S. L. Ainslie, Gen. Man., Milwaukea.
J. M. Hanaford, Gen. Traf. Man. St. Paul.
H. C. Barlow, Traffic Man. Chicago.
Louis Eckstein, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, Chicago.

In conjunction with the Erie System operates Fast Vestibuled Trains between Chicago and the Atlantic Seaboard. you may travel in the most Elegant and complete Pullman Vestibuled Trains ever constructed and save $1.50 to Buffalo and Niagara Falls, $3.00 to New York $2.35 to Albany and Troy, and $3.00 to Boston and New England Cities.

No rival line offers the advantages of a system of throuh first and second-class day coaches and Pullman Dining cars chicago to New York.

It is the only line operating pullman cars to Boston and New England via Albany.

Entire trains are lighted by gas, heated by steam. Pullman dining cars run through in either direction.

Pullman chair and sleeping cars to Columbus, O., and Ashland, Ky., Daily.

No extra charge for fast time and unsurpassed accommodations afforded by these luxurious trains.

IT ALL DEPENDS.

The boy peeped in the gun's long tubes,
"Unloaded," dark and brown;
They blew him high into the sky,
And when that youth came down
His father patched him up, and said—
With wisdom keen and kind—
"Don't stand before a dangerous thing,
But always get behind."
He was a rather thoughtful youth,
And treasured up this little truth.

So one fine day while strolling on
His daily path to school,
There, lunching on a thistle pod,
He spied a slant-eyed mule;
Its ears were long, its paint brush tail
Looked drooping, smooth and kind,
And yet the boy—mistrusting all—
Stood carefully behind.
Up went two heels too quick to see,
And that wise boy, oh, where was he?

He sailed aloft five hundred yards—
A pin-wheel whirling 'round—
Then fell with emphasis and vim
Upon the quivering ground;
His eyes were crossed, his ears askew,
His long legs warped and bent,
His ribs all telescoped and cracked,
His head had many a dent;
His inner fixings all unfixed,
His soul and gizzard badly mixed.

"Ah, well," said he, "the old man erred;
There's mighty little fun
Behind a sleek unloaded mule,
Before a loaded gun;
This thing of planning out our ends
On circumstances all depends."
Commend this fact to all your friends.
—St. Louis Republican.

THE HARBOR MANIAC.

Translated for the Wisconsin from the French of Hector France.

Land! Land!

First an indistinct line floating like a thread of mist 'twixt the blue of heaven and the blue of the sea: then undulating outlines more and more defined, standing out in ever bolder relief; then the horizon rises up before the eyes, jagged, uneven. Everywhere before us, land! The mountain-chain of the Star towers majestically aloft. The great white cliffs and the dark gashes in the rock, and the wide green expanses, start out; then the outjutting point of the Eagle hiding the old port, the islands of Rion, the Palm Island and the Croisette Cape. The entire oasct comes out of the sea, abrupt and wild with its gorges and sharp, broken contours, washed in warm tones of red, ond yellow, and gray. Vessels of all shapes and sizes, from the bark with its lateen sail to the three-masted man-of-war, cross the harbor in every direction, and from their post on the quarter-deck the captains salute each other.

Now appear the quai, the palaces on both sides of it and the matchless cafes of the Canebiere, and pretty girls in light dresses, dark Provence maidens, noisy groups of sailors, a motley crowd of Arabs, Maltese, Persians, Chinese, Greeks. The East of past ages and the East of modern days mingle with Western types; all sorts of costumes all sorts of idioms, greet the eye and car; the sun pours into shop windows, the sound o singing comes from drinking saloons; monkeys dance to the wail of hand-organs; there is confusion, there is hurry, there is a flaring of the bright colors; it is a scene that passes before one like the panorama of a fairy spectacle. Stop!

The gang-planks have been lowered, and officers, tourists, merchants, hasten down them. The troopers follow, zouaves, chasseurs, spahis, turcos, fantassins, artillerymen, hussards—each with his luggage, consisting of a canvas bag a leather valise, a box, or quite simply a handkerchief containing all the owner's wordly possessions—defile one after the other. They stamp, stretch their legs, happy in that they touch their native soil again; happy especially in the thought that perhaps that very night they will see once more the belfry of their village, and the familiar hearth where many a time and oft a dear group has sat talking of the absent one. Ah! the joy of this return after long years! "It is he! There he is!" And the first run forward is the old mother, all trembling, more impatient and happier than all others—happier and more impatient even than the blushing betrothed; for of all she it is whose blushing betrothed, for of all she it is whose love is freest from calculation or interest. The son she presses to her heart may have grown forgetful and an ingrate; poor, crippled, aged, changed, wasted—by fevers, eaten up by vice, he is still her child, always her child.

"Soldier, a nice hand-glass?"

"A case for your pipe?"

"A tobacco pouch, sir zouave?"

"Aren't you going to take away a little souvenir from Marseilles, handsome chasseur?"

Thus peddlers, and young girls with provocative pupils, urging their wares. And a great host of greedy innkeepers, of rapacious keepers of dives, hold out their cards, yell out in a hoarse voice their name and address.

"Cafe des Zouaves, ten minutes' walk!"

"Mine is just opposite here! Moderate prices."

"Don't go to them, soldier! They'll poison you!"

"Get out, thief! No one ever left your hole without the colic!"

"Get out, you! Your patties are made of dead cat's meat!"

"And you make yours out of the pocketbooks of your customers! Knave!"

"Jail-bird!"

"Soldier, won't you listen to me?"

It was a woman with emaciated cheeks and hair turning gray who spoke. She was dressed all in black, very plainly but decently, like a widow who strives to hide her sorrow. There were dark circles under her eyes; and they were eyes that bore the traces of sleepless night; they looked so sad, tearless as they were, that one might have thought all the despair of humanity had passed through their depths.

She was not selling anything. Her hands, encased in black cotton gloves, held a parasol, much worn. She was endeavoring to make a place for herself among the peddlers and tavern-keepers; but they pushed her brutally aside and then she would move quickly away, finding an other little empty space, from which standpoint she could watch, at first with a glance of supreme hope, followed thereafter by one of indescribable anguish, every soldier as he passed. Her countenance offered one continuous alteration of anticipation and despair.

"Eh," said a Zouave, "I know her! She was planted here a year ago."

"I saw her in the same spot six months before," said another. And a third added: "She's the widow of the whole Grand Army!"

And everyone began to laugh, and the sellers of trumpery and the tavern-keepers loudest of all.

But she, the "widow," only advanced with a timid motion of the hand as though she wished to accost someone. Then when only half a dozen laggards remained to bring up the rear of the column—dragging themselves and their fevers, and their canvas bags heavily along—she nerved herself to speak:

"Soldier, won't you listen to me?"

"Eh? What? What do you want old woman?"

"Old woman! She was scarcley that, she had barely passed her fortieth year—the full bloom time of the happy ones of earth. But for her, as for the women of all those just now landing, the years must have counted double.

"Soldier, won't you listen to me?"

Such despair was in her glance, such supplication in her voice, that I stopped, moved to sympathy. But the laughter round about broke out afresh.

"Well, crazy Jane! Is it he?" cried some porters.

A knot of custom-house employes looked on grinning. Mortified and embarassed I passed on.

When I looked back, a few paces further on, the woman was standing, motionlessly, in the same place; and I thought two tears had left their traces on her withered cheek. An impulse seized me to return, to approach her again. Why did those coarse brutes stand there laughing, grinning all over their animal faces, winking their cynical eyes?

The woman, unmindful of their mockeries, as though she were well accustomed to them, gave one more desolate look toward the vessel which had brought us from the African coast, and seeing that the last passenger had left it, turned and dwelt a long time on the motly assemblage of soldiers along the quay, as though something dearer than life were at stake for her. Then, lowering her black veil, she moved away slowly, like a phantom of despair.

For several days that phantom haunted me. Among ths restored delights of home the woman's face would start suddenly before me, and the memory of her stricken eyes quench the laughter on my lips. But by degrees the obsession ceased, and I had forgotten it wholly, when, three months later, my convalescent's furlough having expired, I met the woman again on the quay as I was about to take the packet.

Yes, it was she; all in black, with her great sad, despairing eyes, undimmed by all the tears they had shed, and her poor but decent clothing. She was waiting for the landing of a vessel which had just brought some troop from Philippeville.

In three months had not he whom her heart awaited yet come? Was she about to take her place again in the midst of that vile crowd, elbowed, insulted, pushed about like a woman of the town?

"So you're here again," said a seargent de ville brutally. "Move on. You've been told before not to hang around."

She made as though she would protest, but the words died away before the man's burly visage died and she walked, without speaking, to a point further on.

"Whom is she waiting for?" I asked.

The policeman shrugged his shoulders and touched his forehead.

"But whom does she expect?"

"Bah!" he muttered indifferently. "Her son."

And he turned brusquely on his heel, and hurried up to two saloon-keepers who were pummeling each other.

Years passed, and one winter evening I landed once more in the port of Marseilles. I had lost many illusions, and gained many cares in place of them, and I had rubbed so freely against men and against disappointments that I seemed to have grown callous to the care.

"Gentlemen, listen to me."

Was it possible. I recognized the gentle, desolate voice, once it had grown more desolate, more pleading than before. The "harbor maniac!" Eh, old woman, is it you again? For one could, without injustice, call her old now. Her head shook with a palsied movement, and her thinning hair had turned as white as silver. She is 50 years old now, and she still waits for her son. Ah, poor, old creature, life has not been rosy for you, either!

She kept her ardent eyes fixed on me, under the flaring light of the torches. Her cheeks had grown more sunken, the lines upon them deeper, her whole aspect expressed a more despairing sorrow.

"Your son has made you suffer, too, has he?"

For we soldiers have all made our mothers suffer.

"My son!" she exclaimed, breathlessly. "Do you know him? Oh, tell me if he is with you? It is so dark, and my eyes have grown so dim, that I cannot see very well. And the torches flare so! He is a handsome young fellow, fair, with a little mustache. He is a non-commissioned officer. Oh! he loves me so much, I don't see why he makes me wait so long. Ten years!"

She caught her breath, and hurried on in a lower tone:

"I have seen so many handsome young men come back to their mothers. Why has mine not returned? Twice every week I come here. I have never missed once. Ah, I know the day and when the boats come in that should bring my boy to me very well. But he is not here yet; no, not yet. Paul! Paul."

"Come, Madam, tell me about him."

She looked at me fixedly, as though astonished to hear anyone speak civilly to her.

"Yes, sir," she went on, "I am asking every one; I am trying to gain some information. Perhaps some one of the passengers has seen my son?"

"They have all landed by now, madam. You must wait for the next boat."

"Wait! Wait! And yet here is what he wrote me."

She searched precipitately through her pockets, unable to find the letter in her haste and emotion. The custom-house porters, catching sight of her little black figure, snickered aloud.

"She has her clutches on a fellow now. She won't soon let him go again."

Did the idiots think their clumsy sarcasm would intimidate me? I was no longer the silly boy I had been ten years before, and I had learned to despise cowards and fools. I turned to the old woman.

"Take my arm, madam. It is raining. Let me take you to the nearest cafe. Then you can show me your son's letter."

She gave me a grateful glance, and drawing me into one of the narrow little streets adjacent to the Old Harbor, she took me up a flight of dark steps and into a poor little room where a table was spread. On the table was a bottle with a red seal, and near the bottle lay a little nosegay of faded floweres.

"Everything is in readiness for him," she said. "I only need to put a match to the hearth. But see, see what he writes to me."

And, with a shaking hand, she held toward me an old letter she had carefully drawn from a worn envelope, and which I had much difficulty unfolding without separating the pieces, and more difficulty still in deciphering, so many were the tears that had fallen upon it.

It was dated ten years back, and announced the arrival of her son by the first packet.

And never since have I been able to see the incoming of a vessel without thinking that it is not bringing all of its passengers, nor to witness the joy of those who greet the return of long-absent ones without a remembrance of the places at other hearts forever left empty. And, amid the tumult of the past and gone impressions, I seem to hear again the sobs of the woman in black on the quay of Marseilles.

◆

The Drowsy God in Love.

Julian Ralph in the Epoch.

The story told of the German maiden and the boss plumber who spent their courting nights in innocent slumber in their chairs, was paralleled in my experience, for one of the young women in my list of sweethearts used to tell me that her sister had a beau, a farmer, who always fell asleep soon after he had come to see her. He had done a hard day's work on the farm, and she had been tiresomely employed in the house. Neither one had anything to converse about, so, when he fell asleep, she settled herself for a nap, and whichever one woke first awakened the other, whereupon the young farmer bade the young lady good night and went away—it might be 11 o'clock or it might be 3 o'clock in the morning.

◆

An Accomodating Judge.

Dan Langley, a Georgia moonshiner, was tried and convicted. At the trial he told the judge that he was to be married in a little over a month, and the judge therefore sentenced him to imprisonment for just one month. He was thus able to quit jail on a Monday and start for his home in Gordon county, where he was to be married on the following Wednesday. He was so thankful for the light sentence that he promised to send the judge a gallon of the best moonshine whisky to be got.—Chicago Times.

◆

Senator Morrill, of Vermont, has been in public life longer than any American now living. He entered the house of representatives thirty-four years ago.

Sliding in Earnest.

Down ordinary descents, and quite steep ones, too, it is the custom to allow the reindeer to trot and increase the rapidity of their motion as the sled pushes upon their heels, until at last they gallop at the top of their speed. Near Bulun, which is two days' journey from the mouth of the Lena River, there are several very steep grades, and the reindeer scampering down like the wind, the drivers shouting at the top of their voices, and the sleds bounding over the rough places, make up a scene well worth witnessing.

The Esquimaux of North America, on land journeys, often encounter hills where it would be very dangerous to attempt a descent with a heavily loaded sled drawn by dogs. When such a place is reached, they unhitch the dogs and let the sled descend by its own weight. All the men act as brakes to prevent, if possible, a descent so rapid as to land the equipage a complete wreck at the bottom. The two strongest of the drivers take their places on the sides at the front of the sled, and the others on where they can; all pull back as strongly as possible when the speed increases. Some plant their feet straight in front of them and send the snow flying as if from a snowplow. Others find themselves taking leaps that would astonish a kangaroo, are dragged furiously along, or, maybe, come rolling to the bottom after the sled. The dogs regard the whole affair as a joke, and with their traces tied together come dashing along in the wild chase, some barking joyously, others yelping distressedly as, caught in the traces, they are dragged to the foot of the hill by their reckless companions. It often seemed a wonder when, even with all our exertions, we could land sled and party at the bottom safely.—St. Nicholas.

◆

Where the Papers are Published.

Reading and reflecting on the wonderful development of certain special features of periodical literature, the subject in its entirety as related to this country is a wonder. Statistics on this topic are never dry. And here are some reliable ones. George P. Rowell & Co. have now for more than twenty years made reports on the actual issue of American newspapers and magazines. The figures of this firm are honest, thorough and to be relied upon. The periodical publications now issued in the United States and Canada are found to be divided as follows: Daily, 1,512; tri-weekly, 50; semi-weekly, 194; weekly, 12,322; bi-weekly, 67; semi-monthly, 239; monthly, 1,792; bi-monthly, 25; quarterly, 100; making a total of 16,310.

When credited to the states in which they are published the geographical distribution of these periodicals is shown to be: New York, 1,636; Pennsylvania, 1,169; Illinois, 1,157; Ohio, 940; Kansas, 807; Iowa, 787; Dominion of Canada, 755; Missouri, 674; the territories, 661; Michigan, 632; Massachusetts, 614; Indiana, 612; Nebraska, 521; Wisconsin, 484; Texas, 468, California, 463; Minnesota, 371; New Jersey, 297; Georgia, 242; Tennessee, 227; Kentucky, 222; Virginia, 217; Colorado, 215; North Carolina, 194; Arkansas, 181; Maryland, 180; Connecticut, 173; Alabama, 167; Maine, 155; Louisana, 142; Mississippi, 139; West Virginia, 138; Florida, 121; New Hampshire, 107; Oregon, 105; South Carolina, 101; Vermont, 69; District of Columbia, 54; Rhode Island, 52; Delaware, 34; Nevada, 27.—Current Literature.

◆

Alexander's Sarcophagus.

Levant Herald.

Good progress has been made with the annex to the Imperial Museum which is to contain by Hamdi Bey at Sidon, last year and if the builders continue at the present pace it may be hoped that the work will be complete in about three weeks time. The new building is a substantial structure of considerable dimensions, built in brick and faced with stone, the floor and roof being sustained by heavy iron girders. The opening of this mausoleum is anticipated with great interest, as the public will then have an opportunity of seeing the sarcophagus which is believed to contain the remains of Alexander the Great. Hamdi Bey has, we understand, written a monograph on this tomb which is almost ready for publication, and which states the grounds upon which he bases his conclusion that the remains are those of Alexander. M. Renan does not subscribe to this conclusion, but this fact does not detract from the interest of the tombs, than which archeological research has given to the world nothing more remarkable since the discoveries at Hessarlik and Mycenæ.

◆

Susan B. Anthony.

For forty years Miss Susan B. Anthony has been working in the cause of women sufferage. She is still hopeful and active, though she probably does not expect to live to see the fulfilment of her dreams. It is likely that forty years ago she was more sanguine of immediate results than she is today, but, looking back, she is not disatisified with the work she has done, and she has no doubt that the people will in time be educated up to the point of recognizing the civil rights of woman.—Washington Star.

A DOCTOR'S CONFESSION.

He Doesn't Take Much Medicine and Advises the Reporter Not To.

"Humbug?" Of course it is. The so-called science of medicine is a humbug and has been from the time of Hippocrates to the present. Why the biggest crank in the Indian tribes is the medicine man."

"Very frank was the admission, especially so when it came from one of the biggest young physicians of the city, one whose practice is among the thousands, though he has been graduated but a few years," says the Buffalo Courier. "Very cozy was his office too, with its cheerful grate fire, its Queen Anne furniture, and its many lounges and easy-chairs. He stirred the fire lazily, lighted a fresh cigar, and went on."

"Take the prescriptions laid down in the books and what do you find? Poisons mainly, and nauseating stuffs that would make a healthy man an invalid. Why in the world science should go to poisont for its remedies I cannot tell, nor can I find any one who can."

"How does a doctort know the effect of his medicine?" he asked. "He calls, prescribes, and goes away. The only way to judge would be to stand over the bed and watch the patient. This cannot be done. So, really, I don't know how he is to tell what good or hurt he does. Sometime ago, you remember, the Boston Glode sent out a reporter with a stated set of smptons. He went to eleven prominent physicians and brought back eleven different prescriptions. This just shows how much science there is in medicine."

There are local diseases of various characters for which nature provides positive remedies. They may not be included in the regular physician's list, perhaps, because of their simplicity, but the evidence of their curative power is beyond dispute. Kidney disease is cured by Warner's Safe Cure, a strictly herbal remedy. Thousands of persons, every year, write as does H. J. Gardiner, of Pontiac, R. I., August 7, 1890:

A few years ago I suffered more than probably ever will be known outside of myself, with kidney and liver complaint. It is the old story —I visited doctor after doctor, but to no avail. I was at Newport, and Dr. Blackman recommended Warner's Safe Cure. I commenced the use of it, and found relief immediately. Altogether I took three bottles, and I truthfully state that it cured me."

◆

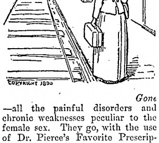
University students at Ann Arbor, Mich., engaged in a general row, resulting in the arrest of six of their number. No one suffered severe injury.

◆

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria,

◆

Messrs. Dillon, O'Brien, O'Connor, Gill Harrington, Sullivan and the remainder o the Irish parlimentary party left Philadelphia for Boston, where they will address meetings.



Gone
—all the painful disorders and chronic weaknesses peculiar to the female sex. They go, with the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Periodical pains, weak back, bearing-down sensations, nervous prostration, all "female complaints" are cured by it. It is purely vegetable and perfectly harmless—a powerful general, as well as uterine, tonic and nervine, imparting vigor and strength to the whole system. It costs you nothing if it fails to give satisfaction. It's guaranteed to do so, in every case, or the money is refunded. It can be guaranteed —for it does it. No other medicine for women is sold on such terms.

That's the way its makers prove their faith in it. Contains no alcohol to inebriate; no syrup or sugar to derange digestion; a legitimate medicine, not a beverage. Purely vegetable and perfectly harmless in any condition of the system.

World's Dispensary Medical Association, Proprietors, No. 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

VASELINE.

FOR ONE DOLLAR sent us by mail, we will deliver, free of all charges, to any person in the United States, all the following articles carefully packed in a neat box:
One two ounce bottle of Pure Vaseline. 10cts.
One two ounce bottle Vaseline Pomade. 15 "
One jar of Vaseline Cold Cream..............15 "
One cake of Vaseline Camphor Ice..........10 "
One cake of Vaseline Soap, unscented.....10 "
One cake of Vaseline Soap, scented.........25 "
One two ounce bottle of White Vaseline..25 "
—$1.10
Or for stamps any single article at the price.
If you have occasion to use Vaseline in any form be careful to accept only genuine goods put up by us in original packages. A great many druggists are trying to persuade buyers to take VASELINE put up by them. Never yield to such persuasion, as the article is an imitation without value, and will not give you the result you expect. A bottle of Blue Seal Vaseline is sold by all druggists at ten cents.
Chesebrough M'f'g Co., 24 State St, New York.

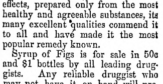
SYRUP of FIGS

ONE ENJOYS
Both the method and results when Syrup of Figs is taken; it is pleasant and refreshing to the taste, and acts gently yet promptly on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels, cleanses the system effectually, dispels colds, headaches and fevers and cures habitual constipation. Syrup of Figs is the only remedy of its kind ever produced, pleasing to the taste and acceptable to the stomach, prompt in its action and truly beneficial in its effects, prepared only from the most healthy and agreeable substances, its many excellent qualities commend it to all and have made it the most popular remedy known.

Syrup of Figs is for sale in 50c and $1 bottles by all leading druggists. Any reliable druggist who may not have it on hand will procure it promptly for any one who wishes to try it. Do not accept any substitute.

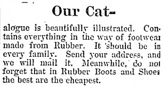
CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
LOUISVILLE, KY. NEW YORK, N.Y.

SICK HEADACHE
CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.
Positively cured by these Little Pills.
They also relieve Distress from Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Too Hearty Eating. A perfect remedy for Dizziness, Nausea Drowsiness, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Coated Tongue, Pain in the Side. TORPID LIVER. They regulate the Bowels. Purely Vegetable.
Price 25 Cents.
CARTER MEDICINE CO., NEW YORK.
Small Pill. Small Dose. Small Price.



Our Catalogue is beautifully illustrated. Contains everything in the way of footwear made from Rubber. It should be in every family. Send your address, and we will mail it. Meanwhile, do not forget that in Rubber Boots and Shoes the best are the cheapest.

WOONSOCKET
rubbers fit best, wear best, are best.
BEWARE of inferior Rubbers sold under other brands. Insist on Woonsocket Rubber Boots and Shoes. They're the best. Sold everywhere. Manufactured by the WOONSOCKET RUBBER CO., PROVIDENCE, R.I. Send for Catalogue.



AMERICANIZED ENCYCLOPÆDIA BRITANNICA
Complete to 1890, in Ten Large Volmes,
—AND THE—
DAILY AND SUNDAY
PIONEER PRESS
ONE YEAR
—FOR—
$2.50 a Month.
Sample volumes sent for inspection by having order for same guaranteed by some responsible person in your town, you to pay express charges. For full particulars and circulars address
THE PIONEER PRESS CO.,
ST. PAUL, MINN

FOR MEN ONLY!
A POSITIVE CURE For LOST or FAILING MANHOOD; General and NERVOUS DEBILITY; Weakness of Body and Mind: Effects of Errors or Excesses in Older Young. Robust, Noble MANHOOD fully Restored. How to Enlarge and Strengthen WEAK, UNDEVELOPED ORGANS & PARTS of BODY. Absolutely unfailing HOME TREATMENT—Benefits in a day. Men testify from 47 States, Territories, and Foreign Countries. You can write them. Book, full explanation, and proofs mailed (sealed) free. Address ERIE MEDICAL CO., BUFFALO, N. Y.

LAND CLAIMANTS.
CHAS. COWLES TUCKER
Attorney at Law.
Webster Law Building, WASHINGTON, D. C.
Practices before the General Land office; the Court of Claims and all departments. Prompt and careful attention given contested Land Cases, Mining Claims and Railroad Cases. Correspondence solicited.

Country Courting.

Every lad in the country, no matter how lowly his occupation may be or how small the wages he may earn, makes it a point to own a set of harness and a buggy, says the New York World. This anyway, and, if possible, a horse. If he can't get the horse, however, it doesn't make so much difference, for he can generally manage to borrow an animal of some sort, either from his employer or some neighboring farmer. These things are absolutely essential to the kind of courting he does, and the only one who doesn't enjoy it is the horse.

When Saturday afternoon comes around the boys may be found hard at work with a bottle of harness polish, making the horse's apparel shine for the regular Sunday turnout. And then a bucket of water and a sponge are brought into play, and the buggy is made to look as bright and clean as new. Sunday afternoon every thing is in readiness, and decked out in his best suit of clothes, which sometimes fits him but more often doesn't, he ties a piece of bright ribbon on his whip, climbs into his buggy and drives off.

May be he has a friend from some other point stopping with him, and in that case the friend goes along. The latter is taken to some house along the route where there is a daughter in the family. She is asked whether she expects any caller or not that evening, and if the answer be in the negative the friend is introduced and left in care of the girl, who treats him just as if they had been life-long friends, and he in turn does his share towards carrying out the presumption. He takes tea with the family and then is escorted to the parlor, when he and his new-found acquaintance are left alone to entertain each other as best they see fit.

In the meantime the buggy owner has driven on to his destination. His best girl welcomes him with open arms. A hug, a kiss and a how-do-ye-do comprise the salutatory, and then he goes through the same course as the friend whom he has left behind. After tea he goes to the parlor and he and the object of his admiration sit and chat together the whole night long. This is a fact, and they don't sit as city folks do, either. They huddle together on a lounge or sofa and, clasped in each other's arms, sit and coo like a pair of turtle doves. No one is there to disturb or embarrass them. The old folks have gone to bed and the youngsters are alone in their glory. For a time they talk about crops and the weather and discuss the habits of some mutual acquaintance, and when they have exhausted all subjects on which they find it easy to converse they don't go ahead and talk for the sake of saying something, as city folks do, but they remain silent and sit for hours hugging and kissing each other, until the break of day warns the youth that it is time for him to retire. Then he gives his girl a parting kiss and hug, another for good luck, and takes his departure.

* * *

How Women Wed.

A man asked me the other day how women find husbands, writes "Bab" in the New York Star. It was such a puzzling question to me that I constituted myslf a committee of one and went around among a lot of married women to see how their husbands proposed to them.

There wasn't one who had ever had an absolute romantic avowal of love! There wasn't one whose husband had gotten down on his knees, caught the loved one's hand and besought of her, unless she wished to see him stark and cold with a broken heart, that she would wed him! There wasn't one who had ever known the rapture of being held, with a pistol pointed at her head, while the brave lover pronounced that, unless she accepted him, he would kill her and then himself! There wasn't one who had been gained even at the dagger's point, and not a single wife had been drugged and wedded while in a semi-conscious state!

Dorothy, I confess to a certain amount of disappointment. The nearest I could get as to how the question of marriage had been reached was always that they drifted into it.

This is deliciously vague, but it seems to mean that they knew the man, that he had the privilege of holding their hands and criticising their frocks for some time, and that then there was no special excitement in Wall street, a Presidential election wasn't going on, nor any thing else that was distracting, they suggested that it was about time for them to get married.

This is the general experience. And I think it a sin and a shame. Few women have more than one opportunity to marry, and that ought to be accompanied by all the frill and frivolties that the best novel writer ever dreamed of. The Howells and James business in the way of classic love making may be most desirable for nervous people; it may calm and soothe them, but when champagne or love are offered it wants to be sparkling, and it wants to taste as if such nectar had never been offered before. The cigarette-imbued, white-skinned, colorless-eyed, smooth-faced young man that is prevalent just now will never offer anybody anything but the flattest cider for champagne, and when it comes to this, I say, give me ice water and platonic.

ALMSGIVING.

Upon the water cast thy bread,
  And after many days
It will return again to thee,
  In God's mysterious ways.
Hand in hand, and side by side,
  The wheat grows with the tares,
And so amidst life's soiling dust
  Some angel unawares.

Upon the water cast thy bread,
  Be it word or deed,
It will return a thing to bless,
  In some sad hour of need.
Be the giving e'er so small,
  E'en to the widow's mite.
Send it forth with hope and trust
  'Tis precious in His sight.

Upon the waters cast thy bread,
  To those who stand or fall
Beneath some dark and fatal stain,
  His love is over all,
And thou shalt harvest golden sheaves,
  From every seed that's sown
And scatter'd on the yielding earth,
  Or mid the rocks and stone.

Upon the water cast thy bread,
  And God shalt measure mete
Full, onto overflowing,
  Perfect and complete,
If only given, in touch or look,
  Hath He not said to thee:
"It shall return—'tis not forgo'
  Since it were done for Me."

* * *

Horses Can be Taugnght Well.

From the Atlanta Constitution.

"A horse! a horse!" etc.

There has been much written and said about the horse and horses.

Everybody likes a good horse and even a professional trader sometimes take more than a passing interest in the noble brute. The race horse, if you can pick the winner, is also an object of especial admiration.

Speaking of horses and their many valuable points as servants to mankind, a reporter got the following interesting information from a truthful livery stable man:

"There is really no limit to the training that can be given a horse. Of course, they are not all alike and some of them are taught more readily than others, but they all have a certain amount of intelligence, and with proper care can become wonderfully knowing."

"Did you ever teach a horse?" asked the reporter.

"Did I?" scornfully said the horseman. "Well, I should say I had. Come back here in my stable and I will show you what one of my regular livery horses can do."

Going into a stall the horseman took a halter from the head of a stylish-looking bay horse, about fifteen hands high, with a beautiful mane that one of the stable-boys had evidently decorated with bits of bright colored ribbon. Stepping out of the stall, the horseman stood in the middle of the stable floor, and, in an ordinary voice said:

"Tom, come out here and get hitched up."

Backing out of his stall as gently as though he was afraid of stepping on a tack, the horse walked over to the side used when getting the horse in readiness for a drive.

"Now, Bill," said the horseman, calling a colored boy, put the harness on him."

This was the work of a few minutes and as soon as the last strap had been buckled the horse, without the warning of a word or sign, walked to the watering trough and took a drink, the horsemen explaining to the reporter that he always did this before going out of the stable. As soon as the horse had drank his fill, the horseman said to him:

"Tom, go back to your stall," and the horse then deliberately walked into his quarters. Waiting a few moments, the horseman called to him again, saying: "Tom, go and have that harness taken off; I won't send you out to-day."

Again the intelligent animal backed from his stall and walked to the "hitching up stand," as the stable boys call it. The colored boy quickly removed the harness, and the horse seemed to appreciate this part of the performance immensely, and, rubbed his nose playfully on the stable boy's sleeve while the lad was taking off the bridle. The horseman called the horse to him by saying:

"Tom, come to me." The horse walked right up to his master and looked at him, as much as to say, what next?

"Kneel down," said the master, and the horse dropped upon his knees with military precision.

"Lay down," was the next command, and the horse again obeyed, looking as though he enjoyed the performance, but evidently very careful of his mane, as he held his head up from the stable floor. After a moment the horseman said:

"Tom, get up and come to me." Again the owner was obeyed, and the horse stood patiently awaiting his orders. Patting him affectionately on the neck the horseman told Tom to go to his stall.

The reporter expressed his admiration of all this, and the horseman responded by saying:

"Why, I can teach that horse anything, except how to read aloud, and may be I could do that if he could express himself, but lack of speech is against me in that."

"Are there any other well-trained horses in Atlanta?" asked the reporter.

"Oh, yes. All the fire department horses are well-trained, some of them remarkably so. Take Cap Joyner's horse, for instance. Cap. never has to do anything but let him go when he starts for a fire, and I think he ought to name him Gallagher for this reason. Why, do you know that his horse always counts the strokes on the electric alarm, and by the time Cad Joyner gets in the seat in his little red wagon that horse knows just exactly the shortest route to take to get to the box from which the alarm was turned in."

The reporter looked at the horseman as he finished this statement, but he gave no sign of remorse and continued:

"Then you take that team that pulls the hook and ladder truck. Why, those two horses do all their sleeping while at a fire, You can never catch either of them even nodding while they are in the engine house. But while the firemen are busy at a fire they take a nap as contentedly as though they were bedded on feathers. That's one reason, I guess, why they are always in such a hurry to get to a fire."

* * *

Longevity of Man and Animals

There is no doubt, that after a man has turned 100 years he grows old rapidly. Months become to him what years were before he reached that limit of age. The human machine is well nigh worn out, and the motive power nearly exhausted. Therefore we are not surprised to hear that Colonel Perkins, Norwich centenarian, died on Wednesday, one month after his 100th birthday, and that M. Chevbuel, the French centenarian, was too feeble to receive the friends who came to honor and felicitate him last week on his 102d birthday. Like Colonel Perkins, the venerable French chemist was in the full possession of his faculties at 100, but that stage of his life's journey passed, the race became difficult for him, and his steps began to totter. He has distanced Colonel Perkins by two years, but seems to be near his limit.

There are recorded instances of men and women who have endured far beyond one hundred years, but none of them is well enough authenticated, they having lived at a time when no accurate chronological records were kept. Thus the Countess of Desmond died in the reign of James I., some time after 1603, at what was alleged to be the age of 145 years, but modern investigators are skeptical as to the fact. Though there is evidence enough to show that she was a centenarian, and was vivacious and in full possession of her faculties up to 100 years, it is probable that she did not get much beyond the limit. Thomas Parr, better known as Old Parr, died in 1635 at what was estimated at 152, but his years were rather a matter of tradition than of well-substantiated fact, though he, too, had doubtless passed his 100th birthday, and was in all respects a remarkable old fellow. Somewhere about one hundred years seems to be the present limit of the span of the life of man, and the proportionate number of instances where it has been reached will undoubtedly much increase as medicine advances in the preservative art.

The census of 1880 gave 4,001 persons as of 100 years and over, and not far from the same number, or 4,763, as from 95 to 99. The chances, therefore, are that when a man has got well past 90 he will round out the 100. It is before 5 years and after 80 years that life is in most danger under present conditions and with the medical art as it is. In 1880, there was 146,362 men and women in the United States between 80 and 84 years, but the number from 85 to 90 was only 49,835. Yet there were more at 95 than at 93 or 94.

Putting, then, the limit of age for man at 100 years, it thus compares with that of some of the lower animals, the table being on the authority of Professor Owen. Longevity in years, man 100, elephant 100, camel 50—80, mare and ass 30—40, deer 30, pig 15—20, dog 15—20, cat 15—20, mokney 10. Some of the cold-blooded animals and birds, of course, live much longer. Pike and carp, for instance, have been assertained to live 150 years, eagles and crows more than 100 years. But with intelligence to guide him, and medical art, the most progressive of all the learned professions to aid him, man ought to keep up to the elephant in longevity, so that the age of 100 years will not be as extraordinary as it is now.

The prolongation of life—that is the great object of endeavor for the students of the art of medicine, now so generally occupied not in curing disease merely, but in warding off disease and preserving the human machine in the best condition for long use.

As it is, the best work, the wisest, and the highest, is done by men that have passed sixty and are approaching, or already have gone beyond the Psalmist's limit of life, three-score years and ten.—Hartford Post.

* * *

The Terrible Infant Again.

Their little minds (the children's, home from vacation) are full with the story of their summer pasttime, and they are eager to recite their experiences, sometimes with a little too much attention to detail. This latter point was illustrated the other day by one loquacious little fellow in conversation with another about his own age. "Funny folks is lan' lords," said the too communicative child; "the one we boarded wif borrowed pa's gold watch w'en we was goin' away, an' he won't get it for a week." —Boston Budget.

He Was a Contented Man.

The El Paso Herald prints this little story on the authority of another paper about a local minister who recently preached at a camp meeting:

After the sermon the customary invitation was given for all who wanted to go to heaven to rise up. All present rose to their feet except one young man who sat pretty well on the outskirts of the audience. Those who desired to go to heaven sat down. Then all who desired to go to hell were requested to rise to their feet, and the aforesaid young man was eyed with a good deal of interest. Still he sat as quiet and composed as a stone. The minister went to him and asked him why he did not rise in either instance.: "Wall," replied the husky son of toil, I don't wunt ter go anywhar. Fremont's good ernuff for me."—(Dallas News.

* * *

No Swiss Race.

There is no Swiss race in the same sense as there is a French, German, or Italian race. Of every 1,000 citizens of Switzerland 702 speak German, 226 French, 55 Italian, and 17 Romansch. They are all Swiss in their devotion to their fatherland, and yet the Ticinese is as purely Italian as the Milanese and the Genevan is as French as the Parisian. —New York Herald.

* * *

It is amusing to see people with their faces drawn as if they had swallowed a feather and it was tickling their lungs and they would be happy if they could only sneeze. Now there is no need of "making faces." A bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup will draw your face back into a smile.

"Kings are like stars, they rise and set." They have headache, cuts, and hurts like meaner men, and are just as sure to call for Salvation Oil.

* * *

A heavy shock of earthquake was felt in Guaymas, Mexico, causing great fright but doing little damage.

* * *

Are any of the new-fangled washing compounds as good as the old-fashioned soap? Dobbins' Electric Soap has been sold every day for 24 years, and is now just as good as ever. Ask your grocer for it and take no other.

* * *

Chicago anarchists celebrated the third anniversary of the anarchist execution, but the affair was very tame.

* * *

A Tenacious Clutch

Is that of dyspepsia. Few remedies do more than palliate this obstinate complaint. Try Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, however, and you will find that it is conquerable, along with its symptoms, heartburn, flatulence, nervousness, and loss of flesh and vigor. Biliousness and constipation frequently accompany it. These, besides malarial, rheumatic and kidney complaints, are also subduable with the Bitters.

* * *

There is much destitution in the western part of Nebraska, owing to the failure of the corn crop.

* * *

A SORE THROAT OR COUGH, if suffered to progress, often results in an incurable throat or lung trouble. "BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES" give instant relief.

* * *

William G. Vallie, a railroad conductor, killed his wife and committed suicide at Corsicana, Tex. Cause unknown.

* * *

GARFIELD TEA acts on blood, renovating the entire system; brings the hue of health back to faded cheeks.

* * *

French Republicans propose to erect a statue to Garibaldi in recognition of his services to France in the defence of the country against Germany in 1870-71.

* * *

DR. FRANK POWELL, (White Beaver) will open an office in St. Paul, next Jan. Diseases of women exclusively.

* * *

J. H. Gendron, wholesale grain and flour merchant of Sherbrooke, Ont., has failed. Liabilities over $100,000; assets $35,000.

That Tickling

In your throat arises from catarrh, and as catarrh is a constitutional disease the ordinary cough medicines all fail to hit the spot. What you need is a constitutional remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by building up the general health, and expelling the scrofulous taint which is the cause of catarrh and consumption, has restored to perfect health many persons on whom these diseases seem to have a firm hold. Many unsolicited testimonials prove beyond question that Hood's Sarsaparilla does positively cure catarrh.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO, Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar.

A PRESENT.

SEND us your address and we will make you a present of the best Automatic WASHING MACHINE in the World. No wash-board or rubbing needed. We want you to show it to your friends, or act as agent if you can. You can COIN MONEY. We also give a HANDSOME WATCH to the first from each county. Write quick. Address N. Y. LAUNDRY WORKS, 5 Dey St., N. Y.

BIG G

Cures in 1 TO 5 DAYS. Guaranteed not to cause Stricture.

Mf'd only by the Evans Chemical Co. Cincinnati, Ohio.

I prescribe and fully endorse Big G as the only specific for the certain cure of this disease.
G. H. INGRAHAM, M. D.,
Amsterdam, N. Y.

We have sold Big G for many years, and it has given the best of satisfaction.
D. R. DYCHE & CO.,
Chicago, Ill.

Trade Mark $1.00. Sold by Druggists.

HUMORS of the BLOOD & SKIN Cured by Cuticura

HUMORS OF THE BLOOD, SKIN, AND Scalp, whether itching, burning, bleeding, scaly, crusted, pimply, blotchy, or copper-colored, with loss of hair, either simple, scrofulous, hereditary, or contagious, are speedily, permanently, economically, and infallibly cured by the CUTICURA REMEDIES, consisting of CUTICURA, the great Skin Cure, CUTICURA SOAP, an exquisite Skin Purifier and Beautifier, and CUTICURA RESOLVENT, the new Blood Purifier and greatest of Humor Remedies, when the best physicians and all other remedies fail. This is strong language, but true. CUTICURA REMEDIES are the only infallible blood purifiers. Sold everywhere. Price, CUTICURA, 50c.; SOAP, 25c.; RESOLVENT, $1. Prepared by Potter Drug and Chemical Corporation, Boston. Send for "How to Cure Skin Diseases."

Pimples, blackheads, chapped and oily skin prevented by CUTICURA SOAP.

Backache, kidney pains, weakness, and rheumatism relieved in one minute by the CUTICURA ANTI-PAIN PLASTER. 25c.

Eugenie's Valor in Cholera Times.

The cholera scare that has afflicted Europe to a degree has recalled an incident of the time when Napoleon III. was at the height of his power. The cholera prevailed to a frightful extent at Amiens, yet never a day passed that the Empress did not visit the hospitals to superintend, so far as she could, the noble work of allaying the sufferings of the stricken. One morning a cure rushed into the ward where the Empress was consoling a dying man. "Oh, your Majesty," cried the cure, "two hours ago my vicar was breakfasting with me and now he is dead!"

Eugenie smiled placidly, "That is well."

"Well?" echoed the cure, in amazement.

"Yes, it is well," she answered. "When once cholera becomes as violent as that it ceases."

The Empress was right; from that day the plague abated. Eugenie's valor did much to fortify the people against the epidemic to which very many, I am told, fell victims through sheer fright alone.—Chicago News.

* * *

A FRENCH attorney was writing out a brief. He was in splendid health, only 40 years old, and was writing rapidly when all at once he stopped, and from that moment could not tell his own name. Memory went out from him like a flash of lightning.

ST. JACOBS OIL
THE GOVERNOR OF MARYLAND
SAYS:
IT EXECUTIVE CHAMBER. IS
Annapolis, Md., Jan. 6, '90.
"I have often used ST. JACOBS OIL, and find it a good Liniment."
ELIHU E. JACKSON.
THE Gov. of Md. BEST.

N. W. N. U. 1890 No. 47.

Tutt's Pills
FOR TORPID LIVER.

A torpid liver deranges the whole system, and produces

Sick Headache, Dyspepsia, Costiveness, Rheumatism, Sallow Skin and Piles.

There is no better remedy for these common diseases than Tutt's Liver Pills, as a trial will prove. Price, 25c.

Sold Everywhere.

$5,000 stock of Clothing, new, seasonable goods for this winter's trade, manufactured within the past ninety days. Will take $3,000, balance unincumbered real estate. Williamson & King, Chamber of Commerce, Chicago, Ill.

WANTED, men to travel and take orders (no delivering) $1,500 a year and expenses. Inclose stamp, giving references, Morlan & Co, Salem, Ohio.

CANCERS Cured without the use of the Knife at the Iola Cancer Infirmary, Iola, Waupaca, Co. Wis. Write for book of treatment.

JOHNSON'S SWEET CIDER. Johnson's Pure Cider Vinegar. Both pure goods. Write for prices. F. C. JOHNSON, Kishwaukee Ill.

LADIES can have smaller feet. Solid comfort. Pamphlet free. Sample pkg., 10c. The Pedine Co., New York.

TANSY PILLS! Safe and Sure. Send 4c. for "WOMAN'S SAFE GUARD." Wilcox Specific Co., Phila., Pa.

ASTHMA CURED. FREE A trial package by mail to sufferers. Dr. R. SCHIFFMAN, St. Paul, Minn.

PATENTS Inventor's Guide or How to obtain a Patent, sent free. PATRICK O'FARRELL, Att'y at Law, Washington, D. C.

ALLEN'S IRON TONIC BITTERS
The most Elegant Blood Purifier, Liver Invigorator, Tonic and Appetizer known. The first Bitters containing Iron ever advertised in America. J. P. ALLEN, Druggist & Chemist, St. Paul, Minn.

PENSION JOHN W. MORRIS, Washington, D.C. Successfully Prosecutes Claims. Late Principal Examiner U. S. Pension Bureau. 3 yrs in last war, 15 adjudicating claims, atty since.

PENSIONS The Disability Bill is a Law. Dependent widows and parents are included. If you wish your claim quickly and Successfully Prosecuted, write to JAMES TANNER, late Commissioner of Pensions, Washington, D. C.

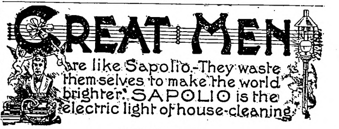
PENSION LAND AND INDIAN DEPARTMENT CLAIMS. Special attention given to the above. NATHAN BICKFORD, "B" 5th N. H. Inft., Solicitor of Claims, Washington, D. C. References furnished in any State. Blanks and information free.

FAT FOLKS REDUCED
"Eight years ago I had an attack of Spinal Meningitis. After recovery I took on flesh rapidly. Spine and sides continued to pain me, abdomen and limbs bloated, heart troubled me and could scarcely breathe. After taking Dr. Snyder's treatment two months I lost 23 lbs., my pains were gone and I breathed easily and naturally. Dr. Snyder's treatment is pleasant to take and has done me great good."—Mrs. Mary Ramage, Hors, Washington.
PATIENTS TREATED BY MAIL.
No starving, no inconvenience, harmless and no bad effects. Strictly confidential. For circulars and testimonials address with 6c. in stamps,
DR. O. W. F. SNYDER, 243 STATE ST., CHICAGO.

DR. E. C. WEST'S NERVE AND BRAIN TREATMENT.
Specific for Hysteria, Dizziness, Fits, Neuralgia, Wakefulness, Mental Depression, Softening of the Brain, resulting in insanity and leading to misery decay and death. Premature Old Age, Barrenness, Loss of Power in either sex, Involuntary Losses, and Spermatorrhœa caused by over-exertion of the brain, self-abuse or over-indulgence. Each box contains one month's treatment. $1 a box, or six for $5, sent by mail prepaid. With each order for six boxes, will send purchaser guarantee to refund money if the treatment fails to cure. Guarantees issued and genuine sold only by HIPPLER & COLLIER. The open all night Drug Store, Cor. 7th & Sibley St. Paul Minn.

Ely's Cream Balm For
CATARRH
THE POSITIVE CURE.
ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren St., New York. Price 50 cts.
THE CURE FOR CATARRH COLD IN HEAD HAY FEVER DEAFNESS HEADACHE ELY'S CREAM BALM 50c.

THE VAN DUSEN-HARRINGTON CO.,
GRAIN COMMISSION.
MINNEAPOLIS. - DULUTH.
SELL BY SAMPLE.
Best Prices. Prompt Returns. Write for quotations. Execute orders Chicago, New York or Milwaukee.



GREAT MEN are like Sapolio—They waste themselves to make the world brighter. SAPOLIO is the electric light of house-cleaning.

THE OLD RUT

and old methods are not the easiest by far. Many people travel them because they have not tried the better way. It is a relief from a sort of slavery to break away from old-fashioned methods and adopt the labor-saving and strength-sparing inventions of modern times. Get out of old ruts and into new ways by using a cake of SAPOLIO in your house-cleaning.

PISO'S CURE FOR
Best Cough Medicine. Recommended by Physicians. Cures where all else fails. Pleasant and agreeable to the taste. Children take it without objection. By druggists.
CONSUMPTION.
25 CTS 25 CTS

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION
Comes Every Week — Finely Illustrated — Read in 450,000 Families.
Five Double Holiday Numbers.
Thanksgiving, Christmas, New Year's, Easter, Fourth-of-July.
FREE TO 1891.
To any New Subscriber who WILL CUT OUT and send us this advertisement, with name and Post-office address and $1.75, we will send The Youth's Companion FREE to January 1, 1891, and for a full year from that date. This offer includes the FIVE DOUBLE HOLIDAY NUMBERS, and all the ILLUSTRATED WEEKLY SUPPLEMENTS.
40 Address, THE YOUTH'S COMPANION, Boston, Mass.

THE NEWS.

Entered at the post office at Red Lake Falls as second-class mail matter.

Official Paper of the County.

Official Paper of the City.

JAS. MEEHAN, JR. Editor and Prop.

For President, 1892, Kittle Halvorsen. The farmers will all stay by him—especially Polk county farmers.

Isn't it about time some alliance men in Polk County, the banner alliance county of the state, were looking for some of the soft snaps to be delt out at the capitol during the coming session of the legislature.

The alliance of Polk county should have the the office of chief cook and bottle washer at the capitol this winter. It wouldent matter if it was an he Cook or a she cook—one of Polk counties favorite alliance sons ought to be recognized.

The election in Wisconsin demonstrates the right of the parent to educate the child wherever and howsoever he pleases. It is alright to make every citizen learn to read and write the English language, and it may be right for the state to make these studies compulsory—but when there is a question of fighting for the preservation of the Union, any man is a good enough citizen to shoulder a musket. It doesn't matter whether or not he can then read or write. He is a good citizen then whether he can speak the English, the German, the Norwegian, Swede or any other language.

There has not been such a panic on Wall steeet since Black Friday, twenty-one years ago, as that which occurred on Tuesday. Broker firms that were considered impregnable, were forced to the wall and their stocks sacrificed. A number of banks were unable to get their accounts through the clearing house and interest on money reached the numerous figure of 189 per cent per annum on time loans, or about half a cent a day. The whole trouble is due to the tightness of the money market and the scrcity of the scarcity of money. The most noticeable decline was in Northern Pacifics stock —Thirteen Towns.

The predicamedt into which Mr. Pernell has placed himself gives the royal imps of England and the English sympathizers in the United States a chance to point the finger of scorn at his heretofore unimpeachable character. As it is in the land of Jno. Bull, those who shout the loudest strain their ulcerated throats and expand their decaying lungs—forgetting about their own sins. How can the English press expect to find sympathizers among the aristocratic adulter o the Prince of Wales type! Parnell is still an angel compared with many of the lords of England and there is no reason why he should cease to lead the Irish parliamentary party. He may have been convicted by a packed jury and hired witnesses. This is England's mode of dealing out justice to Irishmen. Neither will it do for Americans to comment unfavorably upon the act of the leader of the parliamentary party since it is remembered that only a few years ago each of the leaders of the two great political parties were accused of graver crimes than Mr. Parnell—but neither of them has lost any prestige thereby, but on the contrary stand as leaders to-day notwithstanding the charges have never been disproved. It will be well to let Mr. Parnell alone.

The emigration convention called at Stephen, Marshall Co., Nov. 26th, is a commendable movement in the proper direction. It is evident the people of the Red River valley are awakening to a sense of their duty. The feeling of renewed confidence in the fertility of our soil, the abundant crop of '90, the prospects of '91, the vast amount of uncultivated lands, all combine to show what nature has done to make homes for those who are sufficiently favored by a kind providence and now enjoy a home in our midst. The time has come when a beneficent nature must be aided and by strenuous efforts. Our rich farming country is deserving of more than it has received in the way of immigration the last few years. With a climate noted for its healthful advantages, with a soil unequalled, with the opening of the vast pineries of the Red Lake region there is no reason why we should not be able to induce sufficient immigration to occupy every quarter section of good land in the Red River Valley. We know our advantages—it is our duty to let others know what we can do for them. Let us therefore unite in this one grand work of inducing people to come among us. Let every community send delegates to the convention on the 26th that a system of work may be adopted that will redound to our benefit and help enrich us one and all. Let Red Lake Falls put her shoulder to the wheel and send a delegation of representative men to the convention. Now is your time; don't neglect this opportunity and permit this question to lie dormant in the future as it has in the past.

A SINGULAR VISITATION.

A Young Man's Peculiar Vow, and the Effect It Has on His Appearance.

Walter J. Scoot is a young man scarce 23 years of age, who resides in a western city. Young Scoot is an ordinary looking individual save for an abnormal growth of hair that covers his face, neck and head. His whiskers are nearly a foot in length, and of a reddish color that affects a slight bluish tint under certain conditions of the atmosphere.

The hair on his neck is long and silky, but it curls close to the skin. The horny tissue that covers his cranium is a marvel. It is nearly as long as his whiskers, but it stands straight out from his skull, like the hair on a wig of a side show Circassian, and each strand is as stiff as a wild boar's bristle, and could be used to sew carpet with or to make a scrubbing brush.

The wonder is, though, that this peculiar growth has developed within the past three years. When young Scoot was 20 his face was as smooth, soft and silkish as that of a maiden of 15; the texture of his hair was fine, and his eyes were shaded by long, delicate lashes that would have made a Spanish senorita putrify with envy to have seen them. The wonderful change was the work of a single night.

On Scoot's twentieth birthday a pet poodle dog he owned died. He was overcome with grief at the loss of his pet, and at one time it was thought he would be seized with spasms. He denounced everything, and going out into the street bare headed he shook his fist at the sky, and in a paroxysm of frenzy he cursed and reviled the Omnipotent. He swore by everything holy that he would never shave his face or have his hair cut.

He went into the house and sank insensible on the floor. He was put to bed and remained in a comatose condition until the next morning. He was awakened next morning with the sun. Then the marvelous change. His hair stuck out over his head like the quills on the back of a porcupine, and his face was covered with a shaggy beard several inches in length.

It grew close up to his eyes; his eyelashes had dropped out, and about the only part of his face left uncovered by the strange growth was his nose. For the past three years Scoot has religiously kept his oath. He is well educated, a good writer, and apparently in every sense a man of brilliant parts.—Chicago Special Press Bureau.

Escaping Sheol.

According to the Talmudic idea, certain persons are mentioned who will escape hell or have their torment therein lightened. Whoever articulates every letter while reading the Shema (Deut. vi, 4-9) will have hell cooled for him. Three kinds will never see the face of hell—those who are ground down by poverty, those who suffer from bowel sickness and those who lie at the mercy of creditors. To these three some rabbis, whose experience of matrimony was perhaps unfortunate, add those who have a shrew to wife.

Charity to the poor, by feeding them and otherwise, opens the door of escape from hell. Whoever shears a portion of his goods for the poor and is charitable is released from the judgment of hell. A passage in Gittin likens the charitable and the uncharitable to two ewes passing through a river of water. The ewe which is shorn reaches the opposite bank in safety, but the ewe which remains unshorn is drowned.

It is also said (Prov. x, 2, and Prov. xi, 4) charity (A. V. "righteousness") "delivereth from death." This is sometimes recited at the present day at a burial by the keeper of the ground or other person, when money is commonly given for the use of the poor.—Nineteenth Century.

Ancient Shop Signs.

It seems no risk to assert that in our state there are not ten men born within the commonwealth, of New England parents, who cannot read and write. I have heard it suggested that the curious signs above the doorways of taverns and shops, which were so common 200 years ago, were really aids to those who were unable to read. The "Green Dragon," the "Blue Lion," the "White Horse" and the "Bunch of Grapes" over the doors of the colonial inns of Boston rendered them easily identified, whereas a signboard would have been unintelligible to the mass of the people.

In like manner shopkeepers were wont to mark their doorways, doubtless for a similar reason. A relic of this custom is seen occasionally even today, conspicuous examples being a gilded ostrich above a milliner's door, a kid above a glover's and a spinning wheel above the door of a linen shop. But the real significance of these signs has passed away, and the signs themselves have disappeared before the advances of the school master.—Boston Advertiser.

A Professional Opinion.

Professor Dana, of Yale, frequently gives illustrations of wit in the recitation room. It is customary for the students to bring with them from time to time such bits of stone as they have chanced across, and to submit them to him for examination and explanation. "This is a piesh of shyenite, and that a very fine spesbimen of mica shist," he would customarily explain, with an accent peculiarly his own.

"And what is this, professor?" questioned an eager youth one day, as he placed before him a small red specimen that was strikingly suggestive of a bit of brick. The professor held it up to the light and scrutinized it with the closest attention. Then his brow contracted, and he said slowly and ponderously, "This, sir, is a rare piesh of impudence."—New York Herald.

In an Old Book Shop.

A rummaging tour in an old book shop the other day showed that the picture cemetery itself might have to move. Down under a pile of old and torn books and pamphlets lay a still more torn album filled with pictures taken some ten years ago in the region of the Bowery. Fortune had evidently been unpropitious, and the loved ones' pictures had gone at auction with the clock, the stove and bedstead. Who could it be that would thus buy corpses that he could not even dissect? It might have brought five cents at the sale. The old book man could not now get rid of it as a gift, so it lies in the corner, while some one talks of "little Patsy that had the measles and died three years ago come Easter."—New York Tribune.

He Wanted a Group.

A colored man came into the studio of one of Chicago's prominent artists a few days ago and asked the price of portraits. The artist said:

"Bust or full length?"

"I thinks, sah, I prefers a group," said the negro.

"How many in the group?" said the artist.

"Oh, jes' a group of myself," was the reply.

The artist's talent or price for "group" of one did not succeed in getting the order.—Chicago Herald.

CAN MONKEYS TALK?

Learned Men Looking for a Key to Simian Conversational Intercourse.

Can monkeys talk? The question was made the subject of what was probably the funniest scientific experiment ever conducted by the Smithsonian institution. Professor Garner, one of the honorary curators, had charge of the test.

The conversational power of monkeys has for years past been a special hobby of Professor Garner, and it occurred to him that it would be a good idea to take down some of their remarks by means of the graphophone. Accordingly he procured a portable instrument, and secured the cooperation of the secretary of the Smithsonian and of about a dozen other men of science attached to that learned establishment in the carrying out of this remarkable trial.

It was a great sight to behold the group of eminent doctors and professors gathered in front of the monkey cage at the zoo in the rear of the Smithsonian building, seriously waiting results, while Professor Garner ground away at the hand graphophone with its crank attachment, and the keeper of the animals poked the monkeys up with a stick to make them talk.

One monkey was tame and the other one wild. The wild one, could not be induced by the most vigorous poking to make any remarks worth mentioning. An occasional scream of rage was all that could be elicited from him. The tame monkey did nothing but chatter and gibber most unintelligibly, as it seemed to the rest of the audience; but Professor Garner was inclined to think that this was really conversation worth taking down, and so he ground away vigorously at his instrument, using up half a dozen cylinders in obtaining the records he desired. A big tin horn attached to the graphophone was inserted through the door of the monkey cage during the performance.

Professor Garner was very far from imagining that he would be able to understand this monkey talk when repeated to him by the machine. But his notion was to record the remarks of one monkey and then grind them out through the horn for the benefit of the other monkey, so as to observe what sort of responses the other one would make.

By comparing the original observations and the replies he hoped to get some few clews that would eventually enable him to translate the monkey language. Unfortunately the wild monkey would only scream angrily, and thus the experiment in a measure was a failure, though the professor is convinced that he has obtained on his cylinders some really useful simian observations, if he could only tell what they were about. This is, in fact, the only difficulty remaining, and he does not despair.—Washington Cor. St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

About a Plant of Genius.

There was once—and it was not very long ago—a young musician who had composed an air of which he secretly entertained a very high opinion, as being melodious, delicately and at the same time quaintly scored for the piano, and of course undoubtedly original. Having quite finished it he one day played it over to a musical friend who happened to be passing the afternoon with him. The composer did not say, "Listen to what I have just composed," but while seated at the piano chatting and striking chords he slyly let his fingers glide into the melody, proposing to ask his friend how he liked it when it was finished.

But to his delight his friend soon interrupted with the remark, "How very pretty that is!" "Do you think so?" the composer answered, concealing the intensity of his rapture; and before he could add deprecatingly, "A little thing that came into my head the other day," the friend continued: "Very pretty! I've always liked that air ever since my mother sung it to me when I was a little child!"—New York Ledger.

The First Steam Fire Engine.

At the suggestion of the fire insurance companies of New York city, a machinist named Paul Hodge, a resident of Gotham, constructed a steam fire engine, which was first publicly tested in front of the New York city hall, in March, 1841. It was a total failure. Then the board of directors offered a gold medal for the best method of applying steam to the propulsion of water for fire purposes. This prize was won by John Ericsson, the maker of the Monitor, recently deceased and more recently removed to his native country.

The official report has the following paragraph in regard to Ericsson's engine: "The points of excellence as thus narrowed down were found to belong to an engine weighing less than 2¼ tons, which has the power of 108 men, and will throw 8,000 pounds of water per minute to a height of 105 feet through a nozzle of 1⅛ inches in diameter. The model in question was submitted by one John Ericsson."—St. Louis Republic.

When Talmage Played Leap Frog.

Among the games of my early boyhood there is none I remember so well as leap frog. It was inartistic and homely, but seemed very funny to me then. The one who stooped looked humiliated, and both looked more so when the leaper stumbled and both came down together.

Jack Snyder, I remember, carried a grudge against me when we both came down in a heap after I had tried to leap over him, and insisted that I had pushed him down on purpose. I hope he has forgiven me by this time, for he has been away as a missionary. If he were here I would right the wrong of old times, and let him spring over me as my children do.—Dr. Talmage in New York Journal.

Seamless Steel Boats.

Mr. Heslop, of Leeds, England, has devised a method of forming steel boats without a seam by one operation. The metal plate used is one-sixteenth inch thick and of oval shape. It is heated in a furnace and then molded in a die to the required form by hydraulic pressure. These dies are employed to gain the form by degrees, and thus preserve the metal from cracking or buckling. The boat is then polished and fitted up with air tight compartments and other necessaries.—New York Journal.

Why They Hanged Him.

Texas Man—By George, Jim Bludlet has been hanged at last.

New Yorker—Whose Jim Bludlet?

Texas Man—Jim Bludlet! He's killed twenty-four men in his time.

New Yorker—What did they hang him for—killing another man?

Texas Man—Naw! He stole a hoss.—Texas Siftings.

Tied by Its Own Tail.

A heifer owned by Albert Ellms, of Dexter, Me., was missing for three days, and when found was securely fastened to a tree by her tail, which she had switched around it while going through the woods.—Philadelphia Record.

$40.00

13

—GRAND—

WINTER EXCURSIONS.

FROM NORTHERN

MINNESOTA

AND NORTH

Dakota

TO

Montreal

And all Points West in

ONTARIO

VIA THE

Northern Pacific

The Dining car line between northern Minnesota and North Dakota Points, by way of St. Paul and Chicago. Dates of sale, Tuesday, Nov. 18 and 25, and Dec. 2 and 9; and daily, Dec. 16 to 23 inclusive, & Dec 30, 1890.

Limit of Tickets 99 days, good returning fifteen days, with stop-over privileges

Subject to local regulations of lines over which tickets read.

Final limit of Tickets extended fifteen days on payment of $5.00; 30 days, $10 and 60 days, $20

For further information, maps, time-tables and tickets via the dining car line, write to or inquire of any agent of the Northern Pacific railroad, or

C. A. Sharkeo, agent. Crookston, Minn. H. W. H. W. Nunn, Agent Grofton, N. D. J. A. Duffy Red Lake Falls, Minn. E. F. Rea, Agent, Gildy N. D. J. A Risk, Agent, Minnewaukon N. D. M. H. McGowan, Agent. Grond Forks N. D. N. McCallum, Agent, Drayton, N. D. F. J Cunningham, Agent, Pemelna, N D. J. D. Rocertson, Agent, N. D. R. Tazewell, Agent. Leeds, N. D.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk—ss.

In probate court, special term, Nov. 17, 1890.

In the matter of the estate of Peter Bischoff, deceased.

On receiving and filing the petition of Joseph Bischoff of Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, representing, among other things, that Peter Bischoff, late of this county, on the 3d day of April, A. D. 1838, at Drayton, N. D., died intestate, and being a resident of this county at the time of his death, leaving goods, chattels and estate within this county, and that the said petitioner is a brother of said deceased, and praying that administration of said estate be to said petitioner, Joseph Bischoff, granted:

It is ordered, That said petition be heard before this court, on Tuesday, the 16th day of December, A. D. 1820, at 2 o'clock p. m. at the probate office in Crookston in said county.

Ordered further, that notice thereof be given to the heirs of said deceased, and to all persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week, for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the Red Lake Falls News, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Red Lake Falls in said county.

Dated at Crookston the 17th day of November A. D. 1890.

By the Court: C. O. Christianson, Judge of Probate.

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage containing a power of sale dated April 5th, 1887, duly recorded in the office of register of deeds of Polk county, Minnesota, on April 8th, 1887, in book 30 of mortgages on page 393 whereby Wilfred Cyr and Emma Cyr, his wife, mortgagors, mortgaged to F. T. Day, mortgagee, the west half (w½) of the south east quarter (se¼) and the south east quarter (se¼) of the south west quarter (sw¼) and lots nine (9) and ten (10) all in section twenty-five (25) in township one hundred and fifty one (151) of range forty-five (45) in Polk county, Minnesota containing one hundred and seventy-four and 25-100 acres, by which default the power of sale has become operative and no action or proceeding at law or otherwise has been instituted to recover the debt remaining secured by said mortgage or any part thereof and there is claimed to be due on said mortgage at the date of this notice, the sum of $87.30.

Now, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of said power, said mortgage will be foreclosed and said premises will be sold at public auction by the sheriff of said county or his deputy on the 11th day of December, 1890, at 10 o'clock a. m. at the front door of the court house in the city of Crookston in said county, to pay said debt and interest and taxes and twenty-five dollars attorney's fees and disbursements allowed by law.

Dated June 1st, 1890.

F. T. Day, Mortgagee.

De Forest Bucklen,
Attorney for Mortgagee,
Crookston, Minn.

Land Office at Crookston, Minn., October 7, 1890.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the register of U S Land Office at Crookston, Minn., on Dec. 6, 1890, viz. Arthur Toupin, hd 12,187, for the w½ se¼ and e½ sw¼ sec 15, tp 150, r 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of, said land, viz,

Damas Lacnance Moses Guerard, Philias Descautel, Cyrille Lussier, all of Brooks P. O., Minn.

H. H. Dickmann, register.

State of Minnesota, county of Polk, ss.
District Court, fourteenth judicial district.

Winnie Eason, plaintiff, against Theodore Eason, defendant.

The State of Minnesota, to the above-named defendant.

You are hereby summoned and required to answer the complaint of the plaintiff in the above entitled action, which is on file in the office of the clerk of the district court in and for the county of Polk and state of Minnesota and to serve a copy of your answer to the said complaint on the subscribers, at their office in the city of Crookston in said county, within thirty days after the service of this summons on you, exclusive of the day of such service; and if you fail to answer the said complaint within the time aforesaid, the plaintiff in this action will apply to the court for the relief demanded in said complaint.

Dated Oct. 31st, 1890.

Montague & Bucklen,
Plaintiff's attorneys, Crookston, Minn.

Things Worth Remembering.

That it is dangerous to stand near a tall tree or spire during a thunder storm.

That the southwest corner of the cellar is the "cyclone safety point."

That there is no medicine so universally applicable to sickness as fresh air and sunshine."

That blowing out the gas before retiring is funny—to every one except the one who tries it.

That you may swear as hard as you please but it will not remove grease spots.

That the Wisconsin Central is the most popular line between Minneapolis and St. Paul and Milwaukee and Chicago.

That its fast train leaves Minneapolis daily at 6:25 p. m., St. Paul at 7:15 p. m., with through Pullman sleepers, arriving in Milwaukee at 7:27 and Chicago at 9:59 the following morning, serving breakfast in dining car.

That before starting on a trip always get information from some reliable ticket agent, and that nowhere will such information be more cheerfully given than at the city ticket offices of the Wisconsin Central, No. 19, Nicollet House block, Minneapolis, and 162 East 3d st, cor. Jackson, St. Paul, Address letters to Chas. E. Dixon, acting city passenger and ticket agent, St. Paul, F. H. Hanson, Gen. Northwestern Pass. agent, Minneapolis, or Louis Eckstein, Assistant General Passenger and Ticket agent, Milwaukee.

RALPH & BOURDON,

Proprietors of the

CITY

DRAY

LINE.

WOOD & COAL.

Anything in our line done Promptly and at very Reasonable Rates.

GIVE US A CALL

TONSORIAL HALL!

N. MORISETTE, PROP.

Everything First Class!

SHAVING,
HAIR-CUTTING,
SHAMPOOING!

☞ Shaving 15 cents.
Haircutting 25 cents. ☜

Main Street. - Red Lake Falls.

Roller Mill "B"

BEST PATENT	$2.25
BEST STRAIGHT	2.00
SECOND "	1.75
FAMILY BAKER'S	1-40
GRAHAM	2.00
RYE FLOUR	2.00
MIDDLINGS	1.00
SHORTS	.55
BRAN	.45
BEST GROUND FEED	.80
2d " "	.65

Fine corn meal per pound, 2½c.

MAJERES BROS.

Proprietor of the

City Meat Market.

A full line of market supplies, such as BEEF, PORK, MUTTON, POULTRY AND SAUSAGE.

A first class meat market where everything is kept as clean as can be.

Main, near 1st st - - - Red Lake Falls

JOHN WATSON.
PHYSICIAN & SURGEON,

Office in residence, Sixth street, Red Lake Falls, Minn. 4-6

VIOLINS, GUITAR, BANJOS' FINEST Assortment, Largest Stock, Lowest Prices, Best Strings for all instrument, assorted to suit, $1,50 per dozen, postpaid. Cash with order. Anything in the music line sent to any part of the United States. Write Allmendinger Piano And Organ Company, Ann Arbor, Mich. Orders from teachers and the professional solicited. Live Agents wanted for our [illegible] Organs.

NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD

The New Dining Car Route BETWEEN

WINNIPEG,
GRAFTON,
GRAND FORKS,
RED LAKE FALLS,
ST. PAUL,
MINNEAPOLIS,
DULUTH,
AND ALL POINTS EAST.

The Direct line to
MONTANA. IDAHO,
WASHINGTON TERRITORY,
OREGON, BRITISH COLUMBIA
PUGET SOUND AND ALASKA.

EXPRESS TRAINS DAILY.

To which are attached Pullman Palace Sleepers and Elegant Dining Cars. On overland trains, Emigrant Sleepers Free. The only line to the Yellowstone Park.

All trains daily.
Pullman Palace Sleeping Cars between Grand Forks and St Paul. Dining cars on all trains
Coupon tickets on sale to all points Southeast and West
For further information regarding rates, routes maps, etc., address

Chas. S. Fee,
G. P. & T. Agt.,
St. Paul, Minn.

J. A. Duffy
Local Agt

Green Bay, Winona & St. Paul

Railroad. Best and most Direct Line Between

LACROSSE,
WINONA,
Neillsville,
Eau Claire,
Grand Rapids,
Stevens Point,
New London,
Appelton,
Neenah.
Menasha,
Oshkosh,
Fon du Lac,
GREEN BAY.

And all Points in
EASTERN WISCONSIN,
Iron Districts of Northern Michigan and Lake Superior Regions.

Close Connections and Quick Time.

See That Your Ticket Reads Via
GREEN BAY, WINONA & ST. PAUL
Railroad.

S. W. Champion,
Superintendent, Green Bay, Wis.
J. B Last,
Ass't Gen. Pass. Agt., Green Bay, Wis.

$100,000

To Loan on Farms

—AT—

10 pr Cent

Interest. No bonus—no delay, at

THE FIRST NAT. BANK

Red Lake Falls - - Minn.

Homeseekers will find the last of the public domain of agricultural and grazing value along the Great Northern Ry in North Dakota and Montana. FREE LANDS.

New Towns 100 or more, along the Great Northern Railway Line. Business chances. Write F. I. Whitney, St. Paul, Minn., for Books, Maps, etc. Write now.

Settlers on Free goverument lands along the Great Northern Railway Line in North Dakota and Montana get low rates and fine markets for products. Low Rates

Hunting, Fishing Finest resorts in America along the Great Northern Ry. Line in Minnesota, Dakotas and Montana. Best climate for health seekers.

Montana produces the finest horses and cattle. Free ranges yet in the Mouse, Milk and Sun River Valleys and Sweet Grass Hills. Horses, Cattle

Health, Wealth In Monta. Free Lands, New Towns New Railways, New Mines, Low Rates. Largest area of good, vacant land.

Sweet Grass Hills, Milk and Sun River Valleys, Montana, reached only by the Great Northern Railway Line. The stock raisers' paradise. Sheep Hogs

Gold, Coal The Regions tributary to th Great Northern Railway Line in Montana produce all the precious and baser metals, New towns and railways are being built.

Go to the Great Reservation of Montana and get a good free homestead. Low rates and free sleepers on Great Northern R'y Line. Go now. Milk River

Herds, Mines. These have made Montana the richest state per capita in the Union. Plenty of room for more miners and stock raisers.

Along the Great Northern Line in Montana are free ranches and pasturage, mines of precious metal iron and coal, and new cities and towns. Now is your opportunity. Young Man

Great Falls Surrounded by a fine agricultural and grazing country, close to mines of precious metals, iron and coal possessing a water power unequaled in America, it is Montana's industrial centre.

The valleys of Red, Mouse, Missouri Milk and Sun Rivers reached by Great Northern Ry Line. Half rate excursions Sept. 9, 23 and Oct. 14, 1890. Write F. I. Whitney, St. Paul G. N. R. L.

THE LADIES FAVORITE
THE LIGHT RUNNING
NEW HOME
SEWING MACHINE
THE FINEST WOODWORK
THE BEST ATTACHMENTS
NEW HOME SEWING MACHINE Co ORANGE MASS
CHICAGO, ILL.
28 UNION SQUARE, N.Y.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
ATLANTA, GA.
ST. LOUIS, MO.
FOR SALE BY DALLAS, TEX.

Railroad Time Table.

	LEAVE	PASSENGER	ARRIVE
	P. M.		A. M.
	8.00	St. Paul,	7:05
	8:35	Minneapolis.	6:35
	8:00	Duluth	7:00
	8:30	Ashland, (p m)	6:30
WAY	3:30 a m	Wadena a m	12:02	WAY
FREIGHT	A. M.	....	P. M,	FREIGHT
1:00 p m	6:25	WINNIPEG JCTION	9:10	2:00 a m.
2:55 "	7:35	Twin Valley	8:30	11:42 pm
4:22 "	8:22	Fertile	7:14	9:54 "
6:20 "	9:20	RED LK FALLS	6:20	7:47 "
2:00 "	9:40	Crookston	6:00	10:00 am
7:42 "	10:10	Buffington	5:29	5:55 p m
8:30 "	10:55	Grand Forks	4:45	5:00 "
DAILY	P. M.	....	P. M,	DAILY
	12:50	Grafton	2:45
	2:45	Pembina	12:55
	5:30	WINNIPEG, Man.	10:05

All trains daily.

The NEWS has prepared a grand benefit for its readers. We are desirous of adding new names to our subscription list, and settling up with those already there. A grand inducement is offered in the following proposition: Every person who pays up all arrearages on subscription and one year in advance, will be given a ticket in the drawing of the following articles: Four beautiful steel engravings, valued at from $15 to $20 each, the size being 3½x2½ feet, and one new gig, valued at $20. Each ticket has the chance of winning one of these grand prizes, the aggregate value of which is nearly $100. Not content with the above magnificent offer, the NEWS presents FREE, to its farmer friends who take advantage of the above offer and request it, the American Farmer, a farm magazine. To those who desire one of the very best American magazines at a greatly reduced price, we offer the Cosmopolitan, (if the premium offer is accepted) at $1.50 cents, the regular price being $2.40. You can hardly afford to let this opportunity pass. It is open for a mouth.

ECHOES OF THE RAPIDS

What fine weather we are having.

Attorney Falardeau is all we have left of our legal fraternity.

Attorney Miller of Crookston transacted business with J. M. Boyle Tuesday.

Miss Roxie Todd of Grand Forks has again taken up her musical labors among us.

J. Z. Perron and E. H. Draper returned from their Red Lake trip Sunday night.

Drop in and get a ticket on our premium raffle. This is a great chance, don't miss it.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Boyle started yesterday evening on their long journey to Tacoma.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Marshall entertained visitors from Grand Forks the first of the week.

Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Duffy are the happy parents of a baby boy, that will be a week old to-morrow.

Jos. Marco is another of the lucky hunters this fall. He shot a deer that dressed 200 pounds.

E. P. Duffy was down from Buffiington Friday to make the acqnaintance of very near relative of his.

O. M. Holmes expects to start shortly for Idaho, to look up a location. He will then move his newspaper plant.

Don't forget our great premium offer. Read explanation at head of local column then come in and secure a ticket.

Miss Roze Zeh returned Friday from a six weeks' visit at Minneapolis and West Superior. She had a very pleasant visit.

The assignment of Otto Buse has been declared null by the court and all book accounts etc. have been transterred to the firm of Miller & Foot.

We invite everyone to stop in and examine the fine line of fancy stationery we are prepared to furnish, of which we have hundreds of samples.

Cash paid for barley, oats, flax, hides pelts. All kinds of coal for sale—at Hoskins & Co.'s elevator.

41 W. T. SPILLANE.

Though the days are warm and sunny, the rivers are sufficiently frozen to permit of skating, and the boys have been enjoying the sport for the past couple of weeks.

The Terrebonne church fair was held Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. From all reports it was a satisfactory success. Some of our citizens were in attendance.

The warehouse of Roller mill A settled and let several hundred bushels of wheat into the mill race. Last week they succeeded in getting it out and straightening up the warehouse.

Mr. and Mrs. Zephraim Poulliett's home is now graced by a young urchin that put in its appearance last week. It is needless to state that Zephraim finds but little fault with the world now-a-days.

The north side roller mill has undergone many improvements this fall.

Joseph Schmitz's life still hangs in the balance. It is doubtful if he can recover.

Rev. Ig. Balluff fell from the West hotel bus and sustained a fracture of the shoulder blade.

Peter Eberhart who has been working for the Sawyer Elevator Co. returned home the last of the week.

Marcus Johnson and Hugh Thompson were in town during the week looking over their milling interests.

Frank Jeffers arrived home from Larimore Tuesday, and will rest for a time in the vicinity of the parental hearth.

Dr. E. M. Johnson is now located at Jamestown, N. D. We doubt if any of his old patrons have forgotten him. He will make us a professional visit early in January.

During the absence of a minister a lay service will be held by the Presbyterian church each Sabbath evening, consisting of suitable readings, singing etc. All are cordially invited.

We are pleased to learn of the successful business of the firm of Joe Jerome & Adam Zeh at West Superior. The boys are said to be doing a rushing and money-making business.

Daniel O'Conner Jr. representing the Moline Milburn and Staddord Co. was in town Tuesday, securing agencies for his company. Dan is one of the "anties" in politics this year and rejoices over the result of election.

The choral society is considering the project of giving a cantata around the holidays, entitled "Bethlehem." A cantata would please a local audience about as well as any form of entertainment that could be devised.

A current paragraph announces that Inventor Miller has sold to the McCormick reaper people, for $100,000, right to a machine which is said to make of "ordinary slough grass" over $1,000 feet of binder-twine in one piece, the cost of the whole, rolled up, being only a quarter of a cent a pound.

Some excellent fields of corn have been raised in Polk and adjoining counties this year, although the season has not been an especially favorable one. This demonstrates beyond a doubt, that corn can be successfully raised in the Red River Valley.—Crookston Times.

Demorest's magazine for December is suggestive of the holiday season. This important period of the year is given due atention in this number of that splendid magazine, Demorest's monthly. Our advice is subscribe for Demorest's Family magazine. It is only $2 a year, and is published by W. Jennings Demorest 15 E. 14 th St New York.

The canvassing board for Polk county, consisting of Auditor McGuire; the chairman of the board of county commissioners, Hugh Thompson; and Jukge Spendley, a justice of the peace, met at Crookston on Monday and canvassed the vote. There were 5,861 votes cast on the head of the ticket, divided as fallows: Owen, 4,234, Wilson, 854, Merriam, 685, and Pinkham, 38.—13 Towns.

Everybody generally has somethiug to be thankful for, and the beautiful national holiday entitled Thanksgiving day, should be the time to meditate o'er the matter. Wretched indeed must be the life in which there is not a ray of sunshine, and unendurable must be the lot whose hardship might not be intensified. Thanksgiving falls on Thursday, the 27th, this year. Let us make the best of its speeding hours and be more contented; it is wise to often ponder over these oft-quoted words: "Man wants but little here below, nor wants that little long." We are too prone to forget the object of our existence here, in the struggle that is constantly being waged for supremacy.

Thanksgiving Proclamation.

The season returns laden with bounteous harvests; health and peace have prevailed within our borders and general prosperity has crowned the labors of the year.

Observing a most honorable custom of public and grateful recognition of a beneficent Providence which has crowned the year with mercies, by authority vested in me, as governor of the State of Minnesota, I heredy set apart Thurs. Nov. 27 1890, as a day of thanksgiving and prayer and cordially recommend that our people turn aside from their labors and devote this day to worship, and praise our heavenly Father for all his goodness, to family reunions at home firesides and to Christian charity in kind remembrance of the fatherless and the needy who may be near our doors.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my name and have caused the Great Seal of the State of Mindesota to be affixed at the capital in the city of St. Paul, this eight day of November, A. D. 1890.

By the Governor,
WILLIAM R. MERRIAM.

Farewell Reception.

Invitations issued previously, called out a large concourse of people to participate in the farewell reception tendered Mr. and Mrs. John M. Boyle at the opera house Monday evening. The band gave a beautiful serenade selection about 8 p. m. at the residence of Mr. Michael Boyle where Mr. and Mrs. John M. Boyle had been stopping several days previous. After this, they escorted the honored couple to the hall. Never before was a larger or more select gathering of this kind under one roof in this city. The grand march, lead by Mr. and Mrs. Boyle, played by the band, was one of the features of the evening, and to an onlooker presented a majestic appearance. The floor of the large hall soon presented an animated appearance and the whole space was utilized. Refreshments were served about the time the guests were becoming enervated, and consisted of a light repast of cake, coffee, sandwitches and fruit. Dancing was then resumed. There was but little to detract from the pleasure of the occasion, except, perhaps the feeling that was certain to permeate the apparently happy gathering—that they were indeed participating in a "Farewell Reception," the central figures of which had a share in the friendship and esteem of each one present. Fleeting fancies, enticed by the music and visions of flitting form oft lead one's memory back to past occasions that could not but call up thoughts of good feeling and pleasure. Both Mr. and and Mrs. Boyle have been residents of this city ever since it was recognized as a corporation. Mr. Boyle came when there was naught but a vision of a coming city to allure him here, and has been identified in every phase of our development, both socially and in a business sense. We doubt if there is another citizen in town who can call up a larger galaxy of warm friends than Mr. Boyle. There is universal regret over his departure of an intensity that is in keeping with his rare qualities as a gentleman of highest honor and integrity and a gentleman of unrivalled amiability and refinement, and one who counts his friends here by the hundreds. The united best wishes of the whole community follow our mutual friend to his new home, where may good fortune, bliss and contentment ever attend him. His estimable wife, who is as well and favorably known, passed many happy years in our midst, in both the spheres of girlhood and womanhood. Her friends seem to feel averse to acceptance of the hard decree that says the strong ties of love and friendship and of happy intercourse shall be shattered as far as distance and time can shatter.

The "Farewell Reception," then, was a success, inasmuch as it was designed to be a fitting expression of the sentiment of the people. It will ever stand, a bright star in the firmament of mutual good fellowship. Those interested were highly gratified at the wholesome response accorded. There were but few missing, among the number invited. The invited guests were: Mr. and Mrs. P. D. Couture, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Spillane, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. McClatchie, Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Malone, of Crookston, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Schreiter, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Smith, Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Kaus, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hennemuth, Mr. and Mrs. John F. Crawford, and Miss Lizzie Boyle, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Duffy, Miss Mollie Duffy, Mr. Geo. La Bissoniere and the Misses Emma and Louise Labissoniere, Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Hunt, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Dargan, and Miss Rose Mercier, Mr. and Mrs. O. M. O. M. Holmes, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Harren, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Mead, Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Hunt, Mr. and Mrs. Ovide Emard, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Grover, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Garceau, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Meehan Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Chas. W. Bourdon, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Lowe, Misses Elodia Bray, Mattie Gervais, Agnes Fairweather, Tillie Kaufer, Gertie Dargan, Sue Boyle, Musetta Fletcher, Maria Ralph, Rebecca Brunelle, Rosa Zeh, and Katie McMierthy; Messrs. Julius Hortvet, Theophile La Bissoniere, L. A. Kaufer, Dr. I. Lemieux, Joe Bray, Jas. I. Wyer, S. J. Sprague, T. Dargan, Edmund Bray, Joe Dargan, W. P. Crawford, N. Majeres, N. Nimesgern, Freeman Fletcher, Jas. Mead, Hector Langevin, Erve McCaffrey, Fred Zeb, Phil A. Kaufer.

The Pulpit And The Stage.

Rev. F. M. Shrout, Pastor United Brethen Church, Blue Mound, Kan. says: "I feel it my duty to tell what wonders Dr. Kings's New Discovery has done for me. My Lungs were badly diseased, and my parishioners thought I could live only a few weeks. I took five bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery and am sound and wel, gaining 26 lbs. in weight.

Arthur Love, Manager Love's Funny Folks Combination, writes: "After a thorough trial and convincing evidence i am confident Dr. King's New Discovery foo Consumption, beats 'em all and cures when everything else fails. The greatest kindness I can do my many thousand friends is to urge them to try it. Free trial bottle at Schreiter's Drug Store regular sizes 50c. and $1.00.

"I grease the wheels of life with money," said a wealthy man, "and my wife does it with politeness. She gets along with far less friction than I do, however."

Proposals For Bids

Bids will be received by the recorder of the village of Red Lake Falls until Wednesday Nov. 26th, 1890 at 12 clock m. for building a sidewalk of one inch boards four feet wide nailed on three 2x6 stringers and probaly blocked.

Said sidewalk to be built from a point on south side of 5th street 50 feet east of Kretzschmars avenue west to main street of O. E. Buses addition excepting there from such portions of sidewalk as has alread y been built by the lot owners, them selves. The right to reject any or all bids is hereby reserved

Dated Red Lake Falls Nov 11 1890.

H. B. DAVIS
Recorder

Ordinance No. 23.

Regulating the licensing of auctioneers and limiting their number.

The common council of the village of Red Lake Falls do ordain.

Section 1. That the amount of auctioneers licence in the village of Red Lake Falls, be fixed at ten dollars per annum.

Section 2. That the number of auctioneers for the remainder of the ensuing year be limited to two.

Section 3. That all acts or parts of acts or ordinance in consistence herewith are hereby repealed. This ordinace shall be inforce and take effect on and after its adoption.

Adopted November 10th. 1890.

H. B. Davis,
Recorder.

Improved Passenger Service

Under the new time schedule of "the North-Western Line," C., St. P., M. & O. Ry., all passenger trains of this line make the trip between St. Paul and Chicago in less than 14 hours.

The Pullman and Wagner Vestibuled Limited, leaving St. Paul at 7:30 p. m. makes the trip to Chicago in 13½ hours and from Chicago to St. Paul in 13 hours and 25 minutes.

The Daylight Express leaving St Paul at 7:45 a. m. makes the trip to Chicago in 13 hours and 50 minutes and from Chicago to St. Paul in 13 hours and 45 minutes.

This is the only line running all its trains in less than 14 hour between St. Paul and Chicago, and while this time is quick trains don't have to run at as high speed to make their time as on other lines, because this is shorter than any other line.

In addition to these facts this is the only line by which connections are assure in Chicago with all fast line trains from Chicago to the East and South in the morning and at night.

Note.—Fares by this line are always as low as by any other.

For Map Folder of the line address T. W. TUESDALE, Gen'l Passenger Agent St. Paul, Minn.

The Queen Pays All Expenses

The Queen's last free Trip to Europe having excited such universal interests he publishers of that popular magazine offer another and $200 for expenses to the person sending them the largest list of English words constructed from letters containing the three words British North America. Additional prizes consisting of Silver Tea Sets, China Dinner Sets, Golb Watches, French Music Boxes' Portier, Curtians, Silk Dresses Mautel Flakes and many other useful and valuable articles will also be awarded in order of merit. A special prize of a Seal Skin jacket to the lady, and a handsome Shetland Pony to boy or girl (delivered free in Canada or United States) sending the largest lists Everyone sending a list of twenty words will recieve a presen send six U. S. stamps for complete rules, illustrated catalogue of prizes, and sample numbers of the Queen. Address The Canadian, Queen Toronto, Canada.

A Good Offer.

Do you read The Cosmopolitan, that bright, sparkling young magazine? The cheapest illustrated monthly in the world. 25 cents a number. $2.40 per year. Enlarged, October, 1889, to 128 pages. The Cosmopolitan is literally what the New York Times calls it, "At its price, the brightest, most varied and best edited of the magazines." An unusual opportunity for new subscribers for one year only:

The Cosmopolitan, per year....	$2 40
The NEWS, per year	1 50
The price of both	3 90
We will furnish both for only....	3 00

This offer is only to new subscribers to the Cosmopolitan, and only for one year. The Boston Journal says "It has more articles in each number that are readable, and fewer uninteresting pages, than any of its contemporaries." The Cosmopolitan for the first time in magazine literature, a splendidly illustrated Periodical at a price hitherto deemed impossible. Try it for a year. It will be a liberal educator to every member of the household. It will make the nights pass pleasantly. Send $3.00 to this offite and secure both the Cosmopolitan and the NEWS.

Bucklin's Arnica Salve.

The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by W. A. Schreiter.

Call For Immagration Convention

To meet at Stephen, Marshall county, Minnesota, Wednesday, November 26th, at 10:30 a. m.

In view of the fact that the Red River Valley and Northern Mindesota are today among the prosperous grain and stock raising regions of the United States, and that they are now enjoying success superior to that of any other section, and that notwithstanding, it is generally supposed in the east that our climate is unhealthy and severe, and that our section has been subjected to a succession of crop failure, the countrary being the case. And, in view of these false impressions, and of the fact that other sections, inferior in every respect, in climate, resources and productious are making strenuous efforts to divert and retain eastern immigration and eastern capital to their localities, it is not only our duty but a matter of justice to ourselves that we take measures to secure our rightful share of the influx of home-seekers and capital from the east which will not only populate our unoccupied lands but enhance the value of real estate already occupied. Everyone interested in the prosperity and advancement of our common interests are eligible to participate in the proceedings of the convention, the object of which is to organize the counties of Polk, Marshall, and Kittson to carry on immigration work jointly between them. Stephen has been chosen as the best point to hold the convention as this will enable Polk and Marshall county participants to go on the Great Northern morning train returning to their homes on the evening of the same day, while it will be easily accessible to the participants froma Kittson county by team. You are earnestly requested to attend yourself and use your best efforts to induce others interested in our common welfare to attend.

M.R. BROWN, Polk Co.
L. LOUGHRIDGE, Marshall Co.
H. W. DONALDSON, Kittson Co.

A Present to our Subscribers.

It is with pleasure that we announce to our many patrons that we have made arrngements with that wide-awake, illustrat ed farm magazine, the American Farmer, published at Fort Wayne, Ind., and read by nearly 200,000 farmers by which that great publication will be mailed direct, FREE, to the address of any of our subscribers who will come in and pay up all arrearages on subscription and one year in advance from date, and to any new subscriber who will pay one year in advance. This is a grand opportunity to obtain a first-class farm journal free. The American Farmer is a large 16-page journal of national circulation, which ranks among the leading agricultural papers. It treats the question of economy in agriculture and the rights and privileges of that vast body of citizens—American Farmers—whose industry is the basis of all material and national prosperiy. Its highest purpose is the elevation and ennobling of Agriculture through the higher and broader education of men and women engaged in its pursuits. The regular subscription price of the American farmer is $1.00 per year. IT COSTS YOU NOTHING. From any one number ideas can be obtained that will be worth thrice the subscripion price to you or members of your household, YET YOU GET IT FREE. Call and see sample copy.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk—ss.

In probate court, special term Oct., 1890.

In the matter of the estate of William J. Bahnson, deceased.

Letters of administration on the estate of said deceased being this day granted unto DeForest Bucklen of said county.

It is ordered, that all claims and demands of all persons against said estate be presented to this court, for examination and allowance, at the probate office in the city of Crookston in said county on Tuesday the 18th day in May, A. D. 1891 at 10 o'clock a. m.

It is further ordered, that six months from the date hereof be allowed to creditors to preseat their claims against said estate, at the expiration of which time all claims not presented to said court, or not proven to its satisfaction, shall be forever barred, unless for cause shown further time be allowed.

Ordered further, that notice of the time and place of the hearing and examination of said claims and demands shall be given by publishing this order once in each week, for three successive weeks prior to the day appointed for such examination, in the Red Lake Falls News, a weekly newspaper printed and published at the village of Red Lake Falls, in said county.

Dated at Crookston, Minn., the fourteenth day of October. A. D. 1890.

By the Court: C. O. Christianson,
Judge of Probate.

Unprecedented Record

The Minneapolis Times has attained the largest measure of success in the short time it has been before the people of any paper in the Northwest.

WHY ? ? ?

Because it is Bright Newsy, Ably Edited, Fair to all Parties and Gets the News.

Since the first guns of the preliminary campaign in July The Times'

POLITICAL NEWS

has set the pace for its contemporaries. It has gone to the front on its Local News, Market Reports, Telegraphic Specials, Regular Press (Press News) report.

The Times

Is independent politically and prints all the news about politics and candidates, but does not deal in abuse of any man who has the misfortune to run for an office.

A Campaign Offer-The Times 4 Months

$1.00

The Times will be sent by mail 4 months from Oct. 1st for the sum of $1. Send in your subscriptions now in order to get the benefit of all the news of the present campaign.

THE TIMES,
49 Fourth St. S., Minneapolis, Minn.

Specimen Cases.

S. H. Clifford, New Cassel, Wis., was troubled with Neuralgia and Rheumatism, his stomich was disordered, his Liver was affected to an alarming degree, appetite fell away, and he was terribly reduced in flesh and strength. Three bottles Electric Bitters cured him.

Edward Shepherd, Harrisburg, Ill. had a running sore on leg for eight years standing. Used three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes of Bucklens Arnica salve, and his leg is sound and well John Speaker, Catawba, O., had five large Fever sores on his leg, doctors said he was incurable. One bottle of Electric Bitters one box of Bucklins Arnica Salve cured him entirely. Sold by W. A. Schrieter's Drug store.

Merit Wins.

We desire to say to our citizens, that for years we have been selling Dr Kings New discovery for consumption Dr King New Life pills, Bucklins Arnica salve and Electric Bitters and have never handled remedies that sell as well, or that gives such satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price, if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits. W. A. Schrieter, Druggest.

To Stock Owners.

Horses' Teeth, The Cause of Numerous Diseases and Disagreeable Habits.

Horses having diseased teeth are hard to keep in condition, and if poor it is impossible to fatten them. After having undergone my treatment they become good condition.

More horses are blind from diseased and sharp-edged and irregular molars than from all other causes. By my operation on their teeth I have saved many horses from going blind,

Many diseases can be cured and disagreeable habits overcome by my operation on the horses' teeth. I have cured them of coughing, drooling, stopping short, starting suddenly, frothing, loss of flesh, weak eyes, and especially from driving on one rein or pulling. I remove all rough edges from their molars and level the mouth, thereby enabling the horses to properly masticate his food Improper grinding of food produces indigestion, and indigestion produces hide-bound, swollen limbs, staring or dead-like coat of hair and loss of appetite. Young as well as old horses require this operation,

I will visit any point when a sufficient number of horses are ready to be operated upon, and am always ready to explain my method to any one interested in the welfare of his horses.

My prices are reasonable, and my operation prolongs the life of the horse.

Yours Truly,
DR. I. TURCOT.

Happy Hoosier.

Wm. Timmons, Postmaster of Idaville Ind., writes: "Electric Bitters has done more for me than all other medicines combined, for that bad feeling arising from Kidney and Liver trouble." John Leslie, farmer and stockman of same place says: "find Electric bitters to be the best Kidney and Liver medicine made me feel like a new man." J. W. Gardner hardware merchant, same town says: Electric Bitters is just the thing for a man who is all run down and don't care whether he lives or dies; he found new strength, good appetite and felt just like he had a new lease on life. Only 50c a bottle at Schreiters.

THREE ROSES.

Three roses were grouped on a branch
At the close of a warm summer season,
And it seemed they were all there by chance;
If not, I can't tell the reason.

They plumed themselves all on their strength,
And defied both the wind and the weather,
And concluded their lives were great length,
And they all were quite happy together.

For they were as rosy as rosy could be,
For the sun never soiled their complexion;
For the tint of the leaves, you might see,
Was of the nicest and choicest selection.

They were almost temptation itself
To one that was hunting a flower,
But their beauty soon conquered the elf
And they were permitted their hour.

But the charms and the magic of beauty
At some time must come to a close,
For such is the fate of the fair,
And is surely the fate of the rose.

The cold, biting wind from the north
Arose with a terrible blow,
And spared neither flower nor plant,
And laid all the three roses low.

—Philadelphia Times.

Need of Two Names.

"Among all these struggles for the advancement of individual rights I wish some one would start a reform providing for every person to have two names," remarked an old friend to me the other day.

"Two names? Wouldn't that be confusing?"

"I don't mean that they should both be used at once, but that the name used in childhood should be replaced upon maturity by one of the owner's own choosing, much as the first teeth are in time replaced by a set of sterner stuff. Names ought to have some appropriateness, which it is evident they never can when a child is named before he has developed the slightest traces of individuality.

"Now, my parents named me, but I won't tell you what they named me. It is enough to say that I have used only initials in my signature for over forty years. Miss Juliet Capulet never showed her youth and inexperience more plainly than when she hinted that there was nothing in a name. If her own had been less melodious she would have found that there can be at least a great deal of suffering in an undesirable one."—Kate Field's Washington.

Red Lake Falls News.

BOYLE & MEEHAN, Editors & Proprietors.

TERMS, $1.50 A YEAR.

THERE are 70,00 widows in India under nine years of age.

IN Washington, D. C., 30,000 people live in alleys. The fact is urged as a reason for a large increase of the police force to maintain social and sanitary order.

NEARLY one-sixth of the total population of our forty-four states and several territories lives in thirty-five cities, and one-sixth of these cities is supplied by a single state, New York.

ACCORDING to carefully prepared statistics the people in this country are longer lived than those of Europe. Here 18 persons out of every 1,000 die each year; in England the average is 20 and in Germany 26.

ONE girl in New York is said to have the walls of her bedroom so covered with photographs that not a square inch of the original wall can be discovered. She has ninety-seven different picture of one leading actor.

A MAN who killed 70 Indians during his virile career died peacefully in bed out west a few days ago. He had his "boots on" for 80 years, and finally went to the happy killing-ground barefooted. In the midst of bed we are in death.

THE present empress of Russia, formerly the Princess Dagmar, celebrated for her beauty throughout Europe, has become so thin and haggard that her old friends scarcely recognize her. The fear of assassination for herself, her husband and son is what caused her to lose flesh.

THE excavations of Mr. Pecrie have shown that up to now we have known nothing or next to nothing of the archæology of the Holy Land before the classical age, and if we are ever to learn anything about pre-exilic Israel on the soil of Palestine itself, it must be by the help of the spade.

THE world's stock of diamonds has increased enormously in the last fifteen years. In 1876 the output of the African mines was about 1,500,000 carats, last year it was over 4,000,000, and the great "trust" which controls all the principal mines assert that they have 16,000,000 carats "in sight" at the present time.

A LOS ANGELES paper describes a tomato tree growing in that city. It is a native of Guatemala, and the fruit grows in clusters, the tomatoes being smooth and perfectly oval in shape. They are first green, and then yellow and are glowing red when ripe. They taste very much like the ordinary tomato.

PEOPLE have no idea of the fatal speed of express trains. It is a common thing to see their buffers bespattered with blood after a long and quick run. The noise of their approach disturbs the small birds from the hedge-rows, and as they fly across the line along comes the thunderer at a speed of which they have no conception and dashes them to pieces.

THE electricians want a substitute for platinum for use in electric lighting. It is used to connect the carbonized loop of lamps and is indispensable. The electric light was perfected but eleven years ago, and since that time platinum has advanced in price from $3 to $20. A cheap substitute for it will aid to cheapen the electric light, which is, no doubt, to be the ultimate illuminant of the world.

A STORY is related of Admiral Selfridge that during Gen. Grant's Administration he was spending an evening out informally in a distinguished company, and upon being joked upon his leaving at the early hour of ten o'clock, replied that if the others kept on eating late suppers they might not live as long as he though they were all much younger than he. The Admiral is now 90 years old; and of the others present on that occasion, ex-Secretary Robeson alone survives. Gen. Belknap, Justice Miller, Gen. Garfield and Senator Zack Chandler were among the guests that evening.

NEWS SIFTINGS.

Criminal, Personal, Foreign and Other Interesting News Items.

WASHINGTON.

Don Frederico Volio, secretary of the Costa Rican legation to the United States, died in Washington of pneumonia. He was acting as charged 'd affairs and minister of the legation.

Minister Lincoln arrived in Washington, and called on Secret[illegible] Blaine and Proctor. He denies emphati[illegible] the truth of the report that he inte[illegible] resign. He says he will return to E[illegible] at the expiration of his two months' [illegible] absence.

P[illegible]NAL.

Gov. Campbel[illegible] Ohio, is seriously ill.

Hon. Barclay Martin, the oldest living ex-congressman in Tennessee, lies very ill at his residence near Columbia, Tenn. There is no hope of his recovery.

Miss Mary Abell a daughter of the late Arunah S. Abell, the founder of the Baltimore Sun, has entered a convent of the Visitation at Georgetown with the purpose of becoming a nun. Miss Abell is one of the richest women in Baltimore.

ACCIDENTAL.

James S. Goodwin, a cartoonist on Puck, was found dead near a railroad track in New York, having been killed by the train.

A collision between a passenger train and a construction train occurred near Yarmouth, Mass. Fifteen persons were bruised and scalded.

Elias Esjen, a man about twenty-two years of age, living near Wildwood Wis., was struck by an engine while walking on the track between Baldwin and Hammond. He was severely cut about the face, besides having his skull fractured.

While a number of machinists were moving an engine in the Jarecki manufacturing establishment at Erie, Pa., the mass falling crushed two men fatally. James B. McSloy, a conspicuous member of the Mechanics' fraternity, died in an hour, and H. S. Benson, a Swede, died later. Henry Sutter, a veteran in the navy, upon learning of the death of McSloy, who had been a warm friend, went home, and locking himself in his room, shot himself through the head.

SINS AND SINNERS.

University students at Ann Arbor, Mich., engaged in a general row, resulting in the arrest of six of their number. No one suffered severe injury.

Serious election disorders have occurred in Rosario, Argentine Republic. Before order was restored, several persons were killed and a number wounded.

Dr. J. C. McPherson of Lyons, N. Y., one of the best know physicians in that section of the state, was assaulted in Chicago by two footpads. His condition is serious.

At New Orleans the safe of B. A. Meyer was blown open and robbed of $4,000 in cash and $30,000 in bonds, notes, mortgages and other valuable documents. No clue.

Dr. B. Gorham, a retired physician of Lexington, Ky., was murdered by his negro farm hand, William Wilson, who will be lynched if caught.

Officer O'Malley of Chicago was brutally beaten by two negroes whom he tried to arrest for robbing an old man. His condition is serious. The negroes were arrested.

Dr. W. D. Howell of Booneville, Ky., who was shot by Granville Simmonds, a desperate moonshiner of Middleboro, has died. The murderer was captured and confessed. There are fears of lynching.

At San Antonio, Tex., James A. Layton, aged eighty-one years, has been remanded to jail in default of bail for counterfeiting. Layton is an historical character, and, perhaps, the oldest counterfeiter in America.

Ernest Forbes, the colored youth who is under arrest on a charge of assaulting Bertha Phipps, aged fifteen, at Annapolis, Md., has been secretly removed to Baltimore, where he will be safe from lynchers and secure from release.

At Macon, Ga., two of the five men who were arrested on the charge of murdering J. C. Forsythe, the representative of Norman W. Dodge of New York, have confessed. A negro named Richard Lowry was hired to do the deed.

M. W. Kerney, deputy postmaster at Sibley, Iowa, has been arrested charged with being a defaulter to the extent of $400. He is under bonds to appear before the United States court. The trouble is said to be attributed to the deputy's fondness for cards.

At Duncanville, Pa., the dead body of Charles Suder, a traveling sewing machine agent, was found lying in a small stream. There were seven stabs in his throat, any one of which would have caused death. No clue to his murderers.

Three burglars raided the town of Wyoming, Jones county, Iowa. They buglarized nearly every store in the town and also visited several farm houses, from one of which $300 was taken. They were arrested, but escaped from the marshal, and it is believed went to Dubuque.

The schooner Eastern Queen, of Gloucester, N. S., which has been for several days at Souris, Prince Edward Island, loading potatoes, was seized on the charge of violating the customs act. The offense is alleged to have been committed last year when the vessel was under a different captain and owned by another man.

Noveto Griego was executed in the state penitentiary at Canon City, Col., for the murder of W. C. Underwood at Trinidad last June. The execution was the first one to take place under the law requiring the death sentence to be carried out within the walls of the prison and prohibiting the press from publishing the account.

Joe Jackson, one of the Rube Burrows gang confined in the penitentiary at Jackson, Miss., for some time, waiting trial for train robbery, committed suicide by jumping from the third floor of the corridor of the court house to the ground, a distance of sixty feet. His neck was broken by the fall. Jackson was trying to escape and was discovered by the sheriff.

Peter Gustafson, a single man aged about thirty-five years, who had been in the employ of Peter Beck at Lake City, Minn., for some time, committed suicide by blowing his brains out with a shotgun. He was an industrious man, but much addicted to drinking, and alcoholism was probably the cause of his rash act, no other being known. He had no relatives in this part of the country.

At Clarenceville, Quebec, a man named Fournival, who for some time has been insane, but who was not supposed to be dangerously so, rushed into the house where his wife was at work, seized a razor and drew it across her throat, inflicting a terrible wound from which the woman died. After committing the crime Fournival fled and has not been captured. It is thought that he has committed suicide in the woods.

What is supposed to be a fiendish murder was committed on Washington street bridge, Spokane Falls. Inmates of a house at the end of the bridge were startled by cries of "Murder! help!" and rushing to the windows saw three men in a desperate struggle on the bridge. A moment later they heard a splash in the river and then two men ran away. A man named Roy was arrested later on whose clothing was a qantity of blood. Identity of the murdered man has not been learned.

Every police officer in Young county, Texas, is in jail, having been indicted by the United States grand jury for participation in the famous mob which assaulted the jail, to hang three murderers. The trial of three members of the mob is going on. Twenty-five special United States deputies guard the jail, but the town is full of determined citizens, armed with Winchesters, who say the United States court may convict, but their neighbors shall not suffer the penalty. A riot will be precipitated by a conviction.

Dr. Lilly and John Wilson had a desperate encounter in Estill county, Kentucky. They had a quarrel at the polls, hot words ensued, which resulted in both men drawing pistols. Lilly was the quicker, and had shot Wilson twice near the heart before the latter could get his weapon. Wilson then got his pistol out and fired two shots, one of which struck Lilly in the region of the heart. About this time Wilson's brother interfered and succeeded in wresting Lilly's weapon from his hand. Nothing daunted him, however, and, almost in the throes of death, Lilly drew his knife and made several stabs at his enemy. Both fell to the ground, but the terrible duel was not over. With the last of his ebbing strength, Wilson raised up and fired the last load in his pistol at Grant Lilly, a brother of Dr. Lilly, who appeared on the scene, inflicting a wound which finally caused his death. Wilson then crawled over to where his antagonist lay, buried the hammer of his pistol in Dr. Lilly's head. Lilly died in a few minutes, while Wilson lingered until next day.

FOREIGN GRIST.

Reports from the Russian provinces indicate that the Tolstoi governmental reforms have proved a failure.

The shoe manufacturers at Erfurt, Germany, have declared a lock-out in consequence of a dispute arising from the dismissal of a workman. Three thousand men are thrown out of employment.

The Spanish cabinet is considering the frame of a reciprocity treaty to be submitted to the United States, and intended more especially to relieve the distressed industries of Cuba.

Despite the order issued by the Russian government prohibiting the emigration of peasants and Polish Jews to Brazil, 300,000 have left Russia for that country during the past three months.

The controversy growing out of Stanley's charges against the rear guard continues to occupy a large amount of space in the London newspapers, and public interest in the matter is apparently very keen.

A dispatch from Romestates that the pope has been solicited through Cardinal Rampolla, on behalf of the British government, to prohibit Catholics in America from contributing to the Irish National league, on the ground that the funds are used for unlawful and immoral purposes.

Emperor William has summoned Prof. Koch to an interview in order to personally learn the results that have been obtained from the new consumption cure. The emperor has made a personal gift of $250,000 to Prof. Koch, and another of the same amount to endow a national institute for the production of the lymph used in Koch's process. The lymph is described as a transparent yellowish fluid, having a slight smell of carbolic acid.

OTHERWISE.

A heavy shock of earthquake was felt in Guaymas, Mexico, causing great fright but doing little damage.

There is much destitution in the western part of Nebraska, owing to the failure of the corn crop.

J. H. Gendron, wholesale grain and flour merchant of Sherbrooke, Ont., has failed. Liabilities over $100,000; assets $35,000.

John A. MacFarland, the oldest banker in Boone county, Iowa, has just made an assignment. The liabilities are $18,500, while the assets, mostly real estate, foot up $40,000.

Patrick O'Sullivan, undergoing sentence in the penitentiary for participation in the murder of Dr. Cronin, is said to be preparing to make a statement or confession.

Several leading leather and hide dealers of the United States have entered into an agreement as to the future grading of leather, and will also attempt to advance prices.

C. S. Wheaton, ex-grand chief of the Order of Railway conductors, was tried at Elmira, N. Y., on a charge preferred by the grand secretary, William P. Daniels, and acquitted, Daniels failing to substantiate the charges.

The Mutual Fire Insurance Company of Chicago made an assignment Oct. 25th last, but the failure was not announced before. The liabilities are $57,604, and the assets $187,660.

There is an epidemic of hog cholera in the vicinity of Oskaloosa, Iowa, which is taking animals off by the score. Within the past two weeks M. Price & Son have lost $100,000 worth of prize hogs from the disease.

The Vatican has been asked to investigate the reported miracle at Luttenbourg in Styria, where the Virgin Mary is said to appear twice a day to a little girl. At present the police are guarding the tree where the miraculous apparition is said to occur.

Deuel county, South Dakota, is enjoying a bitter feud, the result of a county seat war. The vote was officially canvassed and the county property moved to Clear Lake, a hamlet near the geographical center of the county.

The commission on the social question appointed by the pope consists of five Italian cardinals and bishops as follows: Two Italian, five French, five German, four Austrian, four Spanish, one Portuguese, one Swiss, one Irish and one Russian.

Patrick Delaney, who was implicated in the Phœnix Park murders and was serving a sentence of life imprisonment, and who appeared as a witness for the London Times before the Parnell commission, has been released from prison.

The work of constructing a new water power canal on the Canadian side at Sault Ste. Marie, with Lake Superior as a reservoir, has been commenced. The canal will be twelve feet deep and fifty wide, and will afford unlimited water power for manufacturing purposes.

Odanah, the Chippewa Indian village on the Bad River reservation, Wis., reports the finding of the bodies of an Indian woman and her child in the woods, three or four miles back from Bad River. The scant clothing on the bodies had rotted away and hung in tatters and part of the flesh had been eaten by birds or animals. It is supposed the woman and child wandered into the woods and were lost, starved or murdered.

James Struthers, a broker, died suddenly on the floor of the New York exchange. He entered the exchange about noon. Grouped together were C. B. Gunther, E. O. Read and a Mr. Francis. As Struthers came up behind Read he tottered and brushed past him. Read was busy with the markets, and when he half turned and saw Struthers, he said, petulantly: "Jimmie, don't do that. I'm busy." The tottering man paid no attention to this, but kept on. The next man he reached was Gunther. He fell squarely up against Gunther, who stepped back to get out of the way. This permitted him to fall to his knees. From that position he tumbled forward on his face and in a few minutes was dead. As soon as it became known, President Dickerman stopped the noise by mounting the rostrum and announcing the death. He said business would be suspended for half an hour on account of the death.

CITIZENS ALARMED.

Citizens of Mandan Preparing for an Outbreak of the Indians.

They Petition Gov. Miller for Arms and Ammunition.

MANDAN, N. D., Special Telegram, Nov. 18.—No citizens were ever more in earnest than those at a public meeting to-night, called by the mayor.

All day the entire community has been terrorized. Settlers from every direction have come in reporting insults they have received from predatory bands of Indians who are armed to the teeth, and who make circles around their heads, indicating that some scalping is to be done.

Little consolation is to be had from the citizens of Mandan. They are unarmed and practically helpless against an attack of any force of Indians equipped as they are with the most approved weapons.

To-night two Indians went into a hardware store and called for some ammunition. The storekeeper asked one what he wanted it for, and he told him he wanted it to kill whites, and drew a circle about the top of his head, as he said so, indicating that they were after scalps.

Joseph Ardron comes in from ten miles northwest and states that six Indians camped there this morning, and he told them to be careful of fire. They told him to mind his own business, ominously tapped their guns, showed their ammunition and encircled their heads. The same camp was in town this afternoon, and they told a friendly Sioux who lives here that they belonged to the army of the Messiah; they were going down to meet the rest of the army, and they were coming back to take Fort Lincoln and then to burn and pillage Mandan and kill the inhabitants. They said the Messiah would lead the army, and they did not expect to go out till spring, but when he said go, they would go, even if it was in the depth of winter. They said they believed they were the chosen people of the Messiah. The whites are intruders, and the entire country west of the Missouri belonged to them and the buffalo, and when the whites were killed they would own it all.

These and all other Indians journeying through the country are armed in an extraordinary way, and loaded down with ammunition, but of late they have been insolent, morose and sullen. They will not show passes they are supposed to have from the Indian agency. Nothing but the immediate appearance of troops will prevent an uprising, in the judgment of all old Indian soldiers.

The utmost tension prevails here, as it is impossible to hear from Standing Rock as to the situation there, or from the East to learn what is being done about the movement of troops. Half the population believes that troops will come when the people have all been killed and scalped.

A large number of women and children left on to-night's train for Bismarck and other points east of the Missouri. Supt. Mellen, of the Northern Pacific, has been telegraphed to by citizens urging him to do all he can to urge the military department to take immediate action.

To-night a rumor was reported to have come via Bismarck from Standing Rock that a large body of warriors had left Standing Rock headed for the Northern Pacific. It is impossible to get a confirmation or denial of the rumor. Efforts have been made to telegraph Maj. McLaughlin at Yates, and messages have been delivered to him, but no reply can be had.

At a public meeting to-night a committee was appointed to employ men to ride down to Cannon Ball river, procure information and give warning of danger. Gov. Miller wires that arms and ammunition will be shipped from Bismarck on the first train. A telegram to-night from Maj. McLaughlin at Standing Rock says he believes there is no immediate reason for alarm.

A man named Fred Clark was accidentally shot at the meeting to-night. It is feared he will die.

CALL FOR ARMS.

Citizens of Mandan Ask for Means of Defense.

CASSELTON, N. D., Special Telegram, Nov. 18.—Gov. Miller is here and is keeping the wires hot between here and Bismarck. He is receiving dispatches from the capital which are somewhat alarming. People of Mandan call for arms and ammunition, and say that an attack by the Indians may be looked for at any moment. Roving bands of armed and painted warriors are roaming the prairies, and settlers are leaving farms and ranches. It is very likely that the state militia will be called out. The governor leaves on the early morning train for Bismarck. There is much excitement and alarm all along the line of the Northern Pacific.

READY TO FIGHT.

Companies at Fort Russell, Wyo., Prepared to Take the Field.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Special Telegram, Nov. 18.—Seven of the eight companies of the Seventeenth infantry stationed at Fort Russell, three miles from this town, have been ordered to be in readiness to take the field against against Northern Indians at a moment's notice. The order was received at 9:20 p. m., and in thirty-five minutes Gen. Mizener, the commandant, had his men ready to proceed. So far as can be learned, there is no trouble with the 2,000 Indians in Wyoming, but the Messiah agitation has been worked among them for months.

Coming to the Rescue.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—Three leading Scotch banks have subscribed £250,000 each for the Baring guarantee fund. A committee of leading financial houses has been formed to investigate the condition of the Argentine Republic's finances. There is an unconfirmed rumor that the Argentine financial agency will be transferred from the Barings to the Rothschilds, in which case the debt of the republic will be reconstructed and consolidated. Country bankers are drawing large sums from London, causing a continued pressure on the Bank of England. The third installment of £1,000,000 has not yet arrived from Paris.

NO DANGER OF TROUBLE.

A Telegram From Gen. Schofield, Now in South Dakota.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—A telegram from Gen. Miles was received this morning by Maj. Gen. Schofield, saying that there seems to be no danger of trouble with the Indians at the Rosebud and other agencies. The Indians remain restless, however, and are exciting themselves by frequent war dances and are still looking for the coming of the Messiah, who is to exterminate the white man. The Indian prophets are doing everything to stimulate the excitement.

The failure of the Messiah, however, to appear on specified dates, has had a somewhat depressing effect upon their efforts. Now it is predicted that he will appear in December—a date not definitely fixed, in view of recent failures of accurate prediction. Gen. Miles believes that when the next failure is recorded the influence of the prophets upon the Indians, already badly shaken, will be substantially destroyed.

He is certain that there is no danger of trouble this winter, but if the present spirit of restlessness and the agitation is continued next spring may witness an outbreak. Every precaution has been made by the military authorities to promptly suppress an outbreak if it should occur. Troops in adequate numbers have been stationed at points of threatened trouble, and Gen. Ruger's visit has had a salutary effect upon the Indians.

TOO HUNGRY TO FIGHT.

Col. Corbin's Opinion of the Condition of the Indians.

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—Gen. Miles, accompanied by Assistant Adjutant-General Corbin, returned from St. Louis this morning. Gen. Miles was in consultation with Secretary of War Proctor about the alleged Indian outbreak in the Northwest. Col. Corbin said:

We are disposed to regard the reports as greatly exaggerated, and the secretary of war appears to be of the same mind. There is no doubt if the Indians were to decide upon an outbreak they could do much harm. They have abundance of rifles and ammunition, and plenty of horses and large supplies of meat. In fact, they are in good condition to go to war. But winter is now coming on, and I hardly think there is immediate danger of an outbreak.

The stories of evacuation of the settlers in North Dakota are overdrawn. A few weak and fearful residents, fearing the vengeance of the redskins, may have left their homes to await the outcome of the difficulty, but the rumor that there has been a wholesale evacuation is absolutely without foundation. We have made a careful estimate of the number afflicted by the Messiah craze, and there are in all not to exceed 31,000 Indians. Of this number perhaps one-fifth are able-bodied warriors, and one-half of the whole number, or at least 15,000, could bear arms. Such a body of Indians could do much harm if their movements were not properly arrested, but we have taken measures to intercept any outbreak.

Gen. Ruger was ordered to the scene from St. Paul three days ago, and is in easy communication with reinforcements. The Indians will not fight because they are hungry, for they are well supplied by the government, but if they do get to war it will be on account of the strange superstition that now possesses them.

VERY SERIOUS.

Gen. Miles' Opinion of the Indian Situation.

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—Gen. Nelson A. Miles, whose department embraces the territory throughout which the Messiah-crazed Indians are scattered, made this reply to questions to-night:

It would be unwise to say anything at this time. Anything I might say would be telegraphed all over the country and to-morrow would be in the Indian camps. The Indians no longer depend upon runners to take their news from camp to camp. They utilize the mails and keep posted with regard to current events affecting their interests. I have nothing to say beyond the fact that the situation is very serious, and that there is reason for grave apprehension of trouble with the Indians of the plains between the Missouri river and the mountains."

"In what locality is the disaffection gravest?"

"It is not graver in one place than in others, but is serious among all the different Sioux camps, numbering 27,000 men, the Arapahoes, Cheyennes, Shoshones and the Comanches."

"Can you say anything of your consultation with Secretary Proctor as to the steps necessary to be taken by the government?"

"Certainly not; that is just the matter about which it would be most imprudent to speak."

PREPARING FOR A FIGHT.

Fargo's Militia Notified to Be Ready to Go to Bismarck.

FARGO, Special Telegram, Nov. 18.—Sheriff Bingenheimer of Morton county wired to Marshal Price this evening that he had asked aid of the governor to protect settlers in the southern part of Morton county. It is understood that Adjt. Gen. Devoy of Grand Forks has been ordered to the scene of the trouble, and the local militia company has been notified to embark for Bismarck at an hour's notice. No acts of hostility are reported, but settlers fear for their lives and property.

The Revenue Marine.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—Capt. Sheppard, chief of the revenue marine division, has made a report to the secretary of the treasury of the operations of that service during the last fiscal year, from which it appears that the thirty-six vessels in commission traversed 288,112 nautical miles and boarded and examined 23,161 vessels, of which number 915 were found to have violated the law and to have incurred fines and penalties amounting to $396,616. Eighty distressed vessels were assisted, the value of which, together with their cargoes, amounted to $2,500,000. Forty-three persons were rescued from drowning and 811 were assisted in other ways. The expenditures on account of the service were $937,033. The report says that unless the present fleet is enlarged it will gradually become debilitated.

Lawyers From Minnesota.

WASHINGTON, Special Telegram, Nov. 18.—E. D. Childs, assistant attorney general of Minnesota, and Charles Bunn of St. Paul were admitted to practice before the supreme court of the United States to-day. Mr. Childs is here to argue the validity of the John Day Smith execution law, the constitutionality of which is pending before the supreme court in the case of Clifford Holden, under sentence for murder. C. C. Wilson of Rochester is representing the defense, and will argue the case against the state. The claim set up is that the provisions of the law relating to the solitary confinement of a convicted prisoner are ex-post facto in Holden's case, as the crime for which he is sentenced was committed prior to the passage of the law. Mr. Bunn has a motion to argue before the court.

His Back Broken.

ST. CLOUD, Special Telegrrm, Nov. 18.—Edwin McGowan, a young man hurt at Stayles, Minn., and who was brought here to the hospital for treatment, died to-day. His back was broken.

Peace Between Republics.

SAN SALVADOR, Nov. 18.—Yesterday peace was definitely signed in the capital of Guatemala between Salvador and Guatemala. The treaty is binding from the date of its approval by the respective governments, without prejudice as to its ratification by the national assemblies of each country.

Peace Again Prevails.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—Jacob Baiz, consul general of Guatemala, to-day received from Gen. Bogran the following dispatch:

Tegucigalpa, Nov. 15.—Sanchez revolved with the garrison at the capital. He surrendered to-day. Order re-established, and complete peace prevails.

An Uncomfortable Situation.

Col. Ryan, the manager of Prescott & Varnell's museum in St. Louis, tells the following narrow escape which he had from being killed by the snakes of his show: "We had ninety-seven serpents on exhibition, and some were enormous specimens eighteen to twenty feet long. These were confined in a glass covered cage, the top of which, having been broken, was temporarily held in place by a stick. Maj. Varnell and myself had sleeping apartments at the head of a stairway, directly above. One night we returned and dropped languidly into a bed without lighting the gas. After a little I felt something encumbering my lower limbs and heard a harsh, grating sound all over the room: Attempting to rise, I found to my horror that my feet were bound, and by a flash of lightening that passed at that moment I saw an immense boa constrictor wrapped about them. Striking a match I awoke Varnell and we found ourselves shackled together by the serpents. One huge anaconda was also coiled on the Majors breast.

"To make matters worse, the flickering matchlight in the gloom had attracted a host of reptiles, anacondas, rattles, garters, black snakes, cobras and copperheads soon began to congregate, hiss, scrape their rasp like, scaly bodies over our ears, crawl their clammy selves over our faces and breathe their breath upon our flesh. Great drops of perspiration stood out on our faces as we signaled each other to keep still and silent. To speak would have been but to transfer the attention of the reptiles to ourselves. The snakes in a short time began a fierce battle between themselves, and the suspense grew awful, as helpless we lay, not daring to move if we could, and listening to the writhing, struggling forms and fangs in the horrid work of wasting their hateful venom upon each other. But soon our jailers, to our delight took a hand in the row, and unwound their coils from our limbs. Once free, it was but a few moments' work to light the gas, get brooms and by the arts known to the profession, drive them into a big box that was convenient. We found that they had knocked the stick down, escaped through the roof of the glass case and crawled up into our room for warmth.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Right of Way.

It is of course generally understood that all the interest the public owns in the land over which our highways pass is simply the right of way. The land belongs, as it did before the road was located, to the several estates from which it was taken. If at any time the road is discontinued, the land goes back to those estates.

Plain as this principle is, there are curious questions of right arising from time to time. An interesting one came up in connection with fishing right a few years ago. An English road had crossed a little stream by a ford from a time so early that no one knew the beginning of the usage.

In later years, when fishing rights became valuable, the owners of land along the stream made its waters private property, as they had a right to do. The ford, however, belonged to the public as a thoroughfare. Could the traveller cast his line for a fish while passing through the water? Clearly this would be an act of trespass.

But this did not settle all the points at issue before the public yielded. A bridge was built over the stream just below the ford. No formal discontinuance of the old passage could, however, be obtained. People continued to drive through the stream, to the serious injury of the fishing rights above and below.

Naturally the owners of the land tried to prevent travel through the water. It was contended, on the other part, that the horses were accustomed to drink on their way by the ford, and that the bathing of their legs in the water refreshed them. These were held to be conveniences of travel, and were not surrendered by the building of the bridge.

People of Paraguay

The entire population of Paraguay only amounts to 239,774 persons of both sexes, of which 221,000 are Paraguayans, the remainder being mostly composed of Argentines, Italians, Brazilians and Germans. The census taken in 1857 showed that the population then consisted of upward of the 230,000 souls, so that more than 1,000,000 inhabitants perished through the war that was carried on by Topaz and Jourdan. The proportion is now as 100 to 140. In the entire country there are only 23,417 Paraguayans and 3,826 foreigners who can read and write, say about 20 per cent. of the natives and 60 per cent. of the foreign settlers.

We are now launched upon the lenten season, and many a poor fellow while trying to do his duty, has found temptation too strong and broken his vows. Sitting in a restaurant a gentleman overheard the following conversation between the man sitting opposite and the waiter: "Bring me some baked white fish." "All out, sir." "Out? Then I'll take some pork and cabbage. This is lent, but the Lord knows I called for fish."

WITHOUT WARNING

A Freight Train Percipitated into the Kaw River at Kansas City.

Four Men Known to Have Been Killed and Four More Escape.

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 18.—Early this morning a freight train of six cars and an engine of the Kansas City, Wyandotte & Northwestern, just entering the city from Beatrice, Neb., plunged through a bridge and down into the muddy depths of the Kaw river near its mouth in Kansas City, Kan.

No one knows yet how many persons were on board, but there may have been anywhere from a dozen up to thirty, and so far as the names are known of those rescued the list of saved comprise only four members of the train crew and one or two colored men who were riding across the bridge. The list of the killed so far as known is as follows:

FRED ALLEN, fireman, Lawrence, Kan.
HENRY COLEMAN.
WILL CRAWFORD.
HENRY WILLIAMS.

The last three were from Kansas City, Kan. They were employes of Armour's packing house and were riding to their work. The injured:

Christian Patch, engineer, Kansas City, Kan.; cuts and bruises on left leg, jaw fractured and cut across forehead.

Thomas Mulligan, brakeman, Lawrence, Kan.; bruises about body; cut across forehead.

S. V. Smith, Latham, Kan., stock man; badly bruised about the body and legs.

L. Latimore (colored), Kansas City, Kan.; three ribs broken.

The following list of names of missing is furnished by Armour's. All these were seen to get aboard the ill-fated train, and, as they have neither put in an appearance at their working places nor have returned home, it is feared that they are among the lost: Ralph Fay, Fred Bell, [illegible] Burke, Frank Wall, Dave Brown. All of the above are employed at Armour's.

Three tramps who boarded the train several stations up the road are also missing. All the missing are supposed to have been killed, and their bodies are now probably confined in the wreckage.

All of the missing men were found to-night at their homes except the three tramps. In an interview to-night the engineer said he saw them disembark from the train at the first station the other side of the bridge.

WITHOUT FOUNDATION.

Denial of the Report Regarding the Argentine Agency.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—The Times, in its financial article, declares that the statement that the Argentine agency will be transferred to the Rothschilds is without foundation.

The Times learns that Russia has given notice to the Barings of the withdrawal in three instalments of £1,500,000 of Russian funds, the first instalment to be due about the middle of December and the second in January. The whole of Russia's deposit of £2,440,000 is therefore still with the Barings. The latter decided to ask for assistance, not on account of Russia's action, but on a review of the whole position.

At a meeting of joint stock bankers at the Bank of England, the governor of the latter institution in a letter promised assistance wherever justifiable and needed. In view of the pinch through the country, bankers are withdrawing their balances. The meeting of country bankers to be held shortly will probably tend to allay the inner current of anxiety.

The Barings' share in the Buenos Ayres water and drainage syndicate is £1,400,000. Their responsibility also extends to the liabilities of other members of the syndicate in the event of their failure to meet their engagements. The report that a meeting has been held at which a scheme was devised to prop up Argentine credit is declared to be untrue.

NOT A COMBINATION.

No Truth in the Rumor Regarding Mississippi Valley Lumbermen.

EAU CLAIRE, Special Telegram, Nov. 18.—Lumbermen here are astounded to learn from sensational articles with scare heads in Burlington (Iowa) papers that a gigantic trust has been formed in the Mississippi valley which is to concentrate its operations at Eau Claire, and from this point supply Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska, the Dakotas and Kansas, put up the price of lumber to extravagant figures, and cause all the saw mills on the Mississippi below Eau Claire to shut down or be removed to Eau Claire.

The cause of all this furore is that the Eau Claire lumbermen have succeeded in bringing nearly to a crisis their long struggle for adjustment of freight differentials from Eau Claire to Missouri river points, and there is reason to believe the interstate commerce commission will act favorably to Eau Claire and give the lumbermen of Chippewa valley a fair and equal chance at the Southwestern markets.

There is no gigantic combination here, as stated. The only combination has been one to raise money and hire attorneys to get the matter before the commission, and the down-river lumbermen did the same thing on their own behalf at their meeting at Keokuk last Friday.

Sentenced to Death.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 18.—The trial of the nihilists who were accused of being implicated in a plot against the czar concluded to-day. Sophie Guengburg, one of the prisoners, who was arrested here after her trial in Paris, in which city she was arrested for having bombs in her possession, together with two of her accomplices named Stoilanofsky and Freifeld, were found guilty and condemned to be hanged. The court, however, recommended that the czar remit the sentence of death against Stoilan[illegible]sky and that they be banished to Siberia. The czar has refused to extend clemency to Lena Simonsky, the woman condemned to death for taking part in a nihilist conspiracy against the life of Gen. Kuropatkin.

Won in Two Rounds.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—Billy Dacey of this city and Joe Williams of Baltimore, who were matched several weeks ago to fight a prize fight to a finish with skin-tight gloves for a stake of $250 a side and a purse of $500, met to-night at Coney Island. Dacey won in two rounds.

A Prohibitive Tariff.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 18.—The decisions of the tariff committee so increase the restrictions on commerce as to threaten to isolate Russian trade from the rest of the world. Even farming machinery is subject to a high tariff.

World's Fair Site.

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—At a joint conference to-day a resolution was adopted asking for the unrestricted use of Washington Park for world's fair purposes. The local directory held a separate meeting and resolved to recommend that all the buildings be placed on the lake front. The matter will probably be settled to-morrow.

REMANDED FOR TRIAL.

Forger Smith Must Stand a Trial for His Wrong Doing.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—The assignment of Wells, Robeson & Smith, which was brought about by the forgeries of the junior partner, was formally filed in the county clerk's office to-day. Albert H. Smith, the guilty member of the firm, was arraigned in a police court and remanded until to-morrow.

Inspector Byrnes to-night furnished a full list of the number of shares of "raised" stocks upon which Albert H. Smith hypothecated with the brokerage firm of Mills, Robeson & Smith and by them deposited with other institutions. The list is as follows:

Nassau bank, Brooklyn, 8 shares Illinois Central, raised to 80 shares; Central Trust company, 8 shares St. Paul preferred, raised to 80; Mechanics' bank, 8 shares Illinois Central, raised to 80; Atlantic Trust company, 8 Lake Shore, raised to 80; Lincoln National bank, 8 Illinois Central, raised to 80; United States Trust company, 8 St. Paul preferred, raised to 80; Fourth National bank, 8 Lake Shore, raised to 80; Leather Manufacturers' bank, 8 St. Louis & San Francisco, raised to 80; Western National bank, 15 St. Paul preferred, raised to 150; Washington Trust company, 8 Illinois Central, raised to 80; Phœnix National bank, 9 Delaware & Hudson, raised to 90; Union Trust company, 8 Illinois Central, raised to 80; American Loan and Trust company, 8 St. Louis & San Francisco preferred, raised to 80; Bank State of New York, 15 Lake Shore, raised to 150; Chemical bank, 8 Delaware & Hudson, raised to 80; 8 St. Louis & San Francisco, raised to 80; C. O. Baker & Co., 8 St. Paul preferred, raised to 80; Kings County Trust company, 8 shares of Illinois Central raised to 80; 8 Lake Shore raised to 80; 8 Delaware & Hudson raised to 80; Union Trust company, 8 Illinois Central raised to 80; 8 Delaware & Hudson raised to 80, and 8 Michigan Central raised to 80; Washington Trust company, 15 Omaha preferred raised to 150, and 160 St. Paul raised to 160; Bowery National bank, 8 shares Lake Shore raised to 80.

The original or real face value of these raised certificates is $16,500, and by his forgeries Smith had raised the face value to $240,000, on which he borrowed $147,400.

The approximate liabilities of the firm were: Due on loans on which stocks and bonds had been issued as collaterals, $500,000; due depositors, $100,000. Total, $600,000. Assets, stocks and bonds pledged, $350,000; other property about $35,000. Total, $385,000.

CANADA BESTING US.

At Least That Is the Opinion of the Secretary of State.

WASHINGTON, Special Telegram, Nov. 18.—It is said that Secretary Blaine is not altogether pleased with the manner in which the Canadian government is conducting itself regarding the various matters that the two countries are interested in.

The seal fisheries is one of the most difficult problems that the state department has to consider, and as it is shown that the Canadian poachers have secured about twice as many seals as the authorized company which secured the sealing privileges of the Alaskan islands, there is talk that this company will throw up its contract and demand restitution from the United States.

Secretary Blaine has also encountered some opposition from the Canadians in the negotiations he has had with the South American and West Indian governments relative to reciprocity. Agents have been traveling through the West Indian islands and South American countries offering reciprocity advantages to them in exchange for the goods produced by the Canadian farmers. These two diplomatic difficulties have agitated the secretary and they explain the reasons why he gave voice to the opinions relative to the advantages which Canadian railroads secured from the United States in the matter of shipment of goods in bond to and from this country at the hearing before Secretary Windom last week.

Secretary Blaine is understood to believe that Canada, through the railroad connections and by the warship bluff in Behring sea, is getting the best of the United States.

OFFICERS RE-ELECTED.

Miss Willard and the Other W. C. T. U. Officers Again Chosen.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 18.—The W. C. T. U. at to-day's session devoted the morning hours to hearing reports of the superintendents of different departments. Then came the election of officers, which resulted in the re-election of all the old officers, as follows:

President, Frances E. Willard; Mrs. Caroline E. Buell, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Mary A. Woodbridge, recording secretary; Miss Pugh, treasurer.

Resolutions endorsing Senator Blair and urging his re-election were introduced and created a little excitement. An effort was made to have that part referring to his re-election stricken out and there was an animated discussion. Finally the matter went to the committee on resolutions.

The board of trustees of what is known as the Asheville assembly met to-day and accepted the donation of Mr. Miller of Skylands of twenty acres of land adjoining the Vanderbilt property at Asheville, upon which a large temperance tabernacle is to be erected.

Miss Willard is confined to her hotel by illness, and prayers for her recovery were delivered to-day. An interesting feature was the address of Mrs. Maud Balington Booth, fraternal delegate from the Salvation Army. This evening receptions were tendered the delegates at the governor's mansion and at Good Templars' hall.

STRUCK A SNAG.

La Blanche Defeated by a Local Pugilist at Butte, Mont.

BUTTE, Mont., Special Telegram, Nov. 18.—La Blanche, middle-weight champion of America, was defeated in a glove fight this afternoon with George Kessler, a local pugilist. Kessler is a total abstainer, and when not training for a go is working at his trade, telegraph lineman.

La Blanche came here about a week ago from the coast. This town is nearly a mile above sea level, and this season smelter smoke prevails. La Blanche was unacclimated and was not trained a particle. Kessler was in the pink of condition and is thoroughly acclimated.

La Blanche thought he had a picnic and [illegible]y to go in and win. He found out [illegible] mistake. Kessler was more than his match under these conditions. No bets could be got on La Blanche before the fight. Afterwards his backers offered to back Kessler against him again. The match was for fifteen rounds, Queensbury rules, four-ounce gloves. No severe punishment took place on either side. La Blanche soon became winded. The fight was going against him, he had no show, and in the thirteenth round he deliberately fouled. Kessler wanted to go on to a finish, but La Blanche refused.

A Tailor Shop Burglarized.

WEST SUPERIOR, Special Telegram, Nov. 18.—The tailoring establishment of A. Weinstein, on Tower avenue between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets, was entered by burglars via the front door and $300 worth of goods were carried away with them. Included among the articles taken were fourteen pairs of trousers.

Killed in a Questionable Resort.

RHINELANDER, Wis., Nov. 18.—Alex McBean shot and killed Felix Taylor in a disreputable resort near here. McBean escaped to the woods, but afterwards delivered himself up to the sheriff.

TALMAGE'S TRIP.

What He Saw Along the Country Roads in Palestine.

Scriptural Events Treated Like Ordinary Modern Affairs.

BROOKLYN Special.—Dr. Talmage took for his text: So I lifted up mine eyes the way toward the north."(Ez. VIII. 5) and said: In traveling along the roads of Palestine, I am impressed as I could not otherwise have been, with the fact that Christ for the most part went afoot. We find Him occasionally on a boat, and once riding on a triumphal procession, as it is sometimes called, although it seems to me that the hosannas of the crowd could not have made a ride on a stubborn, unimpressive and funny creature like that which pattered with Him into Jerusalem, very much of a triumph. But we are made to understand that generally He walked. How much that means only those know who have gone over the distance traversed by Christ. We are accustomed to read that Bethany is two miles from Jerusalem. Well any man with ordinary health can walk two miles without fatigue. But not more than one man out of a thousand can walk from Bethany to Jerusalem without exhaustion. It is over the Mount of Olives and you must climb up among the rolling stones and descend where exertion is necessary to keep you from falling prostrate. I, who am accustomed to walk 15 or 20 miles without lassitude, tried part of this road over the Mount of Olives and confess I would not want to try it often, such demand does it make upon one's physical energies. Yet Christ walked it twice a day—in the morning from Bethany to Jerusalem, and in the evening from Jerusalem to Bethany.

Likewise it seemed a small thing that Christ walked from Jerusalem to Nazareth. But it will take us four days of hard horseback riding, sometimes on a trot and sometimes on a gallop to do it this week. The way is mountainous in the extreme. To those who went up to the Tip-Top House on Mount Washington, before the railroad was laid, I will say that this journey from Jerusalem to Nazareth is like seven such American journeys. So, all up and down and across and recrossing Palestine, Jesus walked. Ahab rode. David rode. Solomon rode. Herod rode. Antony rode. But Jesus walked. With swollen ankles and sore muscles of the legs, and bruised heel and stiff joints and panting lungs and faint head, along the roads, and where there were no roads at all, Jesus walked.

We tried to get a new horse other than that on which we had ridden on the journey to the Dead Sea, for he had faults which our close acquaintanceship had developed. But after some experimenting with other quadrupeds of that species, and finding that all horses, like their riders, have faults, we concluded to choose a saddle on that beast whose faults we were most prepared to pity or resist. We rode down through the valley and then up on Mount Scopus and, as our dragoman tells us that this is the last opportunity we shall have of looking at Jerusalem, we turn our horse's head towards the city and take a long, sad and thrilling look at the religious capital of our planet. This is the most impressive view of the most tremendous city of all time. On and around this hill the armies of the crusaders at the first sight of the city threw themselves on their faces in worship. Here most of the besieged armies encamped the night before opening their volleys of death against Jerusalem. Our last look! Farewell Mount Zion, Mount Moriah, Mount of Olives, Mount Calvary! Will we never see them again? Never. The world is so large and time is so short, and there are so many things we have never seen at all, that we cannot afford to duplicate visits or see anything more than once. Farewell yonder thrones of gray rock, and the 3,000 years of architecture and battlefields. Farewell sacred, sanguinary, triumphant, humiliated Jerusalem! Across this valley of the Kedron with my right hand I throw thee a kiss of valedictory. Our last look, like our first look, an agitation of body, mind and soul, indescribable.

And now, like Ezekiel in my text, I lift up mine eyes the way toward the north. Near here was one of the worst tragedies of the ages, mentioned in the Bible. A hospitable old man coming home at eventide from his work in the fields, finds two strangers, a husband and wife, proposing to lodge in the street because no shelter is offered them, and invites them to come in and spend the night in his home. During the night, the ruffians of the neighborhood conspired together, and surrounded the house and left the woman dead on the doorstep, and the husband to rally in revenge the 12 tribes, cut the corpse of the woman into 12 parts and sent a twelfth of it to each tribe, and the fury of the nation was aroused and a peremptory demand was made for the surrender of the assassins and, the demand refused, in one day 20,000 people were left dead on the field and the next day 18,000. Wherever our horse to-day plants his foot, in those ancient times a corpse lay, and the roads were crossed by red rivulets of carnage.

Now we pass on to where seven youths were put to death and their bodies gibbeted or hung in chains, not for anything they had themselves done, but as a reparation for what their father and grandfather Saul, had done. Burial was denied these youths from May until November. Rizpah, the mother of two of these dead boys, appoints herself as sentinel to guard the seven corpses from beak of raven and tooth of wolf and paw of lion. She pitches a black tent on the rock close by the gibbets. Rizpah by day sits on the ground in front of her tent, and when a vulture begins to lower out of the noonday sky seeking its prey among the gibbets, Rizpah rises her long hair flying in the wind, and, swinging her arms wildly about, shoos away the bird of prey until it retreats to its eyrie. At night she rests under the shadow of her tent and sometimes falls into a drowsiness of half sleep. But the step of a jackal among the dry leaves or the panting of a hyena arouses her, and with the fury of a maniac she rushes out upon the rock crying. "Away! away!" and then examining the gibbets to see that they still keep their burden, returns again to her tent till some whooping wing from the midnight sky or some growling monster on the rock again wakes her.

A mother watching her dead children through May, June, July, August, September and October! What a vigil! Painters have tried to put upon canvass the scene and they succeeded in sketching the hawks in the sky and the panthers crawling out from the jungle, but they fail to give the wanness, the earnestness, the supernatural courage, the infinite self-sacrifice of Rizpah, the mother. A mother in the quiet home watching by the casket of a dead child for one night exerts the artist to his utmost, but who is sufficient to put upon canvass a mother for six months of midnights guarding her whole family, dead and gibbeted upon the mountains? Go home, Rizpah! You must be awfully tired. You are sacrificing your reason and your life for those whom you can never bring back again to your bosom. As I say that, from the darkest midnight of the century Rizpah turns upon me and cries; "How dare you tell me to go home? I am a mother. I am not tired. You might as well expect God to get tired as for a mother to get tired. I cared for those boys when they lay upon my breast in infancy and I will not forsake them now that they are dead. Interrupt me not. There stoops an eagle that I must drive back with my agonized cry. There is a panther I must beat back with my club!"

Do you know what that scene by our roadside in Palestine makes me think of? It is no unusual scene. Right here in these three cities by the American sea coast, there are thousand this moment worse than that. Mothers watching boys that the rum saloon, that annex of hell has gibbeted in a living death. Boys hung in chains of evil habit they cannot break. The father may go to sleep after waiting until 12 o'clock at night for the ruined boy to come home, and giving it up he may say: "Mother come to bed; there's no use sitting up any longer." But the mother will not go to bed. It is 1 o'clock in the morning. It is 1:30. It is 2 o'clock. It is 2:30, when he comes staggering through the hall. Do you say that young man is still alive? No; he is dead. Dead to his father's entreaties. Dead to his mother's prayers. Dead to the family altar where he was reared. Dead to all the noble ambitions that once inspired him. Twice dead; only a corpse of what he once was. Gibbeted before God and man and angels and devils. Chained in a death that will not loosen its cold grasp. His father is asleep, his brothers are asleep, his sisters are asleep but his mother is watching him—watching him in the night. After he has gone to bed and fallen into a drunken sleep, his mother will go up to his room and see that he is properly covered, and before she turns out the light, will put a kiss upon his bloated lips. "Mother, why don't you go to bed?" "Ah!" she says, "I cannot go to bed. I am Rizpah watching the slain!"

And what are the political parties of this country doing for such cases? They are taking care not to hurt the feelings of the jackals and the buzzards that roost on the shelves of the grog-shops, and hoot above the dead, I am often asked to what political party I belong, and I now declare my opinion of the political parties of to-day. Each one is worse than the other, and the only consolation in regard to them is, that they have been putrefied until they have no more power to rot. Oh, that comparative tame scene upon which Rizpah looked! She looked upon only seven of the slain. American motherhood and American wifehood, this moment are looking upon 70 of the slain, upon 700 of the slain, upon 70,000 of the slain. Woe! Woe! Woe! My only consolation on this subject is that foreign capitalists are buying up the American breweries. The present owners see that the doom of that business is coming, as surely as that God is not dead. They are unloading upon foreign capitalists, and when we can get these breweries into the hands of people living on the other side of the sea, our political parties will cease to be afraid of the liquor traffic, and at their conventions nominating presidential candidates will put in their platform a plank as big as the biggest plank of the biggest ocean steamer, saying: 'Resolved unanimously, that we always have been, and always will be, opposed to alcoholism.'

But I must spur on our Arab steed, and here we come in sight of Beeroth, said to be the place where Joseph and Mary missed the boy, Jesus on the way from Jerusalem to Nazareth, going home now from a great national festival. "Where is my child, Jesus?" says Joseph. Among the thousands that are returning from Jerusalem they thought that certainly He was walking on in the crowd. They described Him, saying: "He is 12 years old, and of light complexion and blue eyes. A lost child! "Great excitement in all the crowd. Nothing so stirs folks as the news that a child is lost. I shall not forget the scene when in a great outdoor meeting, I was preaching and some one stepped on the platform and said that a child was lost. We went on with the religious service, but all our minds were on the lost child. After a while a man brought on the platform a beautiful little tot that looked like a piece of heaven dropped down, and said: "Here is that child." And I forgot all that I was preaching about, and lifting the child to my shoulder said: "Here is the lost child, the mother will come and get her right away, or I will take her home, and add her to my own brood!" And some cried, and some shouted, and amid all the crowd I instantly detected the mother. Everybody had to get out of her way or be walked over. Hats were nothing, and shoulders were nothing, and heads were nothing in her pathway, and I realized something of what must have been Mary's anxiety when she lost Jesus, and what her gladness was when she found her boy in the temple of Jerusalem talking with those old ministers of religion, Shammu, Hillel and Betirah.

I bear down on you to-day with a mighty comfort. Mary and Joseph said: "Where is our Jesus?" and you say, "Where is John? or where is Henry? or where is George?" Well, I should not wonder if you found him after awhile. Where? In the same place where Joseph and Mary found her boy—in the temple. What do I mean by that? I mean: you do your duty toward God and toward your child and you will find him after a while in the kingdom of Christ. Will you say "I do not have any way of influencing my child." I answer you have the most tremendous line of influence open right before you. As you write a letter, and there are two or three routes by which it may go, but you want it to go the quickest route, and you put on it "via Southampton," or "via San Fransisco," or "via Marseilles," put on your wishes about your child "via the throne of God." How long will such a good wish take to get to its destination? Not quite so long as the millionth part of a second. I will prove it. The promise is "Before they call I will answer." That means at your first motion towards such prayerful exercise the blessing will come, and if the prayer be made at 10 o'clock at night, it will be answered five minutes before 10, "Before they call I will answer."

Well, you say, I am clear discouraged about my son, and I am getting on in years, and I fear I will not live to see him converted. Perhaps not, nevertheless I think you will find him in the temple, the heavenly temple. There has not been an hour in heaven the last 100 years when parents in glory had not had announced to them the salvation of their children whom they left in this world profligate. We often have to say, "I forgot," but God has never yet once said "I forgot." It may be after the grass of 30 summers have greened the top of your grave, that your son may be found in the earthly temple. It may be 50 years from now when, some morning, the towers are chimeing the matins of the glorified in heaven you shall find him in the higher temple which has "no need of candle or of sun, for the Lord God and the Lamb are the light thereof." Cheer up, Christian father and mother! Cheer up! Where Joseph and Mary found their boy you will find yours—in the temple. You see, God could not afford to do otherwise. One of the things He has positively promised in the Bible is that He will answer earnest and believing prayer. Failing to do that, He would wreck His own throne, and the foundations of His palace would give way, and the bank of heaven would suspend payment, and the dark word "repudiation," would be written across the sky, and the Eternal Government would be disbanded, and God Himself would become an exile. Keep on with your prayer, and you will yet find your child in the temple, either the temple here or the temple above.

Out on the western prairies was a happy but isolated home. Father, mother, and child. By the sale of cattle quite a large sum of money was one night in that cabin, and the father was away. A robber who had heard of the money one night looked in at the window, and the wife and mother of that home saw him, and she was helpless. Her child by her side, she knelt down and prayed among other things for all prodigals who were wandering up and down the world. The robber heard her prayer and was overwhelmed, and entered the cabin and knelt beside her and began to pray. He had come to rob that house, but the prayers of that woman for prodigals reminded him of his mother and her prayers before he became a vagabond, and from that hour he began a new life. Years after that woman was in a city in a great audience, and the orator who came on the platform and plead gloriously for righteousness and God was the man who many years before had looked into the cabin on the prairie as a robber. The speaker and the auditor immediately recognized each other. After so long a time, a mother's prayers were answered.

SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT.

A MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE

"Oh, dear! Oh, dear!" exclaimed Qui Fassett, throwing himself at full length on the lawn, "shall I ever be able to sell those lots."

Mr. Fassett was a real estate lawyer, of the firm of Fassett, Peralium & Percy. His office was in the city, his home during the summer was in the country. Mr. Fassett's father had been a lawyer, too, when he lived. While Fassett was a mere child the old gentleman bought a parcel of vacant land in the upper part of the city, which had, until then, been a farm, taking title in the name of his son, saying to himself: "when Qui grows up this may do him some good, and, as it cost me so little, I might as well tie up the title for the boy and let the land lie vacant.

On coming of age Qui Fassett (he always signed himself "Q. Fassett") had an opportunity to sell his land for a great advance on what the elder Fassett paid, but the old gentleman advised against it. "There's nothing like real estate for investment, my son—nothing like real estate!" he used to say to Qui; and so Qui, although he had frequent offers for his land, always wanted a little more than any one would pay, a policy in which he was encouraged by the fact that every subsequent offer was higher than his previous demand.

When Qui Fassett threw himself on the lawn and made the exclamation with which this narrative opens, he had just refused the latest offer. An enterprising builder wanted the land and had offered Mr. Fassett $8,000 a lot. Although this was more than a hundred times what his father paid for the land, and twice what he offered to take five years before, and $1,000 more than he tried to get twelve months ago, Qui Fassett was not satisfied. He now wanted $9,000, "for," said he, "if this property has increased in value $1,000 a lot the past year, why should it not increase $1,000 next year?"

But the builder was stubborn. "I am anxious to put up a row of houses there," he said, "because I know they will sell readily, and as my capital is lying idle and most of the men I usually employ are out of work, I want to get at the job at once. But I can't afford to give more than eight thousand; even at that figure I take a big risk. Better let me have the lots."

"No," replied Mr. Fassett, "nine thousand or no trade."

"All right," said the builder, extending his hand, "then I must say, 'good bye,' and run along for the train. I'll have to hunt up some other lots."

"Don't believe you can do any better," said Mr. Fassett, shaking the builder's hand. "No one wil sell lots in such a locality for any less."

"Perhaps not, perhaps not," rejoined the builder; "and then I'll have to put off the job until things get in better shape. But I am sorry for the men, and that's a fact. Why, if I could get those lots, I'd have 500 at work in a week."

"What a philanthopist you are, to be sure," said Mr. Fassett good naturedly; and the two men parted, the builder to go to his train and Mr. Fassett to stretch himself on his cool lawn, and exclaim, "Oh, dear! oh, dear! shall I ever be able to sell those lots?"

For a while Mr. Fassett mentally speculated in his vacant lots, but before he knew it he was watching the movements of a flock of crows in a neighboring field, thinking of their free and easy life, noting that the scarecrow did not frighten them at all, and wondering if they had any of the carking cares that worry men. In a moment, almost unconsciously, he said aloud:

"I wish I was a crow!"

Well, you are," came in croaking tones from the branches of the tree over his head.

"What in thunder is that?" inquired Mr. Fassett, somewhat startled for a man usually so cool.

"I am a crow, too," the croaking voice replied.

"Oh you are, are you? Well, what do you mean?" asked Mr. Fassett.

"You said you wished you were a crow, and you are," was repeated.

It suddenly dawned upon Mr. Fassett that he had fallen asleep, and the absurdity of his little dream made him laugh outright.

But what a laugh! It frightened him as he heard it. Instead of the round, hearty, whole-souled laugh to which his friends were accustomed, and which was not without music to his own ear, he heard nothing but a croaking—"aw! aw! aw!"

Mr. Fassett raised his hand to his face to assure himself that he was really awake, and from sheer awkwardness tangled his claw in his feathers. In extricating, the claw and smoothing his ruffled coat, he saw himself as he was, and realized that indeed he had become a crow.

The crow in the tree had been watching Fassett's movements with amused interest, and now asked him if he would like to join the flock. Almost before he knew it Qui's wings were outspread, and he was fluttering upward. Alighting on the branch along side of his new friend, he asked what he was doing there.

"Watching this tree," said the crow.

"What for?"

"To keep crows from building nests here."

"Much obliged to you," said Fassett, "for taking so much care of my property."

"Your property!" said the crow, "well I guess not! Aw! aw! aw! that is rich! Your tree! Why this tree belongs to old Jim Crow. He's down South now. Didn't come up with the rest of the crows. Too lazy to fly such a distance. Don't you know that this is the best tree for building crows' nests in all this section?"

"It is, eh? Well, why in thunder do you keep crows from building nests in it, then?"

"You are green. You don't seem to know as much as you did when you were Q. Fassett, Esq. I'm an officer of the law, I am; an officer of crow law, and old Jim Crow owns this tree, and if the law didn't protect him every crow would want to build a nest in its branches and not pay old Jim any thing for it. That's why I'm here. I guess I know my duty. My number is 2001, and if you want to know any thing about me you just go over to the station house. May be you'd like to build a nest here yourself. Well, you just try it on and I'll run you in so quick it'll make you dizzy."

"Well," said Mr. Fassett, meekly, "I thought I owned this tree, but if it belongs to Mr. James Crow I wish you would tell me how he came to own it."

"That's easy enough. He bought it from another crow. Ask me something harder."

"How did the other crow get it?"

"His grandfather gathered twigs and built a nest in it once, and the family has kept a policeman here ever since," replied the crow with an air that said as plain as plain could be, "that settles it," and Mr. Fassett's knowledge of the law assured him that it did settle it.

The two crows were silent for a time. Fassett's thoughts reverted to his interview with the builder, and he had just begun to wonder whether he would ever sell those lots when his companion told him he mustn't be loitering there, but move on. So Fassett moved on. Spreading his wings he was surprised to find how easily he sailed through the air. Passing over the corn field he recognized his hired man and flew toward him, but his hired man let fly a charge of bird shot, which whistled past Mr. Fassett and assured him that his hired man made up in vigilance for what he lacked in marksmanship.

Taking flight again, Fassett went in the direction of a large tree in the forest, where he expected to alight; but just as he reached it a whole flock of crows flew at him from the branches, croaking, "scab! scab! scab!"

Not understanding what this meant, Fassett continued in his course, when the crows rushed upon him, and but for the timely interference of two other crows, policemen as he afterward learned, Mr. Fassett would have been denuded of every feather on his body. As it was, he nearly lost the use of one eye. But he had the satisfaction of seeing the ringleaders of his assailants taken before a magistrate, a half-demented old crow, who administered severe punishment, after lecturing the offenders on the freedom of labor and the criminality, not to say heartlessness, of preventing any crow from working for a living.

All this seemed very strange to Mr. Fassett, who was not yet familiar with crow usages, but he subsequently learned that the tree toward which he was going was a great manufactory of crow nest materials, and the crows that worked there were on strike. They mistook him for a scab, and hence the trouble.

By this time Fassett was quite hungry, and curiously enough his appetite suggested worms as a tempting bill of fare. So he flew down to a corn field, and was scratching away, when a flock of strange crows ordered him off.

"But I am hungry," said Mr. Fassett.

"No doubt of it," said the leader of the crows; "but why don't you work for a living like an honest crow."

"Do crows work for a living?"

"Of course they do. How do you suppose they get a living?"

Mr. Fassett thought a good many of them got a living by stealing his seed corn, but remembering that he was a crow himself he didn't say so. He only asked what they worked at.

"Some of them make up nest materials, some gather the materials, some collect corn, some build nests, some guard the trees that belong to absent crows, and some guard worm preserves," replied the crow boss. "If you are really an honest crow," he continued, "and want to make a living, you can join my flock and I'll give you a job."

"What's the pay?" asked Mr. Fassett, falling in with the humor of this conceit.

"A worm three times a day and a place to roost."

"Mr. Fassett accepted the job, and found that the principal duties of the flock were to guard the worm preserves of his boss from the invasions of other crows. He was required in addition to gather worms for the boss' meals, and whenever he found a grain of corn or other non-perishable food to carry it to the boss' warehouse in the trunk of a large tree in the forest. He came near getting into serious trouble once with the crow authorities by eating a grain of corn that he found; but the boss refrained from making a complaint on account of Mr. Fassett's ignorance of crow law.

At night Mr. Fassett roosted with the rest of the flock on the limb of a tree, in which the boss and his family had a comfortable nest. Fassett found that the crow he worked for was not the worst of birds; but he got tired of three worms a day and nothing but the limb of a tree to roost on, in return for hard work, and one day he told the boss that he was going to leave and look after himself.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

—Tramps in Iowa are taken care of and so well attended that most of them are inclined to shun the State. Those that can work and won't work, and persist in begging, are clapped into jail, and put at hard labor. While there, they are denied tobacco, liquor and sporting or illustrated papers, and are allowed no amusement whatever. Two or three weeks of this treatment generally effects a thorough cure of laziness.

—Lucky People.—Tomdik—The derivation of English words is an interesting subject of investigation. McClammy—So? Tomdik—The origin of the word "luxury," for instance, is clear from the word itself. McClammy—I don't see it. Tomdik—Don't you see that only those can indulge in luxury who are in luck, sure, eh?—Chicago Inter Ocean.

—Committed a Misdemeanor or Matrimony.—"Notice that man over there—how nervous he appears—constantly looking around to see if anybody is watching him. I'll bet he's a burglar." "Yes, or a bridegroom."—Munsey's Weekly.

OUR $1 A WEEK

By a Club System which is as convenient to the buyer as any instalment system, is a wholesale spot cash system to us. The co-operation of the club members sells us 38 watches in each $38 Watch Club, and we get cash from the Club for each watch before it goes out, though each member only pays $1 a week. This is why we give you more for your money than any one else and why we are doing the largest watch business in the world. We sell only first quality goods, but our prices are about what others get for second quality. Our $10 Silver Watch is a substantial Silver (not imitation of any kind) Stem-Wind American Lever Watch—either hunting case or open. Our $25.00 Watch is a Stem-wind, Open Face, first quality, stiffened Gold American Lever Watch guaranteed to wear 20 years. It is fully equal to any watch sold for $38 by others. We find a first-class Stiffened Gold Case much more satisfactory and serviceable than any Solid Gold Case that can be sold at less than double the money, as cheap solid cases are invariably thin, weak, of low quality, and worthless after short use. Our $38 Watch contains numerous important patented improvements, of vital importance to accurate timing—Patent Dustproof, Patent Stem Wind, &c., which we control exclusively. It is fully equal for accuracy, appearance, durability and service, to any $75 Watch, either Open Face or Hunting. Our $38.00 Railroad Watch is especially constructed for the most exacting use, and is the best Railroad Watch made, Open Face or Hunting. All these prices are either all cash or in clubs, $1.00 a week. An Ajax Watch Insulator given free with each Watch.

The Keystone Watch Club Co.
Main Office in Co's Own Building
904 WALNUT ST. PHILADA. PA.
Agents Wanted.

Ajax Watch Insulator, $1.00
A perfect protection against magnetism. Fits any Watch. Sent by mail on receipt of price. ☞ We refer to any Commercial Agency.

WEBSTER

THE BEST INVESTMENT
For the Family, School, or Professional Library.

WEBSTER'S UNABRIDGED DICTIONARY
A LIBRARY IN ITSELF

Has been for years Standard Authority in the Government Printing Office and U. S. Supreme Court.

It is highly recommended by 38 State Sup'ts of Schools and the leading College Presidents.

Nearly all the School Books published in this country are based upon Webster, as attested by the leading School Book Publishers.

3000 more Words and nearly 2000 more Engravings than any other American Dictionary.

SPECIMEN TESTIMONIALS.

The New York World says: Webster is almost universally conceded to be the best.

The Boston Globe says: Webster is the acknowledged standard in lexicography.

The Atlanta Constitution says: Webster has long been the standard authority in our office.

The Chicago Inter Ocean says: Webster's Unabridged has always been the standard.

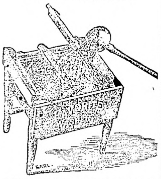
The New Orleans Times Democrat says: Webster is standard authority in our office.

The New York Tribune says: It is recognized as the most useful existing "word-book" of the English language all over the world.

Sold by all Booksellers. Pamphlet free.
G. & C. MERRIAM & CO., Pub'rs, Springfield, Mass.

THE FAVORITE WASHER

LEADS THE WORLD.



It proves a blessing wherever used, and it will sell on its merits. The rub board in the Favorite Washer is constructed differently from any other. There are no pins to tear the clothes.

AGENTS WANTED.
☞ Liberal Discounts Allowed.
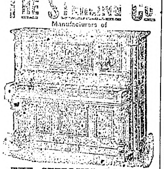
Send for Circulars.

P. A. HOLT,
Manufacturer,
NEW RICHLAND, MINN.

FREE. OUR NEW $85 Solid Gold Watch Worth $100.00. Best $85 watch in the world. Perfect timekeeper. Warranted heavy, SOLID GOLD hunting cases. Both ladies' and gent's sizes, with works and cases of equal value. ONE PERSON in each locality can secure one free, together with our large and valuable line of Household Samples. These samples, as well as the watch, are free. All the work you need do is to show what we send you to those who call—your friends and neighbors and those about you—that always results in valuable trade for us, which holds for years when once started, and thus we are repaid. We pay all express, freight, etc. After you know all, if you would like to go to work for us, you can earn from $20 to $60 per week and upwards. Address, Stinson & Co., Box 812, Portland, Maine.

THE STERLING CO.
Manufacturers of



THE STERLING PIANOS,

WHICH FOR
Quality of Tone, Beauty of Design, FINISH and adaptability for standing in Tune have no equal.
Every Piano Warranted for Five Years
And satisfaction guaranteed to every purchaser.
Also Manufacture the WORLD-RENOWNED
STERLING ORGAN
Factories, Derby, Conn.

ST. PAUL GLOBE.

A Distinctively Northwestern Newspaper.

An Advocate of Northwestern Interests.

Opposed to War Taxation in Time of Peace.

Opposed to the Taxation of the Farmer and Laborer for the Benefit of Monopolies and Trusts.

ALWAYS BRIGHT, CLEAN AND RELIABLE.

The WEEKLY GLOBE is a Favorite with the Farmer and the Family. The price is $1.00 a year. Send 50 cents for a six months' trial, and get, besides all the News and Good Things, the Proceedings of the Legislature of Your State and of Congress.

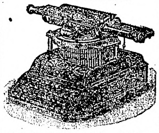
TERMS
Of the Several Editions of the Globe

WEEKLY Eight Pages, One Year,	$1.00
DAILY, " " " "	8.00
SUNDAY, Twenty Pages, " "	2.00
DAILY Only, Per Month	.70
DAILY and SUNDAY, Per Month,	.85

Address
THE GLOBE,
St. Paul, Minn.

THE—

INTERNATIONAL TYPEWRITER!



A strictly first-class machine. Fully warranted. Made from very best material, by skilled workmen, and with the best tools that have ever been devised for the purpose. Warranted to do all that can be reasonably expected of the very best typewriter extant. Capable of writing 150 words per minute—or more—according to the ability of the operator.

Price - $100.00.

If there is no agent in your town, address the manufacturers,

THE PARISH MFG. CO.,
Agents Wanted. PARISH, N. Y.

FREE. STENOGRAPHY and TYPEWRITING FREE. First class facilities and best of teachers. Address, with stamp for return postage, THE PARISH MFG. CO., PARISH, N. Y

WHAT IS GOING ON FOR MANY MILES AROUND UNCOVERED TO THIS EYE.
AYE MORE

One of the BEST Telescopes in the world. FREE Our facilities are unequaled, and to introduce our superior goods we will send FREE to ONE PERSON in each locality, as above. Only those who write to us at once can make sure of the chance. All you have to do in return is to show our goods to those who call—your neighbors and those around you. The beginning of this advertisement shows the small end of the telescope. The following cut gives the appearance of it reduced to about the fiftieth part of its bulk. It is a grand, double size telescope, as large as is easy to carry. We will also show you how you can make from $3 to $10 a day at least, from the start, without experience. Better write at once. We pay all express charges. Address, H. HALLETT & CO., Box 880, PORTLAND, MAINE.

THE LADIES' FAVORITE.
NEVER OUT OF ORDER.

If you desire to purchase a sewing machine, ask our agent at your place for terms and prices. If you cannot find our agent, write direct to nearest address to you below named.

NEW HOME SEWING MACHINE Co. ORANGE, MASS.
CHICAGO, ILL. — 28 UNION SQUARE, N.Y. — DALLAS, TEX.
ST. LOUIS, MO. ATLANTA, GA. SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Oct 17, 1890.
Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the clerk of district court at Detroit, Minn., on Dec. 3rd, 1890, viz: Charles Durand, pre-emption D. S. No. 5991 for the sw¼ sec 34 tp 150 rg 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz:

James C. O'Brien, John Moylan, Hugh Dean, Felix O'Claire, all of Red Lake, Minn.
oc23nov27 A. Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Oct. 17, 1890.
Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the clerk of the district court at Detroit, Minn., on Dec. 3rd, 1890, viz: Felix O'Claire, pre-emption D. S. No. 5987 for the e½ nw¼ nw¼ ne¼ sec 33 and lot 4 sec 28 tp 150 rg 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz:

Charles Durand, James C. O'Brien, John Moylan and Hugh Dean, all of Red Lake Minn.
A. Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Oct. 17, 1890.
Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the clerk of Dist Court at Detroit, Minn., on Dec. 3d, 1890, viz:
James C. O'Brien, pre-emption D S No. 5984 for the se¼ sec 23 tp 150 rg 32.

He names the following witness to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz:

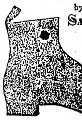
Felix O'Claire, Charles Durand, John Moylan, Hugh Dean, all of Red Lake, Minn.
A. Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Oct. 17, 1890.
Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the clerk of District Court at Detrit, Minn., on Dec. 3d, 1890, viz: Hugh Dean, Pre-emption D. S. No. 5983 for the nw¼ nw¼ sec 23 e½ nw¼ & lot 1 sec 22 twp tp 150 rg 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence oupon and cultivation of, said land, viz:

James C. O'Brien, John Moylan, Charles Du- Felix O'Claire, all of Red Lake Minn.
A. Barto, Register.

$2.00 SAVED



by buying your Shoes of the Manufacturer.
SATISFACTION GUARANTEED!
ONLY $2.50
for Shoes that usually retail at $4.00 and $5.00.

BUTTON. LACE. CONGRESS.

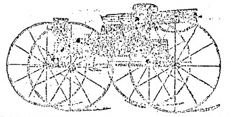
On receipt of $2.50 and twenty-five cents to pay expressage we will send one pair of our Fine Calf Shoes, Seamless Vamps, either Button, Lace or Congress. We Use only selected stock and the best workmanship. Every pair Warranted. Try our Shoes once and you will buy no others.

☞ Mention Size and Width wanted. Send postal note or N. Y. draft. Write your address plainly,—Town, County and State.

CUSTOM BOOT & SHOE CO.,
EAST WEYMOUTH, MASS.

McFARLAN CARRIAGE CO.

CONNERSVILLE, IND.



LARGE VARIETY. BEST STYLES.
LOW PRICES.
WRITE FOR CATALOGUE AND PRICE LIST.
McFARLAN CARRIAGE CO.,
Connersville, Ind.

Red Lake Falls Iron Works.

P. & J MEEHAN, Proprietors.
J. Z PERRON, Manager.

SAW AND GRIST MILL
MACHINERY MADE AND REPAIRED.

Repairing Thresher Engines
AND BOILERS AND
AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS.

Circular Saws Hammered. Satfaction Guaranteed, Correspondence Solicited.

BRING IN YOUR WORK
Scrap Brass and Copper Bought.

Hunt & McClatchie

—DEALERS IN—

Heavy and Shelf Hardware.

DEERING FARM MACHINERY.

Land Office at St, Cloud, Minn, Nov. 4, 1890.
Notice is hereby given, that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the clerk of the Dist. court at Detroit Minn., on Dec. 29, 1890, viz James Dean, pre-emption d s 5982, for the se¼ sec 1 tp 150 rg 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz

Peter Lonson, James McMahon, James Wiley, James C O'Brien, all of Red Lake, Minn.
A. Barto, Register.

Land Office at Crookston. Minn., Oct. 27th, 1890. Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim. and that said proof will be made before the register or receiver U. S. Land Office at Crookston, Minn., on Dec. 13th, 1890, viz:

Joseph Patnode, Hd No 10934, for the w½ ne¼ sec 27, tp 151, r 43.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuos residence upon and cultivation of, said and, viz:

Exeric Chatel, Sam Miller, John Deforge, A. Lafontaine. all of Red Lake Falls, Minn.
nov7d13 H. H Dickmann, Register.

Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the clerk of District Court at Detroit, Minn., on December 29, 1890, viz Peter Lonson, pre-emption d s No 5986, for the s½ ne¼, and n½ se¼ sec 26, tp 150, r 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz

James Wiley, James McMahon, James C. O'rien, James Dean, all of Red Lake, Minn.
A Barto, Register.

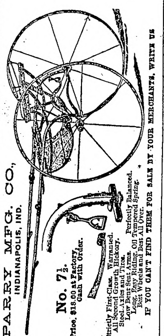
Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Nov. 4. 1890.
Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the clerk of District Court at Detroit, Minn., on Dec. 29, 1890, vis James McMahon, pre-emption D S No 5988, for the se¼ sec 33, tp 150, rg 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz

James Wiley, Peter Lonson, James C O'Brien, James Dean, all of Red Lake, Minn.
A Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Oct. 3, 1890.
Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the clerk of the district court at Detroit, Minn., on November 20, 1890. viz: Edward J. Garceau, preemption D. S. No. 5990 for the n½ sw¼, sw¼ nw¼, sec 33 and lot 2, section 32 tp 150 r 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz: Michael Burns, John F. Crawford and Felix O'Claire, all of Red Lake, Minn.
A. Barto, Register.



PARRY MFG. CO.,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.
No. 7½.
Price, $18.00 at Factory. Cash with Order.
Strictly First-Class. Warranted.
All Second Growth Hickory.
Steel Axles and Tires.
Low Bent Seat Arms. Perfectly Balanced.
Long, Easy Riding, Oil Tempered Spring.
Best Wheels and Best All Over.
IF YOU CAN'T FIND THEM FOR SALE BY YOUR MERCHANTS, WRITE US

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Nov. 4, 1890.
Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the clerk of district court at Detroit, Minn., on Dec. 29, 1890, vis: James Wiley, pre-emption d s No. 5,992 for the s½ se¼, nw¼ se¼, and se¼ sw¼ sec 35 tp 150 rg 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, vis;

Peter Lonson, James McMahon, James Dean, James O'Brien, all of Red Lake, Minn.
nov6dc11 A. Barto, Register.

P. & J MEEHAN,

(SUCCESSORS TO J. J. HOWE & CO)

Manufacturers and Dealers in

LUMBER,

LATH,

SHINGLES

Sash, Doors, Moldings, Building Paper,

Yards and Office on Main St.

We Would Like to Call the Attention of

Capitalists

Manufacturers and Others Desiring a Place for

INVESTMENT

—To the—

Superior Advantages of

RED LAKE FALLS,

Is Many Water Powers and other natural advantages. It is only a question of a few years until this will be one of the leading cities of Minnesota. Investment in real estate or water privileges are sure to secure to the investors handsome returns.

—WE RE—

In the Center of Vast

Farming District.

Yearly consuming large amounts of imported products of manufactures. This vast tract of land is watered by the Red Lake and Clearwater rivers. Within the limits of the city are

12 DISTINCT WATER POWERS.

The only natural water powers on these streams. There are fine openings for paper and pulp mills, woolen and other factories. Parties outside desiring any information concerning property, address

BOYLE & MEEHAN.

RED LAKE FALLS NEWS.

JAMES MEEHAN JR., EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR

OFFICIAL PAPER OF CITY AND COUNTY.

Vol. VII. No. 51. RED LAKE FALLS, POLK COUNTY, MINNESOTA, NOVEMBER 27, 1890. TERMS, $1.50 PER YEAR

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

>SPECIAL<

CLOAK-SALE

>THIS WEEK<

JOSEPH SMITH & CO.

CHARLES LANGEVIN

—DEALER IN—

GENERAL MERCHANDISE,

RED LAKE FALLS, MINNESOTA

Red Lake Falls

Iron Works.

P. & J MEEHAN, Proprietors.

J. Z PERRON, Manager.

SAW AND GRIST MILL

MACHINERY MADE AND REPAIRED.

Repairing Thresher Engines

AND BOILERS AND

AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS,

Circular Saws Hammered. Satfaction Guaranteed, Correspondence Solicited.

BRING IN YOUR WORK

Scrap Brass and Copper Bought

Hunt & McClatchie

—DEALERS IN—

Heavy and Shelf Hardware.

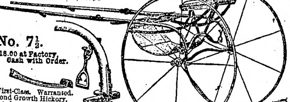
DEERING FARM MACHINERY.

Look at Our

≥Premium Offer≤

At Head of Local Page.

PARRY MFG. CO.,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.



No. 7½.
Price, $18.00 at Factory,
Cash with Order.

Strictly First-Class. Warranted.
All Second Growth Hickory.
Steel Axles and Tires.
Low Bent Seat Arms. Perfectly Balanced.
Long, Easy Riding, Oil Tempered Spring.
Best Wheels and Best All Over.

IF YOU CAN'T FIND THEM FOR SALE BY YOUR MERCHANTS, WRITE US

A Queer Fad for a Man.

It is strange and indeed inexplicable how some very stern, plain and unpretentious men "cotton" to silk underwear. It is generally supposed that women only love pretty things simply because they are pretty, but now and then one comes across a man who seems to have an innate love for all that is dainty and beautiful. I know a man of 40 who belongs to no clubs, who is quite indifferent to society, for whom neither wine, women nor song have any attractions who has neither sister nor cousin nor even a sweetheart, who yet spends more than $2,000 a year on his underwear. He has nightgowns of silk embroidered all over the chest with dainty little flowers. He has others of finest cambric, on which the lace ruffles at the wrists and neck alone cost a small fortune, and he has others still fastened all the way down the front with studs of great value.

One, for instance, is a white China silk with coral colored dots all over it. It draws up around the neck with a coral colored silken cord, which can be adjusted loosely or tightly at will, and is fastened all the way down the front with twenty-four little studs of real coral. An unfeeling brute of a man who once beheld this "confection" advised the wearer to draw the cord tightly enough to choke himself to death, and thus rid the world of a ninny who could wear such a garment. And yet the wearer is a grave, studious, reserved man, fond of books, and not a bit of a dude or a dandy. —New York Press.

How It Was Founded.

Mme. Carnot, the wife of the president of the French republic, frequently visits a day nursery for poor children in the Rue Bacon loaded with toys and fresh fruits. The story of the establishment of this charitable institution is full of interest and pathos.

Many years ago an only child, a daughter, was born to a noble but poor couple, the count and countess of Laurenceau. The girl was beautiful and attractive and became the pet of a large circle of uncles, aunts and cousins, who all fell into the habit of giving her birthday gifts of money, which was laid away to bear interest until she should be grown and require a dot.

The young girl died while still a child, and her mother took this money, and with it founded this asylum for the homeless babies of Paris in memory of her lost darling. Other mothers, left childless, have given aid to this charity with the money which they had intended to give to memorial windows and costly gravestones.

The Little Bethlehem, as it is called, thus is dedicated not only to the help of the innocent little living children who find a refuge in it, but to the memory of others whose fate in life was happier, but who were perhaps not more dearly loved.—Youth's Companion.

Origin of the Artesian Well.

The sedimentary rocks in their great thickness inclose a succession of water sheets or water levels occupying distinct stages, and extending with uniform character under whole countries, like the strata to which they are subordinated. It is proper to remark here that by the term water sheet is not meant a real bed of water lodged in a cavity between solid masses that serve as walls to it, but water filling the minute interstices or the cracks of a rock. Continuous and regular in sand these sheets are usually discontinuous and irregular in limestones and sandstones, in which the water only occupies more or less spacious fissures.

When natural issues are wanting human industry is able, by boring, to make openings down to the subterranean waters, which it causes to jet up to the surface, and sometimes to a considerable height above. The thought of undertaking such works is a very ancient one. The Egyptians had recourse to them forty centuries ago, and they were executed in France in 1126 at Artois, whence the name of artesian wells has been given to them.—Philadelphia Record.

Golden Rod and Influenza.

A Maine man says the golden rod is responsible for many cases of influenza. He speaks from experience. His little daughter gathered a large bunch and put it in a vase in the parlor. Two sleeping apartments are on the same floor, and the doors are frequently left open at night. Two days after the flowers had been carried into the home several members of the family began to sneeze, complain of sore throat and feel greatly depressed, but not for several days did they find out the cause of their illness. It is said that the flowers give off an imperceptible powder like substance, which is taken into the lungs by the sleeper, causing an irritation. It also irritates the throat, produces violent sneezing, makes the limbs feel as though burdened by some heavy weight, and depresses a person to such an extent that he is inclined to suicide.—Lewiston Journal.

Regimental Field Telegraph.

An ingenious field telegraph has been invented by an English judge. The coils of double insulated wire, giving a complete metallic circuit, wound on bobbins, are supported on the backbones of two bicycles. Six poles, to enable the troops to carry the wires over roads, are supported over the handles of the bicycles, which are trundled one in front of the other. When the wire is to be laid the bobbins are taken off and carried on the back and wound off, a special rapid coupling being provided in case of necessity. When on the road the poles can be thrown off and the bicycles mounted, so that the instruments and the conducting wires can be carried off and saved from capture.—New York Telegram.

Antiquity of the Needle.

Mention of the needle is made in The Sanhita of the Rig Veda (Wilson's translation), and the Vedic word "S'uchi" is identical with that now used to indicate a needle. This notice of needles dates back as far as six centuries before Christ. The Rig Veda says: "Clothes and the like wrought with the needle last a long time." In ancient times needles were made of wood, bone, ivory, bronze and iron, and were very coarse in quality and dimensions.—Dry Goods Chronicle.

CLOAKS

BANGS & CO.

HAVE THEM.

ALL SIZES, FOR

Ladies,

MISSES AND CHILDREN.

Extra Large Sizes

CARRIED IN STOCK.

A Few Seal-plush

SACQUES

Left. Call before the assortment of sizes is broken.

Bangs & Co.

One Door North of Bank.

RED LAKE FALLS.

Signs of Preparation.

Along the New England seaboard the fisher folk are apt to be negligent in the care of their teeth, and the natural result is that they lose them while still young. It is said to be one of the recognized preparations for marriage in some of the fishing villages for the bride elect to be provided with a set of artificial teeth.

Not only in New England, but in other places as well, young people who are contemplating matrimony do not always hasten to inform their parents of their plans. But the old folks everywhere learn to "put this and that together."

Not long ago a lady who has a cottage on the Maine coast said to a "native" to whom she had given more or less employment:

"When is your son Charles to be married? He has been engaged to Jessie for two or three years, hasn't he?"

"Yes," the mother replied, "they've been engaged now for goin' on four year; an' I kind o' suspect that there's somethin' goin' on. I don't know as they 's goin' to be married, but Jess 's had all her teeth out, so I shouldn't wonder a bit if they was."—Youth's Companion.

Costly Silk Underwear.

Mr. Herman Oelrichs has long borne a reputation of being a faultlessly dressed man. He is addicted to the wearing of silk underwear, as, indeed, is every man who can afford to buy it, and for the matter of that a good many who can't. It is actually surprising to see how beautifully some young fellows manage to dress on salaries ranging from $1,500 to $3,000 a year. Not only is the outer man beautifully attired, but in seven out of ten the finest of silk and the sheerest of linen will be beneath.

When one remembers that the cheapest of men's silk underwear costs $10 a suit, and that only an ordinarily fine one can be bought for $35 a set, and that any fellow with pretensions to dress, let alone cleanliness, must have at least six, one wonders what system of mathematics the fifteen hundred dollar a year young man pursues to make ends meet. The statisticians who figure that a young man can live comfortably and even elegantly on $5 a week do not include silk underwear in their calculations.—New York Press.

In a Japanese Mint.

There are about 300 hands employed at the mint of Yeddo, Japan. When the men enter in the morning they are made to divest themselves of their own clothes and put on others belonging to the mint. At the end of a day's work a gong sounds, when the somewhat curious spectacle is presented of 300 men springing from the ground on which they have been seated, throwing off their clothes and rushing, a naked throng, to one end of the yard.

Here they pass through the following ordeal in order to prove that they have no silver on them: Their back hair is pulled down and examined, they wash their hands and hold them up to view, they drink water and then hallo, and lastly they run to the other end of the yard, clearing two or three hurdles on their way, after which performance they are allowed to go to their lodgings.—Chicago Tribune.

Firmness.

During the revolutionary war in America two soldiers of the army of Lord Cornwallis went into a house and acted in a most shameful manner. A third soldier met them coming out and recognized them. He was in no way to blame, but since he declined to give up the names of his comrade he was sentenced to the punishment they had incurred. Lord Cornwallis rode up to him when on the gallows. "Campbell," he said, "what a fool you are to die thus! Give up their names!" "You are in an enemy's country, my lord," was the firm reply, "and you can better spare one man than two." And he was hanged.—San Francisco Argonaut.

This Is the Way to Brace Up a Bust.

An excellent and quick way to mend broken plaster casts and impressions is to paint the broken surfaces over two or three times with very thick shellac varnish, and at each application to burn out the alcohol over a flame. When the shellac is sufficiently soft, press the parts together and hold in position till cool. It will be as strong as it was before broken.—New York Journal.

He Got It Cheap.

Two traveling hypnotizers agreed to hypnotize a Michigan man for fifty cents, and after he had got it good and strong they wanted $5 to "unhip" him. He refused to pay it and they made a skip, and he is still seeing the red eyes of black cats perched on the footboard of the bedstead.—Detroit Free Press.

An Incident at the Play.

One evening while the audience at the Baldwin were listening spellbound to the scene where Barrymore is discussing the foibles of women a couple of San Mateo rustics in the front row of the dress circle began an earnest discussion as to the merits of a certain prize sow one of them had for sale.

Despite the angry look and s-s-s-h's of those near by the controversy waxed louder, until at last a gentleman sitting behind the talkers touched one of them on the shoulder and quietly said:

"Excuse me, my friend, but what will you take for that sow of yours?"

The granger stared for a moment and then said:

"About $6, I s'pose."

"Exactly," said the gentleman, taking out his pocketbook and handing over a greenback.

"Here is a twenty. Now that sow's mine; just let her alone, if you please."

The audience snickered, and though the countryman made a woful attempt to turn the joke by gravely pocketing the note and handing over the $14 change the snub was crushing in its effect, and in the dead silence that followed the philanthropic millionaire leaned back and modestly enjoyed his popularity.

But what the delegation from up the bay said when, after the performance, they tried to buy a drink with the twenty and found it a bad counterfeit is unfit for publication.—San Francisco News Letter.

How Severe Colds are Broken up in Montana.

When we find a medicine we know to possess genuine merit, we consider it a duty, and take pleasure in telling the public what it is. Such a medicine we found Chamberlain's Cough remedy, last winter, when la grippe was prevailing We are satisfied that we warded off several attacks that were threatening by the use of this syrup and we have since relieved in a few hours, severe colds, and in the course of two or three days, entirely broken them up by its use, as have several of our friends to whom we haye recommended it. It is all that it is represented to be by the manufacturers. If you have cough and want to stop it Chamberlain Cough remedy will do the work, for sale by W. A Schreiter.

A Preventive For Croup.

The discovery of preventive for croup, is one of the most important made in recent years. Since first discovered it has been used in many cases and with unvarying success. Its being within the reach of all makes it the more valuable. It is only necessary to give Chamberlain's cough remedy freely as soon as the first indications of croup appear, and it will dispel all symptoms of the disease. Full directions are given with each bottle. For 50 cents at Schreieters.

There may be persons in this community who are at times troubled with colic, or subject to attacks of bowel complaint If so, they should try Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It will afford almost immediate relief, and when reduced with water is pleasant to take. If taken as soon as the first indication of the disease is felt it will ward off the attack. Many people use it in this way, and find that it never fails them. A 25 or 50 cent bottle may be obtained a W. A. Schreiter's.

THE

WISCONSIN CENTRAL LINES

NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD CO. LESSEE

RUNS

Fast trains with Pullman Vestibuled Drawing Room Sleepers, Dining Cars and Coaches of latest design, between Chicago and Milwaukee and St. Paul and Minneapol.

Fast train with Pullmant Vestibuled Drawing Room Sleeping Dining Cars and Coaches of latest design between Chiacgo and Milwaukee and Ashland and Duluth.

Through Pullman Vestibuled Drawing Room and Colonist Sleepers via the Northern Pacific Railroad between Chicogo and portland, Ore.

Conveniete Trains to and from Eastern, Western, Northern and Contril Wisconsin points, affording unequalled service to and from Waukesha, Fond du Lac, Oshkosk, Neenah, Menasha, Chippewa Fall, Eau Claire, Hurley, Wis., and Ironwood and Bessemer, Mich.

For tickets, sleeping car reservations, time tables and other information, apply to Agents of the line, or to ticket Agents anywhere in the Unitsd States or Canada.

S. L. Ainslie, Gen. Man., Milwaukea.
J. M. Hanaford, Gen. Traf. Man. St.Paul.
H. C. Barlow, Traffic Man. Chicago.
Louis Eckstein, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, Chicago.

In conjunction with the Erie System operates Fast Vestibuled Trains between Chicago and the Atlantic Seaboard. you may travel in the most Elegant and complete Pullman Vestibuled Trains ever constructed and save $1.50 to Buffalo and Niagara Falls, $2.00 to New York $2.35 to Albany and Troy, and $3.00 to Boston and New England Cities.

No rival line offers the advantages of a system of throuh first and second-class day coaches and Pullman Dining cars chicago to New York.

It is the only line operating pullman cars to Boston and New England via Albany.

Entire trains are lighted by gas, heated by steam. Pullman dining cars run through in either direction.

Pullman chair and sleeping cars to Columbus, O., and Ashland, Ky., Daily.

No extra charge for fast time and unsurpassed accommodations afforded by these luxurious trains.

THANKSGIVING DAY.

The fields that lately bloomed are sere,
  And all the woodland choirs are dumb;
Yet, missing none of nature's cheer,
  Around the hearth our dear ones come.
Not visible to human eye
  Are all the guests who gather there,
For some we greet with just a sigh,
  And some a breath of voiceless prayer.

But bright and clear the home-fires burn,
  And we will mourn no summer skies,
When we have only need to turn
  And see them in each other's eyes.
We know no autumn of the heart
  Can blight the flowers of love that spring
Within its bower of dreams apart,
  Where songs of hope forever ring.

O sweet assembling, precious day,
  When truth and mercy keep their tryst,
And reverent hands are raised to pray
  Where righteousness and truth have kissed,
Be thou a type most pure and fair
  Of Heaven's reunion, long and blest,
And oh, may every one be there
  Whom Christ shall call to be his guest!
—Julia H. Thayer.

◆

"THANKFUL ELLIS."

SLOWLY the sun crept over the wheat-field, tracking a broad, black shadow-veil across the billows of green falling before the wild's swift passage, and rising again as the sun sent long, quivering gleams through the bright, restless blades.

Beyond the wheatfield, just across the creek, Deacon Ellis was ploughing his corn. His hearty "chirrup," whenever old Moll turned into a new furrow, could be heard away down to the big road. And between furrows the good deacon whiled away the time by singing the old, familiar meeting-house hymn:

"Come thou fount of every blessing."

He had sung it so constantly that the neighbors called it "Deacon Ellis' hymn." And indeed the song had become his own much more entirely than had the cornfield, with its heavy mortgage, which the deacon was working day and night to pay off.

He had one striking characteristic—Deacon Ellis had; "a peculiarity," the neighbors called it, but it was more properly a characteristic; he never found matters so bad but that they might be worse. This characteristic naturally showed him the brighter side of life's pictures. Though the gossipy neighbors said these same pictures were dark, only the deacon viewed them through peculiar spectacles.

His was no Sunday religion; his voice rang out as cheery and trustful in the cornfield as when, in the village church, he led the praises of Jehovah. He carried it with him at all times and under all circumstances. Sometimes the neighbors laughed at him and called him "Thankful Ellis."

It happened that while the deacon was singing in the cornfield, Farmer Foster and his wife were driving to town in their new Jersey. They were crossing the creek at the turn of the big road, and stopped a moment to give the mare a drink just as the deacon's song rose to the highest pitch:

"Here I'll raise mine Ebenezer,
  Hither by Thy help I'm come,
And I hope by Thy good pleasure,
  Safely to arrive at home."

The farmer's wife laughed as she pushed back her sunbonnet to listen.

"The deacon's singing, 'Zekiel," she said, "same's if his only cow didn't fall in the ditch yistiddy, an' break her leg, an' have to be knocked in the head."

The farmer tapped his whip at a fly on the back of his mare.

"An' the same," he said, "as if his biggest heifer wasn't down with the pink eye. Nothin' can't stop him a-thankin' of the Lord, Nancy. Rain or shine, summer'n winter, hit's all the same to Deacon Ellis. There's allus somethin' not quite as bad as it might 'a been. I've a good min' to drive by an' ax after the heifer, Nancy."

"Do, 'Zekiel. Hit'll look kinder neighberly," said the farmer's wife, and the Jersey wagon turned out of the big road into the red lane running past the deacon's cornfield. The deacon saw them coming, and called old Moll to a halt, while he went over to the worm fence, and exchanged "how-d'ye-do's" with his neighbors. Greetings being over, Farmer Foster inquired after the deacon's wife.

"Well, she's ailin' some, to be sure," was the answer. "She's ailin' some, but the Lord be praised for it, she's up and about again!"

"An' how's the heifer, deacon?"

"Poo'ly, mighty poo'ly; but 'taint the only one we've got, an' I'm a-thankin' of the Lord for that."

He was always thanking Him for something good, old Deacon Ellis was; though some who were evil-minded hinted that there was hypocrisy in the old man's gratitude, and that "should real trouble come upon him, they would see that Deacon Ellis could grumble as loud as the balance of them." But so far their predictions were without foundation. Out of the misfortunes that had come upon him he always found something, either in the evil or by comparison with it to be grateful for.

The year before the corn crop had been a failure, and while his neighbors were bewailing their loss, Deacon Ellis was congratulating himself that the "turnips were good anyhow, an' the carrot patch fitten for a king."

Farmer Foster took up his lines; it was no easy matter to condole with his neighbor Ellis.

"Well, deacon," he said, "we druv by to tell you as we felt pow'ful cut up 'bout that fine cow o' yours as broke her leg yistidday, but seems you don't need no help to bear your bad luck."

Deacon Ellis pulled a cedar splinter from the fence rail before he answered.

"Well," he said, slowly, "my 'ole 'oman set a sight o' store by that cow, an' my little gal cried for milk last night, to be sure. We'll miss old Spot, dar ain't no denyin' o' that. But we've got a sight o' nice beef off'n her, and that's something to be thankful for."

"An' the heifer's down, sure enough."

Clearly, Mrs. Foster didn't find much cause for thanksgiving.

"One's down," said the deacon, "but t'other one's lively as a cricket. We'll have another cow in no time, and that's worth thanking the Lord for."

"See here, deacon;" Mrs. Foster would hear of no further thanksgiving in the midst of such dire misfortune. She understood exactly what the loss of the cow meant to the invalid wife and sickly daughter of the man who was straining every point in order to pay off the mortgage upon the few acres he called his farm. "See here, deacon," she said, "you send David over to my house every evenin' an' get a quart o' milk for that little sick gal o' yours. 'Tain't no manner o' 'count to us, an' David can cut across lots an' come for it in no time."

The deacon thanked her and said he would, and in his heart he thanked the Lord for the unexpected good, and that night he thanked Him aloud, upon his knees, for the gift of the neighbors and friends. And the next morning at breakfast, when a blessing had been asked upon the humble meal and Mrs. Ellis set a mug of Farmer Foster,s nice, new milk before the sick child, who clapped her little hands joyfully at sight of it, the deacon bowed his gray head head again, and thanked the Master of Mercies a second time "For all His many blessings."

The next Sunday he was in his accustomed place at the village church, and when he knelt to pray few would have suspected, as he poured forth his prayer of praise and thanksgiving, that his only cow had broken her legs in the ditch and his best heifer had died with the pink-eye only the week before, and that his last and only hope of a cow had been stricken down with the same cause.

"Streams of mercy never ceasing
Call for songs of loudest praise."

Higher and fuller the sweet song rose, as if the singer's life had been one continual round of peace and his pathway one of roses and perpetual summer. The good man shut his eyes to visible things and closed his heart to wordly cares; and neither the dead heifer nor the unfortunate cow could shake the foundation of thankfulness in his heart.

Spring ripened into summer, the deacon's field looked healthy. But the wheat,—alas! the sun creaping across the waving billows found rest among the ripening heads. And when it was cut and waiting the deacon's turn for the thresher the rain set in and the grain sprouted.

The loss of his wheat was a blow to the embarrassed farmer, and he received but little sympathy from his neighbors, who had urged him to follow their example and shock and cap his wheat on the Sabbath as the only possible means of saving it. But with the consistency for which he was noted, he refused to desecrate the Lord's day, but chose rather to keep that holy end trust the result to Him who controls the weather.

"Here I'll raise mine Ebenezer."

Farmer Foster, riding down the road, heard the deacon's voice, and following the sound found the old man in the ruined field singing among the stubble. Not a break in the grand old hymn to tell of doubt or discouragement or distrust. In the midst of wreck and ruin the altar had been erected and reconsecrated to Him who sends both sun to soften and rain to destroy.

"Well, when the corn's gone he'll mirate over the ground being left. An' when that's tuk there'll sholy be nothin' left for Deacon Ellis to be gloryfyin' over. An' it'll be tuk, mark what I tell you. 'Zekiel."

It was long after this that the deacon's little girl died. This was the heaviest blow that had fallen upon him, but so deeply engrossed was he in the effort to comfort his stricken wife that he forgot his own sorrow, and failed also to notice that the drouth had ripened the corn before its time; so that where he had hoped to find the full ripe ear, only premature nubbins were hidden away under the crisp, yellow shucks.

"Well," the deacon drew his wife's head to his bosom, "we have got each other, Mary, an' that's a heap to thank the Lord for."

But even that solace was denied him very long. Always, as the deacon said, "one of the ailin' ones," the strain upon mind and heart was too great for the frail body, and Mrs. Ellis was laid to rest by the side of her little girl under the cedars beyond the wheat fields.

The deacon's cross was growing heavy indeed. The neighbors began to call him Job, and, although his voice still led the old hymn on Sabbath mornings in the village church, there was a quiver in it that told how heavily the tired heart was leaning upon the "goodliness and mercy" which he declared had followed him "all the days of his life."

Yet he still sang in the cornfield when the skimpy nubbins had been stored, and there was nothing to do but to gather the fodder:

"Oh, to grace how great a debtor
Daily I'm constrained to be."

The poor heart felt a revival of the long-tried trust as the crisp, golden blades rustled to his touch. It's something to be thankful for," he said to his hired boy, David, pulling the last armful from the stunted stalks.

Then the harvesting was finished; except the gathering of the pippins and the winesaps, and, as the crop had been a short one, the gathering of it in was a small matter.

"We've got enough to eat anyhow," he told the neighbors, "an' that's something to be thankful for."

"Finally the fruit was stored and Deacon Ellis entered into his well-earned winter rest.

"The Lord will let Job alone now," Farmer Foster's wife now said, "an' sholy it is time."

But the deacon's troubles were not yet ended; there was still one more calamity in store for him,—the fire that burned his barns and destroyed his last faint hope of paying off the mortgage upon his land. It was nearly the final stroke. The old man had buried his wife and child, for whom he worked and saved,—now the means of his own livlihood were vanishing.

His neighbors were appalled. The good old deacon had no enemies; and now even those who had found something to laugh at in the face of calamity were shocked.

The Sunday following the burning of the barns the neighbors met early at church and discussed the matter among themselves. It was finally decided that among themselves they would raise enough money to pay off the mortgage on the farm, and from their own full granaries furnish seed for the next year's crop.

"I want to hear him bless the Lord once more," said Farmer Foster, with a big tear in either eye.

"And have somethin' to bless him for," added his wife, as she brushed a crystal drop that had tricked to the tip of her nose.

Then some one whispered that the deacon was at the door and the congregation settled down to its accustomed quiet and decorum as the old man entered. He was aging, Deacon Ellis was; he leaned heavily upon his staff and the neighbors noticed, for the first time, how the silver in his hair had given place to snow.

Farmer Foster's tears no longer stood in his eye, but followed each other in quick succession down his sun-browned cheeks. He felt, as did many others of the congregation, that at last Deacon Ellis stood face to face with that moment in his life when there was nothing left for gratitude.

"It's bad, mighty bad, a-comin' on me just now; there ain't no denyin' o' that," he told neighbor Foster. "But the cornfield's left, an' that's a good deal to be thankful for."

"So 'tis," replied the farmer, and he went home feeling that somehow Deacon Ellis' affairs were as bad as they could be, but might be worse if the deacon had a mind to look on the dark side.

"Well," said Mrs. Foster, when her good man rode into the back yard, "is Deacon Ellis a-thankin of the Lord because the wheat's all sp'iled, 'Zekiel?"

"No, Nancy," replied Farmer Foster, "the deacon ain't such a fool as to do that. He's some cut up about the wheat, but he's jubileein' pow'ful over the corn."

For the first Sunday since the little church had heard his prayers there would be no thanksgiving. Then the sympathetic farmer thought of the mortgage, already as good as lifted, and he felt a strong impulse to rise up in his place and tell him to cry out: "Thank the Lord if you wish; go on thanking Him."

So excited did he become that Mrs. Foster touched him on the arm, and said, in a whisper: "Zekiel, kneel down."

The deacon had begun his prayer; broken and quivering the accents, soft and slow the petition. The rod had fallen so heavily! There was a pleading cry for strength, a grasp at faith, a full surrender to the will of Him who doeth all things well; and then, as the voice gathered strength, and the heart returned to its old-time trust, the chief characteristic of his religion exerted itself and Deacon Ellis thanked the Lord that she whom He had given to be to him a helpmate and a solace had been gathered into rest before his calamities had overtaken him.

Then, as the grand old voice rose again in the sweet, familiar hymn:

"Here I'll raise my Ebenezer,"

the people listening felt indeed the sublimity of faith erecting its altar upon the ashes of despair.—By Will Allen Bromgoole, in Youth's Companion.

◆

Paid In Her Own Coin.

"By what means do you propose to cure my headache?"

"In the simplest way imaginable, sir—by means of simpathy. Let me have one of your hairs."

"Here is one."

"Now, please attend. I am going to bury this hair in consecrated earth when the moon is in its first quarter, and precisely at the same time you will be relieved of the pains in your head."

"Thanks; good morning."

"Stay, sir; this consultation costs three marks."

"Three marks? Very good. Here is the money in my hand. I will go and bury it likewise in consecrated earth when the moon is in its first quarter, and as soon as my headache has left me these coins will find their way to your pocket in a sympathetic fashion."—Blatter and Bluthen.

If All the Eggs Matured.

Fish that take much care of their offspring naturally don't need to produce eggs in the same reckless abundance as those dissipated kinds that leave their spawn exposed on the bare, sandy bottom, at the mercy of every comer who chooses to take a bite at it. They can afford to lay a smaller number, and to make each individual egg much larger and richer in proportion than their rivals. This plan, of course, enables the young to begin life far better provided with muscles and fins than the tiny little fry which come out of the eggs of the improvident species.

For example, the codfish lays 9,000,000, odd egg; but anybody who has ever eaten fried cod's roe must needs have noticed that each individual ovum was so very small as to be almost indistinguishable to the naked eye. Thousands of these infinitesimal are devoured before they hatch out by predaceous fish; thousands more of the young fry are swallowed alive during their helpless infancy by the enemies of their species. Imagine the very fractional amount of parental effection which each of the 9,000,000 must needs put up with.

On the other hand, there is a paternally-minded group of catfish known as the genus Arius, of Ceylon, Australia, and other tropical parts, the males of which carry about the ova loose in their mouths, or rather in an enlargement of the pharynx, somewhat resembling the pelican's pouch; and the spouses of these very devoted sires lay accordingly only very few ova, all told, but each as big as a hedge sparrow's egg, a wonderful contrast to the tiny mites of the codfish. To put it briefly, the greater the amount of protection afforded the eggs, the smaller the number and the larger the size. And conversely, the larger the size of the egg to start with, the better fitted to begin the battle of life is this young fish when first turned out on a cold world upon its own resources.

This is a general law, indeed, that runs through all nature, from London slums to the deep sea. Wasteful species produce many young, and take but little care of them when once produced. Economical species produce very few young, but start each individual well-equipped for its place in life, and look after them closely till they can take care of themselves in the struggle for existence. And on the average, however many or however few the offspring to start with, just enough attain maturity in the long run to replace their parents in the next generation. Were it otherwise, the sea would become one solid mass of herring, cod and mackeral.—The Cornhill Magazine.

◆

Progress in The Sciences.

M. Janssen, from observations taken at the summit of Mont Blanc, concludes that there is no oxygen as we know it in the photosphere, and that as oxogen would tend to combine with hydrogen and cut off our supply of heat by absorption, it is satisfactory to know that the sun is still far from that stage in it process of cooling.

Some enteresting experiments have recently been made in Denmark in felling trees with gun cotton. For felling a tree 25 inches in girth it took two men only a quarter of an hour to make the preparations, the rule followed being to make one bore hole for each foot of circumference.

A new flash light has recently been invented intended to take the place of several which have of late proved dangerous in practice. The composition consists largely of charcoal made from the silky down of the milk weed, a form of carbon prefered because of its freedom from ash.

At the recent meeting of the American Street Railway association the belief was expressed that it was the last convention at which horse traction would ever receive serious consideration; as electricity in one form or another was bound to replace the horses.

Sounding in the Black Sea show that beyond the depth of 600 feet the water is so impregnated with sulphuretted hydrogen gas emanating from decaying animal and vegetable matter that living organisms are not found there.

The best pictures so far taken of the moon show that parallel walls whose tops are no more than 200 yards or so in width, and which are not more than 1,000 or 1,200 yards apart, are plainly visible.

A hotel has been erected in Hamburg, having a facade made of paper. Doors made of paper are said to be superior to wood.

◆

A White Lie.

It doesn't pay to tell "white lies." The other day I read a little treatise on them which not only argued that they were admissible, but mildly hinted that in many contingencies they were highly creditable. I had this idea in mind when a short time afterward I was introduced to Miss and Mrs.——. Now Miss——was an exceedingly homely young woman, and I knew it; but remembering the suggestions of the book on "white lies," and thinking that the time to put its principle in practice had come, I said to Mrs——, "What a pretty girl your daughter is." And then I began to expatiate on the theme. I noticed a rather unsympathetic expression on Mrs.——'s face, and just about the time I finished she said, "That is my sister in-law, sir; not my daughter."—Kansas City Times.

M. DESBOUVERIE, of Roubaix, France, has been experimenting with swallows, as substitutes for carrier pigeons in time of war. He says that in every respect the swallows are preferable. They fly higher than the pigeons, are much swifter, take their food on the wing without stopping, and are far more intelligent.

◆

Nine militiamen are under arrest at Ann Arbor for the murder of a student who was killed in a recent fight there.

◆

Most men, otherwise strong in body and mind, will become unhappy and break down when afflicted with Rheumatism. If they would only try Salvation Oil they would find relief at once. Price 25c.

All the keys of Windsor Castle were recently stolen, but even this does not interfere with the rapid sale of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

◆

The bank of England is negotiating with the Imperial bank of St Petersburg for £1,500,000 gold.

◆

CHILDREN ENJOY

The pleasant flavor, gentle action and soothing effects of Syrup of Figs, when in need of a laxative and if the father or mother be costive or bilious the most gratifying results follow its use, so that it is the best family remedy known and every family should have a bottle.

◆

The O'Shea divorce case in London goes by default, neither Parnell nor Mrs. O'Shea being present to give testimony.

◆

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria,

◆

Bills will be introduced at the next session of congress to amend the McKinley law in several respects.

◆

TRADES AND OCCUPATIONS.

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION for 1891 will give an instructive and helpful Series of Papers, each of which describes the character of some leading Trade for Boys or Occupation for Girls. They give information as to the Apprenticeship required to learn each, the Wages to be expected, the Qualities needed in order to enter, and the prospects of Success. To New Subscribers who send $1.75 at once the paper will be sent free to Jan. 1, 1891, and for a full year from that date. Address,
THE YOUTH'S COMPANION, Boston, Mass.

◆

The French engineer Renault has made a report to the ministry of works in favor of a bridge across the English channel.

◆

Peace on Earth.

This is once more enjoyed by the rheumatic wise enough to counteract their progressive malady with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. No testimony is stronger than that which indicates it as a source of relief in this complaint. It is also eminently effective as a treatment for kidney trouble, dyspepsia, debility, liver complaint and constipation. Use it with persistence for the above.

◆

R. Wagoner & Co., Chicago grain dealers, have been forced to assign, having sustained severe losses recently.

◆

The saving in clothing where Dobbins' Electric Soap is used, is twenty times the soap bill. It is no new experiment, but has been sold for 24 years. To-day just as pure as in 1865. Try it. Your grocer has it or will order it.

◆

There is one thing that money cannot do—it cannot impart to its possessor that real refinement which marks the true lady or gentleman.

◆

FOR A TONIC MEDICINE TAKE ALLEN'S Iron Tonic Bitters. All genuine bear the signature of J. P. Allen, Druggist, St. Paul, Minn.

◆

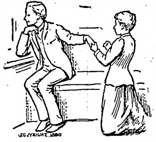
Don't neglect to have your name plainly painted on all jugs or bottles that are sent to the store for vinegar, molasses, etc. Then you will be sure to get your own back again.

◆

FOR BRONCHIAL, ASTHMATIC AND PULMONARY COMPLAINTS, "Brown's Bronchial Troches" have remarkable curative properties. Sold only in boxes.

◆

The Chicago government building is beginning to collapse. A big crack thirty feet long appeared in the walls one day, stopping proceedings in Judge Gresham's court.



An unusual offer —the one that's made by the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. Unusual, but made in good faith. It's a reward of $500 for an incurable case of Catarrh. If you have one, the money's for you. But you can't know whether you have one, till you've tried Dr. Sage's Remedy. What's incurable by any other means, yields to that. By its mild, soothing, cleansing and healing properties, it cures the worst cases, no matter of how long standing. That's the reason the money can be offered. There's a risk about it, to be sure. But it's so small that the proprietors are willing to take it.

The symptoms of catarrh are, headache, obstruction of nose, discharges falling into throat, sometimes profuse, watery, and acrid, at others, thick, tenacious, mucous, purulent, bloody, putrid and offensive; eyes weak, ringing in ears, deafness; offensive breath; smell and taste impaired, and general debility. Only a few of these symptoms likely to be present at once.

INFANTILE SKIN & SCALP DISEASES CURED BY Cuticura

EVERY HUMOR OF THE SKIN AND Scalp of infancy and childhood, whether torturing, disfiguring, itching, burning, scaly, crusted, pimply, or blotchy, with loss of hair, and every impurity of the blood, whether simple, scrofulous, or hereditary, is speedily, permanently, and economically cured by the CUTICURA REMEDIES, consisting of CUTICURA, the great Skin Cure, CUTICURA SOAP, an exquisite Skin Purifier and Beautifier, and CUTICURA RESOLVENT, the new Blood Purifier and greatest of Humor Remedies, when the best physicians and all other remedies fail. Parents, save your children years of mental and physical suffering. Sold everywhere. Price, CUTICURA, 50c.; SOAP, 25c.; RESOLVENT, $1. Prepared by Potter Drug and Chemical Corporation, Boston. Send for "How to Cure Skin Diseases."

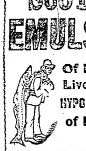
Baby's skin and scalp purified and beautified by CUTICURA SOAP.

Kidney pains, backache, and muscular rheumatism relieved in one minute by the CUTICURA ANTI-PAIN PLASTER. 25c.

He Took the Best One.

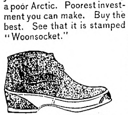
At a moment when the battle of Sadowa was as yet undecided, and when, indeed, the Prusisans appeared to be losing ground, Bismarck was wandering over the battle-field like a soul in agony. Certain historians have gone so far as to say that he kept a loaded revolver in his holster for the express purpose of blowing out his brains if the Austrians had won the day. Presently he fell in with Von Moltke, who was quietly looking on at the fight. Being anxious to arrive at an idea of the exact state of affairs, he pulled out his cigar-case, in which only two "londres" were left—one of them extra good, and the other of very inferior quality. He handed the case to Von Moltke, who, after examining the cigars for a long time, silently helped himself to the best. That was enough for the chancellor, and he remarked to some one near at hand: "When I saw Von Moltke use such deliberation in choosing his cigar, and above all when he chose the best, I knew that was a sign that things were going well with us."

USE St. Jacobs Oil The Great REMEDY FOR PAIN



SCOTT'S EMULSION Of Pure Cod Liver Oil and HYPOPHOSPHITES of Lime and Soda is endorsed and prescribed by leading physicians because both the Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites are the recognized agents in the cure of Consumption. It is as palatable as milk. Scott's Emulsion is a perfect Emulsion. It is a wonderful Flesh Producer. It is the Best Remedy for CONSUMPTION, Scrofula, Bronchitis, Wasting Diseases, Chronic Coughs and Colds. Ask for Scott's Emulsion and take no other.

WOONSOCKET ARCTIC. Extra heavy, for rough usage. Wears till you're tired of it. Don't buy a poor Arctic. Poorest investment you can make. Buy the best. See that it is stamped "Woonsocket."



Send for Catalogue. WOONSOCKET RUBBER CO. PROVIDENCE, R.I. RUBBERS

BIG G. I prescribe and fully endorse Big G as the only specific for the certain cure of this disease. G. H. INGRAHAM, M. D., Amsterdam, N. Y. We have sold Big G for many years, and it has given the best of satisfaction. D. R. DYCHE & CO., Chicago, Ill. $1.00. Sold by Druggists. Trade Mark

FAT FOLKS REDUCED "When I began treatment two months ago I was almost helpless, weighed 320 lbs. My hands and limbs pained me so I could not do my work. I was short of breath and bloated, could not sleep. I have lost 28 lbs. in two months and Oh! I feel so well I do my work with ease now. I can cheerfully recommend all suffering with stoutness to you. I will answer all letters with stamp." MRS. ETTA M. MULLIGAN, 8th and Springside, Quincy, Ill. PATIENTS TREATED BY MAIL. No starving, no inconvenience, harmless and no bad effects. Strictly confidential. For circulars and testimonials address with 6c. in stamps. DR. O. W. F. SNYDER, 243 STATE ST. CHICAGO.

PENSIONS Old or new Law. Bounty and pay under Circulars. FEES CONTINGENT. MILO B. STEVENS & Co., Attorneys 1419 F St., Washington, D. C. Branches, Chicago, Detroit and Cleveland. Three Years' army service. 26 Years practice.

Thanksgiving Pulpits,

There were three public occasions in the course of the year upon which the New England clergy used to feel warranted in preaching politics; these were Fast Day, "Election Day," —which meant the day on which a new governor was inaugurated,—and Thanksgiving Day. Few such occasions were allowed to pass unimproved. But the pews kept close watch of the pulpit, and more stories are told of those occasional sermons than of any others. Their humor is commonly apparent at a glance:

In Dr. Adam's book on "Thanksgiving," a good story is told of the Rev. Dr. Ely, of Connecticut. The good doctor is described as one of the most prudent, faithful, spiritual pastors of his time. In a season of great political excitement, it was reported by persons hostile to him that he had preached on political subjects in a neighboring parish It was thonght proper to trace the report to its source. The neighboring parish was visited, and the inquiry made, "Did Dr. Ely preach politics when here?"

"Yes."

"What did he say?"

"Well, sir, if he did not preach politics, he prayed politics."

"What did he say?"

"Say? He said, 'Though hand join in hand, yet the wicked shall not go unpunished.'"

Another story told by Dr. Adams can be referred to the thanksgiving pulpit with fullest confidence. There was once elected governor of Massachusetts a certain worthy gentleman who had been voted for as a candidate year after year, but who had always before been defeated. Even when he was elected, he slipped in by the narrowest of all majorities—one vote. The minority no doubt felt that his administration was a dispensation, and were rather inclined to fasting than to give thanks.

The custom prevailed, whenever the governor issued the annual proclamation for Thanksgiving, of sending by the sheriff of the county a copy of the same, on a large handbill, to be read from every pulpit, which document invariably closed,—as proclamations in Massachusetts still do,—after the signature of the governor, with the exclamation, "God save the Commmonwealth of Massachusetts."

On the year referred to the newly elected magistrate issued his proclamation in the usual form. It is said that a venerable clergyman of the old party laid the broad sheet over his reading-desk, and after performing the professional duty of reciting it, with an ill-disguised aversion, announced the official signature with an intonation feebly marked by points of interrogation and surprise:

"Marcus Morton, Governor? God save the Commonwealth of Massachusetts! ! !"

We Eat Too Much.

There is something new under the sun—a new way to make youth and health and beauty perpetual. Not a new method of physical culture, not a new dietary scheme, nor yet a new application of that subtle principle by which the mind rules the body. None of these, but a measure so novel, so original and withal so economic that it finds favor with many who would none of all the other fads.

A new Hypatia has arisen in the person of a New York lady physician, and the doctrine of physical immortality which she teaches is to fast. This modern philosopher is a well-known woman physician, who is fifty years of age and looks twenty-five. Her form is as supple, her eyes as bright and her skin as clear as a healthy school girl's.

"How did it come about?" she said to a writer in the New York Herald. "Why, in the most natural way. The human system is not a machine—it is a live thing, and so gets tired and needs rest. I discovered this many years ago, and began resting mine systematically. When I find the physical machinery becoming clogged and heavy I abstain entirely from food. Several times I have fasted for twenty days, and every month I take a three day's fast."

"But is it not very exhausting?" I asked.

"No," replied the doctor. "On the contrary, it is very exhilarating. Of course it is necessary that the stomach should have a tonic, and I have prepared one," showing a bottle containing a dark brown fluid.

"What is it?" I asked.

"I call it a nutrient," said the doctor, evasively. The taste and smell of the preparation indicated that it was mostly of cocoa and wine.

The doctor claims that a teaspoonful of this mixture, taken at the regular meal time, will not only do away with all desire for food, but will prevent bad results from the long fast.

I drink large quantities of hot water every day," she said, "because I believe the inside of the body needs washing as much as the outside."

Every year the doctor takes a trip to Europe, and she says that never since she began putting her pet theory into practice has she experienced a qualm of seasickness. And she believes that the same emancipation will be the reward of every one who follows her example.

A SCOTCH THANKSGIVING.

"Some hae meat that canna eat,
And some could eat that want it;
But we hae meat and we can eat,
Sae let the Lord be thankit."
—Robert Burns.

His Turkey,

The best practical joke I ever knew —said Uncle Will, in the story telling hour after dinner—was one I played years ago when I lived at Hampstead. I was working at the carpenter's trade,—it was before I got the start I have now,—and a lot of us were just finishing old Simpkins's barn. Simpkins was the richest and stingiest man in town. One afternoon, several days before Thanksgiving, we got talking about him, and Jerry Bowles said: "He's an old screw, but I bet he'll have the decency to give us all Thanksgiving turkeys."

We laughed at that, and told Jerry he might take it out in betting, for though Simpkins had given us a long job, he wasen't in the least bound to consider us permanent workmen.

But Jerry was obstinate and greedy, and he talked and blustered till we were tired of the whole subject, and I made up my mind that he deserved a lesson. I didn't say anything at the time, but that night I gave a hint to Tom Knowles, a crony of mine, and he quite agreed with me.

We laid all our plans, and the evening before Thanksgiving Knowles came to my house, bringing a pair of large yellow turkey legs. I had arranged a knobby bundle of sticks and shavings, and we tied the legs firmly to one end of it; then the whole was wrapped in stout brown paper, with those tell-tale feet sticking out and any one would have declared the bundle contained a big turkey.

My wife wanted me to go to the market for some purchases which had not been delivered, and about which she was getting anxious, so that gave me a good excuse for driving down town. I harnessed Kit in to the light wagon, put the mock-turkey under the seat, and Tom and I started in high glee.

When we reached Jerry's house, he was standing in the door, and we drove on to do our errands. By the time the market-man had packed apples, oranges, a big squash and a turkey into the wagon half an hour had passed, and we thought it safe to venture on our joking way. So we drove to the corner next Jerry's house, and Tom, after pulling his hat down and his coat-collar up to disguise himself, went to deliver the turkey.

When he came back, he was overcome with laughter at remembering how pleased Jerry had seemed; he hadn't recognized Tom at all, but just took the turkey, as Tom said, and ran in to tell his wife.

I don't believe I have laughed so much since I was a child as I did in thinking how Jerry's face would change when he opened that bundle.

I dropped Tom at his house, went home, and carried my parcels into the kitchen. Then, when I had unharnessed, my wife and I opened them, and—my friends, Tom had made a mistake. He had given Jerry the real turkey, and I had brought the dummy home! It served me right, I suppose, but those turkey legs did not make a very good dinner.

When Traveling.

I cannot imagine why people are so suspicious of one another in this world. Start a car full of people out of a depot, and for the first hundred miles of the way they look askance at each other, as though doubtful whether to keep their pocketbook under watch or not. This world has lots more nice people in it than bad, just as a summer meadow has more flowers and birds than snakes. Only cowards and idiots go through the land ignoring all the wealth of blossom, all the shadow and shine of summer weather, to keep a perpetual outlook for snakes. Snakes are occasional, but flowers and sunshine, thank God, are perpetual. Do you know I rather fancy suspicious people are very mean themselves, and knowing their own capabilities for evil they suspect and seek in others the similitude of themselves, as magnetized iron searches out steel.—Chicago Herald.

How the Ocean Is Sounded.

It has been found difficult to get to the correct soundings of the Atlantic. A mid-shipman of the navy overcame the difficulty, and shot weighing thirty pounds carries down the line. A hole is bored through the sinker, through which a rod of iron is passed moving easily back and fourth. In the end of the bar a cup is dug out and the inside coated with lard. The bar is made fast to the line and a sling holds the shot on.

When the bar, which extends below the ball, touches the earth the sling unhooks and the shot slides off. The lard in the end of the bar holds some of the sand, or whatever may be on the botton, and a drop shuts over the cup to keep the sand in. When the ground is reached a shock is felt, as if an electric current has passed through the line.—Ocean.

She had Passed Addition.

Little Mamie, during her arithmetic lesson, recently asked her school teacher how old she was.

"Said the teacher" (who had already passed her thirtieth birthday) with the naivete of which ladies are sometimes capable when confronted with awkward questions: "I can only say, my dear, I have passed addition and have entered subtraction."

The child looked puzzled and the teacher smiled a wise, far-away smile.

THE THANKSGIVING DINNER.

Around the richly laden board
The family are clustered.
Where's spread the glorious tempting hoard
The housewife's skill hath mustered.
If aught can bring more joyous ease
Than this, call me a sinner
Or anything; but not late, please,
To the Thanksgiving dinner.

We wander far apart at times,
But here in sweet communion,
Forget the joys of other climes,
In the year's reunion;
Whate'er the threads of Joy or pain
Reeled off by Time, the spinner,
How blest to gather 'round again,
The dear Thanksgiving dinner.

What rhymester could enumerate
Such joys, or name some sweeter;
Their kinds and number are too great
To harnessen be in metre.
Sufficient it, indeed, must be
To find one's self a winner
Of all the welcome jollity
That crowns Thanksgiving dinner.

A POET OF THE FAITH.

CHAPTER I.

OLD Stephen Filter was so black that he was sometimes referred to as "The Burnt Stump." He was, though, envied by nearly all the colored gentlemen on the adjoining plantations, not on account of any physical or even mental superiority, but because the old fellow owned an excellent track of land and was reputed to be the possessor of several thousand dollars in cash. Mandy, Stephen's daughter, was, of course, the belle of the neighborhood. She had inherited her father's depth of blackness; in fact, she had gone to a greater length in the line of inheritance, and had largely partaken of the old man's kidney feet. The father's affections were centered upon the girl; and, in the evening, when bull-bats and triumphant bellow, caught the croning black bugs that labored through the hazy air, he was wont to sit under a squash vine that grew about the door and think of the time when she would be the wife of an influential man.

Mandy had been taught to hold in disdain the matrimonal negotations of the commonplace young fellows of the neighborhood, and so faithfully had she carried out the old man's instructions that for him the future held but few fears of family degeneration. In his vanity he had often said to her: "Mandy, money an' ground dat'll raise big years o' co'n an' monster stalks o' cotton is things dat talks wid de loudest voice in dis yare's ciety o' our day an' time; darfo,' look out fur de man wid de right sorter 'fluence."

"Spozen I doan lub de man dat's got whut you calls de right sorter 'fluence?" she once asked.

Old Stephen threw up his head and snorted like a "glandered horse." "Doan lub him! W'y, blast my crap ef I ain't er gret mine ter take dat ox-bow out dar an' wrop it er round you 'bout to' times fur de ignunce dat you has 'spressed on dis yar day. Whut, you talk er bout not lubin' er man o' 'fluence! Come, now, Mandy, neber let me yare you make sich a po' folks' sklamation ez dat ergin. Lemme tell you, I blebes in the Lawn an' looks ter Him ez much ez I kes, but ez sho ez I lib I'd ruther you'd marry a rich sinner den er op' angel. Caze why? I'll' splain why. It's bercaze I sees dat de white folks is de same way. Da goes ter church an' lissens ter de preacher talk ergin money, an' de naixt day you sees em'er chasin' suthin' fit ter break dar naiks.

'Whut is it da's chasin'? De salvation o' de soul? No, honey, da's chasin' er dollar up de hill and down by de branch, roun' de co'n crib an' ober in de new groun'. An' who is dat man stan'in' dar er clappin' his han's un' yellin' 'go on, go on!' Dat's de preacher, honey; an', lemme tell you, it ain't no show thing dat he doan' head dat dollar off an' ketch it hisse'f. I'se talkin' to yo' heah now, chile!"

"Yes, sah," the girl replied, "the money giner'ly talks to der head, but dat ain' whut de hones' 'oman wants. She wants suthin' ter talk ter de heart."

"Neber mine de heart," the old man rejoined. "Neber mine dat, fur ef de head ain't all right de heart gwine ter git left. Right yare I want ter say er word ter you. De naixt time dat nigger Sim Posey comes yar I wants you ter tell him not ter make no mo' tracks on dis yare lan'. Needn' drop dat lip; needn' try to make no skuse fer dat feller, fur if he keeps on comin' roun' yare he gwine be sprized one deze days ter find hisse'f loaded down so heavy wid buck-shot dat he kaint walk. I'se blowin' de warnin' ho'n now an' you better harken ter de echo darof."

Sim Posey was a poet and was consequently regarded as the most trifling negro in the neighborhood. Mandy first met him at Bajou Cypress, a watering place. He had gone hither to entertain the guests. He did not write his rhymes, indeed he knew not a letter of the alphabet, but recited them. Mandy was charmed by him. He had sung of her eyes and teeth and had paid a high compliment to her ambling walk. He had called upon her several times at her home, and as he had come dressed in a suit of blue broadcloth (and this too shortly after a steamboat captain lost a suit of blue clothes) old Stephen seemed to be kindly disposed toward him, but when the old fellow learned that Sim was a mere singer of rhymes, he frowned upon him so darkly that the poet, with a sort of nervous and trembling humor, said: "Must be gwine ter rain, I see sich er black cloud."

"Yas," the old man replied, "yas it is gwine ter rain. Gwine ter rain pitchforks, too, lemme tell you."

One evening, a short time after the old man had made the buck-shot threat, Sim, after slyly picking his way through the woods, called at Mandy's house. He found her sitting in the shaded doorway, singing a soft and melancholy song. All that kept her from blushing when Sim surprised her was the extreme darkness of her complexion.

"Law, Sim," she exclaimed, "ef you doan git erway frum yar dady'll fill you up wid buck-shot."

"Wall, he ain't ap'ter do it right now, caze I seed him goin' ober toward do sto'. Look yare, sweet chile o' natur, I got ter marry you, caze I jest nachully kain't he'p it. W'en I sees you de birds 'gins ter sing wid er new tune, an' de rosebud what yistiday wan't able to open its lips busts out in er joyful laugh o' full bloom."

"Sim, please go erway. Ef you doan dady'll shoot you."

"Ter me," Sim continued, "you is a lamb dat libs in de fresh clover, de bird dat sleeps in de honeysuckle vines, an' at mornin' drinks de sweet dew. Now I gwine talk bizness. Ken you git yo' dady interested in de camp-meetin' dat da gwine ter start ober by de creek?"

"I reckons so, but what good dat gwine do?"

"Neber mine. You git him worked up an' w'en you does doan you go wid him at night. Doan ax no questions, but do ez I tells you. One word fo I go. Ef yo' dady gins his consent will you marry me?"

"You knows I would."

"All right. Good-bye."

CHAPTER II.

The daughter evinced such interest in the welfare of her father's soul that the old man was deeply moved. He went to the camp-meeting and became much concerned. He was getting old and might not live but a little while longer. He had not paid enough attention to his soul. He wanted, as nearly as possible, to make good the precious time which he had lost.

One night, while at the mourners' bench, he thought that he felt a change of heart, and as he rode along the lonely road towards home he continued to pray. Suddenly a voice from over head startled him:

"Stephen Filter; Stephen Filter!"

"Whoa. Who dat callin' me?"

"Stephen Filter, look ter yo' soul?"

"Lawd hab mussy on me; Lawd hab mussy. Whut mus' I do?"

"Stephen Filter, preach de gospul o' be Lawd."

"I kain't preach; oh, Lawdy, dy sarvent kaint preach."

"Stephen Filter, on Thansgibin' Day er man will come ter yo' house. Gib him yo' daughter an' let him take yo farm while you preach."

"Who is de man?"

"Er poet o' de faith. Stephen Filter, you hab made er narrer 'scape. Go."

The old man whipped up his horse. Sim come down out of a tree.

The next morning, at breafast, the old man's face wore an expression of deep concern.

"Mandy, ain't termorrer Thanksgibin' Day?"

"Yas, sah."

"Mandy, would you like fur me ter preach de Gospul?"

"Yes, sah; ef you feels like it."

The, next day, at quite an early hour, Sim arrived.

"W'y, good mawnin', Mr. Poet; good mawnin', sah. Hain't seed you fur some time. Glad you come. Look yare, I's got er bout er nuff o' de folishnuss o' dis worl', an' it strikes me dat I oughter preach. Hole ober yare an' lemme tell you sutoin'. Dat daughter o' mine lubs you. She do fur er fact. Now, I tell you whut I want. I want you ter marry her dis day."

"Wall, sah, I think I ken 'commerdate you."

Shortly afterward the ceremony was performed.

"Dady," Mandy said, when the old man got up from the dinner table, "whar you gwine?"

"Gwine ober ter Mount Salem ter preach dis ebenin', May de Lawd be wid you, my chillun."

OPIE P. READ.

Kangaroos to be Imported.

We are assured on what seems good authority that the project of importing kangaroos into this country is seriously entertained by several enthusiastic and wealthy sportsmen of the west. The animals have been successfully acclimated in England and France, and we are assured that there is no reason why they should not thrive here. The practical extinction of the Buffalo has left the plains without any big game of importance, and experienced sportsmen declare that hunting the kangaroo, as practiced in Australia, is second in excitement and interest only to killing the Buffalo. The scheme is not without commercial importance. Kangaroo leather is a very valuable product, and the animals breed rapidly. The promoters hope to be privileged to introduce the new game at the beginning of the warm season in Yellowstone park, and to insure them for a few years government protection and immunity from senseless sportsmen.—Helena Independent.

If mince meat is chopped, salted and sweetened and canned while hot, and after a few days reopened and the cans filled up with cold West India molasses, it will prevent its moulding.

Ringing Noises

In the ears, sometimes a roaring, buzzing sound, or snapping like the report of a pistol, are caused by catarrh, that exceedingly disagreeable and very common disease. Loss of smell or hearing also results from catarrh. Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier, is a peculiarly successful remedy for catarrh, which it cures by eradicating from the blood the impurity which causes and promotes this disease. Try Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"I used Hood's Sarsaparilla for catarrh, and received great relief and benefit from it. The catarrh was very disagreeable, especially in the winter, causing constant discharge from my nose, ringing noises in my ears, and pains in the back of my head. The effort to clear my head in the morning by hawking and spitting was painful. Hood's Sarsaparilla gave me relief immediately, while in time I was entirely cured. I am never without the medicine in my house as I think it is worth its weight in gold." MRS. G. B. GIBB, 1029 Eighth street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists, $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

SICK HEADACHE

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Positively cured by these Little Pills. They also relieve Distress from Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Too Hearty Eating. A perfect remedy for Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Coated Tongue, Pain in the Side. TORPID LIVER. They regulate the Bowels. Purely Vegetable. Price 25 Cents.

CARTER MEDICINE CO., NEW YORK.

Small Pill; Small Dose. Small Price.

CHICHESTER'S ENGLISH PENNYROYAL PILLS

RED CROSS DIAMOND BRAND. Safe and always reliable. Ladies, ask Druggist for Diamond Brand, in red, metallic boxes, sealed with blue ribbon. Take no other. All pills in pasteboard boxes, pink wrappers, are dangerous counterfeits. Send 4c. (stamps) for particulars, testimonials and "Relief for Ladies," in letter, by return mail. Name Paper. Chichester Chem'l Co., Madison Sq., Phila., Pa.

PENSION LAND AND INDIAN DEPARTMENT CLAIMS. Special attention given to the above. NATHAN BICKFORD, "B" 5th N. H. Inft., Solicitor of Claims Washington, D. C. References furnished in any State. Blanks and information free.

N. W. N. U. 1890 No. 48.

For Old and Young.

Tutt's Liver Pills act as kindly on the child, the delicate female or infirm old age, as upon the vigorous man.

Tutt's Pills

give tone to the weak stomach, bowels, kidneys and bladder. To these organs their strengthening qualities are wonderful, causing them to perform their functions as in youth.

Sold Everywhere.

Office, 39 & 41 Park Place, N. Y.

PATENTS obtained. Fees moderate Information free J. R. Littell Washington D. C

GARFIELD TEA Cures Constipation and Sick Headache. Free samples at all druggists or 319 W. 45th St., N. Y.

CANCERS Cured without the use of the Knife at the Iola Cancer Infirmary. Iola, Waupaca. Co. Wis. Write for book of treatment.

LADIES can have smaller feet. Solid comfort. Pamphlet free. Sample pkg., 10c. The Pedine Co., New York.

$5,000 stock of Clothing, new, seasonable goods for this winter's trade, manufactured within the past ninety days. Will take $3,000, balance unincumbered real estate. Williamson & King, Chamber of Commerce, Chicago, Ill.

PENSION JOHN W. MORRIS, Washington, D. C. Successfully Prosecutes Claims. Late Principal Examiner U. S. Pension Bureau. 3 yrs in last war, 15 adjudicating claims, atty since.

PENSIONS The Disability Bill is a Law. Dependent widows and parents are included. If you wish your claim quickly and Successfully Prosecuted, write to JAMES TANNER, late Commissioner of Pensions, Washington, D. C.

Caton's College

703 NICOLLET AVE., MINNEAPOLIS, is now the largest and best Business College in the Northwest. SHORT-HAND, TYPEWRITING, BOOK-KEEPING, Commercial Law, Penmanship and the common English branches are taught by the best of teachers. For College Journal, address T. J. CATON.

VASELINE.

FOR ONE DOLLAR sent us by mail, we will deliver, free of all charges, to any person in the United States, all the following articles carefully packed in a neat box:
One two ounce bottle of Pure Vaseline, 10cts.
One two ounce bottle Vaseline Pomade, 15 "
One jar of Vaseline Cold Cream 15 "
One cake of Vaseline Camphor Ice 10 "
One cake of Vaseline Soap, unscented 10 "
One cake of Vaseline Soap, sented 25 "
One two ounce bottle of White Vaseline 25 "
—$1.10
Or for stamps any single article at the price. If you have occasion to use Vaseline in any form be careful to accept only genuine goods put up by us in original packages. A great many druggists are trying to persuade buyers to take VASELINE put up by them. Never yield to such persuasion, as the article is an imitation without value, and will not give you the result you expect. A bottle of Blue Seal Vaseline is sold by all druggist at ten cents.
Chesebrough M'f'g Co., 24 State St, New York.

THE BEST PRICE COUGH 25 CTS. MEDICINE. PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION. FOR SALE BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

We offer you a ready made medicine for Coughs, Bronchitis and other diseases of the Throat and Lungs. Like other so-called Patent Medicines, It is well advertised, and having merit it has attained to a wide sale. Call it a "Nostrum" if you will, but believe us when we say that at first it was compounded by a regular physician, with no idea that it would ever go on the market as a proprietary medicine. But after compounding that prescription over a thousand times in one year, we named it Piso's Cure for Consumption, and began advertising it in a small way. A medicine known all over the world is the result.

Why is it not just as good as though costing fifty cents to a dollar for a prescription and an equal sum to have it put up at a drug store?

PISO'S REMEDY FOR CATARRH.—Best. Easiest to use. Cheapest. Relief is immediate. A cure is certain. For Cold in the Head it has no equal.

CATARRH

It is an Ointment, of which a small particle is applied to the nostrils. Price, 50c. Sold by druggists or sent by mail. Address, E. T. HAZELTINE. Warren, Pa.

"When slovens get tidy they polish the bottoms of the pans."—When SERVANTS (COPYRIGHT) are given SAPOLIO they are never tired of cleaning up.

Two servants in two neighboring houses dwelt,
But differently their daily labor felt;
Jaded and weary of her life was one,
Always at work, and yet 'twas never done.
The other walked out nightly with her beau,
But then she cleaned house with SAPOLIO.

IRRIGATION PUMP.

Water Steam Vacuum Pumps, for Irrigating, Stock, Drainage, Coffer Dams and Mining. The latest and most economical pump made. Will raise 75,000 gallons water with one bushel coal, and elevate it 10 to 150 ft. high. We handle Well Drilling Machinery, Steam Plows, which turn 8 14-in. furrows at one round. Send four cents in stamps for mailing catalogue, to

WESTERN MACHINERY CO.

1412 17th St., DENVER, COLO.

THE VAN DUSEN-HARRINGTON CO.,

GRAIN COMMISSION.

MINNEAPOLIS. - DULUTH.

SELL BY SAMPLE.

Best Prices. Prompt Returns. Write for quotations. Execute orders Chicago, New York or Milwaukee.

Ely's Cream Balm Cures COLD IN HEAD RELIEVES INSTANTLY.

THE CURE FOR CATARRH COLD IN HEAD HAY FEVER ELY'S CREAM BALM

ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren St., New York. Price 50 cts.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

THE NEWS.
Entered at the post office at Red Lake Falls as second-class mail matter.

Official Paper of the County.

Official Paper of the City.

JAS. MEEHAN, JR., Editor and Prop.

A FEW POLITICAL POINTS.

The Pi-press congratulates its party on its admirable and statesmanlike solution of the silver question—one which, it says, the Democrats have never been able to handle. And yet this silver bill is only a doubling of the amount of silver the treasury must buy monthly over that required by the Bland bill, a Democratic measure. Of course the editor of the Pi-press knew better. But—well, an election is pending and at such a time the morality of that paper is always dropped and pretty stiff lying is held justifiable.

When John Lind gets onto the stump to elaborate the reasons why his constituents should return him to congress, he may forget to mention as one of them why he voted to double the tax on every milk pail and tin plate and dish in the kitchens of his constituents. If he should, we trust that some voter at each meeting will not fail to ask him. And just ask him, too, why he changed his vote from nay to aye when McKinley went scurrying around among the six Republicans who had voted nay, while Reed held back the announcement of the vote, to get them to change to aye. If you want to see a man squirm like an eel just pop these questions at him.

The St. Paul Daily News, the state organ of the Alliance, in its issue of the 3d inst., exposes the plan devised at Republican headquarters to disrupt the Alliance in the last days of the campaign. It is simply to find what Republican of influence in each lodge is purchasable, pay him his price to say to his fellows that he has become satisfied that the Alliance has departed from its early high purpose and become a Democratic annex, and that his conscience will not permit him to uphold so vile a trick and that he will vote the Republican ticket. If such a plan was contemplated no more effectual way of blocking it could be devised, for now the Republican Alliance man who goes back or talks of it will be set down by his fellows as having been boodled. Really these Alliance men show a cuteness worthy of the older hands.

Fresh from Washington, fresh from the atmosphere of the trusts and combines, fresh from the opulent surroundings of the lobby of the protected industries, fresh from the presence of the tin-plate syndicate, John Lind, M. C., reaches St. Paul and announces to his constituents out on the prairies that "I shall have no apology to make to my constituents for our position on the tariff question." Shan't, eh? Well, Mr. Lind, you just wait until you get out in your district and you will find yourself in quite a different atmosphere from that in Washington. You will find lots and lots of Republican farmers who have been saying, "I want John Lind to explain his vote on the tin-plate tax before he gets my vote;" "The man who voted for the McKinley bill can't have my vote." Within a week John Lind will be doing nothing else than apologizing.

The old world dispatches contain some queer views of this many-sided tariff question. From London comes a dispatch telling how the McKinley bill is stopping work, cutting down wages and how plans are being considered for the transfer of industries and workmen to this country. But if the effect of the bill is to send foreign workmen to this country to engage in making the things protected where is the protection in the bill for our own workmen? Again, from Brussells comes word that the capitalists owning coal and iron mines and works, are combining so as to reduce the cost of production, because they say with their present methods they can not compete with American manufactures of iron and steel. But if this is so then why should our manufacturers need protection against these people? But one gets dizzy in trying to follow the mazes of protection. Better get out of the maze and into the straight road which the Democratic platform points out.

"A SCHEME EXPOSED."

The Republican state central committee are running a literary bureau of their own. They stand in with the Northwestern Union, a Pioneer Press annex, which furnishes the patent insides for several country papers, and get it to print such matter as the fertile imaginations of the editors of that committee can invent. Last week they run with a scare head, under the caption of "A Scheme Exposed," a tale about some combination or conspiracy among the leaders of the Alliance and Democrats to work the former for the benefit of the latter. There was a fine little picture of "The first move," which they say was made Sept. 23 in parlor "A," of the Merchants Hotel in St. Paul, in which Messrs. Phelps, Warren, Hodgson, Sprague and others, of the Alliance and Messrs. Michael Doran, W. M. Campbell and P. J. Smalley, "and other leading Democrats," "then and there bargained and agreed to substitute" Bierman in place of Rahilly withdrawn. And then these young and prolific imaginations race on with much more equally fanciful writing. Secretary Smalley, when asked about the matter, said that the story was absolutely false. That no such meeting took place, and that at that time neither Mr. Campbell nor himself had any acquaintance with either the president or secretary of the Alliance. He was surprised that the chairman of the Republican state committee would lend himself to such a fabrication, but a desperate condition probably justifies desperate remedies.

M'KINLEY BILL ADVANCES PRICES.

The Globe, by interviews with prominent tradesmen and merchants of the city, Republican and Democrat alike, has shown how the prices of dry goods, drugs and glassware have increased by 15 to 40 per cent., and, in the case of light glass, 600 per cent. To bring the iniquity of a protective tariff more forcibly home, the following circulars received by local tradesmen from Eastern manufacturers, will be of excellent service: The first, dated Sept. 30, is from H. A. Caesan & Co., of 454 Broome street, New York, and reads:

Under new tariff advance will be about
Velvet, plain, 12½ to 17½ cents.
Velvet, croise, 5 to 10 cents.
Plushes, 12½ to 20 cents.
We hope you are, like ourselves, raising prices.

Blumenthal Bros. & Co., importers and manufacturers of ladies' cloaks and mantles, 453 Broadway, New York, Sept. 30, write:

The McKinley bill, as reported from the conference committe, will advance the price of seal plushes 30 to 35 per cent, so that plushes by the yard which have cost $5 will cost from $6.50 to $6.75 under the new tariff law. We will be obliged, consequently, to advance the prices of all plush garments from 10 to 15 per cent. so that the cost of a plush jacket, instead of $9 as formerly, will be $10 now. The cost of a plush sacque at $20 formerly will be $33.50 now, etc.

A. Ellinger & Co., manufacturers of cloaks, 278-286 East Madison street, Chicago, write Oct. 2:

We have this day advanced the price for future orders on plush garments you have had.

A. Friedlander & Co., importers and manufacturers, 377 and 379 Broadway, New York, Sept. 30, wrote:

In consequence of the increase of the tariff, caused by the passage of the McKinley bill, we are compelled to advance the prices of all our plush garments sufficient to cover the added cost.

Who pays this increase?

Why, the people—the poor people.

Not only will the wage-earner have difficulty in procuring adequate clothes; his purchasing power is also straightened in articles to add to the beauty and comfort of his home. There is no doubt about this. E. Scott, of St. Paul Carpet company, yesterday, said notice had been received from leading carpet manufacturers of the country giving an advance of from 2½ to 10 cents on carpets, taking effect Oct. 6. This is caused by the advance of wool and yarn by the McKinley tariff law. Then, again, Messrs. Smith & Farwell are in receipt of the following from Swire & Scott, manufacturers of art squares, ingrain carpetings, Philadelphia:

On and after this day (Oct. 1) all orders will be filled at value only. Owing to the great advance of raw material we are compelled to take this course.

THE BALANCE OF TRADE HUMBUG.

"We lost $143,000,000 in our trade with South American countries last year," says Mr. Blaine, in his Waterville speech. We bought so many million dollars worth of them more than we sold them, he says, so we lost that much. Therefore, he concludes, we must have reciprocity with those countries. We would like to give Mr. Blaine credit for sincerity, but if we do, it must be at the cost of his intelligence. His statement hardly bears analysis. "We" lost that amount, he says, but who is "we?" Why, those who bought and sold. Those who bought coffee and rubber of Brazil; those who bought hides and wool of the Argentines; those who bought sugar and ores of Cuba. But has any one heard of any failures of the houses engaged in that trade? Could they lose $143,000,000 and not fail? When the locking up of $10,000,000 to speculate in silver bullion so nearly caused a panic that the secretary of the treasury had to rush down to Wall street and buy bonds and pay out $5,000,000 of interest on our bonds not due for a year, to avert it, can Mr. Blaine seriously ask the country to believe that the country could lose fourteen times as much in one year and not feel it? And then if we lost that sum those countries gained it. Does he think that he can get them to give up a trade in which they can make so much clean profit, with his little scheme of reciprocity? They aren't such fools. No, reciprocity is only a dodge to save protection by fooling the voters again as they were fooled two years ago by promises of tariff reduction.

A BLASPHEMOUS COMPARISON.

The Republican manifesto, with which the state has been plastered, contains, among its other richness, this remarkable statement: "The protective policy will * * become, like God's providence, the fructifying agent to distribute the wealth of the country equitably among all classes of people." It seems incredible that the leaders of any party organization, not lunatics, could give out so absurd and nonsensical a statement of its purposes or set its seal to so crazy an idea of what a government is for. It is evidently the product of men impelled by a feeling that they must say something, but in dense ignorance of what to say, and captivated by the jingle of words. The protective policy is based on the power to tax and to say that the taxing power of any government can be properly or safely used to "equitably distribute" the earnings of the people, is to shock common sense and render the advocates of it subject to well founded suspicion as to their sanity. In marked contrast to this is the policy declared by the Democrats in their platform, one which commends itself not only to the common sense of men, but to their sense of right. They say:

"We declare our uncompromising opposition to the policy of a protective tariff, and we deny that the federal government has any right, legal or moral, to use its taxing power for any other purpose than to provide a revenue for the actual needs of the government when administered with economy."

We pass without comment the blasphemy involved in the comparison of a system which Republicans like Davis call robbery, to the providence of the Almighty.

His Only Reason.

A certain little boy who took an ocean voyage was sure he should enjoy it from beginning to end. At the close of the fifth day, however, the monotony of scene and occupation began to pall upon him, and he grew decidedly fractious.

"Don't you want to go down stairs and take a nap?" asked his mother gently.

"Been asleep once today," said he crossly. "Sick of sleeping."

"Run over to those little girls, then, and see them cut out paper dolls."

"Oh, I'm sick of girls and dolls!"

"There is a sailor splicing a rope. Why don't you go and watch him?"

"Sick of it."

"Well, it seems to me you're tired of everything on board."

"Yes, I am, mamma. I've got every kind of sick but seasick, and the only reason I'm not tired of you is that I used to know you when we were on dry land."—Youth's Companion.

Illiteracy of Nations.

The census of the illiterates in the various countries places the three Sclavic states of Roumania, Russia and Servia at the head of the list, with about 80 per cent. of the population unable to read or write. Of the Latin speaking races Spain heads the list with 48 per cent., France and Belgium having about 15 per cent. The illiterates in Hungary number 43 per cent., in Austria 30 per cent. and in Ireland 21. In England we find 13 per cent.; Holland, 10 per cent.; United States (white population), 8 per cent., and Scotland, 7 per cent. unable to read or write. When we come to the purely Teutonic states we find a marked reduction in the percentage of illiterates. The highest is in Switzerland, 2.5; in the whole German empire it is but 1 per cent. In Sweden, Denmark, Bavaria, Baden and Wurtemburg there is not a single person over 10 years of age unable to read and write.—St. Louis Republic.

A Cool Trapeze Performer.

In Geneva, at a circus, a trapeze performer, Mlle. Mathilde, astonished the natives every night by her performances with a youth of about 17 high up in the air. One evening this youth, by his own carelessness, slipped from the hands of the girl, who hung by her knees. A cry of horror arose from the audience, when she luckily caught him with her teeth by the embroidery over the breast of his tights. She pulled him up into a sitting position on the trapeze, then boxed his ears vigorously and made him go through the performance again—this time without fault.—Chicago Herald.

The Sixth Month in the Roman Year.

August, the sixth month in the Roman year, which began with March, was originally styled Sextilis, and received its present name from the Emperor Augustus on account of several of the most fortunate events of his life having occurred during this month.

The nearest relative living of the poet Shakespeare is probably Thomas Hart, a resident of Australia, who is eighth in descent from Shakespeare's sister Jean. It is a curious fact that there are no direct descendants of Napoleon, Wellington, Washington or Walter Scott.

STRONG WITH THE ENEMY.

Mr. Adolph Biermann's endorsement by the Alliance people, while not making his election to state auditor a certainty, still places it within the range of those possibilities which are exceedingly likely to occur. The endorsement undoubtedly will be welcome news to the large number of citizens scattered all over the state who whenever an opportunity offered have showed that though a Democrat of the most uncompromising type Mr. Bierman enjoys a widespread popularity even in the camp of his political opponents.—The North (Scan.-Am.).

DRINKING WATER FOR PARIS.

Plans for Providing a Bountiful Supply for the Capital of France.

The Galignani Messenger, in some recent articles on the water supply of Paris, gives the views of Professor Senator Cornil, who is for the purchase of the Avre springs. In the course of an interview on the subject he stated that the quantity of spring water at the disposal of the inhabitants is altogether inadequate. "Two remedies," he said, "have been proposed. The first one is a system of double canalization in each house. There would be a small pipe for the supply of spring water and a larger one for river water for washing and cleansing purposes. But this project would cost 100,000,000 francs and occupy ten years in execution. The other plan is to filter the water taken from the Seine by means of sand; it is suggested that sand pits for the purpose might be established, as at Nantes. But this system would be impracticable in Paris, where no fewer than 200 pits of the kind would be required.

"The open reservoir system, with decantation and filtration, has yielded fairly satisfactory results in England; but the process is slow and imperfect, as the filtering bed has to be so frequently renewed. Nothing, therefore, can so advantageously replace a supply taken from springs situated at a sufficient altitude. We must, therefore, conclude in favor of the scheme for drawing our water supply from the Avre springs, however much we may regret the necessity of depriving a district of a portion of its water. I am aware that the inhabitants of the valley of the Avre have loudly protested against the scheme and have suggested that we should draw our supply from the Cailly springs, but these are situated at a level below that of the Seine. To pump up the water to the heights of Paris would require the use of powerful machines, which would cost at least 5,000,000 francs."

Dr. Cornil then showed the economy of the project now before the chambers. The water which it was proposed to bring from the Avre springs, situated near Verneuil, distant about fifty-two miles from Paris, can easily be conveyed to the capital in a state of the utmost purity. It would be supplied at the average rate of 1,263 liters per second, or 110,000 cubic meters per day, during the months of June, July and August, when the consumption of Paris is at its maximum. During the first six months of the year, when the water is most abundant, the yield would be at the rate of 1,485 liters per second, or 128,000 cubic meters per day. The total cost of construction of the works would be 35,000,000 francs, and the cost of the maintenance thereafter only 50,000 francs per annum. The former sum would be drawn from the loan of 350,000,000 francs which the city of Paris had been authorized to raise under the law of July 18, 1886, and was specially provided for in the clauses of the bill. It will be three years before the scheme can be carried out, and in the meantime Parisians will do well to filter their own water.

$40.00

13

—GRAND—

WINTER EXCURSIONS.

FROM NORTHERN

MINNESOTA

AND NORTH

Dakota

TO

Montreal

And all Points West in

ONTARIO

VIA THE

Northern Pacific

The Dining car line between northern Minnesota and North Dakota Points, by way of St. Paul and Chicago. Dates of sale, Tuesday, Nov. 18 and 25, and Dec. 2 and 9; and daily, Dec. 16 to 23 inclusive, & Dec 30, 1890.

Limit of Tickets 99 days, good returning fifteen days, with stop-over privileges

Subject to local regulations of lines over which tickets read.

Final limit of Tickets extended fifteen days on payment of $5.00; 30 days, $10 and 60 days, $20

For further information, maps, time-tables and tickets via the dining car line, write to or inquire of any agent of the Northern Pacific railroad, or

C. A. Sharkee, agent, Crookston, Minn. H. W. H. W. Nunn, Agent Grofton, N. D. J. A. Duffy Red Lake Falls, Minn. E. F. Rea, Agent, Gildy N. D. J. A Risk, Agent, Minnewaukon N. D. M. H. McGowan, Agent, Grond Forks N. D. N. McCallum, Agent, Drayton, N. D. F. J. Cunningham, Agent, Pembina, N. D. J. D. Robertson, Agent, N. D. R. Tazewell, Agent, Leeds, N. D.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk—ss.
In probate court, special term, Nov. 11, 1890.
In the matter of the estate of Peter Bischoff, deceased.

On receiving and filing the petition of Joseph Bischoff of Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, representing, among other things, that Peter Bischoff, late of this county, on the 3d day of April, A. D. 1888, at Drayton, N. D., died intestate, and being a resident of this county at the time of his death, leaving goods, chattels and estate within this county, and that the said petitioner is a brother of said deceased, and praying that administration of said estate be to said petitioner, Joseph Bischoff, granted:

It is ordered, That said petition be heard before this court, on Tuesday, the 16th day of December, A. D. 1890, at 2 o'clock p. m. at the probate office in Crookston in said county. Ordered further, that notice thereof be given to the heirs of said deceased, and to all persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week, for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the Red Lake Falls News, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Red Lake Falls in said county.

Dated at Crookston the 17th day of November A. D. 1890.

By the Court: C. O. Christianson, Judge of Probate.

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage containing a power of sale dated April 5th, 1887, duly recorded in the office of register of deeds of Polk county, Minnesota, on April 8th, 1887, in book 30 of mortgages on page 398 whereby Wilfred Cyr and Emma Cyr, his wife, mortgagors, mortgaged to F. T. Day, mortgagee, the west half (w½) of the south east quarter (se¼) and the south east quarter (se¼) of the south west quarter (sw¼) and lots nine (9) and ten (10) all in section twenty-five (25) in township one hundred and fifty one (151) of range forty-five (45) in Polk county, Minnesota containing one hundred and seventy-four and 25-100 acres, by which default the power of sale has become operative and no action or proceeding at law or otherwise has been instituted to recover the debt remaining secured by said mortgage or any part thereof and there is claimed to be due on said mortgage at the date of this notice, the sum of $87.30.

Now, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of said power, said mortgage will be foreclosed and said premises will be sold at public auction by the sheriff of said county or his deputy on the 10th day of January, 1891, at 10 o'clock a. m. at the front door of the court house in the city of Crookston in said county, to pay said debt and interest and taxes and twenty-five dollars attorney's fees and disbursements allowed by law.

Dated June 1st, 1890.

F. T. Day, Mortgagee.

De Forest Bucklen,
Attorney for Mortgagee,
Crookston, Minn.

Land Office at Crookston, Minn., Nov. 24th, 1890.

Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the register or receiver of U. S. land office at Crookston, Minn., on January 12th, 1891, viz, Damase Dion, hd No. 10917, for the nw¼ sec 33, twp 150, r 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of, said land, viz. Charles O'Claire, Charles Benoit, Louis Parenteau, Prosper Benoit, all of Terrebonne, Minn.

nv27jan1 H. D. Diekmann, Register.

Things Worth Remembering.

That it is dangerous to stand near a tall tree or spire during a thunder storm.

That the southwest corner of the cellar is the "cyclone safety point."

That there is no medicine so universally applicable to sickness as fresh air and sunshine."

That blowing out the gas before retiring is funny—to every one except the one who tries it.

That you may swear as hard as you please but it will not remove grease spots.

That the Wisconsin Central is the most popular line between Minneapolis and St. Paul and Milwaukee and Chicago.

That its fast train leaves Minneapolis daily at 6:25 p. m., St. Paul at 7:15 p. m., with through Pullman sleepers, arriving in Milwaukee at 7:27 and Chicago at 9:59 the following morning, serving breakfast in dining car.

That before starting on a trip always get information from some reliable ticket agent, and that nowhere will such information be more cheerfully given than at the city ticket offices of the Wisconsin Central, No. 19, Nicollet House block, Minneapolis, and 162 East 3d st, cor. Jackson, St. Paul, Address letters to Chas. E. Dixon, acting city passenger and ticket agent, St. Paul, F. H. Hanson, Gen. Northwestern Pass. agent, Minneapolis, or Louis Eckstein, Assistant General Passenger and Ticket agent, Milwaukee.

RALPH & BOURDON,

Proprietors of the

CITY DRAY LINE.

WOOD & COAL

Anything in our line done Promptly and at very Reasonable Rates.

GIVE US A CALL

TONSORIAL HALL!

N. MORISETTE, PROP.

Everything First Class!

SHAVING,
HAIR-CUTTING,
SHAMPOOING!

Shaving 15 cents.
Haircutting 25 cents.

Main Street. - Red Lake Falls.

Roller Mill "B"

BEST PATENT	$2.25
BEST STRAIGHT	2.00
SECOND "	1.75
FAMILY BAKER'S	1-40
GRAHAM	2.00
RYE FLOUR	2.00
MIDDLINGS	1.00
SHORTS	.55
BRAN	.45
BEST GROUND FEED	.80
2d " "	.65

Fine corn meal per pound, 2½c.

MAJERES BROS.

Proprietor of the

City Meat Market.

A full line of market supplies, such as

BEEF, PORK,
MUTTON, POULTRY
AND SAUSAGE.

A first class meat market where everything is kept as clean as can be.

Main, near 1st st - - Red Lake Falls

JOHN WATSON,
PHYSICIAN & SURGEON,

Office in residence, Sixth street, Red Lake Falls, Minn. 4-6

VIOLINS, GUITAR, BANJOS' FINEST Assortment, Largest Stock, Lowest Prices, Best Strings for all instrument, assorted to suit, $1,50 per dozen, postpaid. Cash with order. Anything in the music line sent osue to any part of the United States. Write pp Allmendinger Piano And Organ Company, Ann Arbor, Mich's. Orders from teachers and the profession solicited. Live Agents wanted for our [illegible] Organs.

NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD

The New Dining Car Route BETWEEN

WINNIPEG,
GRAFTON,
GRAND FORKS,
RED LAKE FALLS,
ST. PAUL,
MINNEAPOLIS,
DULUTH,
AND ALL POINTS EAST.

The Direct line to
MONTANA, IDAHO,
WASHINGTON TERRITORY,
OREGON, BRITISH COLUMBIA
PUGET SOUND AND ALASKA.

EXPRESS TRAINS DAILY.

To which are attached Pullman Palace Sleep and Elegant Dining Cars. On overland trains, Emigrant Sleepers Free. The only line to the Yellowstone Park.

All trains daily.
Pullman Palace Sleeping Cars between Grand Forks and St Paul. Dining cars on all trains
Coupon tickets on sale to all points Southeast and West
For further information regarding rates, routes maps, etc., address

CHAS. S. FEE, G. P. & T. Agt., St. Paul, Minn.
J. A. DUFFY, Local Agt

Green Bay, Winona & St. Paul

Railroad. Best and most Direct Line Between

LACROSSE,
WINONA,
Neillsville,
Eau Claire,
Grand Rapids,
Stevens Point,
New London,
Appelton,
Neenah,
Menasha,
Oshkosh,
Fon du Lac,
GREEN BAY,

And all Points in
EASTERN WISCONSIN,
Iron Districts of Northern Michigan and Lake Superior Regions.

Close Connections and Quick Time,
See That Your Ticket Reads Via
GREEN BAY, WINONA & ST. PAUL Railroad.

S. W. Champion,
Superintendent, Green Bay, Wis.
J. B. Last,
Ass't Gen. Pass. Agt., Green Bay, Wis.

$100,000

To Loan on Farms

—AT—

10 pr Cent

Interest. No bonus—no delay, at

THE FIRST NAT. BANK

Red Lake Falls - - Minn.

FREE LANDS. Homeseekers will find the last of the public domain of agricultural and grazing value along the Great Northern Ry in North Dakota and Montana.

New Towns 100 or more, along the Great Northern Railway Line. Business chances. Write F. I. Whitney, St. Paul, Minn., for Books, Maps, etc. Write now.

Low Rates Settlers on Free government lands along the Great Northern Railway Line in North Dakota and Montana get low rates and fine markets for products.

Hunting, Fishing Finest resorts in America along the Great Northern Ry. Line in Minnesota, Dakotas and Montana. Best climate for health seekers.

Horses, Cattle Montana produces the finest horses and cattle. Free ranges yet in the Mouse, Milk and Sun River Valleys and Sweet Grass Hills.

Health, Wealth In Montana. Free Lands, New Towns New Railways, New Mines, Low Rates. Largest area of good, vacant land.

Sheep Hogs Sweet Grass Hills, Milk and Sun River Valleys, Montana, reached only by the Great Northern Railway Line, The stock raisers' paradise.

Gold, Coal The Regions tributary to the Great Northern Railway Line in Montana produce all the precious and baser metals, New towns and railways are being built.

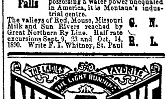
Milk River Go to the Great Reservation of Montana and get a good free homestead. Low rates and free sleepers on Great Northern R'y Line. Go now.

Herds, Mines. These have made Montana the richest state per capita in the Union. Plenty of room for more miners and stock raisers.

Young Man Along the Great Northern Line in Montana are free ranches and pasturage, mines of precious metal iron and coal, and new cities and towns. Now is your opportunity.

Great Falls Surrounded by a fine agricultural and grazing country, close to mines of precious metals, iron and coal possessing a water power unequaled in America, it is Montana's industrial centre.

G. N. R. L. The valleys of Red, Mouse, Missouri Milk and Sun Rivers reached by Great Northern Ry Line. Half rate excursions Sept. 9, 23 and Oct. 14, 1890. Write F. I. Whitney, St. Paul



THE LADIES FAVORITE
THE LIGHT RUNNING
NEW HOME
SEWING MACHINE
THE FINEST WOODWORK
THE BEST ATTACHMENTS
NEW HOME SEWING MACHINE CO. ORANGE MASS.
CHICAGO, ILL. 28 UNION SQUARE, N.Y. ATLANTA, GA.
ST. LOUIS, MO. FOR SALE BY DALLAS, TEX.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

Railroad Time Table.

	LEAVE P. M.	PASSENGER	ARRIVE A. M.
	8.00	St. Paul,	7:05
	8:35	Minneapolis,	6:35
	8:00	Duluth	7:00
	8:30	Ashland, (pm)	6:30
WAY	3:30 a m	Wadena a m	12:02	WAY
FREIGHT	A. M.	………………	P. M.	FREIGHT
1:00 p m	6:25	WINNIPEG JCTION	9:10	2:00 a m.
2:55 "	7:35	Twin Valley	8:30	11:42 pm
4:23 "	8:22	Fertile	7:14	9:54 "
6:30 "	9:20	RED LK FALLS	6:20	7:47 "
2:00 "	9:40	Crookston	6:00	10:00 am
7:42 "	10:10	Buffington	5:29	5:55 pm
8:30 "	10:55	Grand Forks	4:45	5:00 "
DAILY	P. M.	………………	P. M.	DAILY
	12:50	Grafton	2:45
	2:45	Pembina	12:55
	6:30	WINNIPEG, Man.	10:05

All trains daily.

The NEWS has prepared a grand benefit for its readers. We are desirous of adding new names to our subscription list, and settling up with those already there. A grand inducement is offered in the following proposition: Every person who pays up all arrearages on subscription and one year in advance, will be given a ticket in the drawing of the following articles: Four beautiful steel engravings, valued at from $15 to $20 each, the size being 3½x2½ feet, and one new gig, valued at $20. Each ticket has the chance of winning one of these grand prizes, the aggregate value of which is nearly $100. Not content with the above magnificent offer, the NEWS presents FREE, to its farmer riends who take advantage of the above offer and request it, the American Farmer, a farm-magazine. To those who desire one of the very best American magazines at a greatly reduced price, we offer the Cosmopoltan, (if the premium offer is accepted) at $1.50 cents, the regular price being $2.40. You can hardly afford to let this opportunity pass. It is open for a month.

ECHOES OF THE RAPIDS

John Loveck visited relatives in Grand Forks Monday.

Smoke the Agnes Booth cigars at Jos Smith & Co.'s.

Mr. David Zaiser is recovering from his recent severe illness.

WillCrawford and ErveMcCaffry drove to Crookston Saturday.

No 1 Northern 75c to day and good prospects for an advance.

Chas. Mead and W. A. Schreiter went to Crookston yesterday.

In another week the deer will be sovereign of all he surveys.

Miss Polly Zaiser, after a few days at home raturned to Grand Forks Monday.

D. D. Williams is prospering in the law business in Baker City, Oregon.

The residence of Mr. D. Zaiser has undergone some changes that greatly improve its appearance.

Miss Minnie Zaiser is organizing a class in music. Miss Minnie has always been a favorite instructress.

A telegram received from J. M. Boyle Tuesday morning announced the safe arrival of the family in Tacoma.

J. Z.Perron is prepared to do all kinds of repairing in the machinests line at the machine shop on the north side.

Cash paid for barley, oats, flax, hides pelts. All kinds of coal for sale—atHoskins & Co.'s elevator.

41 W. T. SPILLANE.

Arthur Toupin will shortly move his family into the city. Arthur is engaged as wheat buyer at the North Side Roller Mills.

Miss Mary Riley came over from Grand Forks last night and is spending the Thanksgiving vacation, a guest of Miss Maria Ralph.

Miss Lilla Mcaffry and Mamie Malone arrived from Crookston this morning and will visit relatives during the Thanksgiving vacation.

Now that the new road is completed between here and Red Lake the traders of that place will find it to their advantage to trade in Red Lake Falls.

The decline in wheat effected trade last last week—but the prices of to day and the past few days makes a perceptible change—farmers are rushing the wheat in now.

Joseph Smith went to St. Paul Tuesday evening. Joe goes down on business and will no doubt hobnob with some of the high political kickers of the "me and Mike persuasion.

John Dwyer, Mat Coad and Joe Marco sufferd the loss of about ninty tons of fine hay, by the fire a few days ago. Peter Mercier luckily had most of his hay drawn home but lost what was still in the stack. The granary on the D. B. Way place was also burned prarie fires at this season make it rather warm for some of the unfortunate ones.

With the spirit of enterprise which has ever characterized the people of Red Lake Falls, they sent a delegation of representative citizens to the immigration convention yesterday—in a pig's eye, they did.

J. D. Marshall, manager of the North Side Roller Mills is bound to give the city all the advantages possible and has reduced the price of flour for the purpose of holding whatever trade belongs to Red Lake Falls. This will be a direct benefet to everyone doing business here.

About the time when 1890 whistles "down breaks," we are told one of Grand Fork's young men, who punches tickets on the great Northern, will give a pass into the teritory of matrimony, to one of Red Lake Falls fairest daughters. It the train is not wrecked we will give particulars later.

With so many centrifugal forces wnacking eachother right and left and no remedy coming from either of the old parties it is about time for such a party as the alliance to sieze the occasion and produce some centripetal power that will hold the thick clustering stars of our Union in one glorious constellation forever. Buy the railroads, buy the telegraph, loan money at 2 per cent—then will we need a tariff for revenue equal to McKinley's.

Pierie Bottineau Esq. received a letter from the Catholic Industrial school at Clontarf that his son Noah had deserted. Mr. Bottineau at once set out for Clontart in search for his son, whose wherebouts could not be learned. Noah is but ten years old and must be possessed of considerable "sand" to start out alone. It was his intention to reach home, but he seems to have failed in his attempt so far. The whole family are induring agonies of suspense and it is hoped the boy will soon be found.

The sports of town have arranged a novel contest to occur on thanksgiving it is arranged to start out in the morning and hunt during the day. The man having the most points to his credit in the evening is to be feasted at the expence of the others. The points are counted as follows; moose, 150; deer, 100 caraboo, 200; elk, 225; rabbits, 5; polecat, 1; it isnt expected any moose, deer, elk, caraboo, or rabbits will be killed, but if some of the expert hunters get cornered they may bring home one the animals with one of point to his credit.

The Destiny Of Northern Minnesota.

When the Red Lake Resevation, which is now being surveyed, shall be in our possession, when the sound of the lumberman's ax is heard before the morning sun emits a ray, to glimmer and dispel the darkness of the night, when the pick of the miner is sunk in the rich ore beds of a thousand mines, when this territory is girded by the rails of commerce, when the ports of Red Lake are filled with steamers, and all the countless consequences of such a state of things begin to flow in upon us, then will be fulfilled the mission which has wrapped and filled the minds of many of the inhabitants of this section, when they first set foot upon the banks of the Red Lake and Clearwater rivers and gazed with hopeful expectancy out upon the golden waved fields of Northern Minnesota. The possible destiny of the north to be the richest portion of this great state, is made probable by the vast resources such as have made other section great. We have been asked our destiny, our hopes. Look at the waving pine that stands in countless billions of feet and seek an answer, look at the tons of iron and other ores ranging along the ridges, look at the numberless acres of plains and timber lands awaiting the plow and the ax and then you are answered. Was there ever a section of country where timber and minerals combined that did not become prosperous and rich? But add to this combination a farming section on the border unexcelled, scarcely equaled, and you have Northern Minnesota with its wealth, with all its happiness. Add to this our climate noted for health and you have its charms. Put these things together and what a picture do they present to the mental eye,—commerce started in the east—it is traveling westwarb—but northward does it look and here must it eventually take up its permanent abode; then we enjoy the sublime destiny for which this section of country was created. Then will it be ours to give the immigrant a home—the artisan labor, capital investment. This is no pen picture based upon fiction—but in another year we shall be rejoiced in the newly discovered treasure of untold wealth. It would be well for those outside to look this way. The day is not distant when the millions of hidden wealth shall come forth. This is our hope.

Bucklin's Arnica Salve.

The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by W. A. Schreiter.

Terrebonne.

The fair for the benefit of the church held here last week was a great success financially Eight hundred and twenty five dollars were taken in.

Mr. WillieWedekember, held the lucky number which drew the cutter, Sam Gibeau, workbox, Archier Patnode, bells. Miss Ida Champoux, toilet case, Ovila Jolly, harness, Madam Emma Leblanc accordion The toy horse was voted to Master Ovide Moreau, the fiddle to O. Kennel the doll to Lizzie Mallatte, the carabine to H. Sauve.

Red LakeFalls was well repesented on the last night of the fair. We noticed several prominent men near the wheel, among whom were Messrs Joeph Smith, Theophile LeBissonire, Edward Moran, Joseph Paradis, Thomas Crompe, Alfred Broseau, Zotique Cadieux, Mose Bray, and many from Dakota. The Misses Rebecca Brunelle, Elodia Bray, Lousia LeBissphere, were present also. No doubt there were others present from the Falls, but we are so busy buying palettes that we did not notice there. A most magnificent cake was bid off to Edward Moran for $2.90, and one to Henry Cyr, for $6.25.

Everyone is pleased with the outcome and Rev Father Feige wishes to thank most sincerly those who kindly attended.

At midnight Mr. Joseph Laurent, one of the church trustees, presented Rev. Fr. Feige with a boquet of flowers and an eloquent address in commemoration of the second anniversary of his taking charge of the Terrebonne parish.

Father Feige is very happy as there is no debt on the church. When he came the church was in debt $250. He has spent over $800 on improvements on the church, all is paid and there is $600 in the treasury, independent of the support of the priest for the next year.

Mrs. Clark Bratton is very sick with the quinsy.

A man in Poplar River says he voted for Holston, but would like to see Johnnie Boyle gel there. It appears he was not posted sufficiently to know that John was not a canbidate.

Eupepy

This is what you ought to have, in fact you must have it, to fully enjoy life. Thousands are searching for it daily, and mourning because they find it not. Thousands upon thousands of dollars are spent annually by our people in the hope that they may attain this boon. And yet it may be had by all. We guarantee that Electric Bitters, if used according to directions and the use persisted in, will bring you Good Digestion and oust the demon Dyspepsia and install instead Eupepsy. We recommend Electric Bitters for dyspepsia and all diseases of Liver, Stomach, and Kidneys. Sold at 50c and $1.00 per bottle at Schrieter's Drugstore.

Pronounced Hopeless, Yet Saved

From a letter written by Mrs. Ada E. Hurd of Groton, S. D. we quote: "was taken with a bad cold, which settled on my Lungs, cough set in and finaly terminate in Consumption. Four doctors gave me up saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Saviour, determinded it I coulp not stay with my frieds on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, coughs and colds, I gave it a trial, took in all eight bottles; it has cured me and thank God I ym now a well and hearty woman." Trial bottles ree at Schreiters Drug store regnlar sizes 50c and $1,00.

Cold Waves

The United States Signal Service, otherwise known as "Old Props," has certainly been of some service to the people of the northwest, by predicting the coming of a cold wave, when the thermometer takes a tuMble to itself, and the ice man and coal dealer begin to ask the price of diamonds. Generally the forecasts for cold waves are quiet reliable, though we cannot say as much for the predicrions of clear weather. General Greeley and his subordinate are the only men who get paid for guessing whether it rains before morning, or whether will be a cold night but some other millions do as accurate guessing Just for fun. Now, these Signal Service "probabilities" may be all guess work, but there is no uncertainty about "The Burlington." That it has the smoothest track, the finest equipment, reaches all principal cities in nine states, makes connections in union Depots and has no "cold wave" of haughtiness about its management are all certainties. "Probabilities" are that if you apply to any railroad ticket agent you will be advised to take "The Burlington". For any information about rates and routs address W. J. C. Kenyon, Gen. Pass. Agent, C. B.& N. R.R. St. Paul Minn.

Dance to night at opera hall, Everybody is going—you better go too. The manager intends to make this a first class affair. The music will be fine; floor waxed and the floor manager as slick as the floor.

Thanksgiving, 1890.

Improved Passenger Service

Under the new time schedule of "the North-Western Line," C. St. P.,M. & O.Ry., all passenger trains of this line make the trip between St. Paul and Chicago in less than 14 hours.

The Pullman and Wagner Vestibuled Limited, leaving St. Paul at 7:30 p. m. makes the trip to Chicago in 13½ hours and from Chicago to St.Paul in 13 hours and 25 minutes.

The Daylight Express leaving St Paul at 7:45 a. m. makes the trip to Chicago in 13 hours and 50 minutes and from Chicago to St. Paul in 13 hours and 45 minutes.

This is the only line running all its trains in less than 14 hour between St. Paul and Chicago, and while this time is quick trains don't have to run at as high speed to make their time as on other lines, because this is shorter than any other line.

In addition to these facts this is the only line by which connections are assure in Chicago with all fast line trains from Chicag to the East and South in the morning and at night.

Note.—Fares by this line are always as low as by any other.

For Map Folder of the line address T. W. TUESDALE, Gen'l Passenger Agent St. Paul, Minn.

The Queen Pays All Expenses

The Queen's last free Trip to Europe having excited such universal interests he publishers of that popular magazine offer another and $200 for expenses to the person sending them the largest list of English words constructed from letters containing the three words British North America. Additional prizes consist ing of Silver Tea Sets, China Dinner Sets, Golb Watches, French Music Boxes' Porter Curtians, Silk Dresses Mantel Flakes and many other useful and valuable articles will also be awarded in order of merit. A special prize of a Seal Skin jacket to the lady, and a handsome Shetland Pony to boy or girl (delivered free in Canada or United States) sending the largest lists Everyone sending a list of twenty words will recieve a presen send six U. S. stamps for complete rules, illustrated catalogue of prizes and sample numbers of the Queen. Address The Canadian, Queen Toronto, Canada.

A Good Offer.

Do you read The Cosmopolitan, that bright, sparkling young magazine? The cheapest illustrated monthly in the world. 25 cents a number. $2.40 per year. Enlarged, October, 1889, to 128 pages. The Cosmopolitan is literally what the New York Times calls it, "At its price, the brightest, most varied and best edited of the magazines." An unusual opportunity for new subscribers for one year only:

The Cosmopolitan, per year....	$2 40
The NEWS, per year........	1 50
The price of both........	3 90
We, will furnish both for only....	3 00

This offer is only to new subscribers to the Cosmopolitan, and only for one year. The Boston Journal says "It has more articles in each number that are readable, and fewer uninteresting pages, than any of its contemporaries." The Cosmopolitan for the first time in magazine literature, a splendidly illustrated Periodical at a price hitherto deemed impossible. Try it for a year. It will be a liberal educator to every member of the household. It will make the nights pass pleasantly. Send $3.00 to this offite and secure both the Cosmopolitan and the NEWS.

A Present to our Subscribers.

It is with pleasure that we announce to our many patrons that we have made arrangements with that wide-awake, illustrated farm magazine, the American Farmer, published at Fort Wayne, Ind., and read by nearly 200,000 farmers by which that great publication will be mailed direct, FREE, to the address of any of our subscribers who will come in and pay up all arrearages on subscription and one year in advance from date, and to any new subscriber who will pay one year in advance. This is a grand opportunity to obtain a first-class farm journal free. The American Farmer is a large 16-page journal of national circulation, which ranks among the leading agricultural papers. It treats the question of economy in agriculture and the rights and privileges of that vast body of citizens—American Farmers—whose industry is the basis of all material and national prosperiy. Its highest purpose is the elevation and ennobling of Agriculture through the higher and broader education of men and women engaged in its pursuits. The regular subscription price of the American Farmer is $1.00 per year. IT COSTS YOU NOTHING. From any one number ideas can be obtained that will be worth thrice the subscripion price to you or members of your household, YET YOU GET IT FREE. Call and see sample copy.

ST. PAUL GLOBE.

A Distinctively Northwestern Newspaper.

An Advocate of Northwestern Interests.

Opposed to War Taxation in Time of Peace.

Opposed to the Taxation of the Farmer and Laborer for the Benefit of Monopolies and Trusts.

ALWAYS BRIGHT, CLEAN AND RELIABLE.

The WEEKLY GLOBE is a Favorite with the Farmer and the Family. The price is $1.00 a year. Send 50 cents for a six months' trial, and get, besides all the News and Good Things, the Proceedings of the Legislature of Your State and of Congress.

TERMS

Of the Several Editions of the Globe

WEEKLY Eight Pages, One Year, - -	$1.00
DAILY, " " " " - - -	8.00
SUNDAY, Twenty Pages, " " - - -	2.00
DAILY Only, Per Month - - - - -	.70
DAILY and SUNDAY, Per Month, - - -	.85

Address

THE GLOBE,
St. Paul, Minn.

ROYAL BACK NUMBERS.

THE KINGS UNCROWNED, UNKNOWN AND UNHONORED.

Retired Gentlemen and Genteel Deadbeats All Claiming Thrones—A King Who Is a Waiter—Genuine Blue Blood in Hard Luck—An American King.

A full list of royal and imperial pretenders would include all sorts of people in all sorts of society, from the retired and wealthy nobleman, such as the Comte de Paris, to Orelie, the self styled king of Araucania, who is a sort of genteel deadbeat, and Francesco, the titular king of Armenia, whose royal predecessor was a waiter in Milan, who himself pursues the same honest, if not kingly, occupation in a restaurant at Versailles. As a rule nearly every king nowadays outside of the darkest part of the Dark Continent has a snug sum to his credit in English or American securities, so that in the event of being put out of a job he may have the wherewithal to keep the wolf of poverty from the door.

The Comte de Paris, Bourbon pretender to the throne of France, and now an exile, is worth about two millions of dollars. The bulk of his fortune is in British consols, and he also draws interest on United States bonds.

Prince Jerome Napoleon, the leading representative of the imperial house of Bonaparte, lives in luxurious exile at Prangins, Switzerland. He has a splendid residence there, and owns among his treasures various relics of the Bonaparte family, including an Egyptian saber which the great Napoleon carried in the first of his Italian campaigns. Prince Napoleon is wealthy and ambitious. The Bonapartes as a rule are not in good financial circumstances, and the purse of Prince Jerome is taxed to keep his friends and relatives from need.

REAL PRETENDERS.

The ex-queen of Spain, Isabella, takes life comfortably, even luxuriously, residing in fashionable style in Paris, with occasional trips to Nice and Boulogne.

Italy has a host of pretenders deprived of their toy crowns by the union of the Italian peninsula. Of these the house of Tuscany is the most fortunate, as Austria takes care of them, and the Archduke Francis Salvator has recently married the flower of the imperial family, the Archduchess Valeria. The heir of Bomba's crown of Naples is a quiet, harmless young man, strictly devoted to religion, and without any apparent design upon his ancestral dominions. Indeed the deposed Italian princes generally acquiesce in their fate, as hopeless of any change. All, without exception, are fairly well provided for.

Dom Pedro, the deposed emperor of the Brazils, is the most unhappy of ex-rulers. The death of his wife was a terrible blow to him, and he hungers to be permitted to go back to Brazil to die. As he has never formally renounced his claim to the crown he can fairly be called a pretender. Dom Pedro is far from wealthy. While in circumstances that should dictate close economy, he is so tender hearted that he hesitates to dismiss the retinue that is eating up his substance, and consequently he grows poorer every day. It would not be surprising should the old gentleman be compelled to accept the generosity of republican Brazil.

AN AMERICAN KING.

Few have heard of that other and rather amusing American pretender, resident in Paris, Orelie I, king of the Araucanians. Orelie is a Frenchman, a cheap lawyer, with a taste for adventure. His travels brought him to Chili, in South America. There he made his way by accident or design to a remote section of the republic, where the Araucanian Indians have for ages maintained their independence. He lived among these Indians and won their good will to such a degree that the chieftains elected him king of Araucania, and he was formally crowned with that title. As king Orelie led the Araucanians in forays, more or less successful, against their Chilian neighbors.

When he got tired of the masquerade, which involved some peril, as the Chilians followed the new king up sharply, he started for the coast, reaching it by the way of Peru, and returned to Paris. Here he still calls himself king of Araucania, and he has instituted two or three orders of nobility, which he confers for a consideration. The validity of these orders and his right to bestow them came up not long ago before a Paris tribunal, the point at issue really being whether Orelie was a king or a swindler.

The court decided that, inasmuch as he had been accepted as king by a community which exercised independent rights and which would probably be willing to recognize him again if he could get there, he was justified in using the royal prerogative of conferring orders of nobility. Since this decision the king's business has flourished more than ever, and his decorations go off like buckwheat cakes and maple sirup.

A KING AS WAITER.

The king of Araucania is a good deal more fortunate than poor Francesco of Armenia, to whom I have before alluded. His full name and title is Francesco, king of Armenia, prince of Jerusalem, and hereditary guardian of the Holy Sepulcher. At present his majesty is head waiter in one of the small restaurants that dot the vicinity of Versailles. It is many years since Francesco's ancestors were driven by the Turks from the throne of Armenia; but there can be no doubt of the antiquity and purple blood of the family. Descended from a bold Crusader, they held their kingly rank for ages, until the renewed aggressiveness of the Mohammedans and the decline of Latin power in the east made them fugitives.

Russia for a long time afforded them an asylum, and gave the titular prince a pension. But this was dropped about forty years ago, and since then the royal house of Armenia has had to take its chances with the multitude. The late king was a waiter at Milan; the present king is a waiter at Versailles. Singularly enough the restaurant is one favored by the radicals, and the waiter of the bluest of blood is called on to serve wine and refreshments to the ardent opponents of thrones and titles. Few visitors, however, are aware that the sous they hand to the waiter are thankfully accepted by a king, for Francesco does not parade either his pedigree or his misfortunes.

You may see here in Paris a prince of Georgia driving a cab, and one of the best police agents is a scion of the royal house of Poland. To go through the roll of royal pretenders would occupy much time and space. It is probably longer than that of monarchs who have crowns on their heads. —Paris Cor. Chicago Herald.

Genuine Turkish Rugs.

Smith—Well, Pat, what are you doing for a living now?

Pat—Begorrah, I have an illigant job on the Bowery makin' genuwine Turkish rugs.—Texas Siftings.

An Argument That Convinced Him.

"Mary," he said feebly, taking another hold on a sleeping 5-year-old boy as they came off the boat, "I won't carry Johnnie a foot further." He was staggering under his load and looked ready to drop. She was twice as big as he.

"John, you are selfish. Johnnie is tired to death."

"So am I. He can wake up and walk."

"He cannot. He has been running in the sand all day and is worn out."

"Yes, and I've been running after him."

"If you wake him up he will cry."

"Let him cry."

"Let that poor child cry? Haven't you any feeling for your own son?"

"I should think I have. He weighs enough to inspire me with feeling. I positively won't carry him."

"You will."

"If you don't take him I will drop him, and he can cry his lungs out."

"If you drop him I will take him in my arms, sit down on that step and not budge an inch."

"But I won't carry him. I can't."

"John Henry Smith, don't you tell me that you can't carry that dear boy. If you put him down and wake him up you will be turned out of the house to-night. You can spend the night in the streets and see how you like it. Don't you dare to put Johnnie down."

John Henry Smith was open to argument, for he did not put the dear boy down.—New York Tribune.

A Familiar Face.

When Congressman Thomas W. Updegraff was making a speech at Canton, O., in 1878 he was frequently interrupted by a man in the audience who shouted, "What about resumption?"

Finally Mr. Updegraff said: "There are a great many people in the country who are raising a terrific to-do about resumption. They talk about it as if it had teeth and claws and a hooked tail. My friend over there wants me to talk about resumption. I will tell him a story. A very worthy old lady, who had spent all her life on a farm in the Western Reserve, visited the state fair for the first time last year. Her son took her around and she admired the sights.

"Presently they came to a tent on which was placarded an invitation to the public to enter and behold a most wonderful bird—'the Melanerpes Erythrocephalus'—for the small price of ten cents. The old lady persuaded her son to take her in. She found an old friend in the small bird within a big cage. She repressed her emotion until they were outside the canvas again, and then she said with great emphasis, 'Why, John, that ain't nothin' but a red-headed woodpecker.'" —Pittsburg Dispatch.

A Great Preacher's Cradle.

The old cradle. We all rocked at that.

For fifteen years the cradle was going much of the time. When the elder child was taken out the smaller child was put in. The crackle of the rockers is yet pleasant in my ears.

There I took my first lessons in music as mother sang to me. I have heard what people would call far better singing since then, but none that so thoroughly touched me. She never got $500 per night for singing two or three songs at the Academy, with two or three encores grudgingly thrown in, but without pay she sometimes sang all night and came out whenever encored, though she had only two little ears for an audience. It was in a low, subdued tone, that sings to me yet across more than forty years.

The edge of the rocker was worn quite deep. That was where her foot was placed when she sat with her knitting or sewing on a summer afternoon, while the bees hummed at the door and the shout of the boy at the oxen was heard afield.—Dr. Talmage in New York Journal.

An Actor's Coincidence.

The following instance may be regarded by the superstitious as sufficient warning against all jests on such a grim subject as grim death. It is related by Bolton, the English actor and author. Sim Reeves, the famous tenor, was once playing Squire in the "Mother Goose" pantomime, and at the very moment he was walking off the stage singing,

My wife is dead, there let her lie,
She's at rest and so am I,

a man tapped him hurriedly on the shoulder and whispered, "Sorry to tell you, Mr. Reeves, that Mrs. Reeves is dead. Mrs. Balyntyne directs me to tell you to come home immediately." Reeves was completely prostrated by the suddenness of the announcement, and was first to notice the odd coincidence that connected the little wayward song with his wife's death.—St. Louis Republic.

A Very Old Horse.

"Old Kate," a horse burned to death in Cincinnati, was, her owner alleges, 45 years old. She was born in Wales of thoroughbred stock. She was shipped to Canada in 1846, being only a yearling. The voyage had a bad effect upon her, and the importer sold the stunted colt to a farmer, who kept her until she was 3 years old, when she began to grow.

The farmer sold her to Hugh Morgan, a lumber dealer of this city, and he kept her up to his death, in 1861. She was of a jet black at that time, and served as a carriage horse. At Mr. Morgan's death the mare went to Mr. Lanning, who ran a planing mill on Canal street. He in turn sold her to a fish and oyster dealer on Linn street, and it was of this man her last owner bought her seven years ago. She was then 38 years old, but lively as a kitten.—Cincinnati Times-Star.

The Queen of England's Table Linen.

Her majesty's table linen is still made by hand; indeed all the finest linen is so. The queen's tablecloth has for its center the Star of the Garter, bearing in its midst the royal arms, and having woven on the larger rays of the star the names of the great dependencies of the crown, and on the lesser rays the names of the smaller dependencies, while the border is formed of the rose, shamrock and thistle entwined, and the crown imperial appears in the corners.—Dry Goods Chronicle.

Only in Figures.

Every time a cow moves her tail to switch a fly she exerts a force of three pounds. In the course of the summer a single cow wastes 3,000,000 pounds of energy. The cows of America throw away power enough to move every piece of machinery in the world. This is exclusive of kicking milkmaids off the stools.—Detroit Free Press.

Wouldn't Do.

Committee Man (to public school teacher)—We was thinkin' of puttin' up a nice motto over your desk to encourage the children. How would "Knowledge Is Wealth" do?

School Teacher—That wouldn't do. The children know how small my salary is.—New York Weekly.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

Red Lake Falls News.

BOYLE & MEEHAN, Editors & Proprietors.

TERMS, $1.50 A YEAR.

At Dyersbury, Miss., an ear of corn was raised which is thirty-six inches long, and weighs fourteen pounds.

Franklyn, Pa., has a child who sleeps every other three days. The case baffles the physicians. The child is in perfect health.

As soon as the town of Santa Barbara, Cal., gets pipes laid to the gas well it will cost only $10 a year for fuel to each householder.

A fat men's club containing 119 members, and representing an aggregate weight of 24,000 pounds, flourishes in Mt. Pleasant, Mich.

A Newark, N. J., baby ten weeks old weighs only three-quarters of a pound. Its father is a powerful man and its mother a large woman.

Pat Calhoun, grandson of the great John C. Calhoun, would like to be elected United States senator from Georgia to suceed Brown. He is a Farmers' alliance man.

An Atchison man has had the pleasure of reading his own obituary notice. He wrote it himself, and has laid it aside, to be published after his death.

A speck of a race war has broken out in the Boston conservatory of music. Some of the fair Bostonese have declared their purpose to leave because a couple of colored pupils are in attendance.

In Tepe-Kermeno, an ancient town in Crimea, a platina coin has been found bearing the image of Antiochus of Syria, who died B. C. 164. The coin is the only one of its kind known to exist, and for this reason its value is inestimable.

A beautiful story is told of Senator Stanford—that he was giving his private secretary $12 a week, and one morning he said to him, "Hereafter my boy, you will draw $10,000 a year." But the story has one drawback—it is not true.

A Wisconsin man won $10 in a novel manner. He met a lady who in a jest offered to bet him $10 that he dared not marry her. He took the bet, picked a quarrel with a young lady to whom he was engaged, and married the fair better.

In Keytesville, Mo., the law is no respecter of persons. The mayor of that town was recently arrested by the city marshal, who saw him throwing paper in the street. The mayor cheerfully submitted to arrest, and some time later, while sitting as a magistrate, formally listened to the charge, and fined himself one dollar.

Last year 10,886 girls attended the high schools of Iowa to only 4,855 boys. The American boy is falling behind the American girl in mental culture. He will be pleading for his "rights" from the superior sex some of these days.

"The house of the seven gables," which furnished the name and some of the scenes for Nathaniel Hawthorne's story is still standing on Turner street, at Salem, where Hawthorne lived for a time. The house was built in 1662, and different owners made additions to it till it assumed the peculiar appearance whicc attracted the story-writer's fancy.

A decision of some interest, construing the law prohibiting the mailing of envelopes having on the outside words calculated to reflect injuriously on the character of anyone, was rendered by Judge Wheeler, of the United States district court of Vermont, recently. The court held that the act was violated by sending through the mails letters contained in envelopes bearing the words, "Excelsior Collecting Agency," printed in large letters across the upper half of the envelope. The printed words were separate from the direction to return if not called for, in the lower left-hand corner, and the court held that they were obviously placed so as to attract attention and reflect delinquency in making payment upon the person to whom the envelopes were sent.

NEWS SIFTINGS.

Criminal, Personal, Foreign and Other Interesting News Items.

WASHINGTON.

Secretary Blaine thinks that Canada is getting the better of the United States in the matter of reciprocity with South America and in the Behring sea controversy.

Secretary of War Proctor met Gen. Miles at St. Louis, where they talked over, in a general way, matters in reference to the department, but no arrangements were made to send troops to the Indian reservations in the northwest. The excitement among the Indians regarding the coming of the Messiah was subsiding, and he apprehended no necessity for the presence of the military among them.

The general land office at Washington issued a circular of instruction to registers and receivers of land offices on the bill for relief of settlers on Northern Pacific indemnity lands, which Mr. Comstock introduced and worked for at the last session. About 220 settlers in Northern Minnesota are interested, inasmuch as the bill allows them to select other government lands than those where their homes now are. The commissioner says that the new selections must be made within twelve months. In case of the death of any person who has improved and made final proof for land within the second indemnity belt, the transfer may be made by the legal representative of the deceased, but the right given is personal and cannot be transferred or the selection made by an attorney. No final proof shall be approved by the land department except where it is shown that the law has been complied with as to residence.

PERSONAL.

S. W. Allerton, the Chicago packer, admits that he is about to engage in the shipment of cattle in palace stock cars on an extensive scale. He has decided to build 1,000 cars as a starter.

P. M. Arthur, chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, registered at the Auditorium hotel, Chicago, on his way from Cleveland to St. Paul. "There is nothing of public interest connected with my trip," he said. "I am merely going up north to see the boys. Coalition with the federation of railroad employes? No. There is no more probability of our joining any other order now than ever. There is no need of it. Throughout the country there is not perceptible the smallest liklihood of trouble."

ACCIDENTAL.

The sugar refinery situated on Ponte Palms plantation, near Houma, La., has burned. Two men, Herbert and Fred Crooks, were seriously burned. Loss, $90,000; insurance, $50,000.

A south-bound passenger train on the International & Great Northern was run into by an engine hauling the pay car at Kyle, Tex. The rear coach was broken into kindling wood. Thirty persons were injured, but no one killed.

A dynamo pipe exploded on the steamer City of New York recently, and filled the steerage with fumes of ammonia. Many of the passengers and firemen became unconscious, and some of them are still suffering from the effects of the fumes.

The steamer Nevada of Vermillion, Ohio, sprung a leak and was abandoned on Lake Michigan, the crew being taken off by the steamer Manhattan and landed at Manitowoc. The Nevada sunk seven miles northwest of Kewaunee. The Nevada was valued at $50,000, and is insured for about $45,000.

A tailor shop and a grocery store were burned at the University of Virginia at Charlottesville. Edward O'Hara, a tailor, and an agent of Wanamaker, of Philadelphia, was burned to death. His body was recovered, but the arms, legs to the knees and head are missing. The fire was of accidental origin.

Miss Kate Finnigan, a servant in the employ of E. M. Wells, while blacking a stove at Rochester, N. Y., with a liquid blacking, held the blacking too near the fire, when it became heated and exploded, the burning fluid flying on her clothing, setting it on fire. She ran into the yard with her clothing all burning and was so severely burned that she died next morning.

SINS AND SINNERS.

In a fight in a church at Bestritz, Transylvania, between rival factions six persons were killed and sixteen injured.

At Tipton, Ind., the station agent was knocked senseless by a masked man, who stole a package containing $1,000 belonging to the United States Express company.

H. E. Thorpe, a Chicago bookbinder, was shot and fatally wounded by Edward Weinder, a fellow workman, with whom he had frequently quarreled. Weinder escaped.

Benjamin W. Taylor of Boston shot and killed Wilbur F. Hutchins, a liveryman, for revenge, Hutchins having caused Taylor's arrest on the charge of theft.

A solicitor named Mayhew, doing business at Westminster, England, has absconded, leaving liabilities of $655,000. His assets amount to only $900.

Teller Julius E. Smith, of the Merchants National Bank of Amsterdam, N. Y., is said to be a defaulter in the sum of $6,800. A warrant for his arrest has been issued.

Near Longstown, Miss., a negro named Sandy Wallace assaulted Mrs. Frank Houston. Whites and negroes took him from his bed, hanged him to a tree and filled his body with bullets.

At Lima, Ohio, Mary Shull has recovered $1,000 in a breach of promise suit against Adelbert Lehman. Mary shouted for Cleveland, and Lehman, being a staunch Republican, refused to marry her.

Judge David McLean, ex-president of the Savannah, (Mo.) National bank, was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary, for defrauding his depositors out of $100,000, which he diverted to his personal use.

Information was received at Louisville that Deputy Sheriff J. P. Giles of Helen county had been killed at Rose Hill, W. Va., on the day of November election. Mr. Geddes was trying to arrest two men and killed them both.

The Turkish authorities in Macedondia have arrested fourteen persons on suspicion of having been connected with the murder of the Greek pope at St. Joan. Four of the persons arrested died under the judicial examination, and the torture which attended it.

In the criminal court at Sedalia, Mo., the grand jury indicted George W. Townslee, jeweler, and Zimmerman & Son, of the Globe laundry, for advertising a lottery. Mr. Townslee organized a watch club recently, and Zimmerman & Son have for some time past given a clock every Saturday night to one of their patrons, the same being awarded by drawing after the style of a lottery.

Constable High Ross and his nephew, Jim Ross, were shot at Huntington, Tenn., by a farmer named Waddis, against whom they held an account for lawyer's fees incurred by Waddis in defending him from an assault with intent to commit murder some time since. The murdered men when shot were removing some of Waddis' property on which they had levied.

It was discovered that Robert Hanlon, who has charge of the schools at Arkalon, ten miles west of Wichita, Ks., and Mrs. John Weitzel, the wife of an agent for a money loaning company, had eloped. The husband of the missing woman returned after a week's absence. He discovered that his residence had been broken into during the night, his valuables stolen, and that his office had also been visited by burglars. The safe was blown open and robbed of about $1'000 in cash notes for $50,000.

John Fisher, a fireman at the new water works conduit, at St. Louis, conceived a hatred against Mrs. John Callahan, who boards the workmen. While Mrs. Callahan's little boy, Johnny, was playing about the camp, Fisher took a shovelful of coals from the engine and threw them upon the little boy's back, literally burying him in fire. The flesh is all burned from the boy's back, and he will surely die. A warrant was issued against Fisher.

A gentleman who arrived from Acton, California, states that three Indians supposed to belong to the Mojave reservation camped near a cabin on the outskirts of Acton. The only occupant of the cabin was a boy. They asked him for a drink of water, and as he was on his way to the spring they shot at him but missed, and the lad escaped into the mountains. They next called at the cabin of Daniel W. Farmer, a native of New York. Mrs. Farmer was alone. She was killed outright. The last victim, as far as known at present, was an old man named Louis F. Clark, a farmer and a native of Iowa. He was shot and left for dead, but the latest reports state that he is still alive.

FOREIGN GRIST.

Fearing that Italy is about to make attempts upon Tripoli, 3,000 Turkish troops have been sent to reinforce the garrison of that province and the forts are being strengthened.

The credit bank of Dunaberg, Prussia, has been robbed of money and valuables to the amount of 130,000 roubles. The thieves escaped and it is believed they have gone to London.

The French steamer La Normandie is at quarantine, New York, with sickness on board. It is said that there are cases of small pox among the immigrants who came on the steamer.

Private cables received in New York before the opening of the stock exchange, announcing the troubles of Baring Bros. and stating that the Bank of England, Rothschilds and other bankers had taken up accounts of Baring Bros. amounting to £15,000,000 created a profound sensation. The original cause of the firm's trouble was Russia's withdrawal of several millions deposits on learning of the firm's dealings in Argentine and Uruguay bonds. It is expected incoming investors will gradually relieve the strain of the market.

OTHERWISE.

The Detroit Dry Dock company has just let the contract for the construction of a new dry dock which will be the finest and largest on the great lakes.

W. S. Wharton of Chicago, who fled from that city recently, leaving behind debts estimated at $50,000 to $100,000, has been arrested in Philadelphia.

The national assemby of the Farmers' Mutual Benefit association is in session at Springfield, Ill., with about 300 delegates present.

Indian scouts in the Indian Territory are gathering in sporting parties. Quite a number from different states are held prisoners by the Indians, but their lives are not in danger.

The 2,000 girls employed in the trimming departments of the eighteen hat factories connected with the fur hat manufacturers's association at Danbury, Conn., have been locked out. Some of the factories have shut down entirely.

The postoffice department has made arrangements for a new fast mail train that for speed will beat all the efforts hertofore made in that line. It will cover the distance between New York and Chicago in just twenty-four hours.

The Baptist missions steamboat Peace, which was stationed on the upper Congo river, has been confiscated by the officers of the Congo State on the ground that it is required for state purposes on the Kassiac river.

Two diamond bracelets, valued at $12,000, which were supposed to have been stolen from Mrs. Commodore Bateman in New York by a young French maid, were found in the very room in the Bateman house from which they were thought to have been stolen. The maid will probably be released.

Messenger Austin, of the Prairie State National bank, Chicago, lost a satchel containing $87,000. The money was found by a little boy who runs errands for a tailor. The treasure was restored to its owners and the tailor and boy handsomely rewarded. It is believed, however, that the satchel was stolen and not accidentally lost.

So far no more deaths have resulted from the collision on the Pennsylvania road at New Florence, Pa. All but three or four of the injured are resting easy and the physicians are hopeful of their recovery. The remains of Henry D. Minot was shipped to Boston. The disaster appears to have been the result of unfortunate circumstances rather than from errors of management or subordinates.

The trustees of the proposed Childs-Drexel home for aged and infirm printers were in session at Chicago. The home is to be located at Colorado Springs. In 1886 George W. Childs and A. J. Dexel of Philadelphia gave $10,000 for the building of the institution, and since that time the fund has grown until now the trustees have about $40,000 at their disposal. The institution is to be under the charge of the international Typographical union.

Surgeon General Hamilton, of the marine hospital, discussing Dr. Koch's remedy for consumption, said that he was convinced that the statements made by Prof. Koch were based upon close study and careful observations. He remembers the experiments of Koch respecting the cholera germ—a discovery which is now accepted throughout the civilized world. The marine hospital bureau, he says will endeavor to ascertain the exact methods of preparing the cure and of using it.

A very sad postponement of a wedding occurred in Ottumwa, Iowa, on account of the bride becoming demented a few hours previous to the appointed time of marriage. Victor Englehorn, of Foster, and Miss Anna Johnston applied for a marriage license. It was granted and they started for Foster, where the wedding was to have occurred. At the depot the prospective bride became hopelessly insane, raving in an incoherent manner about religious subjects. The heartbroken lover with difficulty got her aboard the train for Lucas county, where she was adjudged insane and sent to Mt. Pleasant for treatment. Returning he had the license cancelled, weeping bitter tears as he told his story.

The annual election of the National Non-Partisan W. T. U. at Pittsburg was a surprise, as a spirited contest for president was expected. The opposition to Mrs. Phinney of Cleveland for re-election as president did not materialize, and she was chosen again with but one dissenting vote, which was cast for Mrs. Foster. The other officers elected were: Vice president, Miss Harriet G. Walker of Minnesota; general secretary, Miss F. Jenny Duty of Cleveland; recording secretary, Mrs. Florence Miller of Iowa; financial secretary and treasurer, Mrs. C. C. Alford of New York; educational secretary, Mrs. Joseph E. Weeks of Pennsylvania; evangelistic secretary, Mrs. Florence Porter of Maine.

SURE TO BE A FIGHT.

Rumors That an Attempt Will Be Made to Disarm the Indians.

No Doubt But That the Move Would Precipitate a Battle.

Pine Ridge Agency, S. D., Special Telegram, Nov. 26.—Pine Ridge agency, ordinarily dreary enough, is to-day a scene of extraordinary activity. The Indians draw part of their rations to-day, but instead of coming in as usual, the bucks are dancing the weird ghost dance back among the buttes a dozen miles from the agency and have sent the old men and the squaws in for rations.

On the plateau, where the agency is located, brown walled by barren buttes, Companies K, F, I, N, D, of the Ninth cavalry, are camped, also four companies of the Second infantry. Two more companies of the Second will arrive this afternoon, and it is said that reinforcements will soon arrive in the form of cavalry from Fort Riely, Kan.

I rode part of the way from Rushville this morning in company with Col. Guy V. Henry, of the Ninth cavalry, and later I passed his scout, the famous Frank Grovard, who acted in a similar capacity for Gen. Crook in 1876. Both Col. Henry and his scout are confident that there will be a conflict between the troops and the Indians within a few days.

The officers at Pine Ridge are very much annoyed by some sensational press reports that have been published, and talk some of quarantining the reservation against newspaper correspondents. They consider the situation to be critical enough in reality without resorting to exaggerations.

Indian Agent Royer to-day increased his force of Indian police from 38 to 100. The new men were taken into a large room adjoining the agent's office this afternoon, shorn of their long hair and fitted out with uniforms, in which they are strutting around this afternoon, much to the disgust of the feminine portion of the ghost dancers' contingent, who are in after rations while the hostile men are busy pawing up trouble.

It is understood that the force of fighting men at this agency has been reinforced by 200 Rosebud braves. Wednesday is the regular day for issuing beef, but it is not yet decided by the agent and commanding officer, Gen. Brooke, whether or not to issue. There are rumors that some day this week an attempt will be made to disarm the Indians, then there will be trouble.

SCARED THE INDIANS.

A Stampede of Redskins on the Approach of Soldiers.

Pine Ridge, S. D., Nov. 26.—Last night something of a scare was occasioned when the water call was sounded. The cavalry had been going to a creek about half a mile from the post to water the horses. Along this creek during the last twenty-four hours a village of ghost dancers' tepees has sprung up.

Last evening the black troopers mounted their horses with carbines loaded and cartridge belts in place. Then in command of a lieutenant instead of the usual orderly sergeant they slowly cantered to the creek. After the horses had drank their fill they crossed into the Indian village. The stampede that followed was almost instantaneous. Squaws and papooses ran screaming into the teepes, while the bucks hastily mounted their ponies and fled to the hills. But the troopers had only crossed in order to turn and go back to camp. Nearly all the Indians who draw rations here are now encamped near the post. It may be that this will settle the matter without trouble, and it may bring on a fight. Special Agent Cooper thinks that any pretext may be seized upon by the Indians for forcing the issue. The dancing is dying out, but he is not sure whether it is treachery or obedience that is causing the relaxation.

A number of Rosebud Indians are here without passes, and their presence bodes no good. All are unanimous in their assertions of good will, but they are carefully measuring the strength of the troops the while. Little Wound, one of the leaders of the ghost dance, has refused to come into the agency, saying that if the agent wanted to see him he must call at the Little Wound's tepee. A squaw hanged herself Saturday night to add to the excitement. At present it is a toss up between peace and war.

KILLED BY INDIANS.

A Half-Breed Murdered for Not Engaging in a Ghost Dance.

Blunt, S. D., Special Telegram, Nov. 26.—Gov. Mellette has been appealed to by the city council for guns and ammunition. Oneida, the county seat of Sully county, is in a terrible state of alarm, and the governor has been asked to send guns and ammunition at once.

Shields, a noted chief heretofore living on the lately ceded Winnebago reservation, but who has been participating in the ghost dance at Rosebud, is in town to-day. His actions are suspicious, and the city marshal will hold him until it is settled that he is not here as a spy. He claims the Indians are not contemplating any trouble. The very fact that better Indians of known integrity differ with him, gives the lie to his statement. A later report states that Oneida has been supplied with 100 guns and 700 rounds of ammunition from Fort Sully. A stage driver who came from Fairbank, opposite Fort Bennett, tonight says a half-breed was killed by Indians near that place because he refused to participate in the ghost dance. The town of Fairbank is depopulated and the settlers have fled. Gov. Mellette says he can furnish us no guns, and an appeal has been sent to Fort Sully.

A Dwelling Burned.

Willmar, Special, Nov. 26.—The dwelling house of Fred Furguson caught fire early this morning and was entirely consumed. Loss, $1,800, partially insured.

A Light Sentence.

Jacksonville, Ill., Nov. 26.—The trial of Posten, the would-be slayer of Frankie Keener, his former employer, ended to-day. When the trial was called it was evident that Miss Keener did not care to appear against the man who had all but killed her, and the darky was therefore let off with a year in the penitentiary.

Forger Smith Convicted.

New York, Nov. 26.—The jury in the case of Forger Smith rendered a verdict of guilty of forgery in the first degree after three-quarter of an hour's deliberation this afternoon. He will be sentenced Wednesday.

ANOTHER ASSIGNEE.

Banker Prettyman's Appointee Deposed by a Judge.

Chicago, Nov. 26.—Judge Prendergast today discharged Cashier Charles Johnson as assignee of Prettyman's bank and the North Division Lumber company. The judge appointed in Johnson's stead the Jennings Trust company, and entered an order directing the new assignee to take charge at once.

This move was the result of a vigorous protest against Johnson by the creditors, who made allegations that two men supposed to be Prettyman and Johnson had secretly visited the bank the night after the failure, also that Johnson, who is closely associated with Prettyman's affairs, was not a disinterested person. The testimony was also adduced to support the theory that a certain creditor had been favored with funds at the bank after the assignment.

Mr. Prettyman, whose total liabilities in the bank, his lumber company and other ventures have been estimated all the way from $300,000 to $1,000,000, was present during the discussion, with an imperturbed countenance, and at the end said he would prefer to say nothing in court until he had seen his attorney. The court thereupon adjourned the examination until to-morrow. Prettyman asserts that the assets will fully cover the liabilities. The assignment, he said, was the result of a disagreement between himself and his partner, H. H. Bishop.

MURDER IN A COURT ROOM.

Two Men Killed and Another Injured by a Prisoner.

Panama, Nov. 26.—The town of Rivers, in Nicaragua, was recently the scene of a terrible tragedy, almost unparalleled in criminal history.

Tomas Martinez was arraigned for trial, charged with attempting to murder Dr. Trinidad Flores. When the charges were read and the accused called on to plead, he stepped four paces to the front, and, putting his hand into his inner breast pocket, exclaimed:

"Gentlemen, I know that the jury will condemn me, but before being condemned I must get rid of this one."

He thereupon drew a revolver and shot Dr. Flores dead. Senor Gustavo Chameroso, who stood next to Dr. Flores, picked up a chair, but almost immediately fell to the ground, being shot through the brain. At this juncture Senor Gregorio Rogas, an old gentleman, father-in-law of the first victim, bravely closed with the prisoner, who did not hesitate to draw the trigger, and the ball passed through Senor Roga's mouth, coming out of the back of his neck. Senor Rojas is in a precarious condition, but the physician attending him says he will probably recover.

After shooting Senor Rojas the prisoner made a dash for liberty and escaped to the country, but was captured three days later.

CONTINUING EXPERIMENTS.

Many Foreign Physicians Interested in Dr. Koch's Cure.

Berlin, Nov. 26.—Prof. Lister, a leading English surgeon, has arrived here with his niece, whom he brings for treatment by Prof. Koch. Empress Frederick, who has shown a great interest in Prof. Koch's remedy, to-day visited the hospitals conducted by Doctors Cornet and Krause. The Tageblatt protests against the excessive fees demanded by private physicians for treatment by the Koch method.

Paris, Nov. 25.—Dr. Schufier, who has just returned from Berlin, bringing with him three tubes of Prof. Koch's lymph, says he saw cases of cavities in the lungs much diminished by Koch's treatment.

Cologne, Nov. 25.—A series of experiments have been conducted here by Dr. Prior with the Koch curative lymph. Forty-five physicians attended the experiments. In all cases the symptoms following the injections of the lymph were precisely similar to those described by Prof. Koch.

Vienna, Nov. 25.—Prof. Schnitzler, with the consent of his colleagues, is experimenting with Prof. Koch's lymph upon a cancer patient whose case has been pronounced incurable.

Berlin, Nov. 25.—Dr. Bergmann, in his clinical lecture to-day, warned his patients that no absolute cure had yet been effected by the use of Prof. Koch's curative lymph.

THE LAST RESORT.

Burdens of Life Too Heavy for a Young Girl to Bear.

New York, Nov. 26.—Jessie Adamson, aged nineteen, a saleslady, committed suicide early this morning by taking poison. She came here from Chicago, and went to work in a store, but was recently discharged. She had been living on her savings, but they soon melted away, and her landlady demanded her money.

The girl grew despondent and promised to do her best to pay for her lodging. But no money came in, and as the only way out of her difficulties appeared to be suicide she resolved to die. On the bureau of the room in which she died were several letters which she had written before taking the poison. The first was addressed to the boarding house keeper, and in it the girl said she was very sorry not to be able to pay her, and that as she found the task an impossibility she had decided to end all. She gave with this her mother's address at 80 West Cortland street, Chicago. Another was a letter addressed to an unknown person named "Will," asking him to inform her father of her death and to give him her love. A third letter was addressed to an aunt named Mrs. Lizzie Byron, who is at present a patient in the Woman's hospital in this city. It asked forgiveness for the expenditure of $20 entrusted to the suicide.

STEAMERS SUNK.

Wrecks and Collisions Off the Coast of Great Britain.

London, Nov. 26.—The violent gale still prevails in the English channel and elsewhere along the coast of Great Britain. A number of wrecks and collisions have been reported. The British steamer Uppingham, from Cardiff for Port Said, is ashore at Harland. Twenty-one persons were rescued from the steamer. The first officer was lost. A boat containing five of the crew is missing.

The British steamer Calyso, from Mediterranean ports, foundered off Sandgate, two miles southwest of Folkstone, after having been in collision. The crew of the Calypso have arrived at Folkstone. The other vessel was a Spanish steamer and it is supposed that she also foundered.

The Danish schooner Regina has been sunk in a collision with the steamer Primate. Five of the schooner's crew were drowned. The steamer put into Copenhagen for a harbor.

One Indian Will Not Fight.

Bismarck, N. D., Special Telegram, Nov. 26.—White Arm, the Berthold Indian charged with the villainous assault on Miss Dora Wright Saturday night, had his examination to-day, and was bound over in $1,000 to await the action of the United States grand jury. In default of bail he was lodged in jail.

Found a Murdered Man.

Tacoma, Wash., Special Telegram, Nov. 26.—To-day the body of a murdered man was found near the Zoo garden. He is supposed to have been recently shot at the place. It is being investigated.

Self-Laden.

The clergyman, an old man in a shabby coat, had called on Mrs Mellor the day before Thanksgiving. He could talk of nothing but the coming feast, the services, and the table to be spread for the poor of the parish. Mrs. Mellor scarcely looked up from her sewing while he talked.

"I am sure," she broke forth to her husband when he was gone, "I have no time to keep Thanksgiving. I have my duty to attend to. The girls must have these dresses for the reception. How the old doctor can give thanks, I don't know."

Her husband paid no attention to what she said. He certainly had no time to think of God's goodness, or even to give thanks for it. His mind was on his business day and night. Twenty years ago he had made up his mind to make a great fortune, and he had not yet accomplished it.

The girls had no time. It strained all their energies to keep up appearances on small means with the wealthy, fashionable people whose acquaintance they courted.

The one boy of the family, a thin, pallid youth, sat bending over his books. He was working for the first honors in his class. Homer and Virgil left Bob no time to be happy, to help other human beings to happiness, or to remember Who gave him his blessing.

When Thanksgiving Day came, therefore, the Mellors had pumpkin pies for dinner, but otherwise took no note of it. They looked out with anxious impatience at the old clergyman going home to his scant meal, his wrinkled face full of a great peace and joy. What was a rich dinner or fine clothes to him? He had been up in the high places of life, joining in the hymn of thanks of the great, beautiful world to its Father.

The man who toils along the road with too heavy a load on his back, is not likely to take comfort in the sun or the growing grass, or to sing joyous hymns to the Hand that leads him.

If your burden keeps you away from God, it is of your own making. Lighten it. Give up your vanity, your desire of show, your inordinate ambition to excel. Take time to enjoy the good things which your Heavenly Father has given you, to make others happy in them and to thank Him for them.

Natural Location.

"What did Solomon do besides build the temple?" asked a little girl of her brother, who at once replied, "He wrote the dictionary." "Does the bible say so?" queried the sister, with wide eyes of believing interest. "I don't know as it does, in so many words, but he was the wisest man and that's the wisest book. So of course he wrote it."

This original method of reasoning was evidently admired by a still younger member of the family who had come up to listen to the conversation.

"Well, Tommykins, what do you know about Solomon or his temple?" asked the brother jocosely.

"Everything," was the stout reply.

"Oh, you do, do you? Well, where was his temple?"

"You must think I'm smart," answered Tommy in scorn.

"Oh, you don't know, you don't know!"

"I do, too."

"Well, where was it then?"

"On the side of his head, same's 'twould be in anybody!" replied Tommy in conclusive triumph.—Youth's Companion.

He Tried a Conundrum.

It was 11:30, but the young man could not tear himself away. In one of the pauses in the conversation the sound of snoring in some of the upper rooms reached the cozy parlor and his face lighted up with the joy of a sudden discovery.

"Miss Chuckster," he said, "why is your house like a good line of railway?"

"I cannot imagine, Mr. Hankinson."

"Because it is well equipped with sleepers."

"Ha! Very good, Mr. Hankinson. Do you know why you are like a railway from Potato Hollow to St. Louis?"

"No. Why?"

"Because," answered Miss Chuckster, sweetly, "you don't seem to have any terminal facilities."

Puzzles in Relationship.

From the Des Moines Leader.

Two Polk County widowers had a grown daughter, and each took the other's daughter as his second wife. Through these marriages children were born to each. These children now reside in Polk County. What was the relationship between the two men and their wives, and in what relationship did the children stand to each other and to the old folks? The old farmers were fathers-in-law to each other and their wives and sons-in-law to each other.

THE TURKEY.

Our goddess of birds is the turkey,
As the bald-headed eagle is king.
And now when the weather grows murky
With politics out of the thing,
Other goods we may look at and long for,
While our hearts are with thankfulness puffed;
But the bird of our hearts is all ready
And waitin', poor dear, to get stuffed.
—New York Journal.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

THE NORTHWEST.

A Summary of the Important Events of the Week in the Northwestern States.

MINNESOTA.

Fowls in the vicinity of Lake City are dying of Cholera.

The eight-hour day is again being agitated in Minneapolis and St. Paul.

The non-partisan W. C. T. U. has formed a state organization.

Prairie Queen is the name of a new post-office in Fillmore county.

At Fergus Falls three boys named Spaulding, Kidder and Moon were sentenced to the reform school for stealing wheat.

Peter Gustafson, a single man aged about 35, committed suicide at Lake City by blowing his brains out. Whisky was the cause.

In the recent election Murray county captured two members of the legislature, while Nobles county was shut out altogether.

The Imperial flouring mill at Duluth will increase its capacity to 4,000 barrels per day.

The vote for governor in Washington county resulted in a tie between Merriam and Wilson.

C. H. Benton, a leading lawyer and one of the best known Masons in the state, died suddenly in his office at Minneapolis

The boiler of a thrashing machine exploded near Crookston, instantly killing Ben Giroux, the fireman, and fatally injuring the engineer.

Herman Oestrich, a 12-year-old boy of Ash Creek, Rock county, disappeared from his home over a week ago, since which time he has not been heard from.

Richard P. Caminish, of Bird Island, went to New York, met a fine-looking man on the street, and came home a sadder and a $115 wiser man.

Charles A. Brown, a farmer living six miles north of Anoka, was found dead in bed. Death is supposed to have resulted from over-indulgence in alcohol.

John Biem, living two and a half miles east of Caledonia, was found dead near the railroad track. It is supposed he was struck by a train while crossing the track.

W. R. Hartzell and Miss Kittie Burgess, of St. Paul, are under arrest at Portland, Ore., charged with living together as man and wife. The arrest was made at the instance of Hartzell's wife.

A bridge to cost between $160,000 and $175,000 is to be built across the Mississippi at Hastings by the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway company. Work will commence in a few weeks.

Mike Brennar, alias "New Orleans Murphy," who murdered a boy at Duluth last summer, was sentenced to spend his natural life in the penitentiary at Stillwater. He expressed a regret that he wasn't sentenced to be hanged.

A woman named Carroll was sentenced to thirty days in the workhouse at St. Paul the other day for stealing a small piece of bacon from a butcher shop. Her children were in a starving condition when found by the relief society.

"Buck" Kelly, a well known Stillwater woodsman, was seriously shot by a companion named Cledenning. They were hunting deer, and Kelly was in a stooping position in the woods, when his partner mistook him for a brush deer and shot him in the back. His recovery is doubtful.

Some time ago George W. Wilson, of Lanesboro, Fillmore county, caught a large black bass and in handling his catch punctured his right forefinger on the fin of the bass. He thought nothing of the injury at the time, but very soon the injured member became swollen to such an extent as to render amputation necessary.

Charles Childs went hunting Nov. 5 up the White Stone, and has not been heard of since. A searching party was made up and a search was made, but they could find no trace of him. It is believed that he has been drowned or left the country. Childs was Captain of the Des Moines. His home is at Spencer, Iowa.

A frightful accident occurred on the Thompson road some miles west of Duluth. A man named Marlund placed a can of dynamite near the stove to thaw out. It soon exploded killing him instantly. His wife and four children were seriously hurt some of them having legs and arms broken. The house caught fire and the inmates were rescued with difficulty.

At Mabel, in a quarrel over a game of cards, Chas. Morgan shot and fatally wounded Robt. Fulton and severely wounded William Eagle. Fulton had drawn a knife on Morgan and the latter shot in self-defense, as Fulton meant to stab him to death. Eagle was a bystander and was shot accidentally, the bullet lodging in his groin. Morgan is in jail.

The first bear story of the season comes from Long Prairie, Todd county, and tells of a terrible encounter between a man named Marshall and a huge bear of the cinnamon species. He had been hunting, and shot away all his cartridges except three, and on the way home came across bruin at very close quarters. He fired the three balls into the bear, resulting in only aggravating the animal. He was so close that he could not escape, and the animal attacked him, tearing off his clothes and terribly lacerating his face and body. The hunter used his Winchester as a club, and succeeded in getting in a chance blow on the animal's head, which stunned him, and he then pounded his brains out with the broken barrel of his gun. He was not very far from home, which he reached in a badly used up condition.

NORTH DAKOTA.

A gang of men is traveling about the country offering to paint the roof of a building for $5. When the work is done the farmer receives a bill of $ 5 for painting the roof, just as agreed, but in addition thereto is the following: Forty gallons of paint, $1.50 per gallon, $60.

Another county seat fight in Traill county is on. This fall the people voted in favor of removing the county seat from Caledonia to Hillsboro. On application of several persons a temporary injunction has been ordered preventing the removal, and the courts have been asked to make it permanent.

The dead body of a man with the skull crushed was found on the ice under the Northern Pacific bridge at Grand Forks. It is supposed that he started to walk across the bridge, that a train came upon him, and in attempting to escape that he slipped and fell to the ice below.

At Fargo one night to the southeast by south and about 40 degrees above the horizon, one of the most brilliant meteors yet recorded was seen. It was of intense brightness and brilliancy, and in its descent left a trail of light behind about 2 degrees in width and 15 degrees in length. Nothing to compare with it was ever seen in the west.

Most of the hay cut by the farmers of the James River Valley this year has come from the dry beds of lakes and ponds. In several instances there have been found, in these now natural meadows, the mounds and section stakes placed there by surveyors in 1872—eighteen years ago. This shows the ponds were dry then as now. But for six or seven years following the survey in 1872 the lakes began filling up and every sign now shows they will shortly do so again.

The state convention of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor opened at Fargo, with fifty delegates representing twelve subordinate societies present. The following officers for the ensuing year were elected: President, R. M. Carothers, Grand Forks; vice presidents, Mrs. E. Lucas; Lisbon, G. M. Carpenter, Grand Forks, W. R. Peardon, Wahpeton; secretary and treasurer, William Lane, Fargo. Lisbon was named as the place for the next meeting.

President Prouty, of the North Dakota Board of Agriculture, has had much of experience in stock raising in that state and recommends a cross of Shropshire or Cotswold on western ewes, which are generally crossed with Merinos. Many new flocks of sheep are being brought into the Dakotas, and many wealthy men are distributing them on shares among farmers. There is no doubt that sheep will do well in these states. The climate is well adapted to sheep, and with a little experience, careful farmers will learn how to care for them and will find them very profitable.

Four gentlemen of Grand Forks were in St. Paul the other day on their way home from Chicago. The quartet was composed of S. S. Titus, George Shutt, George B. Winship and George B. Clifford, and they have been down to Chicago in consultation with the world's fair committee relative to North Dakota's exhibit in 1893. The gentlemen express themselves as being very much pleased with their reception in Chicago, and are enthusiastic over the showing that they expect North Dakota to make at the world's fair.

Judge Thomas, of the United States court, at Fargo, handed down an opinion in the case of Elwood S. Fell vs. the Northern Pacific. This case was tried in the district court of Stutsman county and came up on motion of defendant for a new trial. Plaintiff boarded a freight train at Eldred to ride to Jamestown, and was ejected with violence and abusive language. The jury rendered a verdict for plaintiff for $600, although he was not permanently injured. The court holds he is entitled to recover exemplary damages on account of the wanton conduct of the conductor, and refuses a new trial.

Settlers south of Mandan are leaving their ranches and farms because they believe that an Indian uprising is pending. Indians are trading horses and other property for guns and ammunition. Local hardware men have sold all their ammunition to them. Joseph Buckley rode in from the reservation, and says the Indian authorities are harboring a feeling of false security and the danger will be found out when too late. The mayor of Mandan has called a public meeting, and the government will be petitioned for guns to arm citizens. The Indians say they will have everything to gain and nothing to lose by an uprising. If they are beaten their rations will be doubled, as in the past.

The incoming legislature will have a hard struggle on the prohibition question. This subject has to some extent been lost sight of in the excitement attending the senatorial contest. A considerable number of the members of both houses were elected on that issue, and it is believed by the liquor element that a bill can be passed resubmitting the question of prohibition. A majority of the Red river valley members, the Stutsman delegation, most of the Missouri slope members and a few others scattered over the state are anti-prohibitionists, and will support a bill to resubmit the question. The Ramsey and Nelson delegations are for absolute prohibition and there are also some voters on that side from Walsh, Traill and Cass counties.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

There are several cases of diphtheria among the German families in the vicinity of Longland Buffalo county.

The last original package house at Elk Point has been closed up, and the authorities are now after the "boot-leggers."

Lieut. Carnahan and a squad of soldiers recently escorted a paymaster and $16,000 in cash from Pierre to Fort Sully.

Sioux Falls' latest acquisition is a cheese factory that will commence operations when the grass is green in the spring.

John Schlimgen, living near Ethan, has a flowing well 350 feet deep which throws a two-inch stream of water twenty feet out of the ground.

A man traveling under the cognomen of A. W. Cole chopped cordwood for Chris Meyer, at Sturgis, until he found that his "game" was not in this vicinity. The fellow was a detective, on the lookout for some crook.

A traveling man from Omaha by the name of White picked a quarrel with a peaceable farmer at Armour recently. The farmer stood the abuse until White hit him over the head with a stool, when he gave him a good thrashing. White was arrested and fined $20.

There are eighteen students in regular attendance at the school of mines in Rapid City and several more are making arrangements to attend. The students are fitting themselves for practical work in chemistry, geology, assaying, civil and mining engineering, etc., and are all earnest, hard workers.

C. C. Clements and W. S. Peabody, attorneys of Washington, D. C., have forwarded for collection a bill of $2,500 against the city of Aberdeen for services alleged to have been rendered in connection with the celebrated Dayton land case. They propose to sue if the bill is not promptly paid or settled in some way.

Mrs. C. Welden and little son recently arrived at Pierre on the steamer Abner O'Neil. Their home is in Brooklyn, N. Y. They have been living at Standing Rock for some time, and Mrs. Welden says the papers have indulged in a great deal of unjustifiable rot about her affection for old Sitting Bull—there being no ground at all for such talk.

Fred Perkins went down into an eighty-foot well which he was drilling, to dip out the water and lost consciousness from the effect of gas. The boys in charge of the machinery undertook to haul him up, and when within about fifteen feet of the surface he overbalanced and fell to the bottom. When the body was finally rescued life was extinct.

Mrs. Henrico Livingston donned her war paint and drove the masons at work on the foundations of the new Baptist church at Deadwood from their work. She claimed that the present site of the church was on her ground, and she didn't propose to have it occupied as a church. The masons left and the church authorities swore out a warrant for her arrest. She was placed under bonds to keep the peace.

WISCONSIN.

The Ashland County Board has fixed the total valuation of property in the county at $8,500,000 and Ashland city at $4,000,000.

Elkhorn people are generous. A man's barn and grain was burned there recently. Soon after the neighbors called and left with him $565.

Rice Lake, has presented Barron County with a clear deed to a brand new court house of modern architecture, in compliance with making that city the permanent county seat.

Samuel Morey, who was arrested at Florence for biting a chunk out of Charley King's nose, was discharged because King had left town.

Miscreants broke into the Governor's Guard rifle range at Rock Cut, near Madison, and destroyed a number of targets and other property.

Marinette tramps, according to the Eagle, exercise excellent judgment and good taste in making their nightly gatherings of food, selecting choice jellies and preserved fruits of the nicest character.

Several days ago a well-dressed woman called at St. Mary's Hospital, Superior, and left a babe there which she wanted cared for a day or two. She never returned, and probably meant to abandon the child.

The State Board of Health has ordered the meat in the butcher shop of the Sprecher Bros., at Madison, to be destroyed, because of diphtheria having prevailed in the building for a number of weeks.

A tramp who was stealing a ride on the cow-catcher of a North-Western locomotive had his clothing catch fire, near Kenosha, and was burned terribly before the train could be stopped and the fire put out.

An old resident of Appleton, named Merritt, recovered his eyesight recently after having been totally blind for twenty years. The most remarkable fact is that he never received treatment. Some time ago an oculist pronounced him incurable.

Luther Millerman, aged 20, accidentally shot himself while hunting ducks on Apple River in Croix County. His right hand was over the muzzle when the gun discharged. The whole charge entered the palm of the hand, and passed out through the wrist, mangling the hand and wrist.

Carl Schmidt, a farmer living near Koshkonong Lake, wanted to split a log with giant powder. He put the cartridge into an augur hole and was pounding a wooden plug in when the blast went off. His right arm was badly mangled and amputation was necessary.

Mayor Jones, of Black River Falls, has instructed the district attorney to commence suit against five original package dealers. Mayor Jones is thoroughly in earnest in his effort to close up these places, and will commence suit against others that may open as fast as evidence may be secured.

IOWA.

It is claimed that Des Moines has secured the location of a beet sugar factory, with a capacity of 200 tons of beets a day.

Fred Baker, the man who assaulted and robbed George Mahon, of Elmira, has been held to the grand jury at Clinton in the sum of $10,000.

A Primghar man named Jessup took four ounces of chloroform with suicidal intent and was about half way up the golden stairs when he was overtaken by a doctor and yanked back into this vale of tears.

The postmaster at Sigourney refused to allow the Review newspaper to go through the mails because it contained an advertisement of a piano drawing. The advertisement had to be cut out of the whole mail edition.

Work is rapidly progressing on the new Y. M. C. A. building at Iowa City. The structure will be one of the handsomest in the state and will cost about $30,000. It will be called "Close Hall," in honor of the chief donor.

Will N. Clayton, the young man who was accidentally shot and killed while hunting near Macedonia the other day, was to have been married in a short time to an estimable young lady of Indianola, named Cheshire. The young lady is terribly grieved at his sad death.

At Carson, J. Brossard, proprietor of a hotel, was convicted for selling intoxicating liquors and fined $50 and costs. The complaint was filed by the wife of the man to whom the liquor was sold. About twenty of the ladies of the place accompanied the witness to the courtroom and remained through the trial.

A man was caught stealing wheat out of the elevator at Ashton the other night, arrested and tried, dismissed and called back and fined and afterwards bound over to the district court. No one would go his bail, so he drew a roll of money from his pocket and deposited $60 with the justice to secure his bond.

About two miles from Talmage, Union county, is an old Mormon cemetery, which is all that is left of the Mormon settlement in 1846. Several hundred Mormons remained there during the latter part of that year and all of 1847. It was called Mt. Pisgah, but was finally abandoned and the survivors pushed on to Salt Lake. But their dead were left and the graves remained unmarked until two years ago, when a plain monument about eight feet high was erected. It bears this inscription: "This monument was erected in 1888 in memory of those who are members of the church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, who died in 1846-47-48, during their exodus to seek a home beyond the Rocky mountains."

The Kill or Capture Idea.

New York Press: Capt. Willard Bullard, health inspector, had many reminiscences to recount. Among them was the following:

"At the time Gen. Sickles assumed command of the Second division of the Third corps after the second Bull Run he gave an elaborate dinner to the officers of his new division. After wining and dining these, he sent for the officers of his old Excelsior brigade, and said: 'Now, boys, we will have a family gathering,' and pointing to the table he said, 'Treat it as you would the enemy,' which the boys did.

"Capt. Byrnes, a typical Irishman, after dinner, passed out, saying he was going to his tent. Gen. Sickles sauntered out, and caught the captain stowing away three bottles of champagne in his saddle-bags.

"'What, what!' gasped the general. 'What are you doing, captain?'

"'Obeying orders,' responded the captain in a firm voice.

"'How is that?' said the general sternly.

"'You told us to treat that dinner as we would the enemy, and you know, general, what we can't kill we capture,' replied the witty Irishman."

* * *

Don't neglect to have your name plainly painted on all jugs or bottles that are sent to the store for vinegar, molasses, etc. Then you will be sure to get your own back again.

SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT.

A MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE

[CONTINUED FROM LAST ISSUE.]

"Better keep a good place while you've got it," said the boss. "You are entirely unskilled, and you have been so improvident, eating up all your wages from day to day, that you have nothing to fall back on if you don't get work."

"Well," replied Mr. Fassett, "if I can't get work for somebody else, I guess I can hunt for worms and corn on my own account, can't I?"

"Yes, if you can find a place to hunt for them."

"Must be plenty of places. Why, I know all this country. Its full of cornfields, and I'm a poor sort of a crow if I can't scratch up enough to live on."

The boss crow was astonished at Mr. Fassett's simplicity.

"Why," said he, "there ain't a cornfield in a day's flight where you'll be allowed to scratch. I hire this field; that one belongs to another crow; that one yonder to another; that one to a crow corporation, and so on. The trouble is that this country is crowded with crows."

"I used to think so myself," said Mr. Fassett, "and I hired a man to shoot them; but since I've been a crow it doesn't seem to me that there are very many. Why, I never see any flock but ours in this field?"

"Of course you don't. I have to pay old Roger Rook a good round sum for this field, and I would be a fool to let anybody but my own crows come here. And if you ain't going to work for me—"

"Who is Roger Rook?" Qui interrupted.

"Roger Rook! Roger Rook! Don't know Roger Rook!" exclaimed Qui's boss in astonishment. "Well, I declare! Why, Roger Rook belongs to one of the best families. He can trace his ancestry back ever so far. He owns all the best nest building trees in that forest, he and Jim Crow, and he owns corn fields till you can't rest. Inherited them, you know. But say, if you ain't going to work for me any longer I want you to leave my property. I don't allow any tramps around here."

"Well," said Mr. Fassett, firmly, "I've had enough of this, and I shall leave."

"Where'll you roost to-night?" asked the boss. "Can't let you stay in my tree, you know."

"I'll find a roost," replied Mr. Fassett; and saying good-bye in a friendly way to his boss, he rose upward and soared away.

"In my eye, you'll find a place to roost," croaked the boss, as he returned to his work of superintending the operations of the flock in his field.

Poor Fassett! Little did he realize what he had done.

After flying till he was tired, he headed for a large tree in the middle of the forest. To his surprise he found its branches filled with crows. They looked suspiciously at him, and he overheard occasionally a word that sounded like "spy." For a time no crow came near him; but after a while one old fellow walked toward him sideways along the limb of the tree.

"Where'd you come from?" the stranger asked.

"Just gave up a job," replied Qui.

"What at?" the other persisted.

"Watching a worm preserve."

"Why'd you give it up?"

"Got tired working for another fellow for grub and roost," said Qui.

The conversation continued cautiously for a time on the part of the stranger, but after awhile with greater freedom. Qui found that this was a meeting of crows, who, like himself, had quit working because they were not satisfied with the pay. They had managed among them to make up a little pile of corn, with part of which they hired the tree where they were roosting, living on the remainder.

"But our funds won't hold out long," said the old crow, "and as there are so many crows out of a job I am afraid we shall have to give in and go to work."

"Why do you want funds?" Qui asked.

"Why do we want funds?" exclaimed the old crow. "Well, we want funds because we've got to have something to eat and a place to roost."

"Surely you don't need funds on that account. You can scratch for worms and corn, can't you?"

"Some of us can, but some of us only know how to build nests. Some can't even do that; they have gathered nest materials all their lives, and others have done nothing but make up the materials for the builders."

"That's right," said Fassett. "I think I can get you out of your trouble. Now, if you ——"

"Hold on!" interrupted the old crow in excitement. "Hold on! Hallo, fellows, I say, here's a chap that says he can get us out of our fix. Shall we let him in and hear what he has to say?"

"What's his line?" was croaked from the crowd.

"Used to watch a worm preserve," responded the old chap.

"Naw, we don't want any o' them detective thugs among us."

"Tell them," said Qui, "that I am a lawyer."

"Oh thunder no!" spluttered the stranger. "They're down on lawyers worse'n the devil. Let me attend to this."

Qui's new chum went among the flock, leaving Qui alone. There was a great commotion and croaking, but the old crow carried his point and Qui was invited in.

"You mustn't think," said Qui "that I've got any new fangled inventions. I have only a single suggestion to make, and I don't understand why it hasn't occurred to you long ago. Perhaps it's because you are used to this sort of thing and I am not. Now this old crow tells me you are in great distress because you have lost your work and haven't any worms or corn, and when your lease on this tree expires you won't have any place to roost. At the same time he tells me that some of you know how to gather nest materials, others know how to make up the materials, and others know how to build nests. What more do you want?"

"Mr. Chairman," croaked a crow of tender years on the edge of the crowd, "does this fool think we can scratch for grub without a field to scratch in, or build a nest without a limb to build it on?"

"I was just about to speak of that," Fassett went on. "I was going to ask. What more do you want than trees and fields?"

"That's so; that's all we want," said some one in the flock.

"Well, there are plenty of trees and fields—a good many more than enough for all the crows that have ever lived since the flood," said Fassett.

"Maybe so," interrupted an intelligent looking crow, "but they're too far away and in a bad climate. Some of our folks emigrated there last year and had to come back."

"I don't mean away off there," Fassett replied, "I mean right here. This forest is full of trees in which there isn't a single crow's nest, and on each side of it there are cornfields full of worms in which you won't find more than one small flock of crows. Why don't you go to work scratching in these fields and building nests in these trees?"

"We can't pay the rent!" was the reply in chorus.

"Why should you pay rent? Haven't you as much right to scratch in these fields and build nests in these trees as any other crow?"

For a little while there was silence. Every crow was thinking. The quiet was broken by a voice from above: "Agitator! Socialist! Com-mew-nist! Robber! Thief!" it croaked.

Qui looked up and saw an angry crow, whose feathers were tipped with red. "That's Roger Rook's chaplain," said Qui's chum under his breath.

Just then there was a great croaking among the flock at the appearance of another crow with red-tipped wings. To him the whole situation was explained, and turning to Qui he said:

"My friend, I believe you are right. There are plenty of trees and plenty of corn fields here, and no crow need be hungry or without a nest. But some of these crows with the devil in them have called these trees and cornfields theirs, and the police keep other crows off, and so most of our crows have to work for other crows for almost nothing or starve. It's a shame and a sin, and if our impoverished crows knew their rights they would stop it."

"But, Father Caw," one of the crows asked, "you would pay Roger Rook, and Jim Crow, and the rest of the crows that own fields and trees, wouldn't you?"

"If I could," said Father Caw indignantly, "I would confiscate every field and tree without one barleycorn of compensation to their miscalled owners."

The anger of Roger Rook's chaplain when he heard this was beyond description.

"We'll see about that, you villain! we'll see about that!" he fairly shrieked as he flew away. Pretty soon he returned with a crow whose breast was covered with red, followed by flock after flock, an immense throng of crows, all croaking and screaming, "They want to rob us!" "Call the police!" "Kill the anarchists!" "Society is in danger!" "Commew-nists!" and so on.

The crow with the red breast was very mild of manner toward Father Caw. "Such sentiments as Roger Rook's chaplain reports to me are unworthy of you, Father Caw," he said. "There must be a mistake. Surely you would not take away a crow's property and let any other crow use it. Think of the labor that has been spent in building crows' nests in these trees and in gathering grub of different kinds. It would be robbery to take these away from their owners without pay."

"I did not say that, your redness," replied Father Caw, humbly. "I said I would take away the trees and fields and let all crows use them to scratch for grub and build nests."

"But it is the same thing," his redness responded. "No crow would scratch for worms if he didn't own the field, nor build nests if he didn't own the tree."

"Yes, he would," Qui interrupted. "My boss didn't own the field; he only hired it, and not one of his flock had any interest in it."

His redness glanced superciliously at Qui, and Roger Rook's chaplain exclaimed, "What impudence!" at the same time twisting his neck first one way and then the other for the approval of the crowd.

When the excitement caused by Qui's interruption had subsided, Father Caw said:

"Your redness, it is not necessary to own a forest of trees for the purpose of building nests in one. See all these empty trees, and see these poor creatures without nests! Nor is it necessary to own a whole cornfield in order to scratch for grub. See all the corn-fields in our region—how few crows are allowed to scratch in them—and see these famished crows! It is one thing to own the grub you scratch, and another to own the field in which you find the grub. It is one thing to own the nest you build and another to own the tree in which you build it, or worse, to own empty trees in which you allow no other crow to build. Crows make nests and scratch for grub, but crows neither make trees nor plant grub!"

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

—Prof. Huxley says there was a time when men walked on all fours. We believe you, Huxley, for we have seen them do it when they were little. There was also a time when a man walked on the palms of his hands, and held up his legs in the air. The time we refer to was after the boy had been to the circus and had seen the clown do it.

—The Good Old Times.—Wife (looking up from a book)—What do you think of this? In the time of the Ptolemies a wife was always given full control of her husband's property. Husband—Yes; but in those days the fashions never changed.—N. Y. Weekly.

—Mrs. Nutgall—What are you writing, John? Nutgall—A purely business letter, my dear. By the way, how do you spell "inamorata?" Mrs. N. (rising)—With in ——. I'll show you, you wretch!—Boston Traveller.

An Old-Fashioned Plum-Pudding.

From the Detroit Tribune.

A Detroit artist was found one day deep in the mysteries of Thanksgiving plum-pudding.

"How do you prepare it?" she was asked.

"Well," brushing a daub of flour off her nose, "the old English plum-pudding is 'a pound of raisins seeded, a pound of currents well washed, dried, and floured, a pound of citron cut into shreds, one pound of suet chopped fine, cinnamon, salt, allspice and nutmeg, one cup of sweet milk, one pound of brown sugar, and one bowl of flour.'"

"A bowl of flour? What sized bowl?"

"The old rule is 'a pint's a pound the world around,' so a pint bowl is a pound, you see. Mix the ingredients well together; take a thick piece of cotton—twilled cotton is the best—butter it well, dredge flour over it thickly, put the mass of fruit and flour into it, and tie up securely, leaving room for the pudding to swell or rise properly; put the bag or cloth, into boiling water and keep it boiling for six or twelve hours—the longer the better."

"Is that all?"

"The next step is to eat it, but before taking a good sauce should be shaken up of butter, sugar and brandy. Some prefer wine, but brandy sauce is the best, and as plum-pudding time is only once or twice a year one can afford the best.

"I have another recipe more esthetic in its quality," continued Mrs. Congdon, "which I am making for my patrons—a well tested recipe, for the 'goodness' of which many of our oldest inhabitants could vouch if they only knew whose it is, and this is: To the quantity of fruit which I have already given add an ounce of chopped sweet almonds, two ounces chopped candied orange and lemon peel, one pound stale bread crumbs soaked in milk and then squeezed dry, eight eggs, cinnamon, cloves and allspice, a wine-glass of brandy, and a pound of sugar. Let the brandy stand awhile on the fruit; beat the eggs very light and add the sugar first, then all the rest of the ingredients, mixing thoroughly. Tie loosely in a bag or form of tin and steam for six or eight hours.

"By the way, good housekeepers prepare their plum puddings a week or two before using them and hang them in a cool place where they can obtain a richness that no fresh made pudding can acquire. I make them, you see, in all sizes, from one pound up to five. They are in great demand and save housekeepers a great deal of trouble in getting them all ready for the table."

"Is there anything new in the way of sauce?"

"French candied fruits well chopped are finding favor and I have heard that sugared crumpled rose-leaves are being used, but I think there is nothing better than a good rich brandy or wine sauce. Lighted candles placed around the pudding is a new fad and take the place of burning brandy."

Comparatively Easy.

It was seven long years since Jonas Harris had begun to "keep company" with Miss Hannah Bell, and yet, in all that time, he had not mustered courage to propose a certain important question. His house was lonely and waiting; hers was lonely enough to be vacated, and still Jonas could not bring himself to speak the decisive words. Many a time had he walked up to her door with the courage of a lion, only to find himself a very mouse when she appeared.

He had never failed in dropping in to cheer her loneliness on Thanksgiving evening, and this year he presented himself as usual. The hearth was swept, the fire burned brightly and Miss Hannah was adorned with smiles and a red bow.

Conversation went serenely on for an hour or so, and then, when they both sat paring red-cheeked apples, with great contentment, Jonas began to call upon his recollections.

"It's a good many years, ain't it, since you and I just sot here together?"

"Yes, a good many."

"I wonder if I shall be settin' here this time another year?"

"Maybe I shan't be at home. Perhaps I shall go out to spend the evening myself," said Miss Hannah briskly.

This was a blow, indeed, and Jonas felt it.

"Where?" he gasped.

"Oh, I don't know," she returned, beginning to quarter her apple. "I might be out to ten—over to your house, for instance."

"But there wouldn't be anybody over there to get supper for you."

"Maybe I could get it myself."

"So you could! so you could!" cried Jonas, his eyes beginning to sparkle. "But there wouldn't be anybody to cook up the pies and cakes beforehand."

"Maybe I could cook 'em."

At that moment Jonas' plate fell between his knees to the hearth, and broke in two, but neither of them noticed it.

"Hannah," cried he, with the pent-up emphasis of seven long years, "could you bring yourself to think of gettin' married?"

A slow smile curved her lips; surely she had been given abundant time for consideration.

"Maybe I could," she returned, demurely, and Jonas has admired himself to this day for leading up to the subject so cleverly.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

A WOMAN'S CLUB HOME.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH., CONTAINS THE ORGANIZATION.

Sketch of Its Birth, Growth and Present [illegible] Equipped with a [illegible] Furnished — It [illegible]

[illegible] useful [illegible] lo- [illegible] in the [illegible] handsome [illegible] are not satisfied [illegible] they insist on being cultured as well. Hence it is that their club is not a mere social organization, a means for exchanging choice gossip, but a literary club; and hence it is, too, that it has grown until there is no room for it to grow any more. In fact it became so large several years ago that it furnished an "overflow meeting," and the "West Side Ladies' Literary club," another similar and prosperous organization, was formed. Now, again, it has grown until, like an athlete, it must reduce its proportions to secure its greatest efficiency.

The Ladies' Literary club, of Grand Rapids, is the outgrowth of a class in history formed among the women of Grand Rapids by Mrs. L. H. Stone, of Kalamazoo, a woman who has been instrumental in forming several other women's clubs in the west. The history class was disbanded in the winter of 1871-72, but the taste for study had been excited. A meeting of six women was held at the residence of Mrs. S. L. Fuller, a wealthy woman widely known for her originality and culture as well as for her charity. These six women formed themselves into a club.

THE CLUB IS ORGANIZED.

Mrs. Fuller drew up a constitution and issued a call to the women of the city who were interested in the project to join the club. About thirty responded. The first regular meeting was held in April, 1872. The membership soon reached 100. Since that time the growth of the club in numbers and in influence has been steady. The present membership is over 500, and embraces not only many women of wealth, but many without wealth, women in society and those not in society. The average attendance at the meetings, which are held every week, is about 300. The ladies believe that with a membership of more than 500 the club cannot work to so good an advantage as with a smaller number. They have decided accordingly to limit it to 500. No new members will be received therefore until the number falls below 500.

Dec. 31, 1887, was a red letter day for the club. That day the ladies dedicated a club house, erected under their own direction for their own exclusive use. Up to that time, although they had a library of nearly [illegible] volumes, a large and choice collection of photographs, a piano, a considerable amount of furniture and other paraphernalia for club housekeeping they had occupied rented rooms. Living in rented rooms did not satisfy these progressive women [illegible] they decided to buy a lot and build a house of their own. The building fund [illegible] in the treasury, an annual [illegible] and a relentless determination. The last mentioned item was the [illegible] for it was convertible into [illegible] as much cash as both the others combined. A lot was purchased on Sheldon street, one of the finest streets in the city, and July [illegible], 1887, the corner stone of the new club house was laid. Five months later the house was dedicated.

THE CLUB HOUSE.

The club house is two stories in height at the front, with a lofty single story in the rear for the main hall or auditorium. It is built of Amherst (O.) bluestone and Grand Rapids pressed brick, with terra cotta trimmings, slate roof, stained glass and French plate glass windows. At the front on the first floor the main entrance opens into a large reception hall, with a handsome, broad, winding staircase leading to the "upper room," as the ladies designate what club men would call a banquet hall. Back of the stairs on the north side is a commodious and convenient toilet room. At the left of the main entrance, on the first floor and fronting the street, is the club library, a room about twenty-five feet square. The library opens into the auditorium, a room about fifty feet square, with a ceiling twenty-one feet high, embracing a dome and skylight at the center. At the farther or west end of the auditorium is a large stage, flanked by dressing rooms. The floor of the auditorium is slightly inclined toward the stage. It is covered with a handsome body Brussels carpet, in which a soft, yellowish brown is the prevailing tint, harmonizing perfectly with the beautiful decorations of the ceiling and dome. The library is finished in oak, and is also elegantly decorated. The colors are darker than those of the auditorium, but are complementary to them. Above the mantel in the auditorium is a beautiful plate glass mirror of the full width of the mantel, while in the library the oaken panel above the mantel bears the word "Books" in bold, carved letters, surrounded by a scroll, on which is the text, "Round these our pastimes and our happiness will grow."

THE WEEKLY MEETINGS.

A regular meeting of the club is held every Saturday afternoon and lasts two hours, except during the heated term, when a vacation is usually taken or the meetings are limited to one hour. As provided by the constitution of the club, the first meeting in each month is devoted to the consideration of subjects pertaining to art and literature, to be brought before the club by a committee of three who serve for a period of three months. For the second Saturday of the month a similar committee furnishes topics on education, and for the third Saturday another committee furnishes subjects in history. The meeting of the fourth week is in charge of an "entertainment committee," and whenever this committee furnishes an evening's entertainment not only do all members of the club have a standing invitation, but each member may invite one person to accompany her. The hours for entertainment are from [illegible] to 10 p. m. The entertainment generally includes plays, music, readings, recitations, etc. Cards and refreshments are prohibited. When a fifth Saturday occurs in any month it is called "President's day," and on that day the president brings before the club such general topics as she sees fit.

The programme committees lay out their work systematically and carefully, and copies are printed and distributed among members in advance, thus giving members a chance to study the subjects before their presentation at the club.—Chicago Tribune

---

Among the various charity societies of Moscow there is one for the endowment of [illegible]. The funds of the society are [illegible] raised by the gifts or be[illegible] not only the [illegible]

TRICKS OF OPERATORS.

RAILROAD TELEGRAPHERS USED TO GET A LITTLE SLEEP.

A Possible Explanation of Some Terrible Wrecks—Most Men Realize the Grave Responsibility Which Is Upon Them—A Boy's Costly Sleep.

The most undesirable work and the least remunerative among telegraphers is that of night operator at some lonely station on a railroad. The rules of the company require that these men shall remain awake at their posts from [illegible] p. m. till 7 a. m. to report passing trains, and to receive and deliver such orders as it may be necessary to convey to engineer and conductors to regulate the movement of their trains. On double track roads their presence at their posts is of great importance only in emergencies, and to be sure they are always on hand. A system of signaling is in vogue on most roads by which every operator is required to report by wire to headquarters every half hour during the night.

On the Central Railroad of New Jersey fifteen years ago the headquarters of the night dispatcher was at Elizabeth, the wire signal of the office being "K I." Every half hour in the night the dispatcher's operator would sound on the wire the signal "Six, six, six, K I," and each operator on the line from Jersey City to Phillipsburg would have to sound his office signal in turn, beginning with "J C" and ending with "P." If all the responses came the operator at "K I" would say "O. K." and another half hour of dreary silence would intervene.

ONE SCHEME TO SLEEP.

The operator at Somerville was on terms of intimate friendship with the one at Hampton Junction, and they arranged to sound each other's signals on alternate nights, so that the one for whom the other acted could sleep. Each, however, had to attend to the reporting of the trains that passed his station. The station at Somerville was between the north and south bound tracks, and the operator there invented an ingenious device by which he could go to sleep and yet be awakened whenever a train should pass.

Taking two stout cords, he ran one out over the window and under the platform to one of the rails of the south bound track, to which he tied it. The other was run in a similar way, and tied to the north bound track. Inside the office he made a loop in each of the cords at a convenient height. Leaning back in his chair, with his head pillowed on a shelf, he put his right foot through one loop and his left through the other, both feet being about on a level with his head. Then he slept.

A north bound train came along, cut the string, and his left foot fell down with a jerky suddenness that would have thrown him out of the chair had his other foot not been tied. Then a message would go to headquarters like this, "S. O. K., I. N. 6., No. 23, eng. 45. 1:18," meaning that Somerville reported, north bound train No. 23, drawn by engine No. 45, passing at 1:18 a. m. The string was tied to the rail again, another loop made, and the operator soon was dreaming once more. If the left foot fell it was a north bound train; if the right one, a south bound—a glance at the clock showing what train was due according to the schedule.

Another operator used to fill a coal scuttle with coupling pins, old scraps of iron and tin, and fasten it high from the floor to a string tied to the rails. When a train came along the scuttle would fall with a crash loud enough almost to be heard at the dispatcher's headquarters.

A BOY'S NEGLIGENCE.

On the Belvidere Delaware division of the Pennsylvania road, where balloon signals are used, such devices are not available, and the operators must remain awake every moment of the long night. The "Bel. Del.," as it is called, is a single track road, and orders are frequent during the night to regulate the movement of trains. It is over this division that the Pennsylvania's heavy coal traffic is brought down to Trenton and to Perth Amboy. The balloon signal is an oblong hollow canopy made of red flannel, and kept in shape by circular iron hoops.

By a double cord attachment connecting with the operator's table it can be lowered or raised at will. If lowered it is a danger signal that no train dares to pass. If raised the signal is "No orders; go ahead on schedule time." At night a white lantern is hung under the balloon, which when lowered shows a red light through the red flannel. If raised the white light shows, signaling that everything is "all right."

The orders of the company are that the balloon must be kept down at all times, day and night, showing the red signal, and only raised when a train approaches for which no orders have been received. Thus a terrible responsibility falls upon the operator who has complete control of the signal. If he receives an order for a train and forgets it, or becomes confused and raises the signal, the result is sure to be a collision. Fortunately the operators on that division are faithful men, who evidently never sleep on duty. Perhaps a sense of the responsibility keeps them awake. The operator at Washington crossing, just above Trenton, nearly a score of years ago was a young boy, who could not resist the temptation to run about to picnics and on excursions during the day. As a rule he was most powerfully inclined to sleep at night. Twice he did so, and was then discharged.

The first occasion resulted in the wreck of a coal train, and the other in breaking a freight train in two. The coal train stopped on the heavy grade, seeing the signal down, and the engineer coming in for orders found the boy sound asleep. He woke him roughly, and, in deep anger started again for his engine. Being angry he started up too quickly, and broke a coupling on the tenth car, the engine and the ten cars starting down the grade very fast. "Off brakes" had been whistled, and the second section coming on crashed into the first, piling up a dozen cars. Almost the same thing happened to the freight, and the young operator was allowed to look for a day job—on some other road.—New York Tribune.

Several Versions of a Maxim.

Popular maxims credit certain individuals with criminal proclivities. The Roman says, "Little beard and little color—there is nothing worse under heaven." In French it is, "God preserve me from a beardless man," and in Tuscany, "Salute from afar a beardless man and a bearded woman," and in Venice, "Trust not the woman with a man's voice."—New York Times.

Shaving a la Mode.

Barbers on the French steamers arriving at New York are said to have regular patrons among their compatriots, who visit the steamers upon every arrival, bent upon having their beards kept trimmed in the [illegible] of the boulevards.—Philadelphia Ledger.

WILD BEASTS OF INDIA.

SPORTSMEN FIND PLENTY OF EXCITING QUARRIES.

The Wild Boar Is the Best and Bravest. The Rhinoceros' Acute Senses of Smell and Hearing—Points on Hunting the Savage Animals.

Of all Indian animals the wild boar is the best and bravest. I have seen a great deal of him, having for many years hunted him on horseback or with a line of elephants to drive him out of the thick coverts, so that other men well mounted on fleet horses might pursue and slay him with their spears. I was but an indifferent performer with the hog spear, and have no feats of prowess to recount, though I once took a first spear where about ten other men were eager for that honor; but it was a very small boar, and it was quite his own fault that he fell into my hands, for I was sitting smoking at the end of a covert, just thinking of starting for home after a blank morning, when the animal rushed out and in self defense I was obliged to spear it. How angry some of the other men were at my luck, though they did not all know how unmerited it was.

It was most interesting to watch the dodges and devices of a cunning old gray boar as I stood in my howdah and tried to get the elephants to drive him out at a point convenient for the riders. The boar usually had his own ideas as to the line he would take if he were compelled to face the open; but before coming to that last resource he would try everything else. Perhaps it was not heroic conduct on his part, but he would seek to induce the old fat sow, his wife, with her infant progeny, to go out and show themselves as a blind to the hunters. If there were any of his older sons in the jungle he would roust them from their hiding places and try to drive them out, to become a vicarious sacrifice.

THE CUNNING BOAR.

He would lie down and hide himself in an incredible small patch of grass, so that the elephants might pass him by unsuspectingly; or, if too carelessly pressed by a loose line, he would charge right at some loitering elephant's legs, and there are very few elephants that will not flinch and turn aside from a wild boar's charge. It needed much patience and watchfulness to contend with all the wiles of the clever animal. I usually carried a gun loaded with snipe shot, and a charge fired into the grass or bushes just behind where the boar was moving generally startled him, and if a chance pellet hit him he thought it best to quit the covert and trust to his speed to reach some stronger shelter or swamp impenetrable to elephants and horses.

It takes a very fast horse to catch a full grown boar in a gallop over the open plain, but every experienced rider knows that he must go as hard as he can if he means to spear the animal. I shall not try to repeat the oft told story of the mortal combat that ensues. Oftentimes I could see all the incidents of the chase from my howdah, for not unfrequently the boar when overtaken would jink and come round again to the jungle from which he had started. When men ride really well the boar seldom escapes, unless he has the luck to find some deep swamp through which the horses cannot follow him.

A full grown wild boar in lower Bengal is about thirty inches high, but they are sometimes found as high as thirty-six inches, and there is a skeleton in the Indian museum in Calcutta of a boar that was forty inches at the shoulder. There is almost as much difference in the anatomy of a wild boar and a tame one as there is between a man-of-war and a merchant ship.

THE RHINOCEROS.

In the size of the brain the wild boar has a marked superiority, and perhaps this accounts for his great courage, which makes him fearless of everything. One morning, looking out of a railway carriage, I saw a wild boar come charging down at the passing train, but he missed it, for the train was going too fast for him, and he was a little hampered in forcing his way through the wire railway fencing.

I had something to do with rhinoceros, but never succeeded in shooting one, though. I sought them for three long and hot days under the guidance of the best sportsmen in Assam, and I visited their haunts in the Sunderbunds with men of great local experience. But the rhinoceros, like all big animals, has acute senses of smelling and hearing, and makes off at the slightest indication of danger. We had a large one in the Calcutta Zoo which was very tame, and when it got a bad abscess in the head, of which it eventually died, it used to come and lie down to have its ear syringed by the veterinary surgeon, whom it learned to recognize.

There were two fine rhinoceros in the rajah's menagerie at Burdwan in the inclosure in which the crocodiles were kept, for the pond in which the crocodiles used to swim served also as a bathing place for the rhinoceros. One day a young pig had been turned into the inclosure to become food for the crocodiles, and as these animals don't travel very fast on land piggy led them a lively chase, and at last, perhaps by chance, it took refuge under the legs of one of the rhinoceros, which was looking on solemnly, but when the crocodiles approached the rhinoceros the latter presented his horn and warned the crocodiles to be off. And so the pig survived and grew up and lived for some months under the protection of the rhinoceros.—Longman's Magazine.

A Mistaken Notion.

It should be distinctly understood that the idea that ice water is injurious is a mistaken notion, imported with other English fads, like the docking of horses' manes and tails, drawling the vowels and the "stony British stare." Spinsters with chronic indigestion, stout women with their interiors in a state of constant inflammation, men whose stomachs are inflamed and people getting over the grip, with internals weak, fevered and irritable to an incredible degree rightly find ice water injurious, as cold well water would be poured over a patient in a high fever, or rather like throwing cold water on a red hot boiler. Cold water is intolerable to an inflamed eye, which finds warm water soothing, and inflamed stomachs rebel against sudden chilling draughts in the same way, but nobody feels that cold water is unsafe for healthy eyes or healthy throats.—Shirley Dare in New York Herald.

That Warm Southern Kiss.

While the kiss of a pretty woman might be considered a harmless compliment anywhere it is doubly a compliment—twice as sweet and romantic—when given beneath the oaks of a moonlit park, with the stars trembling like diamonds through the dewy leaves and the lull of flowing fountains splashing their silver spray over the bared bosoms of water nymphs and bronze gods with beautiful blind eyes.—Atlanta Constitution.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Oct. 17, 1890. Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the clerk of district court at Detroit, Minn., on Dec. 3rd, 1890, viz: Charles Durand, pre-emption D. S. No. 5991 for the sw¼ sec 34 tp 150 rg 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz:

James C. O'Brien, John Moylan, Hugh Dean, Felix O'Claire, all of Red Lake, Minn.

oc23nov27 A. Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Oct. 17, 1890. Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the clerk of the district court at Detroit, Minn., on Dec. 3rd, 1890, viz: Felix O'Claire, pre-emption D. S. No. 5987 for the e½ nw¼ nw¼ sec 33 and lot 4 sec 28 tp 150 rg 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz:

Charles Durand, James C. O'Brien, John Moylan and Hugh Dean, all of Red Lake Minn.

A. Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Oct. 17, 1890. Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the clerk of Dist Court at Detroit, Minn., on Dec. 3d, 1890, viz: James C. O'Brien, pre-emption D S No. 5984 for the se¼ sec 23 tp 150 rg 32.

He names the following witness to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz:

Felix O'Claire, Charles Durand, John Moylan, Hugh Dean, all of Red Lake, Minn.

A. Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Oct. 17, 1890. Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the clerk of District Court at Detrit, Minn., on Dec. 3d, 1890, viz: Hugh Dean, Pre-emption D. S. No. 5983 for the nw¼ nw¼ sec 23 e½ nw¼ & lot 1 sec 22 twp tp 150 rg 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence oupon and cultivation of, said land, viz:

James C. O'Brien, John Moylan, Charles Du- Felix O'Claire, all of Red Lake Minn.

A. Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn, Nov. 4, 1890. Notice is hereby given, that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the clerk of the Dist. court at Detroit, Minn., on Dec. 29, 1890, viz James Dean, pre-emption d s 5982, for the se¼ sec 1 tp 150 rg 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz

Peter Lonson, James McMahon, James Wiley, James C O'Brien, all of Red Lake, Minn.

A. Barto, Register.

Land Office at Crookston, Minn., Oct. 27th, 1890. Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the register or receiver U. S. Land Office at Crookston, Minn., on Dec. 13th, 1890, viz: Joseph Patnode, Hd No 10934, for the s½ ne¼ sec 27, tp 151, r 43.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz:

Exerie Chatel, Sam Miller, John Deforge, A. Lafontaine, all of Red Lake Falls, Minn.

nov7d13 H. H Dickmann, Register.

Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the clerk of District Court at Detroit, Minn., on December 29, 1890, viz Peter Lonson, pre-emption d s No 5986, for the s½ ne¼, and n½ se¼ sec 26, tp 150, r 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz

James Wiley, James McMahon, James C. O'Brien, James Dean, all of Red Lake, Minn.

A Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Nov. 4. 1890. Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the clerk of District Court at Detroit, Minn., on Dec. 29, 1890, viz James McMahon, pre-emption D S No 5985, for the se¼ sec 33, tp 150, rg 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz

James Wiley, Peter Lonson, James C O'Brien, James Dean, all of Red Lake, Minn.

A Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Oct. 3, 1890. Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the clerk of the district court at Detroit, Minn., on November 20, 1890, viz: Edward J. Gareeau, preemption D. S. No. 5990 for the n½ sw¼, sw¼ nw¼, sec 33 and lot 2, section 32 tp 150 r 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz: Michael Burns, John F. Crawford and Felix O'Claire, all of Red Lake, Minn.

A. Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Nov. 4 1890. Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the clerk of district court at Detroit, Minn., on Dec. 29, 1890, viz: James Wiley, pre-emption d s No. 5,992 for the s½ se¼, nw¼ se¼, and se¼ sw¼ sec 35 tp 150 rg 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz:

Peter Lonson, James McMahon, James Dean, James O'Brien, all of Red Lake, Minn.

nov6dec11 A. Barto, Register.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk—ss.

In probate court, special term Oct., 1890.

In the matter of the estate of William J. Sabnson, deceased.

Letters of administration on the estate of said deceased being this day granted unto De Forest Bucklen of said county.

It is ordered, that all claims and demands of all persons against said estate be presented to this court, for examination and allowance, at the probate office in the city of Crookston in said county on Tuesday the 18th day in May, A. D, 1891 at 10 o'clock a. m.

It is further ordered, that six months from the date hereof be allowed to creditors to present their claims against said estate, at the expiration of which time all claims not presented to said court, or not proven to its satisfaction, shall be forever barred, unless for cause shown farther time be allowed.

Ordered further, that notice of the time and place of the hearing and examination of said claims and demands shall be given by publishing this order once in each week, for three successive weeks prior to the day appointed for such examination, in the Red Lake Falls News, a weekly newspaper printed and published at the village of Red Lake Falls, in said county.

Dated at Crookston, Minn., the fourteenth day of October, A. D. 1890.

By the Court: C. O. Christianson, Judge of Probate.

Land Office at Crookston, Minn., October 7, 1890. Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the register of U S Land Office at Crookston, Minn., on Dec. 6, 1890, viz, Arthur Toupin, hd 12,187, for the w½ se¼ and e½ sw¼ sec 15, tp 150, r 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of, said land, viz,

Damas Lacnance Moses Guerard, Philias Deseautel, Cyrille Lussier, all of Brooks P. O., Minn.

H. H. Dickmann, register.

State of Minnesota, county of Polk, ss.

District Court, fourteenth judicial district.

Winnie Eason, plaintiff, against Theodore Eason, defendant.

The State of Minnesota, to the above-named defendant.

You are hereby summoned and required to answer the complaint of the plaintiff in the above entitled action, which is on file in the office of the clerk of the district court in and for the county of Polk and state of Minnesota and to serve a copy of your answer to the said complaint on the subscribers, at their office in the city of Crookston in said county, within thirty days after the service of this summons on you, exclusive of the day of such service; and if you fail to answer the said complaint within the time aforesaid, the plaintiff in this action will apply to the court for the relief demanded in said complaint.

Dated Oct. 31st, 1890.

Montague & Bucklen,
Plaintiff's attorneys, Crookston, Minn.

P. & J MEEHAN,

(SUCCESSORS TO J. J. HOWE & CO)

Manufacturers and Dealers in

LUMBER,

LATH,

SHINGLES

Sash, Doors, Moldings, Building Paper,

Yards and Office on Main St.

We Would Like to Call the Attention of

Capitalists

Manufacturers and Others Desiring a Place for

INVESTMENT

To the

Superior Advantages of

RED LAKE FALLS,

Is Many Water Powers and other natural advantages. It is only a question of a few years until this will be one of the leading cities of Minnesota. Investment in real estate or water privileges are sure to secure to the investors handsome returns.

—WE RE—

In the Center of Vast

Farming District.

Yearly consuming large amounts of imported products of manufactures. This vast tract of land is watered by the Red Lake and Clearwater rivers. Within the limits of the city are

12 DISTINCT WATER POWERS.

The only natural water powers on these streams. There are fine openings for paper and pulp mills, woolen and other factories. Parties outside desiring any information concerning property, address

THE NEWS.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

RED LAKE FALLS NEWS.

JAMES MEEHAN JR., EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR

OFFICIAL PAPER OF CITY AND COUNTY.

Vol. VII. No. 52.

RED LAKE FALLS, POLK COUNTY, MINNESOTA, DECEMBER 4, 1890.

TERMS, $1.50 PER YEAR

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

> SPECIAL <

CLOAK - SALE

> THIS WEEK <

JOSEPH SMITH & CO.

CHARLES LANGEVIN

—DEALER IN—

GENERAL MERCHANDISE,

RED LAKE FALLS, MINNESOTA

Red Lake Falls Iron Works.

P. & J MEEHAN, Proprietors.

J. Z PERRON, Manager.

SAW AND GRIST MILL

MACHINERY MADE AND REPAIRED.

Repairing Thresher Engines

AND BOILERS AND

AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS

Circular Saws Hammered. Satfaction Guaranteed, Correspondence Solicited.

BRING IN YOUR WORK

Scrap Brass and Copper Bought

Hunt & McClatchie

—DEALERS IN—

Heavy and Shelf Hardware.

DEERING FARM MACHINERY.

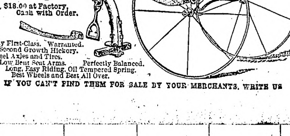
Look at Our

> Premium Offer <

At Head of Local Page.

PARRY MFG. CO.,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.



No. 7½.

Price, $18.00 at Factory, Cash with Order.

Strictly First-Class. Warranted.
All Second Growth Hickory.
Steel Axles and Tires.
Low Bent Seat Arms. Perfectly Balanced.
Long, Easy Riding, Oil Tempered Spring.
Best Wheels and Best All Over.

IF YOU CAN'T FIND THEM FOR SALE BY YOUR MERCHANTS, WRITE US

President Lincoln's Youngest Boys.

During the first year of the administration the house was made lively by the games and pranks of Mr. Lincoln's two younger children, William and Thomas; Robert, the eldest, was away at Harvard, only coming home for short vacations. The two little boys, aged 8 and 10, with their western independence and enterprise, kept the house in an uproar. They drove their tutor wild with their good natured disobedience; they organized a minstrel show in the attic; they made acquaintance with the office seekers and became the hot champions of the distressed.

William sickened and died in February, 1863. His father was profoundly moved by his death, though he gave no outward sign of his trouble, but kept about his work the same as ever. His bereaved heart seemed afterward to pour out its fullness on his youngest child. "Tad" was a merry, warm blooded, kindly little boy, perfectly lawless and full of odd fancies and inventions, the "chartered libertine" of the executive mansion.

He ran continually in and out of his father's cabinet, interrupting his gravest labors and conversations with his bright, rapid and very imperfect speech, for he had an impediment which made his articulation almost unintelligible until he was nearly grown. He would perch upon his father's knee, and sometimes even on his shoulder, while the most weighty conferences were going on. Sometimes escaping from the domestic authorities he would take refuge in that sanctuary for the whole evening, dropping to sleep at last on the floor, when the president would pick him up and carry him tenderly to bed.—Col. John Hay in Century.

Sleep.

What sleep is no one knows. The prevailing theory as to its nature is that of the physiologist Preyer, who holds that refuse matter accumulates in the nervous centers in such quantities as to bring about insensibility, which continues until the brain has been relieved of the waste matter by its absorption into the circulation.

Whatever feats of endurance men may accomplish they cannot live long without sleeping. Under every condition of bodily and mental suffering men sleep. Those condemned to die, although they fear their fate, generally sleep the night before execution. Soldiers have been known to sleep when on a long and wearisome march while walking in the ranks, or lying on a bed of stones, or in the mud and water.

The question is often asked, "How long can a man live without sleep?" The victim of the Chinese "waking torture" seldom survives more than ten days. Those condemned to die by the waking torture are given all they wish to eat and drink, but sleep is denied them.

Whenever the poor victim closes his eyes he is jabbed with spears and sharp sticks until he is awake. There is no torture more horrible.—Youth's Companion.

Crabs' Eyes for Acid Stomachs.

Crabs' eyes are employed to some extent as a remedy for acid stomachs. They are not actually the eyes of the crab, but simply small concretions of lime found in the stomachs of crayfish at the time when they are about to cast their shell and make new ones. It is supposed that these concretions are designed by nature to provide material for the new shells. At all events, having been deposited originally by animals, they are more readily absorbed into the human system. Before being administered as medicine they are pulverized.

Oyster shells are used in precisely the same way and for the same purpose, being prepared preliminarily by washing and pulverizing. The pulverized shells are placed in solution in water, the heavier and coarser particles falling to the bottom. By pouring off the solution thus obtained and permitting it to precipitate such fine particles of lime as it still retains, an exceedingly refined deposit is at length secured. Cuttlefish bones, from the sepia fish of commerce—the same that are used for canary birds—are ground up and used in the same fashion and to serve a like medical usefulness.—Washington Star.

A Jumping Alligator.

Simon Wise, one of the most truthful and matter of fact negroes in Coffee county, was in the city and he related the story of an incident which came under his observation only a few days ago. Here it is just as he related it:

"I'se er stanin sider Mud crik watchin fer ducks. I hed my ole musket filled haff full er buckshot.

"I waited an' waited, an no duck come yit. I got kinder ressless like, an' uz jess fixin' ter be gwine when I heerd er terrubble scramblin' in de trees, and fust thing I know'd down come big red fox squirrul. He runned down 'bout ten foot frum de groun' an' stop an' bark.

"After while I seed er big rusty yallergater poke up he hed outer de crik and lissen.

"De squirrul keep barkin' loud ez he cud, an' lookin' de yallergater right in de eye. De 'gater walled he eye at the squirrul an' den he tuck down he hed, and he back back twel he tail stick out on de dry groun'. Den all of a sudden dat 'gater fotch er jump an' went clar light er cross de crik an' cotch dat squirrul in he mouf."—Americus Recorder.

So They Go.

A wagon loaded with hay went up Cass avenue the other day followed by a wagon loaded with brick. The horses attached to the latter were eating their fill of hay. Behind and attached to the brick wagon was a cart heaped with kindling wood, which two Polish boys had gathered. Attached to this cart was the two wheeled rig of a banana peddler, and all three were jogging along in peace and goodfellowship. This is a world in which all should try to help one another.—Detroit Free Press.

Old Time Lock.

Elbridge G. Friend, of Gloucester, has in his possession an ancient lock which was formerly used on the original church which was erected where the first parish church in that city now stands in 1787. The lock is about 10½ inches long by 6 inches wide and about 1 inch thick, and the key is of corresponding size.—Newburyport News.

CLOAKS

BANGS & CO.

HAVE THEM.

ALL SIZES, FOR

Ladies,

MISSES AND CHILDREN.

Extra Large Sizes

CARRIED IN STOCK.

A Few Seal-plush

SACQUES

Left. Call before the assortmen of sizes is broken.

Bangs & Co.

One Door North of Bank.

RED LAKE FALLS.

THE DETECTIVE "POSTED" HIM.

Suggestions Which Aided a Man When He Met a "Bunco Steerer."

A well known artist tells a story of "forewarned, forearmed." When he was a student in Boston he and several others boarded with a woman whose husband was a detective. The detective told them from time to time stories about interesting experiences which he had had, and explained the methods of carrying on "bunco games." There are few new "bunco dodges." Nearly all of them are variations of one or two stock schemes.

"Among other things which the detectives told us," said Mr. L—— in giving the story to his friends one evening, "is an epigram in which Robert G. Ingersoll also believes. It is that the man who begins a statement with a yawn is a liar. I tell you this now, although the yawn comes in later. I had often heard my friend, the detective, tell of the "diamond game."

"I was reading in a car once on my way from Boston to New York long after I had lost sight of the detective, when some one behind me clapped me vigorously on the back, saying, 'Hello, Charley, old man.'

"'My name isn't Charley,' I said sweetly.

"'Oh, I beg your pardon,' said the man who had slapped me so generously. 'I thought you were a friend whom I often meet on the road. I am a commercial traveler—drummers, we call ourselves.' Then he went on to another seat. Presently he came back.

"'Is this seat engaged?' he asked.

"'Oh, no,' I answered pleasantly.

"'I hope you will excuse me for my rudeness,' he said. 'I felt very much like a fool when I saw what I had done.'

"He chatted entertainingly for a while and seemed a very decent fellow. Then he yawned and I looked at him.

"'My uncle died the other day,' said he.

"'Did he?'

"'He didn't treat his nephew very generously.'

"'H-m-m.'

"'He was pretty well off, was my uncle, and he left none of his money to me.'

"He yawned.

"'Nothing except a ring. I don't care for rings myself, but he always wore the diamond—prized it highly. It is said to be worth two or three hundred dollars. I never wore a ring in my life.'

"'Have you got the ring with you?' I asked.

"'Oh, yes; I have it in my pocket.'

"'How much is it worth?'

"'It isn't worth much to me because I have no use for it.'

"'What would you take for it?'

"'Oh, anything—$30, say.'

"'I couldn't afford to give that much for a ring.'

"'Well, say $25.'

"'That is a little more than I could afford.'

"The drummer turned the stone in his hand and looked at it. In the seat behind us was a man who I knew was watching us and listening. He had leaned forward until his head was over the back of our seat. He was so near that I could feel his breath. I understood that he was waiting to see if I should allow myself to be 'buncoed.' I threw my head back against the cushion and tilted my hat over my eyes. The drummer was still meditating over the ring.

"'See here, Jimmy,' I said, 'I got six months once for the same game, see?'

"The man behind me burst into a roar of laughter.

"'By Jove!' said he, 'I thought you were booked.' The 'drummer' was scurrying down the aisle making for another car."—New York Tribune.

Paying the Doctor.

A doctor who had saved the life of a lady, a personal friend, was asked his charge. He said he generally allowed his patient friends to remunerate him as they thought befitting.

"But don't you often get disappointed on these terms?" she inquired.

"I may say never."

"As you are so easily pleased, here," and she playfully gave him her empty hand, while in the other was concealed a check for a handsome sum. "How easily I could have taken you in!" she added, producing the check.

"But you have only succeeded in drawing me out," he said, declining to relinquish her hand. "Don't insult me with a check; I am most generously rewarded."

Perhaps she understood the doctor's difficulty, and wished to help him out of it; at any rate, the giving of her hand led him to offer his heart.—London Tit-Bits.

Prosperous France.

One can hardly help contrasting the marked difference between the condition of Germany and the condition of France at the present time. In spite of the disastrous war which temporarily humbled her, and in spite of the enormous tribute which she was compelled to pay to Germany, France is now one of the wealthiest and most prosperous of nations. Her army is numerically stronger than that of Germany, and the most active vigilance is displayed in keeping the army and the country on a war footing. On the other hand, Germany is hard up for money and her army is a grievous burden and strain upon the people. Germany does not want war and she is fearful that it will come. France is determined that there shall be war, but she is not going into it until she is morally confident of paying off the old score with compound interest.—Cor. Chicago News

A Pirate Bird.

Ex-Governor William G. Sterett, of Dallas, Tex., says: While on a fishing and hunting expedition on the Atlantic coast in North Carolina my attention was attracted by the shrill and frantic cries of a sea gull. As I looked upward I saw a bird resembling a hawk strike the gull under its claws, when down came a fish and the pirate bird after it. The fish had not gone ten feet before the pirate bird had it in his stomach. Then he soared upward with lightning rapidity, and descending equally as quick struck the screaming gull on its back with such force that the contents of its stomach were forced out of its mouth, and the pirate caught it in the air as it fell. At this point I took aim at the pirate with my shotgun and brought him down.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

How Severe Colds are Broken up in Montana.

When we find a medicine we know to possess genuine merit, we consider it a duty, and take pleasure in telling the public what it is. Such a medicine we found Chamberlain's Cough remedy, last winter, when la grippe was prevailing. We are satisfied that we warded off several attacks that were threatening by the use of this syrup and we have since relieved in a few hours, severe colds, and in the course of two or three days, entirely broken them up by its use, as have several of our friends to whom we have recommended it. It is all that it is represented to be by the manufacturers. If you have cough and want to stop it Chamberlain Cough remedy will do the work, for sale by W. A Schreiter.

A Preventive For Croup.

The discovery of preventive for croup, is one of the most important made in recent years. Since first discovered it has been used in many cases and with unvarying success. Its being within the reach of all makes it the more valuable. It is only necessary to give Chamberlain's cough remedy freely as soon as the first indications of croup appear, and it will dispel all symptoms of the disease. Full directions are given with each bottle. For 50 cents at Schreieters.

There may be persons in this community who are at times troubled with colic, or subject to attacks of bowel complaint. If so, they should try Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It will afford almost immediate relief, and when reduced with water is pleasant to take. If taken as soon as the first indication of the disease is felt it will ward off the attack. Many people use it in this way, and find that it never fails them. A 25 or 50 cent bottle may be obtained a W. A. Schreiter's.

THE

WISCONSIN CENTRAL LINES

NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD CO. LESSEE

RUNS

Fast trains with Pullman Vestibuled Drawing Room Sleepers, Dining Cars and Coaches of latest design, between Chicago and Milwaukee and St. Paul and Minnaapol.

Fast train with Pullmant Vestibuled Drawing Room Sleeping Dining Cars and Coaches ot latest design between Chiacgo and Milwaukee and Ashland and Duluth.

Through Pullman Vestibuled Drawing Room and Colonist Sleepers via the Northern Pacific Railroad between Chicogo and portland, Ore.

Conveniete Trains to and from Eastern, Western, Northern and Contril Wisconsin points, affording unequalled service to and from Waukesha, Fond du Lac, Oshkosk, Neenah, Menasha, Chippewa Fall, Eau Claire, Hurley, Wis., and Ironwood and Bessemer, Mich.

For tickets, sleeping car reservations, time tables and other information, apply to Agents of the line, or to ticket Agents anywhere in the United States or Canada.

S. L. Ainslie, Gen. Man., Milwaukea.
J. M. Hanaford, Gen. Traf. Man. St. Paul.
H. C. Barlow, Traffic Man. Chicago.
Louis Eckstein, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, Chicago.

CHICAGO & ATLANTIC

In conjunction with the Erie System operates Fast Vestibuled Trains between Chicago and the Atlantic Seaboard. you may travel in the most Elegant and complete Pullman Vestibuled Trains ever constructed and save $1.50 to Buffalo and Niagara Falls, $2.00 to New York $2.35 to Albany and Troy, and $3.00 to Boston and New England Cities.

No rival line offers the advantages of a system of throuh first and second-class day coaches and Pullman Dining cars chicago to New York.

It is the only line operating pullman cars to Boston and New England via Albany.

Entire trains are lighted by gas, heated by steam. Pullman dining cars run through in either direction.

Pullman chair and sleeping cars to Columbus, O., and Ashland, Ky., Daily.

No extra charge for fast time and unsurpassed accommodations afforded by these luxurious trains.

HER IDEAL.

From the New York Herald.

She wanted to reach an ideal:
  She talked of the lovely in art,
She quoted from Emerson's essays,
  And said she thought Howells had "heart,"
She doted on Wagner's productions,
  She thought comic opera low,
And she played trying tunes on a zithenr,
  Keeping time with a sandal-shod toe,

She had dreams of a nobler existence—
  A bi-cated corsetless place,
Where women would stand free and equal
  As queens of a glorious race.
But her biscuits were deadly creations
  That caused people's spirits to sink.
And she'd views upon matters religious
  That drove her relations to drink.

She'd opinions on co-education,
  But not an idea on cake;
She could analyze Spencer or Browning,
  But the new kitchen range wouldn't bake.
She wanted to be esoteric,
  And she wore the most classical clothes;
But she ended by being hysteric
  And contracting a cold in the nose.

She studied of forces hynoptic,
  She believed in theosophy quite.
She understood themes prehistoric,
  And said that the faith-cure was right.
She wanted to reach an ideal,
  And at clods unpoetic would rail;
And her husband wore fringe on his trousers
  And fastened them on with a nail!

THE DISPATCH BEARER.

THE sun shone so fiercely hot on the 17th of August, 187—, that the leaves of the trees folded themselves in humble protest and the birds crept pantingly under the shade of the brushwood which lined the banks of Otter creek in their endeavor to screen themselves from the fiery orb. But the heat seemingly had no effect upon a man who stood upon an overturned wagon which formed part of some breastwork that had been upreared upon a knoll about five hundred yards from the creek. He was shading his weary eyes with his hand as he looked earnestly along a trail which ran away to the southeast.

"No signs of the troops yet," he muttered, as he rubbed his weary eyes; "good heavens! another like this and then"——

Band! zip! rang out the report of a rifle, and a bullet buried itself in the wagon bed.

"A miss is as good as a mile, my beauties," said the soldier, for such his dress showed him to be, "though," he added after a moment's consideration, "I'd prefer the mile!"

Instantly from the hills that lay about half a mile to westward of the creek came the report of many rifles, and a shower of bullets whistled unpleasantly close to the foolhardy soldier, who now, yielding to the entreaties of his comrades, slowly descended from the breastwork and entered the corral. Inside the corral a harrowing sight met his eyes. In a pit behind the hastily thrown up parapet lay a number of wounded men vainly calling for "water, water," the murmuring of which they could almost hear as they lay there suffering from the agony of thirst augmented by the pain of their wounds. Their faces were pale and wan their lips were cracked and dry, and as the sweltering sun beat upon their dying forms they moved their heads uneasily from side to side, moaning feebly, "water, water!" It was truly a heart-rending scene.

So thought old Jones, the soldier who had just descended from the lookout; for striding over to where the commanding officer stood he requested Col. Mack to allow him to go to the creek and obtain some water for the wounded.

"Do you know that you will almost certainly sarcifice your life in so doing?" said the colonel, for the approach to the creek was swept by the enemy's fire.

"Why, sir, I allow that thar is a risk; but, sir, they're sufferin' awful," Jones returned, jerking his thumb over his shoulder to indicate what he meant by "they."

"Well, then since you will go, my brave fellow, may God protect you!" the stern old soldier returned, his gray eyes suffused with tears as he witnessed this touching trait of true heroism in the private.

Catching up a couple of buckets Jones clambered over the breastwork and walked toward the creek as cool and self possessed as if he were crossing a parade ground. As the enemy's bullets plowed up the ground in front and rear of him the hearts of his comrades stood still. They held their breath and grasped more tightly their carbines as they watched the progress of this daring soldier who was willing to lay down his life if by so doing a few wounded comrades might be benefited. Reaching the creek he filled his buckets and returned. When about half way to the camp he stopped and rested himself, calmly directing his gaze toward the enemy's lines, who, seemingly astonished by his coolness, withheld their fire and allowed him to pass unmolested.

So the day wore on. Twice the Indians had striven to carry the camp and twice had they been repulsed. But Col. Mack knew full well that he could not possibly hold out another day; his garrison was becoming weaker, his ammunition and rations were running low, and the Indians, having received a re-enforcement, were becoming bolder. The latter, also, taking advantage of the many washouts which lay between the hills and the camp, had approached to within 400 yards and were subjecting it to a most galling fire, some of the bullets even finding their way into the pit where lay the wounded.

"Some one must go and find the general," he muttered. "And yet I do not care to detail a man upon this dangerous service. I'll ask for a volunteer, and then it will be hard to decide among so gallant a command," and a smile of pride curled up the corners of his mouth, for the colonel thought—justly, perhaps—that no body of men could equal his. So resolving, he walked over to where the men were receiving their rations of one cracker and a small slice of raw bacon.

"My lads," began the colonel, in his usual quiet tone, "it is necessary that I should tell you the state of affairs. Our rations and ammunition cannot last us another twenty-four hours. If relief does not come before 9 o'clock to-night it will be imperative for some one to break through the enemy's lines and try to reach the general, who I believe is encamped somewhere on Cache creek. Now, I want a volunteer. Who'll go?" and, as he finished, for an instant a stillness fell upon the men, but was almost immediately broken by a shrill, boyish voice, followed by the deep bass of old Jack Jones.

"I'll go, colonel," they chorused. Here, again, the owner of the falsetto voice spoke up: "Let me go, colonel; Jones has a family; I hain't," he concluded, as he rose to his feet and revealed the lithe, slender form of Willie Scott, the trumpeter, and life of—troop.

"But, sir," broke in Jones, "he is only a boy. Let me go, colonel."

"But, sir," again interrupted the boy, with what he thought an all convincing argument, "I spoke first."

The colonel gazed at the two a little, the one a gray-haired, bronzed faced old veteran, the other with his blue eyes wild with excitement and an eager expression on his face that seemed to say, "I'll get there, never fear." So it was that the colonel decided upon the latter.

"Come to me at half past 8, boy," he said, and turning to old Jones he whispered, "Your chance may come yet, my brave fellow."

"I hope so," replied the old soldier, and, walking away from the spot, Jones threw himself down by an upturned wagon utterly inconsolable.

* * * * * *

It was a dark, hot, oppressive night. Not a star could be seen; the black, heavy clouds stretched themselves like a pall over the camp as the trumpeter, leading his horse, passed through an opening in the breastwork and set out upon his perilous ride.

"Mind and write to my mother, Pete, if I don't get through," he whispered to his comrade as he passed out.

"Never fear, Bunkie, but"—and here his comrade's voice grew a little husky—for God's sake, get through."

"I'll try," was the response, as they squeezed each-other's hand and parted.

Soon the watchers in the camp lost sight of the boy. The sound of the horse's hoofs grew fainter and fainter, and then died away, but still they leaned over the breastwork, straining their eyes in the darkness as they tried to catch a glimpse of their young hero.

Nearer and nearer the trumpeter approached the Indian sentinels. Sometimes he would stop, listening intently, then move on, only to stop again and press his hand over his horse's mouth when he fancied he heard a noise. Suddenly a confused babel broke out upon his right and a lurid glare shot skyward. Upon the brow of a hill scarcely a mile away he saw the Indian band dancing and yelling around a fire like a horde of demons. Creeping further away into the gloom he murmured as he mounted, "O, God! give me time." Then he rode forward.

On the top of the hill which he was ascending an Indian sentinal crouched upon the ground listening to the approach of the boy. The night was so dark that he could not make out the rider until the latter was almost upon him, when quickly firing his piece he uttered a war whoop that sounded clear across the plain, sending dismay into the hearts of the troopers below.

With a fierce exclamation the trumpeter drove his spurs into his horse's flanks and discharging his revolver at the Indian rode madly forward. Pressing his knees well into his horse's sides, with his reins firmly held in hand, he dashed down the hill, closely pursued by the Indians, who, upon the report of the firearm, had instantly flung themselves upon their ponies and started in the chase.

Now began this race for life. Never was a steeplechase harder ridden. Away they flew over hill and through divide, their horses snorting and panting with the violence of the exercise; over rocky beds of dried up rivulets, through clumps of scrub oak, the young trumpeter now pulling up so abruptly as almost to unseat himself as in the darkness he nearly dashed against a tree; then leaping over the fallen timber that lay across his path and spluttering through the mudholes in which his horse sank to the girth. Still he pressed on, while the enemy came thundering in the rear, making the night resound with their war whoops and dropping an occasional shot whenever they thought it would tell. A stern chase is proverbially a long one, and undoubtedly it would have proved so in this case had not the boy's horse in crossing a piece of rough ground stumbled. He would have fallen had not he been instantly checked up. By this accident the Indians were enabled to gain some distance, when they opened fire with a surer aim.

Bang! bang! and the bullets whistled uncomfortably close to our young hero's ear.

Spurring his animal he sought to get out of range, and nobly did his faithful friend respond. Bang! Bang! the guns rang out again, and the boy felt a stinging sensation in his left shoulder, his bridle arm falling useless by his side. The agony of the wound was intense, the motion of the horse rendered it more so, but still he retained his seat, knowing that upon his ability to get through rested the salvation of a hundred lives. Bearing now a little to the southeast he struck the trail and furiously dashed along it. The sound of his pursuers grew fainter, then ceased, but he did not seem to hear for a strange dizziness came over him and he swayed in his saddle like a drunken man. Clutching at the pommel he murmured as he thought the night grew darker, "Oh, God, let me live an hour longer, only an hour!"

So the night sped on. Sometimes the horse would relapse into a trot and anon resume his swinging lope.

"Oh! that morning would come; that night would fold up its funeral garment and the glad sunshine smile upon the earth once more!"

How cold the night seemed to the boy hero as he half fainting sat in the saddle with his head upon his breast and the warm blood trickling from his wound.

Would Cache never appear?

But, just as the rosy fingers of the morn crept up from the east, he saw with his dying eyes the long black shadow of the timber that studded the banks of the creek, and as his weary comrade uttered a joyful neigh, a bugle call rang out upon the morning air, the sound of which brightened up the boy's face, while his horse shook its head, neighed again and galloped on.

The sonnd of the horse's hoofs brought a number of men outside their tents, who, seeing the pale, death-like face of the dispatch bearer and the limp arm hanging by his side, knew instinctively what was the matter.

The latter, seeing the men around him, drew out his blood soaked dispatch and hoarsely whispering: "The general—dispatch—quick!" would have fallen from his horse had not a trooper rushed forward and catching him in his arms lifted him to the ground.

With the break of day the Indians, uttering their wild war whoops, had charged upon the camp. Bravely had they repulsed, only to come on again until their superior numbers should tell upon the white men. Now they were upon the ramparts and the defenders, almost all of whom were greviously wounded, but who seemingly felt not their wounds in the presence of the enemy, heriocally disputed every step. At last, just as a portion of the breastwork had fallen in and the Indians sprung like panthers at their prey, on the little square of white men who had hastily collected around their wounded, resolving to die as men with their faces to the foe, a ringing cheer was heard and the relief force came thundering down the slope. And as the clear, rapid notes of the "charge" echoed across the plain each drop of blood in those trooper' veins jingled exultingly against its neigbbor as they dashed among the foe. There was a crash—cheers—a volley of musktery, and the Indians were flying across the prairie pursued by the troopers whose carmined sabers were busy converting, as an officer of the regular army once said, bad Indians into good ones by giving them the route to the happy hunting grounds.

The fight was over and a portion of Col. Mack's command was saved.

That night in a hospital tent there stood a number of soldiers around the couch of one on whom death had cast its shadow. There was a sorrowful look upon the faces of the watchers as they silently awaited the issue. At last the boy opened his eyes and looked around; then as a smile of pride lit up his face he murmured as his eyelids slowly drooped, "I g-o-t t-h-e-r-e." The angel beckoned and the two went hand in hand into the silent land.

"He's gone," they told the men who had gathered outside the tent awaiting the news—gone; and the evening wind took up the refrain and sighed it to the trees, which shook their heads as if in doubt, while the stars veiled their tremulous light, as heaven in its pity sprinkled its tears upon the camp.—William K. Robertson in Kansas City Times.

Special Delivery Stamps.

He was a stamp fiend, young and precoious. The plain American stamp had no interest for him. He was making a collection of foreign ones, and so when the charge sent him down to the postoffice for a package he did not pay much attention, but brought it home and handed it over, and skipped out to play tag. Next day they showed him a new sister who had arrived. He looked at her with some curiosity.

"Say, where did she come from?"

"Oh, from heaven."

"From heaven! I know. That was the package I brought from the postoffice and I never knowed anything about it."

"Yes."

"Golly! why didn't you save me the stumps?"—San Francisco Chronicle.

The End of the World.

The nebula in Orion, Saturn and the moon are indeed suggestive of change—types they may be called of the first stage, the middle and the last that matter passes through in the long process of the evolution of worlds.

And of all changes that change has most interest for us which affects our own planet, the earth; it has reached a later stage than Saturn, though not so late a stage as the moon; but only in long ages and by minute effects will further changes be noticed.

Ages hence it may be discovered that there is some slight change in the earth's orbit; or Mercury, yet nearer to the sun than we, may be seen to pursue a smaller orbit than now, and the terrible fact may come home to man that we are drawing nearer to the sun. Time goes on, and the tropics become too hot for existence, and colder regions find a welcome change to warmth.

Age by age goes by, and the end is visibly, no nearer; but the figures of astronomers only too surely tell their tale.

Now the tropics are an impassable desert and all the life on the globe congregates around the poles. Spain has lost her vineyards and the Alps their snow; England is a burning desert and Greenland teems with the vegetation of the tropics; in smaller circles the inhabitants gather round the poles. "But," to quote the words of Mr. Keightley Miller, "the narrowed limits of the habitable earth can no longer support this vast increase of population, and famine begins to mow down its victims by millions.

"Now, indeed, the end of all life on the earth draws on apace. The heat and drought become more and more insupportable; rain, and dew fall no longer. All springs of water fail, and the rivers dwindle down to streamlets and trickle slowly over their stony beds, and now scarcity of water is added to scarcity of food. Those who escape from the famine perish by the drought are reserved for a fate more awful yet. For a time the few remaining inhabitants are partially screened from the overwhelming power of the sun by a dense canopy of clouds formed by the evaporation of every lake and sea,

"But soon the sun scorches up these vapor banks, and dissipate them into space as fast as they can form. Then the fiery orb shines out an unutterable splendor without the lightest cloud wreath to interpose between himself and his victims. Then the last denizens of the world are striken down and consumed—the last traces of organic life are blotted from its surface."—Longman's Magazine.

Like Louis Quatorze.

A curious scene was witnessed in a well-known restaurant near the Halles at an early hour one morning. A gentleman, who said his name was Adalbert, and is reported to belong to a good family, invited two men whom he met on the street to supper. They supped in a most luxurious manner, consuming several bottles of champagne. At last Adalbert knocked on the table with his stick and shouted: "Bring the bill Quick! I am Louis XIV., I don't like to be kept waiting." The proprietor brought the reckoning, which amounted to £8, and the representative of Louis XIV. tossed it to his companions, remarking: "Pay that if you like! As for me, I have only got 1s 8d in my pocket, and I intend to keep it there!" "But," expostulated his companions, "it was you who invited us to supper!" "Very likely," was the reply; "I invited you to supper, and you have supped; now I invite you to pay, therefore pay! That's my character." The result of the altercation was that all three were taken before M. Lejeune, inspector of police, who soon found out that the gentleman calling himself Adalbert was in reality a lunatic, and had already been in St. Anne's asylum for mental vagaries of a similar kind. He was sent to the infirmary of the central police station for further inquiry into the state of his mind. The other men were liberated on promising to pay the landlord when they had money enough.—Paris Cor. London Telegraph.

Mrs Smart's Nine Husbands.

Mrs. Smart, a woman living in Grayson County, Tex., has a character synonymous with her name. She is now living with her ninth husband. She is fifty-one years of age and remarkably well preserved. In her youth she was noted for her beauty. Four of her husbands were killed in the Confederate army. Another was sent to prison for fifteen years. Two subsequent husbands died, and then a lumberman whom she wedded was cut to pieces in a saw-mill. What her present husband's fate will be is not yet determined. She has eleven of her own children.

THE American wife of a Chinaman in St. Louis was annoyed by some children who had gathered at her husband's laundry to see her baby. While one of the children, named Walter Kelly, aged ten, was trying to get a sly peep at the infant, the heartless woman threw lye into his face, and utterly destroyed his sight.

Winter Excursions.

"The Burlington," with its luxurious accommodations, and its unrivaled service, has now on sale Excursion tickets at greatly reduced rates, to all principal points as below.

To all leading cities of Canada and to Portland and Bangor, Me., at low rate, good for sixty days from date of sale.

To principal pleasure and health resorts of Florida, North and South Carolina, Geogia, Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama, Louisiana, Texas, Mexico and California, and to Hot Springs, Ark., Eureka Springs, Ark., and Las Vegas, Hot Springs, New Mexico. Tickets to these points will be good for from three to six months from date of sale, with liberal stop-over privileges in most cases.

For Tickets, Rates, Sleeping-car accommodations, and further information, call on the nearest Ticket Agent of "The Burlington" or connecting lines, or address W. J. C. Kenyon, Gen'l Pass. Agent, St. Paul, Minn.

HERE is a chance for smart men. It is known that salt always attracts moisture from the air. It appears that there is too much moisture in the atmosphere of Dutch India; therefore the Government has offered a prize of $5,000 for the best suggestion as to how the salt which is sold there in little packages may be kept reasonably dry.

INFANTILE SKIN AND SCALP DISEASES CURED BY Cuticura

EVERY HUMOR OF THE SKIN AND Scalp of infancy and childhood, whether torturing, disfiguring, itching, burning, scaly, crusted, pimply, or blotchy, with loss of hair, and every impurity of the blood, whether simple, scrofulous, or hereditary, is speedily, permanently, and economically cured by the CUTICURA REMEDIES, consisting of CUTICURA, the great Skin Cure, CUTICURA SOAP, an exquisite Skin Purifier and Beautifier, and CUTICURA RESOLVENT, the new Blood Purifier and greatest of Humor Remedies, when the best physicians and all other remedies fail. Parents, save your children years of mental and physical suffering. Sold everywhere. Price, CUTICURA, 50c.; SOAP, 25c.; RESOLVENT, $1. Prepared by Potter Drug and Chemical Corporation, Boston. Send for "How to cure Skin Diseases."

Baby's skin and scalp purified and beautified by CUTICURA SOAP.

Kidney pains, backache, and muscular rheumatism relieved in one minute by the CUTICURA ANTI-PAIN PLASTER. 25c.

Rheumatism
Sciatica
NEURALGIA
Cured by St. Jacobs Oil
AT DRUGGISTS AND DEALERS.

SICK HEADACHE
CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.
Positively cured by these Little Pills. They also relieve Distress from Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Too Hearty Eating. A perfect remedy for Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Coated Tongue, Pain in the Side, TORPID LIVER. They regulate the Bowels. Purely Vegetable. Price 25 Cents.
CARTER MEDICINE CO., NEW YORK.
Small Pill, Small Dose, Small Price.

CANCERS Cured without the use of the Knife at the Iola Cancer Infirmary, Iola, Waupaca, Co. Wis. Write for book of treatment.

WANTED, men to travel and take orders (no delivering) $1,500 a year and expenses. Inclose stamp, giving references. Morlan & Co., Salem, Ohio.

AGENTS make 100 PER CENT. profit on my Corsets, Belts, Brushes, Curlers and novelties. Sample FREE. Write now. Dr. Bridgman, 373 Broadway, N. Y.

LADIES can have smaller feet. Solid comfort. Pamphlet free. Sample pkg., 10c. The Pedine Co., New York.

TANSY PILLS! Safe and Sure. Send 4c. for "WOMAN'S SAFE GUARD." Wilcox Specific Co., Phila., Pa.

ALLEN'S IRON TONIC BITTERS
The most Elegant Blood Purifier, Liver Invigorator, Tonic and Appetizer known. The first Bitters containing Iron ever advertised in America. J. P. ALLEN, Druggist & Chemist, St. Paul, Minn.

THE AMERICAN GUARANTEE LOAN AND INVESTMENT CO.
PAID UP CAPITAL, $100,000.
916 Seventeenth st., Denver, Colorado.
Has for sale 8%, 9% and 10% 1st mortgage bonds, long and short time, paper fully guaranteed, also choice Real Estate investments. Correspondence solicited.

BEECHAM'S PILLS
PAINLESS. EFFECTUAL.
WORTH A GUINEA A BOX.
For BILIOUS & NERVOUS DISORDERS
Such as Wind and Pain in the Stomach, Fullness and Swelling after Meals, Dizziness, and Drowsiness, Cold Chills, Flushings of Heat, Loss of Appetite, Shortness of Breath, Costiveness, Scurvy, Blotches on the Skin, Disturbed Sleep, Frightful Dreams, and all Nervous and Trembling Sensations, &c.
THE FIRST DOSE WILL GIVE RELIEF IN TWENTY MINUTES.
BEECHAM'S PILLS TAKEN AS DIRECTED RESTORE FEMALES TO COMPLETE HEALTH.
For Sick Headache, Weak Stomach, Impaired Digestion, Constipation, Disordered Liver, etc.,
they ACT LIKE MAGIC, Strengthening the muscular System, restoring long-lost Complexion, bringing back the keen edge of appetite, and arousing with the ROSEBUD OF HEALTH the whole physical energy of the human frame. One of the best guarantees to the Nervous and Debilitated is that BEECHAM'S PILLS HAVE THE LARGEST SALE OF ANY PROPRIETARY MEDICINE IN THE WORLD.
Prepared only by THOS. BEECHAM, St. Helens, Lancashire, England.
Sold by Druggists generally. B. F. ALLEN CO., 365 and 367 Canal St., New York, Sole Agents for the United States, who (if your druggist does not keep them) WILL MAIL BEECHAM'S PILLS on RECEIPT of PRICE, 25cts. A BOX. (MENTION THIS PAPER.)

Ely's Cream Balm For CATARRH
THE POSITIVE CURE.
THE CURE FOR CATARRH COLD IN HEAD HAY FEVER DEAFNESS HEADACHE ELY'S CREAM BALM 50c
ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren St., New York. Price 50 cts.

THE VAN DUSEN-HARRINGTON CO.,
GRAIN COMMISSION.
MINNEAPOLIS. - DULUTH.
SELL BY SAMPLE.
Best Prices. Prompt Returns. Write for quotations. Execute orders Chicago, New York or Milwaukee.

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION
25 CTS. 25 CTS.
Best Cough Medicine. Recommended by Physicians. Cures where all else fails. Pleasant and agreeable to the taste. Children take it without objection. By druggists.

The Companion Calendar
For 1891.

MONDAY
Monday for Health,
Tuesday for Wealth,
Wednesday the Best Day of All;
Thursday for Losses,
Friday for Crosses,
Saturday No Luck at All,
Sunday the Day that is Blest
With Heavenly Peace and Rest.

This Beautiful and Unique Calendar and Announcement is called "THE BOOK OF DAYS." It has Fourteen Pages finely printed in Colors, the design being selected from nearly Two Thousand received in the Prize Competition. It is considered the most novel and attractive Calendar of the year. Mailed on receipt of ten cents.

Offer to New Subscribers.

This Calendar will be sent to each New Subscriber who WILL CUT OUT and send us this advertisement, with $1.75 for a year's subscription. The Youth's Companion will be mailed from the time that the subscription is received to January, 1891, FREE, and for a full year from that date.

No other weekly paper gives so large a variety of entertaining reading at so low a price.

Double Holiday Numbers—Illustrated Weekly Supplements.

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION, Boston, Mass.

40 Send Check, Post-office Order or Registered Letter.

THE MESSAGE.

President Harrison Launches Something Like Twelve Thousand Words Upon Congress.

In His Opinion the New Tariff Law Is Precisely What the Country Needs.

To the Senate and House of Representatives: The reports of the several executive departments which will be laid before congress in the usual course will exhibit in detail the operations of the government for the last fiscal year. Only the more important incidents and results, and chiefly such as may be the foundation of the recommendations I shall submit, will be referred to in this annual message.

The vast and increasing business of the government has been transacted by the several departments during the year with faithfulness, energy and success. The revenues, amounting to above $450,000,000, have been collected and disbursed without revealing, so far as I can ascertain, a single case of defalcation or embezzlement. An earnest effort has been made to stimulate a sense of responsibility and public duty in all officers and employes of every grade, and the work done by them has almost wholly escaped unfavorable criticism.

Pursuant to the invitation authorized by congress, the representatives of every independent state of the American continent and of Hayti met in conference in this capital in October, 1889, and continued in session until the 19th of last April. This important convocation marks a most interesting and influential epoch in the history of the Western hemisphere. It is noteworthy that Brazil, invited while under an imperial form of government, shared as a republic in the deliberations and results of the conference. The recommendations of this conference were all transmitted to congress at the last session.

The legislation of congress at the last session is in conformtiy with the propositions of the conference, and the proclamation therein provided for will be issued when the other powers have given notice of their adhesion.

Toward the end of the past year the only independent monarchical government on the Western continent, that of Brazil, ceased to exist and was succeeded by a republic. Diplomatic relations were at once established with the new government, but it was not completely recognized until an opportunity had been afforded to ascertain that it had popular approval and support. When the course of events had yielded assurance of this fact no time was lost in extending to the new government a full and cordial welcome into the family of American commonwealths. It is confidently believed that the good relations of the two countries will be preserved, and that the future will witness an increased intimacy of intercourse and an expansion of their mutual commerce.

The peace of Central America has again been disturbed through a revolutionary change in Salvador, which was not recognized by other states, and hostilities broke out between Salvador and Guatemala, threatening to involve all Central America in conflict and to undo the progress which had been made toward a union of their interests. The efforts of this government were promptly and zealously exerted to compose their differences, and through the active efforts of the representatives of the United States a provisional treaty of peace was signed Aug. 26, whereby the right of the republic of Salvador to choose its own rulers was recognized. Gen. Ezeta, the chief of the provisional government, has since been confirmed in the presidency by the assembly, and diplomatic recognition duly followed.

In pursuance of the concurrent resolution of Oct. 1, 1890, I have proposed to the governments of Mexico and Great Britain to consider a conventional regulation of the passage of Chinese laborers across our southern and northern frontiers.

On the 22d day of August last Sir Edmund Monson, the arbitrator selected under the treaty of Dec. 6, 1888, rendered an award to the effect that no compensation was due from the Danish government to the United States on account of what is commonly known as the Carlos-Butterfield claim.

Our relations with the French republic continue to be cordial. Our representative at that court has very diligently urged the removal of the restrictions imposed upon our meat products, and it is believed that substantial progress has been made towards a just settlement.

The Samoan treaty, signed last year by the representatives of the United States, Germany and Great Britain, after due ratification and exchange has begun to produce salutary effects. The formation of the government agreed upon will soon replace the disorder of the past by a stable administration, alike just to the native and equitable to the three powers most concerned in trade and intercourse with the Samoan islands. The chief justice has been chosen by the king of Sweden and Norway, on the invitation of the three powers, and will soon be installed. The land commission and the municipal council are in process of organization. A rational and evenly-distributed scheme of taxation, both municipal and upon imports, is in operation. Malietoa is respected as king.

BEHRING SEA.

Hopes for a Satisfactory Adjustment of the Sealing Trouble.

The new treaty of extradition with Great Britain, after due ratification, was proclaimed on the 25th of last March. Its beneficial working is already apparent.

The difference between the two governments touching the fur seal question in the Behring sea is not yet adjusted, as will be seen by the correspondence which will soon be laid before congress. The offer to submit the question to arbitration, as proposed by Her Majesty's government, has not been accepted, for the reason that the form of submission proposed is not thought to be calculated to assure a conclusion satisfactory to either party. It is sincerely hoped that before the opening of another sealing season some arrangement may be effected which will assure to the United States a property right, derived from Russia, which was not disregarded by any nation for more than eighty years preceding the outbreak of the existing trouble.

In the tariff act a wrong was done to the kingdom of Hawaii, which I am bound to presume was wholly unintentional. Duties were levied on certain commodities which are included in the reciprocity treaty now existing between the United States and the kingdom of Hawaii, without indicating the necessary exception in favor of that kingdom. I hope congress will repair what might otherwise seem to be a breach of faith on the part of this government.

FINANCIAL AFFAIRS.

Revenues and Expenditures of the Government During the Year.

The revenues of the government from all sources for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, were $463,963,080.55, and the total expenditures for the same period were $358,618,584.52. The postal receipts have not heretofore been included in the statement of these aggregates, and for the purpose of comparison the sum of $60,882,097.92 should be deducted from both sides of the account. The surplus for the year, including the amount applied to the sinking fund, was $105,344,496.03. The receipts for 1890 were $16,030,923.79 and the expenditures $15,739,871 in excess of those of 1889. The customs receipts increased $5,835,842.88, and the receipts from internal revenue $11,725,191.89, while, on the side of expenditures, that for pensions was $19,312,075.96 in excess of the preceding year.

The treasury statement for the current fiscal year, partly actual and partly estimated, is as follows: Receipts from all sources, $406,000,000; total expenditures, $354,000,000, leaving a surplus of $52,000,000—not taking the postal receipts into account on either side. The loss of revenue from customs for the last quarter is estimated at $25,000,000, but from this is deducted a gain of about $16,000,000, realized during the first four months of the year. For the year 1892 the total estimated receipts are $373,000,000, and the estimated expenditures $357,852,209.42, leaving an estimated surplus of $15,147,790.58, which, with a cash balance of $52,000,000 at the beginning of the year, will give $67,147,790.58 as the sum available for the redemption of outstanding bonds or other uses. The estimates of receipts and expenditures for the postoffice department, being equal, are not included in this statement on either side.

The act "directing the purchase of silver bullion and the issue of treasury notes thereon," approved July 14, 1890, has been administered by the secretary of the treasury with an earnest purpose to get into circulation at the earliest possible dates the full monthly amounts in the treasury notes contemplated by its provisions, and at the same time to give to the market for silver bullion such support as the law contemplates. The recent depreciation in the process of silver has been observed with regret. The rapid rise in price which anticipated and followed the passage of this act was influenced in some degree by speculation, and the recent reaction is in part the result of the same cause and in part of the recent monetary disturbances. Some months of further trial will be necessary to determine the permanent effect of the recent legislation upon silver values; but it is gratifying to know that the increased circulation secured by the act has exerted and will continue to exert a most beneficial influence upon business and upon general values.

I notice with great pleasure the statement of the secretary that the receipts from internal revenue have increased during the last fiscal year nearly $12,000,000 and that the cost of collecting revenue was less by $90,617 than for the same purpose in the preceding year. The percentage of cost of collecting the customs revenue was less for the last fiscal year than ever before.

The customs administration board provided for by the act of June 10, 1890, was selected with great care and is composed in part of men whose previous experience in the administration of the old customs regulations had made them familiar with the evils to be remedied, and in part of men whose legal and judicial acquirements and experience seemed to fit them for the work of interpreting and applying the new statute. The chief aim of the law is to secure honest valuations of all dutiable merchandise and to make these valuations uniform at all our ports of entry. It had been made manifest by a congressional investigation that a system of undervaluation had been long in use by certain classes of importers, resulting not only in a great loss of revenue, but in a most intolerable discrimination against honesty. It is not seen how this legislation, when it is understood, can be regarded by the citizens of any country having commercial relations with us as unfriendly. If any duty is supposed to be excessive, let the complaint be lodged there. It will surely not be claimed by any well disposed people that a remedy may be sought and allowed in a system of quasi smuggling.

OUR GROWING NAVY.

Nine New Vessels Put In Commission During the Year.

The construction and equipment of the new ships for the navy have made very satisfactory progress. Since March 4, 1889, nine new vessels have been put in commission, and during this winter four more, including one monitor, will be added. The construction of the other vessels authorized is being pushed, both in the government and private yards, with energy, and watched with the most scrupulous care.

The experiments conducted during the year to test the relative resisting power of armor plates have been so valuable as to attract great attention in Europe. The only part of the work upon the new ships that is threatened by unusual delay is the armor plating, and every effort is being made to reduce that to the minimum. It is a source of congratulation that the anticipated influence of these modern vessels upon the esprit de corps of the officers and seamen has been fully realized. Confidence and pride in the ship among the crew are equivalent to a secondary battery. Your favorable consideration is invited to the recommendations of the secretary.

NOBLE'S REPORT.

Review of the Work in the Department of the Interior.

The report of the secretary of the interior exhibits with great fullness and clearness the vast work of that department and the satisfactory results attained. The suggestions made by him are earnestly commended to the consideration of congress, though they cannot all be given particular mention here.

The several acts of congress looking to the reduction of the larger Indian reservations, to the more rapid settlement of the Indians upon individual allotments, and the restoration to the public domain of lands in excess of their needs, have been largely carried into effect, so far as the work was confided to the executive. Agreements have been concluded since March 4, 1889, involving the cession to the United States of about 14,726,000 acres of land. These contracts have, as required by law, been submitted to congress for ratification and for the appropriations necessary to carry them into effect. Those with the Sisseton and Wahpeton, Sac and Fox, Iowa Pottawattamies and absentee Shawnees and Cœur d'Alene tribes have not received the sanction of congress. Attention is also called to the fact that the appropriations made in the case of the Sioux Indians have not covered all the stipulated payments. This should be promptly corrected. If an agreement is confirmed all of its terms should be complied with without delay and full appreciations should be made.

The policy outlined in my last annual message in relation to the patenting of lands to settlers upon the public domain has been carried out in the administration of the land office. No general suspicion or imputation of fraud has been allowed to delay the hearing and adjudication of individual cases upon their merits. The purpose has been to perfect the title of honest settlers with such promptness that the value of the entry might not be swallowed up by the expenses and extortions to which delay subjected the claimant. The average monthly issue of agricultural patents has been increased about 6,000.

The disability pension act, which was approved on the 27th of June last, has been put into operation as rapidly as was practicable. The increased clerical force provided was selected and assigned to work, and a considerable part of the force engaged in examinations on the field was recalled and added to the working force of the office. The examination and adjudication of claims have, by reason of improved methods, been more rapid than ever before. There is no economy to the government in delay, while there is much hardship and injustice to the soldier. The anticipated expenditure, while very large, will not, it is believed, be in excess of the estimates made before the enactment of the law. This liberal enlargement of the general law should suggest a more careful scrutiny of bills for special relief, both as to the cases where relief is granted and as to the amount allowed.

The increasing numbers and influence of the non-Mormon portion in Utah are observed with satisfaction. The recent letter of Wilford Woodruff, president of the Mormon church, in which he advised his people "to refrain from contracting any marriage forbidden by law," has attracted wide attention, and it is hoped that its influence will be highly beneficial in restraining all infractions of the laws of the United States. But the fact should not be overlooked that the doctrine or belief of the church that polygamous marriages are rightful and supported by divine revelation remains unimpaired. President Woodruff does not renounce the doctrine, but refrains from teaching it, and advises against the practice of it because the law is against it. It is quite true that the law should not attempt to deal with the faith or belief of any one; but it is quite another thing, and the only safe thing, so to deal with the Territory of Utah as that those who believe polygamy to be rightful shall not have the power to make it lawful.

The admission of the States of Wyoming and Idaho to the Union are events full of interest and congratulation, not only to the people of those states, now happily endowed with a full participation in our privileges and responsibilities, but to all our people. Another belt of states stretches from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

The work of the patent office has won from all sources very high commendation. The amount accomplished has been very largely increased, and all the results have been such as to secure confidence and consideration for the suggestions of the commissioner.

The enumeration of the people of the United States under the provisions of the act of March 1, 1890, has been completed and the result will be at once officially communicated to congress. The completion of this decennial enumeration devolves upon congress the duty of making a new apportionment of representatives "among the several states according to their respective numbers."

THE NEW DEPARTMENT.

Especial Attention Called to the Report of the Secretary of Agriculture.

The report of the secretary of agriculture deserves especial attention in view of the fact that the year has been marked in a very unusual degree by agitation and organization among the farmers looking to an increase in the profits of their business. It will be found that the efforts of the department have been intelligently and zealously directed to the promotion of the interests intrusted to its care.

A very substantial improvement in the markets prices of the leading farm products has been realized during the year. The price of wheat advanced from 81 cents in October, 1889, to $1.00¾ in October, 1890; corn from 31 cents to 50¼ cents; oats from 19¼ cents to 43 cents, and barley from 63 cents to 78 cents. Meats showed a substantial but not an large increase. Export trade in live animals and fowls show a very large increase; the total value of such exports for the year ending June 30, 1890, was $33,000,000, and the increase over the preceding year was over $15,000,000. Nearly 200,000 more cattle and over 45,000 more hogs were exported than in the preceding year. The export trade in beef and pork products and in dairy products was very largely increased, the increase in the article of butter alone being from $15,504,988 pounds to 29,748,042 pounds, and the total increase in the value of meat and dairy products exported being $34,000,000. This trade, so directly helpful to the farmer, it is believed will be yet further and very largely increased when the system of inspection and sanitary supervision now provided by law is brought fully into operation.

The information given by the secretary of the progress and prospects of the beet sugar industry is full of interest. It has already passed the experimental stage and is a commercial success. The area over which the sugar beet can be successfully cultivated is very large, and another field crop of great value is offered to the choice of the farmer.

The secretary of the treasury concurs in the recommendation of the secretary of agriculture that the official supervision provided by the tariff law for sugar of domestic production shall be transferred to the department of agriculture.

THE NEW TARIFF.

Its Permanent Effects Upon Trade and Prices Still Largely Conjecture.

The general tariff act has only partially gone into operation, some of its important provisions being limited to take effect at dates yet in the future. The general provisions of the law have been in force less than sixty days. Its permanent effects upon trade and prices still largely stand in conjecture. It is curious to note that the advance in the prices of articles wholly unaffected by the tariff act were by many ascribed to that. Notice was not taken of the fact that the general tendency of the markets was upward from influences wholly apart from the recent tariff legislation. The enlargement of our currency by the silver bill undoubtedly gave an upward tendency to trade and had a marked effect on prices; but this natural and decided effect of the silver legislation was by many erroneously attributed to the tariff act.

There is neither wisdom nor justice in the suggestion that the subject of tariff revision shall be opened before this law has had a fair trial. It is quite true that our tariff schedules are subject to objections. No bill was ever framed, I suppose, that in all its rates and classifications had the full approval even of a party caucus. Such legislation is always and necessarily the product of compromise as to detalns, and the present law is no exception. But in its general scope and effect I think it will justify the support of those who believe that American legislation should conserve and defend American trade and the wages of American workmen.

The reciprocity clause of the tariff act wisely and effectively opens the way to secure a large reciprocal trade in exchange for the free admission to our ports of certain products. The right of independent nations to make special reciprocal trade concessions is well established, and does not impair either the comity due to other powers, or what is known as the "favored nation clause," so generally found in commercial treaties. What is given to one for an adequate agreed consideration cannot be claimed by another freely. The state of the revenues was such that we could dispense with any import duties upon coffee, tea, hides, and the lower grades of sugar and molasses. That the large advantage resulting to the countries producing and exporting these articles by placing them on the free list entitled us to expect a fair return in the way of customs concessions upon articles exported by us to them was so obvious that to have gratuitously abandoned this opportunity to enlarge our trade would have been an unpardonable error.

The indications thus far given are very favorable to action by the countries from which we receive our large imports of coffee and sugar, and it is confidently believed that if steam communication with countries is improved and enlarged, the next year will show a most gratifying increase in our exports of breadstuffs and provisions, as well as of some important lines of manufactured goods.

PENDING LEGISLATION.

Its Proper Consideration Will Require That No Working Day Be Lost.

In addition to the important bills that became laws before the adjournment of the last session, some other bills of the highest importance were well advanced toward a final vote and now stand upon the calendars of the two houses in favored positions. The present session has a fixed limit, and if these measures are not now brought to a final vote, all the work that has been done upon them by this congress is lost. The proper consideration of these, of an apportionment bill, and of the annual appropriation bills will require not only that no working day of the session shall be lost, but that measures of minor and local intesest shall not be allowed to interrupt or retard the progress of those that are of universal interest. In view of these conditions, I refrain from bringing before you at this time some suggestions that would otherwise be made, and most earnestly invoke your attention to the duty of perfecting the important legislation now well advanced. To some of these measures, which seem to me most important, I now briefly call your attention.

UNADJUSTED LAND GRANTS.

A Commission for the Trial of Questions of Title Needed.

The subject of the unadjusted Spanish and Mexican land grants and the urgent necessity or providing some commission or tribunal for the trial of questions of title growing out of them were twice brought by me to the attention of congress at the last session. Bills have been reported from the proper committees in both houses upon the subject, and I very earnestly hope that this congress will put an end to the delay which has attended the settlement of the disputes as to title between the settlers and the claimants under these grants. These disputes retard the prosperity and disturb the peace of large and important communities. The governor of New Mexico, in his last report to the secretary of the interior, suggests some modification of the provisions of the pending bill relating to the small holdings of farm lands. I commend to your attention the suggestions of the secretary of the interior upon the subject.

CONGRESSIONAL ELECTIONS.

Free and Honest Elections the First Essential of National Life.

If any intelligent and loyal company of American citizens were required to catalogue the essential conditions of national life, I do not doubt that with absolute unanimity they would begin with "Free and honest elections." And it is gratifying to know that generally there is a growing and non-partisan demand for better election laws. But against this sign of hope and progress must be set the depressing and undeniable fact that election laws and methods are sometimes cunningly contrived to secure minority control, while violence completes the shortcomings of fraud.

One cannot be justly charged with unfriendliness to any section or class who seeks only to restrain violations of laws and of personal right. No community will find lawlessness profitable. No community can afford to have it known that the officers who are charged with the preservation of the public peace and the restraint of the criminal classes are themselves the product of fraud or violence. The magistrate is then without respect and the law without sanction. The floods of lawlessness cannot be leveled and made to run in one channel. The killing of a United States marshal carrying a writ of arrest for an election offense is full of promptings and suggestion to men who are pursued by a city marshal for a crime against life or property.

I venture again to remind you that the brief time remaining for the consideration of the important legislation now awaiting your attention offers no margin for waste. If the present duty is discharged with diligence, fidelity and courage the work of the Fifty-first congress may be confidently submitted to the considerate judgment of the people.

Executive mansion, Dec. 1, 1890.

BENJAMIN HARRISON.

He Got Enough to Eat.

In one of the leading hotels a few days ago one of those blundering independent farmers was the star figure in a very amusing incident. He came in and sat down at a table where I was breakfasting and began studying the bill of fare. The printed list of eatables confused him not a little, but he made a bold bluff at the waiter and then leaned back in his chair satisfied that he would soon have a good breakfast. But he drew a blank. He had made a bad choice from the bill of fare and did not get enough to keep a squirrel from starving. He put it out of sight in a jiffy. He was still hungry and began to figure on some way to get another deal. He examined the card for a few moments and then began trying to catch a waiter. But they all were busy and did not notice the famished tiller of the soil.

He tapped with his knife on his plate, called "hey, there!" and tried to pluck their sleeves. It was no go, and his efforts remained unheeded. Finally, driven to desperation, he put his two thumbs in his mouth and whistled. Such a whistle, too! It could have been heard a mile. The waiters jumped as if they had been shot, and two nervous ladies screamed a little. The solemn head waiter and two or three of his nimble assistants ran to the old man, who calmly said: "I wish you would pass the victuals again. I didn't get enough." He soon had enough around him, and the head waiter kept an eye on him to see that the supply remained good.—Exchange.

The Original Phonograph.

It has been proved that Columbus did not discover America and that the Italian did not invent the mariner's compass. It has been proved that Morse did not invent an electric telegraph, that Howe did not invent a sewing machine, that Cyrus McCormick did not invent a reaper, and that Fulton did not invent a steamboat. Now somebody turns up the Courier Veritable, a magazine published in 1632, to prove that Edison did not invent the phonograph. That publication announces that "Capt. Vosterlich has returned from a voyage in Australasia. He reports having passed by a strait below that of Magellan; he landed in a country where nature furnished men with certain sponges which retain sounds as other sponges do liquors. So that when they wish to ask something or confer at a distance they speak into one of the sponges and send it to their friends, who, having received it, press it gently and make the words come out."—From the Hamilton Spectator.

Jay Gould's wonderful new yacht was, it is said, most completely and elegantly furnished. Among other useful and indespensable things ordered for it was a box of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, the famous old remedy for the cure of coughs and colds.

The healing and purifying qualities of Salvation Oil render it the best article for the speedy and safe cure of ulcerated sores. Price 25 cents.

Thoughtful people habitually lower the head and eyes.

DESERVING OF CONFIDENCE.—There is no article which so richly deserves the entire confidence of the community as BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES. Those suffering from Asthmatic and Bronchial Diseases, Coughs and Colds should try them. Price 25 cents.

Severe pains in the bowels and stomach are often speedily relieved by the application of a bag of hot salt.

GARFIELD TEA has cured Constipation of twenty-two years standing; housewives will find in it a priceless boon.

The favorite linen for embroidery is of the "old bleach" manufacture. This linen is woven with a firm round thread of a superior quality of flax, and is grass bleached.

Is it economy to save a few cents buying a cheap soap or strong washing powder, and lose dollars in ruined rotted clothes? If not, use Dobbin's Electric Soap, white as snow, and as pure. Ask your grocer for it.

"If the white of an egg be mixed with a cupful of beef tea and heated to 160 deg. the value of the beef tea is greatly enhanced," says the Lancet.

Be On Time!

Excellent advice always. Adopt it in the treatment of kidney and bladder inactivity, and you will avoid danger. Healthfully, but moderately, impel these organs, if sluggish, to act by the early use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, no less a diuretic than a tonic and general alterative. Don't forget, also, the timely aid it affords when malarial, liver and rheumatic complaints manifest themselves.

When cutting the table cloth before hemming it always save the pieces, because these ravelings are the best threads to darn all napery.

Beecham's Pills act like magic on a weak stomach.

Toast is more easily digested than plain bread if the toast is eaten soon after it is made. Toast that has grown cold is not so easily digested as bread.

Not a Local Disease

Because catarrh affects your head, it is not therefore a local disease. If it did not exist in your blood, it could not manifest itself in your nose. The blood now in your brain is before you finish reading this article, back in your heart again and soon distributed to your liver, stomach, kidneys, and so on. Whatever impurities the blood does not carry away, causes what we call disease. Therefore when you have catarrh of the head, a snuff or other inhalant can at most give only temporary relief. The only way to effect a cure is to attack the disease in the blood, by taking a constitutional remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which eliminates all impurities and thus permanently cures catarrh. The success of Hood's Sarsaparilla as a remedy for catarrh is vouched for by many people it has cured.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

N. W. N. U. 1890 No. 49.

He Knew a Hoss.

Some men down in Belfast thought to puzzle a local jockey by bringing out two sorry looking equines, one considerably larger than the other, and asking him which was the better one. But he was not caught napping. He looked each carefully over, examining the feet of each, and then rendered judgment as follows:

"One's worth just as much as t'other."

"How's that?" asked the crowd.

"Well, the big one has got more hide and bones than the smaller one but the latter has got the best shoes on, which makes it about an even thing."—Lewiston Journal.

A Better Charm.

A boy was knocking the horse chestnuts off a tree on Cass avenue when a pedestrian observed:

"I suppose you think they will act as a charm to ward off rheumatism, but they won't."

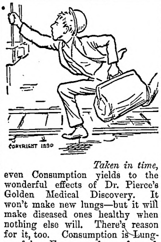
"I didn't suppose they would," replied the lad.

"Then what do you want of them?"

"To act as a charm to ward off lickins. I know a boy who carried four of them in his pockets and didn't get licked in four straight weeks!"—Detroit Free Press.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria,

A CRITICISM on current life was made recently by a New Yorker, whose ideas are always worth hearing, that the public as a rule is prone to be interested in things afar. We ignore the extremes of misery and poverty as they exist in our own cities, and are eager to listen to delectable tales of the cannibals of the South Sea Islands.



Taken in time, even Consumption yields to the wonderful effects of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It won't make new lungs—but it will make diseased ones healthy when nothing else will. There's reason for it, too. Consumption is Lung-scrofula. For every form of scrofula, and all blood-taints, the "Discovery" is a positive cure. It's the most potent strength-restorer, blood-cleanser, and flesh-builder known to medical science. For Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Bronchitis, Asthma, Catarrh, and all lingering Coughs, it's an unequaled remedy. It's a guaranteed one. If it doesn't benefit or cure, you have your money back. You've everything to gain from it—nothing to lose.

It's especially potent in curing Tetter, Salt-rheum, Eczema, Erysipelas, Boils, Carbuncles, Sore Eyes, Goitre, or Thick Neck, and Enlarged Glands, Tumors and Swellings. Great Eating Ulcers rapidly heal under its benign influence.

Dr. Frank Powell.
(WHITE BEAVER.)

LA CROSSE, WIS. Healy Block, Second & Main Sts. Every Thursday, Friday, Sat.
ST. PAUL, MINN. Union Block, Fourth & Cedar Sts. Every Monday, Tuesday, Wed.

FAT FOLKS REDUCED

"Before I had taken your medicine one week I could breathe easier; the bloating, stuffy and logy feeling had left me; the action of the heart became natural; the pain and palpitation entirely disappeared. I have lost 35 lbs. I feel splendid in every way. There is no bad or disagreeable effect from your treatment, and I can cheerfully recommend it to all sufferers from obesity."—Carrie L. Faulkenberg, 624 North C St., Oskaloosa, Iowa.

PATIENTS TREATED BY MAIL.
No starving, no inconvenience, harmless and no bad effects. Strictly confidential. For circulars and testimonials address with 6c. in stamps.
DR. O. W. F. SNYDER, 243 STATE ST. CHICAGO.

A PRESENT.

SEND us your address and we will make you a present of the best Automatic WASHING MACHINE in the World. No wash-board or rubbing needed. We want you to show it to your friends, or act as agent if you can. You can COIN MONEY. We also give a HANDSOME WATCH to the first from each county. Write quick. Address N. Y. LAUNDRY WORKS, 5 Dey St., N. Y.

PENSION LAND AND INDIAN DEPARTMENT CLAIMS.

Special attention given to the above. NATHAN BICKFORD, "B" 5th N. H. Inft., Solicitor of Claims Washington, D. C. References furnished in any State. Blanks and information free.

WEAK MEN!! REMEDY FREE, vigor restored, I have found a certain Self Cure which I will gladly send FREE to any fellow sufferer. It cured me after all else had failed. Address R.T. Hamilton, Box 61 Albion, Mich.

PENSIONS The Disability Bill is a Law. Dependent widows and parents are included. If you wish your claim quickly and Successfully Prosecuted, write to JAMES TANNER, late Commissioner of Pensions, Washington, D. C.

PATENTS Inventor's Guide or How to obtain a Patent, sent free.
PATRICK O'FARRELL,
Att'y at Law, Washington, D. C.

LOTS of fun can be had with a newly contrived sheet-iron cat which is worked by clockwork, and which has a bellows inside of it which swells up its tail to the size of the maddest of mousers. It emits a m-e-o-w which is a close imitation of the natural feline cry, and has, in addition, steel claws and teeth. You wind it up and place it on your roof, and set it meowing. All the cats in the neighborhood come around, and its poisoned claws kill every one it strikes.

SYRUP of FIGS

ONE ENJOYS

Both the method and results when Syrup of Figs is taken; it is pleasant and refreshing to the taste, and acts gently yet promptly on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels, cleanses the system effectually, dispels colds, headaches and fevers and cures habitual constipation. Syrup of Figs is the only remedy of its kind ever produced, pleasing to the taste and acceptable to the stomach, prompt in its action and truly beneficial in its effects, prepared only from the most healthy and agreeable substances, its many excellent qualities commend it to all and have made it the most popular remedy known.

Syrup of Figs is for sale in 50c and $1 bottles by all leading druggists. Any reliable druggist who may not have it on hand will procure it promptly for any one who wishes to try it. Do not accept any substitute.

CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
LOUISVILLE, KY. NEW YORK, N.Y.

WOONSOCKET

INVADER. With or without fur trimming. Just the thing for girls and misses. Women wear them, too.

Like all Woonsocket Rubbers, fit and wear are the best.

Send for Catalogue.
WOONSOCKET RUBBER CO.
PROVIDENCE, R.I.

RUBBERS

VASELINE.

FOR ONE DOLLAR sent us by mail, we will deliver, free of all charges, to any person in the United States, all the following articles carefully packed in a neat box:

One two ounce bottle of Pure Vaseline	10cts.
One two ounce bottle Vaseline Pomade	15 "
One jar of Vaseline Cold Cream	15 "
One cake of Vaseline Camphor Ice	10 "
One cake of Vaseline Soap, unscented	10 "
One cake of Vaseline Soap, scented	25 "
One two ounce bottle of White Vaseline	25 "
	$1.10

Or for stamps any single article at the price.

If you have occasion to use Vaseline in any form be careful to accept only genuine goods put up by us in original packages. A great many druggists are trying to persuade buyers to take VASELINE put up by them. Never yield to such persuasion, as the article is an imitation without value, and will not give you the result you expect. A bottle of Blue Seal Vaseline is sold by all druggist at ten cents.

Chesebrough M'f'g Co., 24 State St, New York.

Caton's College

703 NICOLLET AVE., MINNEAPOLIS, is now the largest and best Business College in the Northwest. SHORT-HAND, TYPEWRITING, BOOK-KEEPING, Commercial Law, Penmanship and the common English branches are taught by the best of teachers. For College Journal, address T. J. CATON.

FOR MEN ONLY!

A POSITIVE CURE For LOST or FAILING MANHOOD; General and NERVOUS DEBILITY; Weakness of Body and Mind; Effects of Errors or Excesses in Old or Young. Robust, Noble MANHOOD fully Restored. How to Enlarge and Strengthen WEAK, UNDEVELOPED ORGANS & PARTS of BODY. Absolutely unfailing HOME TREATMENT—Benefits in a day. Men testify from 47 States, Territories, and Foreign Countries. You can write them. Book, full explanation, and proofs mailed (sealed) free. Address ERIE MEDICAL CO., BUFFALO, N. Y.

BIG G

Cures in 1 TO 5 DAYS. Guaranteed not to cause Stricture.
Mf'd only by the Evans Chemical Co. Cincinnati, Ohio.
Trade Mark

I prescribe and fully endorse Big G as the only specific for the certain cure of this disease.
G. H. INGRAHAM, M. D., Amsterdam, N. Y.

We have sold Big G for many years, and it has given the best of satisfaction.
D. R. DYCHE & CO., Chicago, Ill.

$1.00. Sold by Druggists.

A PACKAGE OF ELEGANT CHRISTMAS CARDS FREE!
A HOLIDAY GIFT FOR LADIES.

THE LADIES' WORLD is one of the most attractive and valuable papers published for ladies and the family. Each issue comprises [illegible] large four-column pages. It is profusely and beautifully illustrated, and its contents embrace high-class Fiction by the best American authors, the choicest Poetry, Artistic Needlework, Home Decoration, Housekeeping, Mother's, Children's and Fashion Departments, "The Family Physician," and choice Miscellany. [illegible] to procure the best. Each issue is replete with practical hints and useful suggestions of the utmost value to every lady, in addition to the vast fund of entertaining reading provided. No intelligent household should be without it. To introduce this charming paper into thousands of homes wherein it is not already taken, we now make the following liberal Holiday offer: Upon receipt of only Sixteen Cents (stamps or silver), we will send The Ladies' World for Three Months, and to each subscriber we will also send free and post paid, A Package of Elegant Christmas Cards, containing 12 assorted styles and sizes, all in beautiful colors, many richly embossed. We guarantee the Cards in this package to be worth alone more than double the price charged for both them and the paper. [illegible] Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. We refer to any publisher in N. Y. as to our reliability. [illegible]
THE LADIES' WORLD, 27 Park Place, New York.

THE NEWS.

Entered at the post office at Red Lake Falls as second-class mail matter.

Official Paper of the County.

Official Paper of the City.

Jas. Meehan, Jr. Editor and Prop.

The Clay of the next congress will be from the Fifth district of Minnesota.

When you are desirous of making a respectable, thinking man of the fifth district look silly, mention the name of our next congressman.

The Fisher Bulletin comes to us this week under new management, with a very fine dress, full of good reading matter, a credit to Red River Valley journalism.

There are at least seventeen applicants for the office of deputy sheriff in this village and adjoining townships. Oh, no, the farmers don't want offices; they'r fighting for principle.

It looks very much as though Gov. Hill will certainly be the next democratic nominee for president. He tought nobly for the Democrats while Grover Cleveland was figuring with mugwumpery how to carry New York state in '92.

The News evidently mistakes the object of the farmers' movement. It was for principle, not offices, the farmers were fighting.—Crookston Times.

In this great battle for principle it is to be noted that McKenzie wasn't with them.

We never thought the rural districts of Minnesota needed the australian system of ballot reform, but the last election demonstrates the necessity of its adoption as soon as possible; for the sake of personal liberty let the law be enacted at the coming session of the legislature; so that at next election the farmers as well as others can vote without having the finger of derision pointed at him or be branded as a traitor.

President Harrison's message is very comprehensive and touches upon everything from our Alaskan shores, where England continues to pluck the feathers from the American eagle's tail, to Brazil, Cuba and the Congo states. He endorses the McKinley bill and says it only requires time to have its advantages appreciated by the American people. He says farm products are much higher now than a year ago, and commends Uncle Jerry Rush to the good graces of the people for the good he has done in experimenting with the sugar beet and says it will be a source of great revenue to the farmer. We don't think the message will be satisfactory to the masses as his advocacy of the McKinley bill and force bill following the elections shows a disposition on the part of the president to disregard the voice of the people who only a month ago repudiated the actions of congress and the president.

The amount of bonds required from some of the county officers makes them have a sort of "hankering" to be at home attending to their farm duties. The amount of the salary does not equal the responsibility, much less pay for the work. Still, according to the alliance promises, these salaries must be cut down as a matter of economy; as a preventive of robbery; as a reproach to ring rule. We think the best solution of this problem would be a division of the county. Let us have three counties out of Polk—the county seats of the new counties being Red Lake Falls and Fosston. Then would we have counties of a respectable size, where so much work and responsibility would not be thrown upon any one officer. This would be a fair and equitable division—of the greatest benefit to the greatest number. It is to the interest of the farmers more than anyone that we have a division of the county. Let them petition their representatives to act in the matter.

Electric Bitters

This remedy is becoming so well known and so popular as to need no special mention. All who have used Electris Bitters sing the same song of praise.—A purer medicine does not exist and it is guaranteed to do all that it is claimed. Electric Bitters will cure all deases of the Liver and kidneys, will remove Pimples Boiles, Salt Rueum and other affections caused by impure blood.—Will drive Malaria from the system and prevent as well as cure all Malarial fevers.—For cure Headache, Consumption and Indigestion try Electric Bitters—Entire satisfactory guaranteed, or money refund.-price 50c and 1.00 a bottle at Schreiter's

Bucklin's Arnica Salve.

The best salve in the world for cuts. bruises, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by W. A. Schreiter.

FREAKS OF REAL MERIT.

RECOLLECTIONS OF A MAN WHO HAS HAD MANY TRADES.

Details of a Museum That Once Flourished in St. Louis—The Elephant Man, the Horned Man and the Vegetable Boy—How They Were All Cultivated.

He was a pale, spare man, who didn't in the least resemble the ordinary commercial traveler, but that's what he was, and he used to say sometimes that he could stalk a new customer closer than most men in his business. But he had a gentle, almost debilitated manner, which gained him sympathy among strangers, and he always sold big bills of dye stuffs, which was his "line." His name was Evander Thompson.

Just now he was walking feebly about New York with a cloth manufacturer from the interior of New Hampshire, whom he knew in the way of business, and who had come to town to buy wool and whom Mr. Thompson had met by chance. The New Hampshire man had been attracted by the flaring announcements of a dime museum, and the two men had just been exploring its marvels.

As they came out and walked slowly down the street Mr. Thompson said in his diffident way: "Now, I don't think so much of those freaks in that place. Seems to me if I had that show I'd find something more worth while exhibiting. I used to be in that business once. Oh, it's a good many years ago, and it was only a small show that I had for a few months in St. Louis, but I vow it was more of a show than that."

"Sho!" said the New Hampshire manufacturer; "who'd 'a' thought you was ever in the museum business? What did ye have?"

SUCCESS IN A SMALL WAY.

"Well," said Mr. Thompson, as he gently rubbed his chin with his left hand, "I had two or three things which I never saw anywhere else. There was the elephant nosed man, as we used to call him, because he had a nose like this," and he described a long curve in front of his face with one pale, thin finger. "I made him myself, that is, the nose part of him, and this is the way it happened:

"I had a neighbor out there that was given to boils; he used to have 'em most anywhere, and he finally got a big red one on the end of his nose. Well, I saw it, and I got him to poulticing the thing, and poultices are pretty stimulating, and some way the thing got started a-growing, and you know Nature's queer, she is. When you once get her started you can't stop her till she gets ready. And so with this fellow's nose. It got a-growin', and I'm blest if it didn't grow right on through that boil and come out all right on the other side of it. In a few days the boil appeared to be 'way up on the bridge of his nose, and the nose grew for several weeks steady, till it was full 's long as this."

Here Mr. Thompson paused to breathe and to hold his two forefingers about a foot apart. "That was what suggested the show to me. I told the man I'd take him into partnership to go out on the road with me as a freak. He was to furnish the nose and I the business management, and we would divide even on the profits. Well, he didn't like the idea at first, but as his occupation—he was the French horn in a brass band—was gone, he was kind o' discouraged and willing to take up with most anything. We showed to big crowds everywhere and made heaps o' money, and one day I got an idea for another freak.

"There was a man came into the hall one day where the combination was showing with a great big wen on his forehead, and it occurred to me that if I could get that fellow's wen started to growing the way I did the other fellow's nose I could make a horned man of him. I saw he seemed kind of interested in the business, so I explained matters to him, and he agreed to let me experiment on him. Well, I pared off the top skin and commenced poulticing the wen. Sure enough, it grew out kind of queer and crooked, but he made a fine horned man, and in a month I had him on the road, too.

THE VEGETABLE BOY.

"The horn grew out high up on his forehead, so he couldn't wear a hat, and he had to wear a kind of hood, like an old lady's, when he went out of doors. He didn't like that very well, and he used to complain sometimes about having to tell people who asked him how he came to be that way that he was just born so. But we made lots of money, and by and by I got my last idea. That came about in this way:

"One day I heard a doctor tell about a boy that had come to him a few days before with a pain in his ear, and how it turned out to be caused by a sprouting grain of corn that the boy had pushed in there for fun. Well, I thought about that for a while and it wasn't long before I found just the right boy for my ideas. He was an orphan, and the town authorities were looking for some one to take care of him, and I said I would. So I took him along with me, and as he had good big ears I thought I'd try laying in a couple of gourd vine seeds and see what they'd do. Well, it was warm and moist in there, and in a few days they had started well, and a little vine started out of each ear. Pretty soon the vines were long enough so I could loop them several times around his neck.

"While all this was going on I was trying another experiment on his head. I had his hair shaved off and then I took a hypodermic syringe and injected a lot of red top seed into his scalp. I counted on the natural warmth and moisture of the scalp to start the seed, and it didn't disappoint me. Red top grows fast, you know, and by the time the vines were well out in his ears he had a big crop of red top on his head. The boy said it didn't hurt. The only trouble was that we had to keep mowing and mowing that boy's head, and red top grew so fast. We put him upon the bills as the Wonderful Vegetable Boy, and he drew like a yoke of oxen. We made heaps of money for a while."

Then the pale man paused, and seemed to grow reminiscent. The New Hampshire man waited a while.

"What became of the boy?" he asked at last.

"The town authorities took him back again," answered Mr. Thompson, evasively.—New York Evening Sun.

A Cry of Distress.

"Fire! Fire!"

The cries proceeded from the parlor, where the lady of the house was sitting, and penetrated into the kitchen. The next moment the nurse and the cook burst into the room, followed by two gallant defenders of the country and one civilian.

"There [a pause]; you can now go back again," said madame, who was reclining on the sofa. "I only wanted to see how many followers were in the house."—Lustige Blaetter.

Violins in Place of Pianos.

Is the pianoforte waning in popularity and giving place to the violin? One would not think so to see the activity among the dealers in these instruments. And yet it would appear that the violin, especially as an instrument for young girls, is rapidly increasing in popularity. The classes in the violin at the music schools are growing larger, and a "popular" concert today can hardly be regarded as popular unless a young lady violinist is included among the "talent." In England it is said to have fairly taken its place as an instrument for girls. After all, the pianoforte is really a very modern instrument when compared with the violin. It is only a harp set in a box and twanged with leather covered hammers. It is really a mechanical sort of an affair, while the violin has never within the memory of living man or woman been improved, and never will be. Who cares for an old piano, and how much will it bring in the market?

But a violin! What divine melody will pour forth under skillful fingers from an old Stradivarius or Amati. The wizard of Cremona possessed a secret which no imitator, however keen, has been able to fathom. Princes and dukes, men of high renown and modern money kings have scrambled for the possession of the few rare products of his cunning. Stradivarius died more than 150 years ago, but the few violins and 'cellos which still exist to enchant the ear of the world are worth their weight in gold. The master of the pianoforte is a skillful mechanician, with agile, supple fingers and an acute musical instinct. The master or mistress of the violin is imbued with divine fire, unquenchable with age, the gift of the gods.—Boston Advertiser.

Compressed Air.

It is every year becoming more and more a matter of economy, if not of necessity, to have power generated in large measure at some convenient spot and thence distributed to points where it is required to do its work. For the transmission of the power belts, cables and other contrivances used to be employed. At present this work is largely done by electricity, air and water. While it is probable that electricity will answer this purpose best for distances exceeding four or five miles, yet within a less distance compressed air offers some advantages.

The practicability of this method has been demonstrated in the mining region of Michigan. The largest air compressing plant in the world has been set up there. The Quinnesec falls on the Menominee river furnish unlimited power. It is at this place that a drill company of New York erected for the mining company an air compressing plant consisting of four pairs of compressors, each pair being run by its own independent turbine wheel. The mine, however, where the air is utilized, and to which it is conducted by a twenty-four inch main, is situated three miles from the compressing plant.

The loss of power by this mode of transmission is slight. It may result from friction along the sides of the pipes and also from leakage. At the Hoosac tunnel the air pressure at the compressors was sixty-two pounds to the square inch. At a distance of nearly two miles up the tunnel the pressure was reduced to sixty pounds while the drills were in full working.—Youth's Companion.

About Oysters.

From a work by Dr. J. R. Philpots it appears that of English oysters 1,600 are required to make a bushel, and of the American only 300. The largest edible oysters in the world, however, are those of Port Lincoln, South Australia, specimens of which sometimes measure a foot across the shell. It was estimated thirty-five or forty years ago that 1,000,000,000 oysters a year were consumed in London, and for 1864 the number was placed at 700,000,000. The English supply is rapidly failing through recklessness of the dredgers.

In France a single bank was supposed to contain over 70,000,000 oysters in 1847, but only 20,000,000 in 1854 and 10,000,000 in 1860. But oyster cultivation began in that country in 1859, and soon gave an increased supply. New York is said to consume 900,000,000 oysters a year, and the entire United States 6,600,000,000. The English oyster is computed to deposit 1,012,925 ova, and the American oyster 9,000,000,000, so that a little care is all that is necessary to keep up the supply of this mollusk.—Arkansaw Traveler.

The Deepest Lake Known.

By far the deepest lake known in the world is Lake Baikal, in Siberia, which is every way comparable to the great Canadian lakes as regards size; for while its area is over 9,000 square miles, making it about equal to Erie in superficial extent, its enormous depth of between 4,000 and 4,500 feet makes the volume of its waters almost equal to that of Lake Superior. Although its surface is 1,350 feet above the sea level its bottom is nearly 3,000 feet below it. The Caspian lake, or sea, as it is usually called, has a depth in its southern basin of over 3,000 feet. Lake Maggiore is 3,000 feet deep, Lake Como nearly 2,000 feet and Lego-di-Garda, another Italian lake, has a depth in certain places of 1,900 feet. Lake Constance is over 1,000 feet deep, and Huron and Michigan reach deapths of 900 and 1,000 feet.—Geographical News.

Marvelous Fecundity

In comparing the animal and the vegetable kingdoms Linnæus denominates seed the eggs of plants. The fecundity of certain species of plants is simply marvelous. A single sunflower will produce from 4,000 to 12,000 seeds in one summer; the poppy 32,000. One plant of the cat's tail will produce two to five spikes, each containing an average of 10,000 seeds. One root of the East Indian elecampane will throw out thirty stalks, each having a seed vessel containing 3,000 seeds, or a total of 90,000 seeds from a single root in one summer. Ray, the English scientist, says that it takes 1,012 tobacco seeds to weigh one grain, and that a single plant will produce 360,000 seeds. The same author estimates the annual seed product of the spleen wort to be upward of 1,000,000.—St. Louis Republic.

An Enterprising Photographer.

There is a photographer in the isle of Wight who can give many of his brethren of the camera points in the matter of enterprise. He posts himself at the stopping place of a coach and photographs the vehicle and passengers at about 11 o'clock in the morning. About 3 in the afternoon, on the return journey, the passengers are met, it is said, with a supply of mounted prints made from the negative taken only a few hours earlier.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Did Not Want It Spoiled.

"Mrs. Larkin," remarked the minister, "we wish you would let your daughter join the choir."

"Oh, I couldn't think of it!" replied Mrs. Larkin: "she has a sweet disposition, and I don't want her to become quarrelsome."—Judge.

$40.00

13

—GRAND—

WINTER EXCURSIONS.

FROM NORTHERN

MINNESOTA

AND NORTH

Dakota

TO

Montreal

And all Points West in

ONTARIO

VIA THE

Northern Pacific

The Dining car line between northern Minnesota and North Dakota Points, by way of St. Paul and Chicago. Dates of sale, Tuesday, Nov. 18 and 25, and Dec. 2 and 9; and daily, Dec. 16 to 23 inclusive, & Dec 30, 1890.

Limit of Tickets 99 days, good returning fifteen days, with stop-over privileges

Subject to local regulations of lines over which tickets read.

Final limit of Tickets extended fifteen days on payment of $5.00; 30 days, $10 and 60 days, $20

For further information, maps, time-tables and tickets via the dining car line, write to or inquire of any agent of the Northern Pacific railroad, or

C. A. Sharkeo, agent, Crookston, Minn. H. W. H. W. Nunn, Agent Grofton, N. D. J. A. Duffy Red Lake Falls, Minn. E. F. Rea, Agent, Gildy N. D. J. A Risk, Agent, Minnewaukon N. D. M. H. McGowan, Agent, Grond Forks N. D. N. McCallum, Agent, Drayton, N. D. F. J Cunningham, Agent, Pemelna, N. D. J. D. Rocertson, Agent, N. D. R. Tazewell, Agent, Leeds, N. D.

Land Office at Crookston, Minn., Nov, 24th, 1890.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the register or receiver of U. S. land office at Crookston, Minn., on January 12th, 1891, viz, Damase Dion, hd No. 10917, for the nw¼ sec 33, twp 150, r 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of, said land, viz.

Charles O'Claire, Charles Benoit, Louis Parenteau, Prosper Benoit, all of Terrebonne, Minn.

nv27jan1. H. H. Dickmann, Register.

Land Office at Coookston, Minn., Nov. 29, 1890.

Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the register or receiver of U S Land office at Crookston, Minn., on Jany 16th, 1891, viz, Joseph Provost, Hd No 5793 for the w½ nw¼ and w½ sw¼ sec 22 twp 151 r 45

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz:

Oliver Caron, Marcil Heil, Lion Audette, Joseph Pepin, all of Huot P O, Minn. dec4jan8

H. H. Dickmann, register.

Wanted--A Change.

Old King Soloman said: "There is nothing new under the sun." Probably he made the remark in a fit of disgust after vainly endeavoring to quiet some hair-pulling discussion among the thousand ladies who each claimed a share in him as a husband. At any rate, the mind of man is so constituted as to desire change variety something new. The world is is built on that plan, too. No two mountains are just alike No two days are just the same. No two faces in all the world's millions are exactly similar. Shakespere said of one of his characters: "Age cannot wither or custom stale his infinate variety No man likes to have, or should have, his his life always bounded between four walls. We all like to have a change of scene now and then to see new faces, to travel to far countries. The United States has a greater variety of climate and scenery within its borders than any of the Old World States. About now is a good time to plan a journeyy to the South—the land of delightful winter resorts. Low rates are made for excursiodists, and "The Burlington" is the route par excellance, to any point south. For ticket and information call on any of its agents or address W. J. C. Kenyon, Gen. Pass Agent C. B. & R. R. St Paul, Minn.

List of letters remaining uncalled for at the Post Office at Red Lake Falls Minn. for the month ending Nov. 30th, 1890. If not called for in thirty days they will be sent to the Dead Letter Office. Belt Mrs. W. E. (two letters.) Donais Frank, Juneau Moise, Dartin J. V. In calling for any of the above letters please say "Advertised."

Frank E. Hunt, P. M.

Things Worth Remembering.

That it is dangerous to stand near a tall tree or spire during a thunder storm.

That the southwest corner of the cellar is the "cyclone safety point."

That there is no medicine so universally applicable to sickness as fresh air and sunshine."

That blowing out the gas before retiring is funny—to every one except the one who tries it.

That you may swear as hard as you please but it will not remove grease spots.

That the Wisconsin Central is the most popular line between Minneapolis and St. Paul and Milwaukee and Chicago.

That its fast train leaves Minneapolis daily at 6:25 p. m., St. Paul at 7:15 p. m., with through Pullman sleepers, arriving in Milwaukee at 7:27 and Chicago at 9:59 the following morning, serving breakfast in dining car.

That before starting on a trip always get information from some reliable ticket agent, and that nowhere will such information be more cheerfully given than at the city ticket offices of the Wisconsin Central, No. 19, Nicollet House block, Minneapolis, and 162 East 3d st, cor. Jackson, St. Paul, Address letters to Chas. E. Dixon, acting city passenger and ticket agent, St. Paul, F. H. Hanson, Gen. Northwestern Pass. agent, Minneapolis, or Louis Eckstein, Assistant General Passenger and Ticket agent, Milwaukee.

RALPH & BOURDON,

Proprietors of the

CITY DRAY LINE.

WOOD & COAL

Anything in our line done Promptly and at very Reasonable Rates.

GIVE US A CALL

TONSORIAL HALL!

N. MORISETTE, Prop.

Everything First Class!

SHAVING,
HAIR-CUTTING,
SHAMPOOING!

☞Shaving 15 cents.
Haircutting 25 cents.☜

Main Street. - Red Lake Falls.

Roller Mill "B"

BEST PATENT	$2.25
BEST STRAIGHT	2.00
SECOND "	1.75
FAMILY BAKER'S	1-40
GRAHAM	2.00
RYE FLOUR	2.00
MIDDLINGS	1.00
SHORTS	.55
BRAN	.45
BEST GROUND FEED	.80
2d " "	.65

Fine corn meal per pound, 2½c.

MAJERES BROS.

Proprietor of the

City Meat Market.

A full line of market supplies, such as

BEEF, PORK,
MUTTON, POULTRY
AND SAUSAGE.

A first class meat market where everything is kept as clean as can be.

Main, near 1st st - - Red Lake Falls

JOHN WATSON,
PHYSICIAN & SURGEON,

Office in residence, Sixth street, Red Lake Falls, Minn. 4-6

VIOLINS, GUITAR, BANJOS' FINEST Assortment, Largest Stock, Lowest Prices, Best Strings for all instrument, assorted to suit, $1,50 per dozen, postpaid. Cash with order. Anything in the music line sent to any part of the United States. Write Allmendinger Piano And Organ Company, Ann Arbor, Mich. Orders from teachers and the professional ited. Live Agents wanted for our Piano and Organs.

NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD

The New Dining Car Route
BETWEEN
WINNIPEG,
GRAFTON,
GRAND FORKS,
RED LAKE FALLS,
ST. PAUL,
MINNEAPOLIS,
DULUTH,
AND ALL POINTS EAST.

The Direct line to
MONTANA, IDAHO,
WASHINGTON TERRITORY,
OREGON, BRITISH COLUMBIA
PUGET SOUND AND ALASKA.

EXPRESS TRAINS DAILY.

To which are attached Pullman Palace Sleepers and Elegant Dining Cars. On overland trains, Emigrant Sleepers Free. The only line to the Yellowstone Park.

All trains daily.
Pullman Palace Sleeping Cars between Grand Forks and St Paul, Dining cars on all trains
Coupon tickets on sale to all points Southeast and West
For further information regarding rates, routes maps, etc., address
Chas. S. Fee, G. P. & T. Agt., St. Paul, Minn.
J. A. Duffy Local Agt

Green Bay, Winona & St. Paul

Railroad. Best and most Direct Line Between

LaCROSSE,
WINONA,
Neillsville,
Eau Claire,
Grand Rapids,
Stevens Point,
New London,
Appelton,
Neenah,
Menasha,
Oshkosh,
Fon du Lac,
GREEN BAY.

And all Points in
EASTERN WISCONSIN,
Iron Districts of Northern Michigan and Lake Superior Regions.

Close Connections and Quick Time.

See That Your Ticket Reads Via
GREEN BAY, WINONA & ST. PAUL Railroad.
S. W. Champion,
Superintendent, Green Bay, Wis.
J. B Last,
Ass't Gen. Pass. Agt., Green Bay, Wis.

$100,000

To Loan on Farms

—AT—

10 pr Cent

Interest. No bonus—no delay, at

THE FIRST NAT. BANK

Red Lake Falls - - Minn.

Homeseekers will find the last of the public domain of agricultural and grazing value along the Great Northern Ry in North Dakota and Montana. FREE LANDS.

New Towns 100 or more, along the Great Northern Railway Line. Business chances. Write F. I. Whitney, St. Paul, Minn., for Books, Maps, etc. Write now.

Settlers on Free government lands along the Great Northern Railway Line in North Dakota and Montana get low rates and fine markets for products. Low Rates

Hunting, Fishing Finest resorts in America along the Great Northern Ry. Line in Minnesota, Dakotas and Montana. Best climate for health seekers.

Montana produces the finest horses and cattle. Free ranges yet in the Mouse, Milk and Sun River Valleys and Sweet Grass Hills. Horses, Cattle

Health, Wealth In Monta. Free Lands, New Towns New Railways, New Mines, Low Rates. Largest area of good, vacant land.

Sweet Grass Hills, Milk and Sun River Valleys, Montana, reached only by the Great Northern Railway Line. The stock raisers' paradise. Sheep Hogs

Gold, Coal The Regions tributary to th Great Northern Railway Line in Montana produce all the precious and baser metals. New towns and railways are being built.

Go to the Great Reservation of Montana and get a good free homestead. Low rates and free sleepers on Great Northern R'y Line. Go now. Milk River

Herds, Mines. These have made Montana the richest state per capita in the Union. Plenty of room for more miners and stock raisers.

Along the Great Northern Line in Montana are free ranches and pasturage, mines of precious metal iron and coal, and new cities and towns. Now is your opportunity. Young Man

Great Falls Surrounded by a fine agricultural and grazing country, close to mines of precious metals, iron and coal possessing a water power unequaled in America, it is Montana's industrial centre.

The valleys of Red, Mouse, Missouri Milk and Sun Rivers reached by Great Northern Ry Line. Half rate excursions Sept. 9, 23 and Oct. 14, 1890. Write F. I. Whitney, St. Paul G. N. R. L.

Railroad Time Table.

WAY FREIGHT	LEAVE P. M.	PASSENGER	ARRIVE A. M.	WAY FREIGHT
	8.00	St. Paul,	7:05
	8:35	Minneapolis.	6:35
	8:00	Duluth	7:00
	8:30	Ashland,(pm)	6:30
	3:30 a m	Wadena a m	12:02
A. M.		....	P. M.
1:00 p m	6:25	WINNIPEG JCTION	9:10	2:06 a m.
2:55 "	7:35	Twin Valley	8:30	11:42 pm
4:22 "	8:22	Fertile	7:14	9:54 "
6:30 "	9:20	RED LK FALLS	6:20	7:47 "
2:00 "	9:40	Crookston	6:00	10.00 am
7:42 "	10:10	Buffington	5:29	5:55 p m
8:50 "	10:55	Grand Forks	4:45	5:00 "
DAILY	P. M.	....	P. M.	DAILY
	12:50	Grafton	2:45
	2:45	Pembina	12:55
	5:30	WINNIPEG, Man.	10:05

All trains daily.

The NEWS has prepared a grand benefit for its readers. We are desirous of adding new names to our subscription list, and settling up with those already there. A grand inducement is offered in the following proposition: Every person who pays up all arrearages on subscription and one year in advance, will be given a ticket in the drawing of the following articles: Four beautiful steel engravings, valued at from $15 to $20 each, the size being 3½x2½ feet, and one new gig, valued at $20. Each ticket has the chance of winning one of these grand prizes, the aggregate value of which is nearly $100. Not content with the above magnificent offer, the NEWS presents FREE, to its farmer friends who take advantage of the above offer and request it, the American Farmer, a farm magazine. To those who desire one of the very best American magazines at a greatly reduced price, we offer the Cosmopoltan, (if the premium offer is accepted) at $1.50 cents, the regular price being $2.40. You can hardly afford to let this opportunity pass. It is open for a month.

ECHOES OF THE RAPIDS

ROB ROY.

Brown eyes had Roble, with a shine
In them like human eyes;
I wonder if a sharp cut line
Between the dog and master lies?

He came with bound along the walk,
Even now his leap I see;
We held our tryst with tender talk,
And day was glad for him and me.

He knew, our Rob Roy, what I meant
By quiet word and tone,
And nodded to my argument
As if the reasons were his own.

And when I smoothed a quivering limb,
And soothed and coaxed the while,
He felt that I was praising him,
And smiled on me—for he could smile.

He had good manners—modesty
Made him a gentleman,
And his degree of dignity
Might clothe the chief of Highland clan.

Happy the years that glided o'er
That beauteous, glossy head;
I meet him at the door no more,
And yet I cannot call him dead.

His little grave amid the grass
Invites my daily view;
It holds his body—that will pass,
But not the instinct that I knew.

Dear Collie! when his master said,
"Good morning, Rob," and bowed,
Rob also bowed and reverence made,
And said "Good day," though not aloud.

And he will bid good day again
In finer atmosphere,
Where soul will meet responses plain
To questions still unanswered here.

—Mary Bartol in Boston Transcript.

Come in and subscribe.

Hop Sam seems inclined to stay by us.

The trains have not yet changed time.

Sunday was the first Sunday in Advent.

Mrs. Auguste Moreau was in town Monday.

Mrs. E. P. Duffy and son returned to Buffington.

Mrs. J. A. Duffy visited relatives on th N. P. this week.

Miss Todd seems to have abonodned her pupils here.

The roads between here and Crookston are in splendid shape.

Joseph Schmitz has so far progressed that he is able to sit up in bed.

The la grippe cough is the latest and those who have it not are out of style.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex Moreau started Sunday night for their home in Canada.

Mr. P. Meehan is in the city, having come down from Red Lake Monday.

Mr. Langevin, the Lambert post-master, has resigned in favor of Samuel Gibeau.

Leo Steinert is running the Holmes mill and turning out some pretty fair flour.

There are fewer cases to be tried at this term of court than there have been for a long time.

Chas. Bourden was the recipient Tuesday of a wood pipe made by a Red Lake noblemam.

Rev. Ig Balluff will take rooms in the M. Skaia residence. His arm is rapidly healing and will soon be well.

Fred Gesswein, our indefatigable real estate agent now has a sign up, "Money to Loan."

Miss Bridget Hillgrove was over from Emardville Sunday to attend divine service at St. Mary's.

Mr. and Mrs. John M. Boyle have gone to housekeeping and are comfortably settled in Tacoma.

Now our merchants are selling overshoes and woolen hosiery—besides other articles of less importance.

The holiday season will soon be upon us. Christmas goods are arriving at the principal depots in town for such goods.

Hermann Schmitz has taken the typhoid fever. It is to be hoped his will prove a lighter case than that of his brothers.

The Crookston Times has one of the most metropolitan printing establishments in the state outside of the Twin cities.

Rev. Fr. Guillaume, of Lambert, spent several days at Crookston, a guest of Rev. Fr. Fayoile, pastor of the French parish there.

The music at the Thanksgiving ball was no less a feature than the superb manner in which our friend Charles handled the floor.

Wm. Porter was in town yesterday. Wm. has a cough that can be heard nearly all the way from here to the Thieving town where he resides.

There was a troupe here last week, but they left without playing. They had intended playing for six nights, but had not been advertised.

Mr. and Mrs. Melville Milne of Crookston, formerly residents here, are now entertaining a ten-pound son, which is about a week old.

The December term of district court for Polk county, the 14th judicial district opened Monday, with his honor, Ira B. Mills on the bench.

Prof. Julius Hortvet and Miss Agness J. C. Fairweather spent several days at the latter's Euclid home last week, returning Saturday evening.

Cash paid for barley, oats, flax, hides pelts. All kinds of coal for sale—at Hoskins & Co.'s elevator.

41 W. T. SPILLANE.

John P. Agnes, of Euclid, a cousin of Miss Nepper, who formerly resided here, and Miss Anna Groff, of Chicago, were to be married at St. Mary's church to-day.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Oxborough, of Black River, mourn the loss of a babe, who had arrived but three weeks before, a ray of sunshine in their home. We extend condolence.

L. A. Kaufer cut the top of one of his left hand fingers off Tuesday, while cutting leather. The hand will be necessarily sore for some time but it is healing rapidly.

Crookston has not got a population of 3,000. So say the official returns. This is not a good showing, and is a suprise to even her neighbors who thought they knew her.

Brothers Palmer still run a small menagerie in connection with their excellent publication. We are indebted to them for a fraternal favor at their hands while there, Monday.

The ideal weather enjoyed for several weeks passed away Friday last and now we bask in the simon-pure "bracing" Northern atmosphere, enjoyable withal to those who have sense enough to prepare for it.

Wm. A. Ralph will soon be among us again. This announcement is not made because we doubt that unexpected joy never kills, but to give his friends a foretaste of pleasure that is derived through anticipation.

Mayor Schreiter went to Fertile Tuesday evening on business. While there he attended a snide show—the one that saw fit not to play here. They use good judgment in some things, at last—these snide show people.

Isaac Mulvaney, who has for a year been absent from the bosom of his friends, returned last week, and brought back his full stock of idiosyncrasies. Isaac arrived in an opportune time and has his hands full of business.

Last Sunday one of East Grand Forks' oldest citizens dropped dead while in apparent health. It is evident that the coroner should be stationed at East Grand Forks, as that city is bound to have him there just so often, anyway.

The contract of P. & J. Meehan with the Red Lake Indians has been approved by the honorable commissioners of Indian affairs and secretary of the interior and the Indians have commenced operations with a degree of energy that bespeaks success. About 6 million feet of logs will be banked on Red Lake, notwithstanding the cutting of logs is confined to the new reservation. The Indians will exert themselves to cut as much as possible dead and down timber within the new lines recently surveyed.

Thanksgiving day was not observed by the churches here. The refreshments parlors were in strict accordance with the thanksgiving sentiments, and mirth and hilarity reigned supreme among them.

The Russell case was not on the court calander because a grand jury had not found an indictment against him. This will be done however and the case comes off this term. H. Steenerson is defending Russell, and Moses E. Clapp will prosecute for the state.

P. D. Couture is always there when a fire alarm is sounded. P. D. will surely be the captain of the fire department—when we get one. His devotion was rather coldly rebuked however Monday night at Lund's, when he got a full bucket of water squarely over him.

John A. Thompson took his departure for St. Croix Falls, Wis, this morning, going by way of Fisher, where he will visit a short time. John has, for the past two years, been one of the popular and deserving young men of this community, and we all feel a sincere regret at his departure.

Miss Lilla McCaffrey and Miss Mamie Malone returned to Crookston Sunday afternoon, after a pleasant visit of a few days here. They were accompanied by Mrs. W. A. Schreiter, Miss Sue Boyle, Messrs. L. A. and P. A. Kaufer, who became guests of Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Malone at Crookston.

Samuel Gibeau called at our office Tuesday. Mr. Gibeau will shortly open up a general merchandise store at Lambert, and will also be adorned with the title of postmaster. Samuel is well known as a progressive and honorable young men, and success should folow his new venture.

August Reichel who has been confined with typoid fever for several months is in a fair way of recovery, but is still very weak. Mr. Riechel has had one of the longest runs of the fever we ever heard of, and it will be a long time before he is himself again.

Miss Mary Riley returned to Grand Forks Sunday morning. She came over on the Wednesday evening train and spent the intervening time renewing old friendships, a guest of the Misses Ralph. Miss Riley had been absent from town over a year, and her reception here was warm and sincere.

A Thanksgiving dance was held at the opera house and well attended last Thursday evening. The band was out and played a few pieces. The evening was beautiful, warmth and moonlight combining to make it so, and many availed themselves of this, attending the dance and enjoying the walk to and from the hall.

Last Thursday the postoffice inspector was examining the office here, and afterwards paid Postmaster Hunt and his able and fair deputy, Miss Maria Ralph, a high compliment on the manner in which the office is being conducted. He seemed to hold this office up as a model which no other in the county could approach.

Noah Bottineau is again among his people, much to their and his relief. George and a friend took the trouble to travel from here to Fargo in search of him. When they returned he was at home, having been brought back by his father, who had found him at a farm house several miles from the school. The boy had slept out three nights.

Skating now ceases. There are a couple of weeks, in the early part of winter, when the small boy is sure he has reached the happiness said to be obtainable only in the next and better world—when the skating season is in vogue, and he can betake himself, in the beautiful moonlight nights, to the river. But the first heavy snow makes skating an impossibility.

Rev. L. S. Arpin returned from Lambert and Terrebonne, where he had been visiting Frs. Guillaume and Feige. He reports that the fair recently held at Terrebonne was a great a success as credited. The receipts were $475.00. above all expenses. The Terrebonne Catholics have reason to feel proud of their financial standing.

Moses E. Clapp, state attorney, is at the county seat to prosecute the case against Russell, the murderer of Dr. Bahnsen. Clapp has signified his intention of carrying his case to justice. He noted the fact that, up to this time, Polk county had never convicted a murderer though eleven had been tried. Russell is, unfortunately for himself, the first on whom it is determined to reverse this order of procedure.

Alex Finlayson, an Angus farmer, is supposed to have committed suicide Sunday afternoon. He was found dead in bed with a bottle of laudanum beside him. Finlayson had been complaining for some time of ill health, and it was thought that this was the primary cause that lead to his self-destruction. He leaves a wife and family to survive and bear the consequences of his cowardly act.

Died,

David Zaiser, at his residence in this city, Wednesday, at 1. p. m., of Bright's disease, aged sixty-four years.

Though Mr. Zaiser had been ill, and dangerously so, for several weeks past, yet the community was startled to learn of his death. He has been a resident of this city for nearly six years, coming from Fergus Falls, and during this time has made many friends. He has ever been an unobtrusive, quiet citizen, but the place he has filled as a kind and loving husband and father, now vacant, leaves a corresponding void in hearts that had long beat in unison with his. The afflicted family are in need of the sympathy of their friends.

The funeral services were held to day at four p. m., at the family residence. A few appropriate words were spoken by Messrs. Riechel and Wyer. The pall bearers were Messrs. H. B. Kaufer, Jno. Walters, J. T. Knight, F. Gesswein, O. Lefreniere and August Riechel Sr. The remains were sent to Faribault, Minn., for interment. Mrs. Zaiser and Miss Polly Zaiser accompanied them.

Mr. Zaiser was born in Germany and came to this country in 1854, settling in Faribault, this state, where he married Mrs. Miller, the estimable lady who now bears his name, on May 13th, 1873. Mr. Zaiser was a prosperous citizen of Faribault for a number of years, when he moved to Fergus Falls, there continuing his residence till his arrival here. He leaves a wife and ten children, one being a step son.

Nick Nimisgern has been fixing up his confictionery and grocery stand, removing partitions, putting in new fron, etc The improvement is beyond expression. giving more room, better light and pleasanter apperance.

Christmas falls on Thursday—just three weeks from to-day. The gentle husband will about this time be frequently missing considerable loose change from his trouser's pocket. He will not notice this however, as it may be returned in the shape of a Christmas gift.

That silk quilt (we humbly crave our readers' pardon for mentioning it) is not yet completed, but the ladies of St. Mary's church (firm and resolute mortals!) express their determination to finish it within the next decade, and then raffle and award it to the winner.

The new road to Red Lake makes it possible to make the trip from here in one day, when by former routes it took from three to four. The inspection of the road was finished last week by Marshal Hennemuth, and he declares the work done is first class and the road as in good condition.

Jas. C. O'Brien, better known as ching-wak, is down from Red Lake—his first visit to civilization for a year. Jas. is up in politics and was looking for Michael Jeffers to remind him of the time, down in Rice county, when Mike marched in the ranks of the grangers, with that beautiful little granger apron decorating his corporosity, fastened behind with a sort of self binder knot. Where was Mike when the grangers went out? Back with the democrats—and Jim will forgive him voting the alliance ticket if Michael will only go back to his first love.

The unoccupied residence of N. P. Lund on 3rd st. burned to the ground Tuesday night. Plasterers had been at work and a fire was kept up. Bedclothes coming in contact with the stove pipe on the 2nd floor, ignited and this was the cause of the conflagration. Some household furniture that had been stored there was destroyed. A strange circumstance was that fire had caught in the roof the previous night and gained dangerous headway, but was extinguished. The wind changed during the time tha building was burning, and this saved the buildings west of it from distruction. Another narrow escape for much valuable property.

Improved Passenger Service

Under the new time schedule of "the North-Western Line," C,. St. P.,M. & O.Ry., all passenger trains of this line make the trip between St. Paul and Chicago in less than 14 hours.

The Pullman and Wagner Vestibuled Limited, leaving St. Paul at 7:30 p. m. makes the trip to Chicago in 13½ hours and from Chicago to St.Paul in 13 hours and 25 minutes.

The Daylight Express leaving St Paul at 7:45 a. m. makes the trip to Chicago in 13 hours and 50 minutes and from Chicago to St. Paul in 13 hours and 45 minutes.

This is the only line running all its trains in less than 14 hour between St. Paul and Chicago, and while this time is quick trains don't have to run at as high speed to make their time as on other lines, because this is shorter than any other line.

In addition to these facts this is the only line by which connections are assure in Chicago with all fast line trains from Chicago to the East and South in the morning and at night.

Note.—Fares by this line are always as low as by any other.

For Map Folder of the line address T. W. TEASDALE, Gen'l Passenger Agent St. Paul, Minn.

Council Proceedings

Council Meeting, Nov. 17, 1890.

All members present except Duffy.

Minutes of last meetiing were read and approved.

On motion the verbal reports of H. Hennemuth relative to the Red Lake Road was accepted.

On motion the following accounts were allowed:

H. B. Davis, general fund, $9.00.

Alfred Bresset, general fnd $26 00

On motion council abjourned to meet in two weeks.

Council meeting Dec. 1st 1890.

All members present except Duffy.

Minutes of last meeting were read and adopted.

On motion the members of the board of election held Nov. 4th 1890 were allowed $6.00 each, and Adam Schmitz for services board registration $3.00.

On motion the following accounts were allowed.

W. A. Schreiter, General Fund $15.15

Otto Ziser General Fund $2.50.

Henry Hennemuth Road and Bridge $2.00

Moved and carried that the Bids of B. C. Christianson for furnishing material and building sidewalk on south side of 5th street at $5.25 per lot of 25 feet, each be accepted.

On motion Henry Hennemuth was allowed ten dollars out of the General Fund for expenses, in examining the Red Lake Road.

On motion the recorder was instructed to draw an order payadle, July 1st 1891 in favor of James O. Fitch for payment of construction of road to Red Lake.

Council adjourned to meet in two weeks.

A Present to our Subscribers.

It is with pleasure that we announce to our many patrons that we have made arrungements with that wide-awake, illustrated farm magazine, the American Farmer, published at Fort Wayne, Ind., and read by nearly 200,000 farmers by which that great publication will be mailed direct, FREE, to the address of any of our subscribers who will come in and pay up all arrearages on subscription and one year in advance from date, and to any new subscriber who will pay one year in advance. This is a grand opportunity to obtain a first-class farm journal free. The American Farmer is a large 16-page journal of national circulation, which ranks among the leading agricultural papers. It treats the question of economy in agriculture and the rights and privileges of that vast body of citizens—American Farmers—whose industry is the basis of all material and national prosperiy. Its highest purpose is the elevation and ennobling of Agriculture through the higher and broader education of men and women engaged in its pursuits. The regular subscription price of the American farmer is $1.00 per year. IT COSTS YOU NOTHING. From any one number ideas can be obtained that will be worth thrice the subscripion price to you or members of your household, YET YOU GET IT FREE. Call and see sample copy.

A Good Offer.

Do you read The Cosmopolitan, that bright, sparkling young magazine? The cheapest illustrated monthly in the world. 25 cents a number. $2.40 per year. Enlarged, October, 1889, to 128 pages. The Cosmopolitan is literally what the New York Times calls it, "At its price, the brightest, most varied and best edited of the magaziues." An unusual opportunity for new subscribers for one year only:

The Cosmopolitan, per year....	$2 40
The NEWS, per year............	1 50
The price of both..............	3 90
We will furnish both for only....	3 00

This offer is only to new subscribers to the Cosmopolitan, and only for one year. Tha Boston Journal says "It has more articles in each number that are readable, and fewer uninteresting pages, than any of its contemporaries." The Cosmopolitan for the first time in magazine literature, a splendidly illustrated Periodical at a price hitherto deemed impossible. Try it for a year. It will be a liberal educator to every member of the household. It will make the nights pass pleasantly. Send $3 00 to this offite and secure both the Cosmopolitan and the NEWS.

The Queen Pays All Expenses

The Queen's last free Trip to Europe having excited such universal interests he publishers of that popular magazine offer another and $200 for expenses to the person sending them the largest list of English words constructed from letters containing the three words British North America. Additional prizes consisting of Silver Tea Sets, China Dinner Sets, Gold Watches, French Music Boxes' Portier Curtians, Silk Dresses Mantel Flakes and many other useful and valuable articles will also be awarded in order of merit. A special prize of a Seal Skin jacket to the lady, and a handsome Shetland Pony to boy or girl (delivered free in Canada or United States) sending the largest lists Everyone sending a list of twenty words will recieve a presen send six U. S. stamps for complete rules, illustrated catalogue of prizes, and sample numbers of the Queen. Address The Canadian, Queen Toronto, Canada.

A Wonder Worker

Mr. Frank Huffman, a young man of Burlington, Ohio, states that he had been under the care of two prominent physicians, and use their treatment until he was not able to get around. They pronounced his case to be consumption and incurable. He was persuaded to try Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds and at that time was not able walk across the street without resting c He found before he had used half of a dollor bottle, that he was much better; he continued to use it and is to-day enjoying good health. If you have any throat, Lungs or Chest trouble try it. We guarantee satisfaction. Trial bottle free at Schreiter's Drugstore

WAY UP IN A BALLOON.

HERR WOLFF'S THRILLING EXPERIENCE ON A STORMY DAY.

Ascended to a Height of 8,000 Feet. The Ship Breaks Away During an Attempt to Land—Two Men Are Carried Up Hanging to the Sides.

Herr Maximilian Wolff, the celebrated aeronaut, in his balloon ascension from Cologne, had one of the most frightful experiences recorded in the annals of balloon travel. He dreaded making the voyage at all on such a day, but as an air sailor, like his brother at sea, makes money only while on his ship, he decided to take the risk.

"At 5 o'clock in the afternoon the balloon was ready. The weather was worse and my courage was ebbing fast. I would gladly have given my pay twice over to remain on solid ground, but my reputation was dear to me, and I dared not face the jeers and insults of the vast crowd assembled to see me off. Two gentlemen, Herr S—— and Herr D——, from Cologne, were to accompany me.

"At half past 5 I gave the signal 'Los!' and our ascent began favorably. Our course was southwest to northeast, and in one minute we had risen 5,600 feet. The temperature was cool. Behind us lay Cologne in a thick fog and a gathering thunderstorm. Our 'Stollwerck' soared continually higher in a fog that grew every moment more dense. The aneroid barometer showed a height of eight thousand feet. The basket swung like a pendulum.

A HORRIBLE EXPERIENCE.

"At last I spied a clearing on the mountain side, which seemed our best chance for alighting. I pulled the check, dropped anchor, and we sank gently toward the ground. The violent wind knocked us about for a time, but fortunately the anchor held. We had been seen, and people were hurrying to the spot. The strength of eight men was barely enough to hold my struggling, pitching ship long enough for my companions, S—— and D——, to clamber out.

"So far all was well. Then, without a moment's warning, a violent gust, like a whirlwind, broke over us; we were tossed wildly to and fro, but by straining every muscle managed to hold down the 'Stollwerck.' Still in the balloon, I threw out a rope, and with great difficulty tied it to a tree. Then came a violent wrench, and I fell over backward in the basket. As I sprang to my feet I found myself soaring cloud high once more, and to my horror two men were clinging to the outer edge of the basket!

"I seized upon one and tried with all my strength to drag him in. He was a peasant of the neighborhood, a good hearted, sturdy young fellow, who had worked with a will to quiet the wild plunging of the 'Stollwerck,' as she dragged at her anchor down in the clearing. But it was of no avail; my arms were as weak as a woman's, and the poor fellow's strength was spent. With a wild, despairing look straight in my eyes he let go, and I heard his body strike upon the ground with horrible distinctness.

"My heart stood still, my head swam, and I should have sunk down indifferent to my fate had it not been for the cries of poor S——, my companion, clinging to the other side of the railing. I tried to rescue my friend from his frightful position, but alone I could not drag him over the edge of the basket, and he was powerless to help himself.

HANGING IN THE AIR.

"It was an awful moment. Already the clouds began to float below us; we must have been at least 9,000 feet high; I leaned out so far that it seemed every instant as if I must lose my balance, and seized S——'s coat with my teeth. I managed to grasp a rope, with which I hoped to tie him fast. Those minutes, not knowing whether I could succeed or not, were like an eternity.

"At last the rope slipped under his arms. I drew it taut, and to my inexpressible relief it held; but the danger was postponed for a few brief moments only. If S—— lost consciousness he would be sure to drop in spite of the rope.

"It was life or death to the poor wretch, according as our descent was rapid or slow. I pulled the check and we sank noticeably, but alas! into the thick of a thunder cloud. The balloon spun round like a top. It hailed, thundered and lightened, as if hell itself had broken loose. We swung to and fro with frightful violence. I fell on my face with a roaring in my ears like the screams of a thousand angry fiends. But I dared not give way.

"'S——,' I called frantically, 'hold on, for God's sake!'

"'It's all over with me—the rope is slipping,' my poor friend gasped in reply.

"'Pull yourself together! In a moment more we will touch ground,' I screamed hoarsely.

"But the nearer we came to earth the more wildly we pitched to and fro.

"'Don't let go the first moment you touch the ground or we are both lost,' I cried to S——.

"We skimmed over a house and barn—cracking, snapping, jerking. A rent yawned above my head. We flew onward, swift as a feather before the wind.

"'Let go, S——,' I panted; 'let go, and jump for your life—to one side, away from the anchor.'

ALL HANDS SAVED.

"Not a moment too soon he obeyed me. The balloon, lighter by 190 pounds, swept me up again to the clouds. With all my remaining strength I laid hold of the check, not letting go till the anchor caught in a tree.

"A second's pause only, and the giant tree was jerked up by the roots. With the force of the wrench the basket was so turned that I hung head downward. The anchor gripped a second tree; again a moment's rest, and that tree was also torn from its bed. Knocked about like a ball, I at last took my fate into my own hands. I jumped into the top of an oak and slid through its branches down to the blessed ground.

"I had landed at the 'Neuen House,' near Cleves, and straightway set the whole neighborhood on the search for poor S——, who must be lying somewhere terribly injured, if not dead. None of my emissaries was able to find him.

"Broken and bruised in mind and body I set out for the station Overath. Suddenly from a side road we saw a troop of men approaching. 'They're bringing somebody this way!' was called from mouth to mouth. I dashed forward, and a moment later S—— and I were in each other's arms, sobbing like a pair of children.

A week after the foregoing events a notice appeared in a Cologne newspaper, which must have been balm to Herr Wolff's troubled soul. The paragraph stated that the man who fell from the balloon Stollwerck on June 6 had by amazing good luck suffered no serious injury, and was well as ever.—Youth's Companion.

Red Lake Falls News.

BOYLE & MEEHAN, Editors & Proprietors.

TERMS, $1.50 A YEAR.

DR. KOCH'S cure for consumption is so high that the poor—and they are afflicted in greater number than the rich—will be unable to obtain it unaided.

O'DONOVAN ROSSA'S newspaper, the United Irishmen, was put into the hands of a receiver for a debt of $170. Dynamite literature is at a discount.

PHILADELPHIA seems to be waking up. "Our next superintendent of public schools," says the Inquirer, "must have at least a speaking acquaintance with the multiplication table and spelling book. On that we insist."

A COLORED man, Henry S. Cummings, has been elected a member of the common council of Baltimore. He is the first of his race to win that honor in that city. His father is a cook, but he is a lawyer and the graduate of a university.

A TOPEKA, Kan., newspaper says a farmer drove into that city with a load of turnips the other day and insisted on storing them in the statehouse basement. He said the farmers had captured that building and were going to make a practical use of it.

THE death rate among the Indians who aim to live like white people is three times that of those who continue to a live semi-wild life. The Pawnee tribe has lost more men by lung troubles in the last ten years than they lost in battle during the previous thirty.

MR. EDISON asserts that it is the greed of electric companies that causes fatalities by electric wires. small, cheap wires carry deadly currents, while large wires are harmless. He suggests laws regulating the size of wires and an inspection to see that the law is obeyed.

ARTIST HEALY says that Henry Clay on one occasion said to him: "Mr. Healy, you are a capital portrait painter, and you are the first that ever done justice to my mouth, and it is well pleased to express its gratitude." Clay's mouth was a very peculiar one—thin lipped and extending almost from ear to ear.

DR. KOCH'S announcement that he will make public his cure for consumption without pecuniary consideration is evidence of both his faith and his philanthropy. His heart is all right if it shall prove that his zeal has deceived his head. What a boon to the world his discovery will be, if it will cure consumption.

THE snake chosen by Sarah Bernhardt to serve as her executioner is the "blind worm" species, and is known in France as orvet. It is a pretty creature, which may be often found on the tops of old walls sunning itself. The back is dark green, with metallic hues that are in certain lights irridescent. Sarah's snake is called by her Iris.

A DELICATE youth in Walling a Colorado settlement, where he had gone to recuperate his health, succeeded in lifting the roof of a friends cabin without much effort. He was smoking a cigarette near a keg of gunpowder. A spark alighted upon some loose grains, and in an instant the cigarette, the young man, and the roof were flying skyward.

MRS. HENRY WARD BEECHER relates an incident in which a Brooklyn reporter did not, as she thinks, treat her fairly in an interview. She has treasured it up against reporters in general, and when one called on her lately to inquire when, in her opinion, was the happiest hour in a woman's life, she replied: "The hour before reporters were invented."

SUSPICIOUS noises, at the dead of night, disturbed a farmer near Uhlertown, Pa. He thought they came from chicken thieves, who have lately been troublesome in that neighborhood. Arming himself, he crept out to the barn, and caught sight of something moving slowly in front of the coops. He put eleven buckshot into the forager which turned out to be his own black sow, which had escaped from her pen.

EVENTS OF A WEEK.

A Digest of the Interesting News of the Past Week.

AROUND WASHINGTON.

It is expected that the president, in his message, will recommend that congress stand firm in the new tariff law and pass the force bill.

It seems more than probable that some of the Democratic congressman will move for an investigation of the census office. In fact it is generally believed that Poter expects some sort of an investigation, and is now putting the office in shape to meet all inquiries and demands that may be made.

The State of Iowa, through the governor, has been summoned by the United States supreme court to appear before that tribunal at Washington, on the third Monday of January, to defend and answer the bill of complaint by the State of Nebraska, pending there. This bill is in regard to the boundary line between Nebraska and Iowa. The question involved is whether or not that part of the country lying near Omaha and cut off by the Missouri river shall be subject to Iowa's laws. The complaint declares that the region was formerly a part of Nebraska, but that the river in the year 1877 so cut the bank on the southwestern part of the river bed as to form a new channel.

PEOPLE IN PRINT.

John Watrous Beckwith, bishop of a diocese of Georgia, of the Protestant Episcopal church, died at Atlanta from a shock of paralysis. He was in his sixtieth year and a native of North Carolina, and a graduate of Trenity college, Hartford. He was consecrated bishop of Georgia in April, 1868.

UNFORTUNATE EVENTS.

The scow Mollie of Racine, Wis., waterlogged and has been abandoned in midlake. The crew of three men were rescued.

In New York, James Tucker, a line foreman, had a fit while at work, and falling across an electric light wire, was instantly killed.

The three flint glass factory buildings of the Illinois Glass works at Alton, Ill., have been destroyed by fire. Loss, $100,000, and 500 hands thrown out of employment.

The dwelling of Arthur Harold burned at Seattle, Wash. His four-months'-old babe perished and his wife and little daughter were probably fatally burned.

Mrs. Maria Wolsely of the town of Raymond, Wis., was fatally injured by a bull which was enraged by a red shawl worn by her. She is still alive, but the physicans consider her case hopeless.

A large five-story building in process of erection in Chicago began settling and the walls tottered and fell on ajacent buildings, completely demolishing them. No one was injured. Loss $100,000.

The middle span of the bridge over the Baraboo river near Baraboo, Wis., gave way, precipitating twenty-four cars of grain and flour laden Northeastern freight train into the river. The loss was about $60,000. Trains for St. Paul were run over the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul.

A Great Northern freight train ran into and killed a woman named Erickson at Osakis, Minn. The woman's husband and son stood on the other side of the track, and beckoned her to come, and she jumped in front of the engine and was instantly killed. In the face of this the woman's Swede friends threatened to lynch the train men.

A sad drowing accident occurred at Winipeg. Ald. Andrews and wife were crossing the Assinaboine river on the ice to their residence in Fort Rouge, when the thin ice gave way and the couple were precipitated into the river. Their struggles for life were frutile and both met watery graves within a few yards of shore. Ald. Andrews was a highly respected citizen and a prominent lawyer. The young couple had but recently returned from their honeymoon tour to Eastern Canada. Mrs. Andrews was a daughter of Mr. McBain and was one of the most popular young ladies of the city.

WAYS OF THE WICKED.

John L. Sullivan had a spree and seriously injured an actor belonging to the company with which he is traveling.

At Flakville, Ala., Dr. A. M. Turner, an ex-member of the legislature, choked his wife and little daughter to death. The doctor has twice been in the asylum.

Tab Pryor, an ex-policeman was arrested for alleged complicity in the mysterious murder of Mead, the Waupaca (Wis.) banker, in 1882.

Sumner T. Smith, charged with a defalcation of $3,000 against the Centennial Building and Loan Association of Dayton, Ohio, has been arrested in Louisville. He confessed.

George R. Sims of Chicago has been found guilty of dealing out decrees of divorce purporting to have been issued by the probate court of Box Elder county, Utah.

In the trial of Daniel North, of Pontiac, Ill., for the killing of City Marshal Hodge, last July, the jury returned a verdict of guilty, fixing the penalty at death.

Charles Webster, or Crumley, the old actor who shot and killed young Robert McNeill in New York July 19, has been sentenced to seven years' imprisonment.

Charles Counselman, the Chicago grain dealer who refused to testify before the federal grand jury in relation to violations of the interstate commerce law, is fined $500.

Charles Comte, business manager of the Midland Merchantile Company of Kansas City, has committed suicide because a shortage of $8,000 was found in his accounts.

William B. Weeks, ex-treasure of Greely county, Neb., has been arrested, charged with the embezzlement of several thousand dollars. The frauds are said to have been effected by altering the tax receipts.

At New Rochelle, N. Y., burglars bound and gagged a clerk in a store, robbed the place and fired the building. The clerk was rescued just in time, as was also a family living in an upper story.

Nine persons were found lying unconscious in a building which had been set on fire in Chicago. They were safely removed and will recover. The firebug was caught in the act by a policeman but escaped.

At Wheeling (W. Va.) the jury in the Seebold bank robbery case brought in a verdict of guilty. Seebold has been on trial for taking $24,000 from the bank in which he was employed.

John G. Morris, who is charged with having embezzled $16,000 from the Jesse French Piano Company of St. Louis, has been arrested in that city. The accused man is well connected.

All the victims of the recent attempted poisoning at Mrs. Mackey's boarding house in Chicago are now out of danger. George Harris, the colored porter who is suspected of poisoning the food, is still held until the analysis is completed.

The Chicago police have recovered most of the contents of the tin box stolen from the buggy of John Keller, which contained deeds, mortgages and other papers valued at $100,000 in the aggregate. The box was found hidden under a sidewalk.

Assemblyman Ewing of San Francisco has been arrested charged with stealing $6,000 from the Market street railroad, of which he has been collector for the past sixteen years. He was caught in the act and confessed.

A tragedy in the notorious McPeek-Westland claim affairs has occurred near Guthrie, Oklahoma. May Bailey, a witness in the case, has died in great agony from the effects of arsenical poisoning. McPeek is suspected, and may be lynched.

An attempt was made to wreck a Wisconsin Central passenger train near Stevens Point, Wis. A switch was opened by some unknown parties, who placed a stone between the points of the switch. The engine and baggage car left the track, the former turning over on its side, killing the fireman, whose name is unknown, and injuring Frank Martin, the engineer. The passengers were badly scared.

T. H. B. Gough, an old man of sixty-five years, a citizen of Meshoba county, Miss., sold two bales of cotton in Meridian. After paying his debts and making some purchases he had $5 left. He started home with his son, a boy of fourteen years. When night came on he camped out nine miles from town During the night he and his son and a companion named Tatum were awakened by two negroes armed with pistols who demanded their money. The old man gave up what he had and was then killed. After killing the father, a shot was fired at the boy producing a flesh wound. Tatum was then made to hand over his money, amounting to $4. He was then fired upon, one ball producing a scalp wound over the forehead. He saved himself by dashing into the woods in the dark.

OTHER SHORES.

A circular has been issued by the state health officer of Florida prohibiting the importation into that state of horses and cattle from Texas and from all points west of the Mississippi and south of Arkansas rivers. This is on account of glanders.

A wedding is announced to take place in Paris, Mo., which is looked forward to with more than ordinary interest. The bride is Miss Nellie Branham, a celebrated dwarf, and the groom is a leading society man of Quincy, Ill. She is twenty-three years of age and twenty-two inches high, having a faultless form and winning ways. The prospective groom is five feet nine inches tall and twenty-one years of age, and his little sweetheart can barely reach his hand as they walk along the street, presenting a curious sight. The young man's parents strongly object to the marriage.

The captain of the Orient liner Lusitania, which recently arrived at Plymouth, Eng., reports the suicide in the Red sea of a beautiful young English girl—Miss B. McKnight—who took passage at Melbourne and was coming to England to be married. She was observed to be depressed in spirits when the vessel had only been a week or two at sea, and was heard to regret that she had consented to wed. When the Lusitania was between Perim and Suez, on the night of November 3, Miss McKnight suddenly broke off an apparently agreeable conversation with some of her fellow passengers and, mounting the rail, leaped into the sea. The steamer was immediately hove to and boats were lowered, the search continuing for two hours. Nothing, however, being seen of the suicide, it is supposed she was devoured by a shark

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

Thomas H. Allen & Co. of Memphis, one of the oldest cotton firms in the South, makes an assignment, being $750,000 in debt.

Six banks, one in Kansas and the others in Oklahoma, either close their doors voluntarily or are taken posession of by federal officers.

Judge Killam, at Winnepeg, in a test case, sustains the school act of the Manitoba legislature. The Catholics will appeal the case to the privy council of Great Britain.

Col. John R. Baker, a well known Philadelphia stock operator, is missing. He has $100,000 of paper out, but his assets are thought to be sufficient to cover this.

In the Oklahoma house of representatives a bill extending suffrage to women in this territory at all elections has passed. It will probably go through the council also.

The suit brought last spring by Mrs. O'Shea against her husband for the enforcement of her marriage settlement and to compel Capt. O'Shea to transfer to her certain intrests, has been withdrawn.

Stenely Kendrick and Bertha Scott, arrested on suspicion of having murdered Amos J. Stillwell at Hannibal, Mo., in December, 1888, have been discharged in St. Louis.

The government steamer Mississippi has arrived at Memphis from St. Louis, having on board Gen. Comstock, the president and other members of the Mississippi river commission who are on an inspection tour.

The Minnesota oleomargarine law is unconstitutional, and Phil Armour is accordingly happy. Judge Nelson rendered the opinion from the bench at St. Paul, upon the conclusion of the arguments in the petition of C. E. Gooch for a writ of habeas corpus.

The freight blockade in the Chicago & Eastern Illinois yards at Terre Haute, Ind., is complete, The local employes will say nothing about the trouble. The strike was not authorized by any of the railway organizations, and seems to be without a head.

The will of Alexander Watson of Eau Claire, Wis., by which he leaves his wealth to his son and daughter, is contested by Mrs. Clara Morton, on the grounds that Watson was not mentally capable of making a will and that he was wrongfully influenced.

The United States Corporation Bureau of Chicago reports the weekly list of completed corporations in the United States for the week ending Nov. 21 as follows. Total corporations, 209; total capitalizations, $84,627,000.

If reports are true, J. J. Hill has secured the Pacific Short Line, a new road now being built from Sioux city to Ogden, and will make it a part of his Great Northern system. This line is now completed to Oneill, about 200 miles, and a bridge is being built for it across the Missouri river at Sioux City.

Fragments of a mastodon of tremendous size were found by workmen digging a ditch near Manson, Iowa. Among the bones unearthed at a depth of fifteen feet were a molar tooth weighing between seven and eight pounds, and a tusk seven feet long. The animal was evidently amphibious.

The Indians at the Standing Rock agency are beginning to conceive the idea which the less excited whites have tried to explain to them that their Messiah is a false expression concocted by Sitting Bull and his prophets to gain a supposed power and following. Sitting Bull's failure to come to the agency for his rations strengthens this belief.

Jay Gould secures control of the Union Pacific railroad, and will force Charles Francis Adams to resign the presidency to make room for Sidney Dillon. He also effects an alliance of numerous Western and South-western lines, and will operate them all with the idea of making money instead of cutting rates.

In 1871 Omer T. Bailey was convicted of being accessory to the murder of Thomas Harrison, a farmer of Dearborn county, Indiana, and was sentenced to the penitentiary for life. Gov. Hovey has just paroled him. MacDonald Cheek, who was the actual murderer and who is also serving a life sentence, has repeatedly written to different governors declaring Bailey absolutely innocent. No one now objects to Bailey's pardon, and it is the common belief that an innocent man has been imprisoned twenty years. Every governor has been all but confident of his innocence.

FIENDS AT WORK.

Scouts Confirm the Reports of Outrages Committed by the Indians.

The Hostiles in Convenient Proximity to Their Retreats in the Bad Lands.

PINE RIDGE AGENCY, S. D., Dec. 3.—Scouts have been sent out to warn settlers along the line of the Cheyenne river. The hostiles are on White river at the mouth of Hay creek, seven miles from the government herd of 5,000 cattle.

All the ranches on White river have been robbed, ponies stolen and cattle killed.

Four spies sent out Friday morning have not returned, and it is feared they have been killed.

Signal fires north of the White river announce the approach of the Cheyennes.

The hostiles sent word to the friendly Indians here that all spies would be killed.

Half-breed settlers are fleeing to the agency, all reporting heavy losses in cattle and ponies.

GETTING IN THEIR HORSES.

PINE RIDGE AGENCY, S. D., Special Telegram, Dec. 3—The feature in the events of to-day is the skirmish that ranchmen are making to get their horses in some safe quarter where the Indians cannot get them. Scouts came in this morning and confirmed the reports of outrages by the Indians. The Indians have been living very comfortably for two or three days by calling on Batiste Riereau whenever they felt hungry and ordering him to go out and kill a steer.

The military are perfectly safe at the present writing, and are in nowhere near as much danger as the interests of the settlers.

WITH WAR PAINT ON.

PINE RIDGE AGENCY, S. D., Dec. 3.—A government scout who has just left a hostile camp claims that he found quite a band of Indians on Pass and Black Pipe creeks in war paint and with pickets posted. There is nothing to verify his story. The Indians having drawn their rations, are leaving quietly for their villages.

Little Wound has made another effort to persuade his braves to forego hostilities, and he barely escaped from them with his life. Scouts are returning constantly and report increased preparations for war.

Gen. Brooke is restless over the non-receipt of orders to act.

The hostiles report the rounding up of 2,000 government cattle and horses.

WANTED, A BLIZZARD.

The Elements Can Put a Stop to the Ghost Dances.

STANDING ROCK AGENCY, N. D., Special Telegram, Dec. 3.—The diurnal report that Sitting Bull would be in the agency to-day made its appearance at guard mount and was contradicted and disappeared by stable call. It is considered probable that Bull will come on next Saturday, ration day, and when he comes he will be arrested. Maj. McLaughlin said to your correspondent today:

> There is no reason why Sitting Bull should not be arrested as soon as he comes within reach of the agency. He has broken his promise to send his children to school, and he did not come in last ration day as ordered. I expect him on Saturday, and we may get him before that time. I have ten scouts under the command of Shave Head, as trustworthy as he is brave, and these men will patrol the trails leading from Sitting Bull's camp to the agency. If the old recalcitrant comes within the power of these scouts they will bring him in instanter. I had hoped that we were to have some cold weather, as that would stop the crazy dancing more quickly than anything else. White muslin and paint are not the best protectors against Dakota cold. But the thermometer does not go down as fast nor does the wind blow as hard as I could wish, Sitting Bull should be captured and confined of that there is no doubt. His influence is strongly and constantly for evil, and while he does not participate in the ghost dances to the extent of jumping about and yelling, he is present all the time, and keeps the frenzy at its highest pitch. Running Antelope has joined the dancing party, but would come in if I sent for him. Gall and John Grass are thoroughly loyal. Their threats against Sitting Bull, or remarks about his Messianic craze, have reached the ears of the dancers and have probably had the effect of keeping some of them away from the agency.

A blizzard would be as blessed here as Blucher was to Wellington. Meantime the stories that the ghost dancers have grown weary lack confirmation. It is said a council was held at Bull's camp today to decide upon whether he should or should not come in, but this is not likely. The chiefs and medicine men take counsel daily, but the results of the confabs are not given to the whites or the friendly Indians.

BUFFALO BILL AWAITING ORDERS.

MANDAN, N. D., Special Telegram, Dec. 3. —Buffalo Bill is still at Mandan He says he is likely to stay four or five days awaiting orders from Gen. Miles. He declines to be interviewed.

TO GET MORE RATIONS.

Secretary Noble Orders an Increase of Rations to the Sioux.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—The secretary of the interior to-day directed that the Sioux Indians be supplied with increased rations sufficient to conform to the agreement made in 1877. The appropriations for supplies for the Sioux have deceased every year upon the supposition that the Indians were becoming more and more capable of maintaining themselves. Owing, however, to the partial failure of crops for the last year or two and restlessness of the Sioux, which is believed to be in a measure due to the reduction of rations, the secretary has ordered the increase. The increase will amount to between one-fourth and one-third of the present supply. Acting Indian Commissioner Belt to-day sent to congress an urgent request that several appropriations asked for during the last session to carry out agreements made with the Sioux by the Sioux commission of which Gen. Crook was chairman receive the prompt attention of that body.

Ponca Ghost Dancers.

KANSAS CITY, Kan., Dec. 3.—It is learned that the Indians at the Ponca agency have commenced the ghost dance, and that they have their war paint on and are very insolent.

Fell From His Wagon.

WILLMAR, Special, Dec. 3.—John Schieb, a farmer of Lone Tree township, Chippewa county, while driving from this place, fell out of the wagon and sustained injury to his spine from which he died soon afterward. Deceased leaves a wife and three small children.

Sweets on Fire.

HASTINGS, Special Telegram, Dec. 3.—Webster Feyler's confectionery store, including contents, burned to-night. The building was owned by Peter Smith. Insured.

MADE CHIEF CLERK.

W. H. Johnstone Appointed to a Place With the Senate Pension Committee.

WASHINGTON, Special Telegram, Dec. 3.—W. H. Johnstone of St. Paul was to-day appointed chief clerk of the senate committee on pensions, of which Senator Davis is chairman. Earl S. Goodrich still remains as assistant clerk, and W. C. Hubbell of St. Paul was to-day appointed as messenger and stenographer.

Mr. Johnstone was admitted to the bar in New Jersey, and subsequently founded and edited successfully the Bayonne City Herald for several years. On going to Minnesota he resumed the practice of law, and served as judge of probate two terms. He also served on the old First congressional district committee and the Republican state central committee, and is recognized as an expert in legislative affairs, having been for twelve years on all the important Minnesota senate committees. He was selected by the St. Paul chamber of commerce as census supervisor and confirmed by the senate, and a commission was issued by President Harrison, but he declined on account of absence from the state and since congratulates himself.

A NEW COMBINE.

The Big Four and the Stickney Syndicate Join Hands.

CHICAGO, Dec. 3.—An evening paper says that negotiations have been in progress for several days between the big packers, Armour, Swift and Morris, who have recently purchased a large tract of land at Hammond, Ind., on which to erect slaughter houses, and Mr. Stickney, representing the railroad and other interests concerned in the proposed new stock yards in the township of Lyons, situated west of the city. It is understood that an agreement has been practically reached by which the packers will relieve the present owners of the Stickney tract of their obligations, and, in return, the Stickney syndicate will shift its railroad and other interests to the Indiana tract. If this deal is carried through it will practically settle the transfer of all the stock yards and packing and slaughtering interests of Chicago into another state.

A SYNDICATE'S LOSS.

The Power House of the Eau Claire Electric Line Burned.

EAU CLAIRE, Special Telegram, Dec. 3.—The syndicate of Maine capitalists who recently consolidated the street railway, the Dells Water Power company and the Brush Electric Light company in one corporation, known as the Street Railway, Light and Power company, has had a hard blow at the start. To-day a hot box set fire to the company's power house at the dells dam and all the machinery was destroyed. The damage is about $25,000; insured. The Pulp and Paper company's big mill was only saved by its system of perforated pipes. The city arc lights are shut off and the city street railway is being run by horses and mules. The incandescent light circuit is being temporarily operated by the National Electric factory.

NO ADVICES.

Nothing at Chicago Headquarters Very Alarming.

CHICAGO, Dec. 3.—At 10 o'clock to-night Gen. Williams received at army headquarters a dispatch from Col. Poland, who is in command of the United States troops at the Rosebud Indian agency. "All is quiet here: nothing new."

From Pine Ridge agency no dispatches had been received up to 11 o'clock. Gen. Williams stated that matters at that point were undoubtedly quiet. Gen. Miles is expected at headquarters to-morrow from Washington.

A DEPUTY IN TROUBLE.

J. P. Davis, Deputy Clerk of Court, Placed Under Arrest.

Yesterday County Auditor Kain, having discovered some irregularities on the part of J. P. Davis, deputy clerk of court, immediately reported the matter to the county attorney and the clerk of the court. An investigation followed and a deficiency discovered amounting to about $1,000. Davis was arrested by J. J. O'Connor, chief of detectives. The irregularites were in connection with the issue of jury certificates.

Attended With Loss of Life.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 3.—The large manufacturing establishment of the A. Campbell Manufacturing company was damaged by fire to-day to the extent of $300,000. One fireman was killed and three others were injured by falling walls. The killed and injured were:

Charles Snyder, forty years old, foreman of Engine Company No. 16, instantly killed; Joseph Carter, forty-six years old, foreman of Engine Company No. 30, leg crushed; Edwin M. Schofield, thirty-eight years old, hoseman of Engine Company No. 30, skull fractured, leg broken and badly injured internally; and John Colflesh, forty-six years old, hoseman of Engine Company No. 16, injured internally by a fall while being rescued from the burning building.

The three upper floors of the building were occupied by Albert Crenshaw, manufacturer of flannels and dress goods. His entire stock was valued at $100,000, about one-half of which is an entire loss. The amount of insurance could not be given tonight, but it was stated that the losses were nearly covered by policies in various companies.

A Clash in Dates.

WINONA, Special, Dec. —Two opera companies are billed to appear at Winona's one opera house at the same time, Saturday evening next—the McCaul Opera company and Gilmore's Spectacular company. The McCaul company officially has the right of way, as it appears that a date made some time ago by the opera house management with the Gilmore company was cancelled by letter. The Gilmore company, however, deny the cancellation of the date and are going ahead with their advertising and arrangements as if the coast was clear. A lively bout is expected.

Des Moines' "Boodling" Cases.

DES MOINES, Dec. 3.—Somewhat of a sensation was caused in connection with the "boodle" aldermen cases Saturday when Judge Bishop summoned the grand jury before him and read a lengthy communication, citing the facts brought out in the Drady trial, and suggesting that the matter be investigated with a view to indicting all the aldermen and city officials connected with the case for conspiracy to defraud the city. This suggestion would include all officials as far back as 1876, since which time the practice of voting extra compensation has been in vogue.

Soon Fell From Grace.

BOONE, Iowa, Dec. 3.—Byron Devere, who has only been in the city a short time, was last Sunday baptized and joined the Christian church. On Wednesday night he eloped with one of the members, Mrs. James E. Davis. Mrs. Davis left a note to her husband saying it would be useless for him to look for her.

The fire in the Jefferson barracks stables, St. Louis, burned sixty-six horses and mules and all the provender. The sentry who was on guard at the time of the origin of the fire was placed under arrest. The fire is supposed to be the work of an incendiary.

She Took Her Knitting.

From the New Tribune.

"I never been on the cars before," said the little old lady, settling herself in the seat and arranging her skirts. "My son got married fifteen years ago, and went to live to Bridgeport. He kept a urgin 'me to come to Bridgeport, but I says to him, 'I ain't never been on the cars, and I don't think I would like it.'

"'Now, mother,' says he, 'you won't have no trouble at all. You jest get on the cars, and you have nice cushioned seats, and you see lots of strangers. Mother,' says he, 'you would like it, I know.'

"'Well, John,' I say, 'it don't seem right to me, an old woman, to go gaddin' about in new-fangled cars.'

"But every time he come to our house he kept a urgin' me."

"'John,' I says, I might go if I could do some knittin' on the cars. But I ain't willin' to set idle with my hands crossed and do nothin'.'

"'Why, mother,' says he, 'I ain't never seen any women do much sewin' on the cars, but bless you, lots of 'em knits. You kin jest sit there and knit till you git to Bridgeport.'

"'John," says I, I'll go to please you, but I don't think it's right.'

"'Now, mother,' says he, 'I'll come up and git you, or you kin have Henry come down.'

"'No,' says I, 'Henry must stay to home and look after the farm, and I guess I kin git to Bridgeport if the cars will take me there.'

"They will take you right there, and I will meet you,' says he.

"'How will I know,' says I, 'when we are to Bridgeport?'

"'Why, mother,' says he, 'the brakeman will put his head in the door and say what station it is."

"So here I am, on the cars for the first time. It ain't much use for me to be wastin' my time, and I guess I'll do some knittin'."

The little woman put on her glasses, and, feeling around her clothing with trembling hand, drew forth her knitting.

"Do you know," she said, turning around her work and looking at it closely, "the cars run quite smooth. I don't seem to mind 'em at all, but it don't seem right for an old woman like me to be goin' about on cars."

She picked up two or three stitches and was on the point of starting her slender needles on their way when the brakeman opened the door and cried, "Bridgeport, Bridgeport!"

"What did he say?" asked the little woman, with a surprised look in her eyes.

"Bridgeport, We are coming to it now."

"Bridgeport?" she said, folding her knitting. "Now, ain't that aggravatin'? I always thought Bridgeport was forty miles from us. If I knew it was so near I would have walked it. Why, I ain't been on the cars an hour yet."

Nobody laughed at the little woman.

"Why, John," she said to a big, strong, honest-faced man who came in to meet her, "why did you fool me about Bridgeport? I could have walked it in a couple of hours."

"It's forty miles, mother," he said, kissing her wrinkled face. It's the cars, you know, that makes it seem so short."

"Dear, dear," said the mother, "ain't it wonderful."

The House that Washington Built.

Few people, even in Washington, seem to be aware that the only house which the immortal George Washington ever built in that city is still standing and in a reasonably good state of preservation. It is situated near the capitol grounds, not far from the Baltimore & Ohio depot, on North Capitol street. The house was orignally of three stories, but the march of improvements caused the street on which it stands to be graded, and when this was done two more stoaries were added to the building, which is now used as a hotel. Some of the rooms are pretty much in the same condition as they were when occupied by the Washingtons in 1792. A few old pieces of furniture are said to be secreted about the house yet, and the interior of the place shows its age. It is a peculiar thing that none of the many guide books mentions this house as having any historical value, and it is never pointed out by old residents to their country cousins when they come here on a sight-seeing expedition.—Boston Globe.

A Base Imitation.

Two men were standing outside Broadway jeweler's window recently admiring the gorgeous display of glittering jewels that lay before them and criticising such as failed to suit their fancy. Presently one of them, pointing to an object in a red plush tray, said:

"Just look at that scarf-pin representing a fly. Any one can tell that's not real."

"Well, I should think so," answered his friend. Whoever saw a common fly with such a bright appearance? Why it makes me weary when I think that the jeweler who produced that fondly hoped that some one would purchase it to deceive his friends. If I saw that on a man's scarf I could directly tell that it was an enameled imitation, and an unartistic one at that."

At that moment the object of the critic's condemnation moved across the tray, flew in the air, and vanished. The two men looked at each other, gasped and moved away without a word.—Jewelers' Weekly.

THE NORTHWEST.

A Summary of the Important Events of the Week in the Northwestern States.

MINNESOTA.

The Duluth city council is at war with the gas and water companies.

There is considerable talk of establishing a beet sugar factory at Mankato.

Blue Earth county elected a lady superintendent of schools—Miss Stevens.

Luverne has a ladies' brass band that is capable of furnishing excellent music.

All of the saw mills at Stillwater have closed down. The cut for this season is the largest on record.

Mankato Methodists voted in favor of admitting women as lay delegates to conferences of the church.

The postoffice at Barnum was entered by burglars and robbed of $105 in stamps and $12 in money.

Edwin McGowan, the young man who was hurt at Staples a few days ago, died in the hospital at St. Cloud. His back was broken.

Frank Wood, horse thief, badly wanted in Renville county for trotting away with two race horses, has been arrested in St. Paul.

John Lundberg, of Milbank, S. D., while on a visit to friends in Minneapolis, blew out the gas in his room and in the morning was found dead in bed.

S. Joblom and J. B. Olsen, aged about 12 years, while skating on Leach lake, near Rush City broke through the ice and were drowned.

Fred Miller, a horse jockey, confined in the St. Cloud jail on a charge of robbery, made his escape by jumping from an upper story window and is still at large.

J. W. Imerson, of St. Paul was run over by an engine in the South St. Paul stock-yards and injured so badly that he died a few hours later.

Two editors in Pipestone county ran for office at the recent election and were elected. Two editors ran for office in Cottonwood county and got left.

C. A. Nimocks has sold the Minneapolis Times to Frank L. Thresher, representing a stock company. The new company will put $20,000 into the concern and will make the Times a first-class morning paper.

At St. Paul, while Joseph Singer was teaching his wife how to use a revolver, the weapon was accidentally discharged, the bullet taking effect in his right breast and inflicting a dangerous, if not fatal wound.

Nicholas Kill, indicted for the murder of Jacob Kohn, in a barn near Como, on the 13th of September, was convicted at St. Paul. Kill is a tramp and Kohn gave him food and shelter, which kindness he repaid by murdering his benefactor.

A man named Rakovitz, living in the town of Krain, Stearns county, was found by his daughter suspended from the limb of a tree in his pig pen dead. The decline of the price of wheat and the loss of some land by the resurvey of the town rendered him insane and led to the deed. He was in good circumstances.

Upwards of $50,000 has been expended in improvements during the past summer at the Second Minnesota hospital for insane at Rochester. Besides the sewerage improvements and a large and substantial brick building to be used for storage and an office for the steward, a slaughter house, poultry house and a soap factory have been erected on the farm.

The supreme court of Minnesota has handed down a decision which settles the question of validity of a railroad ticket purchased of a ticket broker or scalper and the liability of a railroad company to accept such ticket when offered by an innocent purchaser. The court reverses the decision of the lower court that the holder of such a ticket could not recover, and holds that a round trip ticket used by the purchaser in going to the station named on it and then sold and transferred is valid in the hands of the holder.

W. Gaumnitz, a farmer living at Rius, was held up by a robber between St. Cloud and Sauk Rapids about five o'clock one morning and released of $52. Gaumnitz was on his way to St. Cloud where he intended to make a deposit at one of the banks. He overtook the robber, who was walking along the road. The latter demanded money, and Gaumnitz who is an old man, did not refuse, although the robber did not display any weapon. When he had searched the old man's pockets the robber said good morning and strode away into the woods. A sum of money which the old man had in his boots was missed by the highwayman.

One of the most remarkable cases of old age in the country is that of Mrs. Marit Staven, of Madelia, who has just completed her 100th birthday. The day she became a centenarian a large number of friends and relatives gathered together and celebrated the event in royal fashion. Mrs. Staven was born in Lesje Gudbrandsdalen, Norway, and was married at 17 years of age. Her husband died in 1861, and in 1878 she emigrated to America. The old lady is said to be in good health, and bids fair to live many years more. Her chief occupation is at the spinning wheel, with which she is very proficient. She has had nine children, four of whom are living.

NORTH DAKOTA.

The Great Northern railway bridge over the Marais between Mallory and Fisher was recently destroyed by fire, impeding travel for a short time.

I. Holstein, aged 65 years, who has been a resident of Fargo some six or seven years, dropped dead in his little cigar manufactory from what is supposed to be heart disease.

While George Challis was endeavoring to pull a stick of wood from the wood pile at the rear of the Ingalls house at Grand Forks, the whole pile fell on his hand, crushing it.

A mountain lion is running loose in Archie's Point, at Conkling. It has been seen by different persons. It is thought to be the mate of one killed there a few years ago.

An easier feeling prevails on the frontier, and the settlers are returning to their homes. A Sioux teamster, who was in Mandan reports the Sioux waiting for freight supplies, which were due at Fort Yates a week ago, and thinks there will be no trouble immediately.

As an instance of the tightness of the money market, elevators through the northern country are issuing elevator script instead of money for the payment of wheat, and the script is being redeemed by the St. Paul jobbers.

The farm buildings and a portion of live stock belonging to S. W. Bell, living about nine miles southeast of Lisbon, were destroyed by fire, involving a loss of about $5,000. It was partially insured. The origin of the fire is not known.

The Indian scare has reached Lakota and there seems to be just cause, for redskins are roving the country in bands of half a dozen, all mounted, and seem very insolent, going so far as to enter houses and order meals. Lakota is totally unprotected and would prove a snap in case of an outbreak. Citizenes will take some action for defense.

Fred Clark, of Mandan, died at the Northern Pacific sanitarium at Brainerd, from the effects of a pistol shot. He is the first victim of the Indian scare at Mandan, having received the wound by the accidental discharge of a revolver during a public meeting at that place to devise means to resist an Indian attack.

The Northern Pacific Railroad company will put down six artesian wells along their Dakota division, the first one to be drilled at Buffalo. The sinking of these wells will be beneficial, as it will show farmers where flowing wells can be found, besides furnishing the road with a more abundant supply of water, which is much needed owing to the increased traffic.

The little 2-year-old boy George Pettie, of Turtle Mountain, disappeared the 18th of October and it was supposed he had been stolen. Recently a couple of boys found the dead body of the missing boy. It lay in a clump of dry bush about three miles from home and about twenty feet from Willow Creek. The flesh was nearly all eaten off from the face and neck, no doubt by mink and birds.

Considerable excitement was caused at Bismarck by an assault committed by an Indian on Miss Dora Wright, a stenographer employed in Capital National bank. She left the bank for her home about 9 o'clock, and while walking along the street was accosted by an Indian. As she attempted to evade him he struck her over the head with some heavy instrument and knocked her down. The scoundrel then fled. No motive can be assigned for the assault and it is probable that the Indian was drunk. Miss Wright's injuries are painful, but not dangerous. Two Indians are under arrest, but have not been identified.

The Northern Pacific has been obliged to press every car it can beg, borrow or steal into service during the last month, in order to cope with the wheat business. A railroad official at Fargo is reported as saying that the business of the Northern Pacific for the month of November would exceed that of any previous single month in the existence of the road—that the earnings would be fully $3,000,000 for the month. People in Fargo, he said, could easily believe this statement, for never were so many heavily loaded freight trains seen to pass through the city as during this fall.

Commissioner Holes in Fargo Republican: Last spring I planted ten acres in potatoes with an Aspinwall planter I used 250 bushels for seed. They were of medium size and planted whole. During the season they were cultivated twice and hilled up once. I gathered from the ten acres 2,800 bushels, and the cost of raising the crop was about as follows: The seed, at 25 cents per bushel, $62.50; labor of four men and four mules in planting, $25; four days' labor of man and team in cultivating, $12; three days' labor of man and horse in hilling up, $6; digging, at 5 cents per bushel, $140; marketing, at 5 cents per bushel, $140; depreciation in the value of the planter, and the interest on the price of the planter, $19.50—making a total of $425. I have sold $1,004 worth of the potatoes, and still have nearly 800 bushels left. I shall save enough of these for seed and for my table, and the remainder I shall sell. I estimate my profit from ten acres at about $900. The potatoes are the Early Ohio variety.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Pierre's latest figures on the capital vote are: Pierre, 41,800; Huron, 34,523; majority for Pierre; 7,277.

Yankton has a couple of mysterious shooting cases, in which two men are reported to have been wounded, but the particulars cannot be learned.

Presiding Elder C. B. Clark was injured by being kicked by a horse, and on that account was unable to hold quarterly services at Castalia.

Editor Oxley has been running a paper at Earling, Presho county, and after a trial of six months closed up his printing office and stored it into a building in Chamberlain and is a part of the original Sioux reservation.

Several creditors about Faulkton are anxiously inquiring as to the whereabouts of Gould & Burton, whilom contractors on the railroad grade north of that place. It is said that pay day came, and immediately thereafter Gould & Burton disappeared.

Twelve families of German immigrants from the vicinity of Odessa, Russia, have reached Yankton, and from that point will distribute themselves over South Dakota. They number about sixty persons and possess money, health and ambition.

There are now three United States special timber agents out in the wood camp, near Deadwood, figuring the amount of timber that has been illegally cut and taken away. They measure and count all the small stumps as they go along, and estimate in some way the whole number and the gross value.

The controversy for a site for the Y. M. C. A. building at Sioux Falls is now on. Six sites are offered and after discussion it was finally decided to refer the whole matter to Mrs. Hattie C. Philips who contributed $10,000 toward the building. Mrs. Phillips promptly refused to name the site and an adjournment was then taken.

The Moody County bank has secured a temporary injunction restraining the county auditor from delivering the tax list to the treasurer for collection against said bank on account of doubling of the assessment by the state board of equalization. This injunction is one of the steps in a proceeding to test the legality of the action of the state board and the constitutionality of the law under which the board acted in doubling the assessment of all moneys and credits in the state.

WISCONSIN.

The shortage of Treasurer Serley of Chippewa Falls, is but $7,000. He thinks he can square it without trouble.

A warrant was issued at Racine for the arrest of the principal of the Burlington schools for flogging the son of Joseph Hoch.

Fond du Lac dogs are dying by dozens, and the police are looking for the fiend who is feeding poison to the canines.

Martin Beardsley, who lived near Waterford, left home a few nights ago and has not been seen since. Creditors are seizing his property.

Ashland County will be without a treasurer for six weeks because the bond is so large that the work of getting it is not considered worth the game.

Mrs. Methitable Wright, who resides on a farm just east of Whitewater, has entered her 99th year. She is mother of Supervisor Wright of Whitewater.

Gov. Hoard will lecture on dairy and farm subjects in the East, when he retires from the executive office at Madison. He has had numerous calls since the result of the election was telegraphed over the country.

There's a muttering all over the state that sounds like the suppressed growling of a slumbering volcano. It comes from the census enumerators who have not yet been paid for their work.

There is a man in Appleton who says his brain is drying up, and any violent motion makes it rattle in his cranium. He continually wears a damp cloth about his head to keep the "gay matter" moist.

Martin Wilson, of Hollandtown, near Depere, is the owner of a clock which has done duty for 143 years. The clock was made at St. Hubert, Holland, and was the first one made in that place. It is still in use.

Several Superior merchants who sold goods on Sunday were arrested and fined at the instance of the Retail Clerks' Union. It was thought a fight would result, but many pleaded guilty.

A railroad telegraph operator at Tomah was summarily fired, for forgetting to communicate an order, whereby a collision came near occurring. Eternal vigilance is the price of a job on the St. Paul.

Racine officers found John Underwood in a barn in a dying condition. He is an old broken-down slave to drink. He was once a coachman in a noble English family, and claims to be a relative of John Brown, Victoria's deceased body-servant.

Anthrex, a contagious and invariably fatal disease, has broken out among cattle owned by farmers along Cedar Creek, Ozaukee county. The disease is described as seeming to paralyze the animal, and after an hour or so death ensues.

IOWA.

The editor of the Eagle, published at Gray this state, is perhaps the busiest man in the state. Besides running a first-class weekly paper, he keeps a hotel, runs a livery stable, manages a general store, and at the last election was elected justice of the peace.

The Des Moines Capital suggests that the old capitol at Des Moines be fitted up for a permanent state museum. The new capitol does not afford room for the purpose, it says, and the old building could in that way be preserved as a relic filled with relics.

A Dubuque bridegroom who was married by Rev. McCord at the Methodist parsonage the other evening, got so rattled that he wore the preacher's hat home instead of his own. He was ashamed to go back and gave a small boy a quarter to take the hat back and exchange it.

A prisoner in the county jail of Pottawattamie county one day drew upon the wall of his cell a picture of the little house in which Jesse James was shot. It was an artistic bit of work and so impressed the mind of Sheriff O'Neil when he was in St. Joseph the other day that he was able to pick out the house by the remembrance of the picture, so true was the drawing.

A handsome blonde female, with a very "sick" husband is working the charity racket with great success in the eastern cities of the state. She was canvassing Muscatine recently, doing a business of about $25 a day, when the authorities dropped to her little game and ordered her to leave town. She dresses in the best of style and her sick husband is a robust dude of the cigarette variety. They started west from Muscatine and the Journal advises sympathetic people to beware of them.

"Poor Maggy," an insane woman, died at the Linn county poor-house. Although insane and without a dollar, she imagined that she was very wealthy; that the poor-house was her palace and its intimates her pensioners. She had a kind word for every one and her face always bore the happy smile that comes from a a loving heart. As she lay in her coffin the inmates all wept as they gazed on the gentle and noble face they had known so many years, and that never once looked unkindly on a living creature.

But few towns in the world are like Eagle Grove, in respect to water. There, when a man builds a house he finishes it, puts a sink in the kitchen, and then bores down through the sink into the ground, puts in a pipe, and has running water just where he wants it, or the pipe can be run into the second story and still have flowing water. The town seems to be located just over nature's waterworks. Goldfield and Webster City, as well as Belle Plaine, of "Jumbo" fame, are also blessed, but not to the extent, or rather it is not taken the advantage of, as Eagle Grove.

* * *

His Logic.

Nothing is more amusing or more perplexing in the case of children than the queer turns which their logic takes. It not infrequently happens that they seem to be impertinent, when they are simply working upon some train of thought which the hearer does not follow.

The other day, for instance, little Percy, who is one of the most respectful of children, asked his father how the letters, which he was just learning, happened to have the names they do.

"Oh, that is only the way men decided to name them," his father answered. "They had to be called something so that we could tell which one we were speaking of."

Nothing more was said about the matter at the time, but a day or two later the governess complained that Master Percy persisted in calling the letter o, which he knew perfectly well, q, and could not be persuaded that he was wrong.

"Why, Percy," his father said, "I thought you were learning your letters very fast, and here you are stuck on 'round o' that every baby knows."

"But it isn't o any more, papa," the small boy answered. "I 'cided to call it q."

"Decided to call it q? What for?"

"Well, I can't remember q very well, and the round letter is easy to tell, so I 'cided to call it q so that I should know it."

"But you can't change the names of the letters, my boy."

"Why, papa," returned Percy, apparently much aggrieved, "I asked you how the letters got their names, and you said folks just 'cided what to call 'em, and I have 'cided to call that q.

His father saw that the boy was really in earnest and not in the least inclined to be either rebellious or impertinent, so he laughed and sat himself down to explain why Percy's decision was not as good as anybody's in fixing the names of the letters, an undertaking, it may be added, which he found none of the easiest.—[Youth's Companion.

* * *

He Stood the Test.

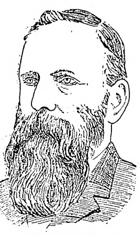
We had a case of feigned insanity in the jail about three years ago, the most extra- worked to a charm, filed the bars in two, made a knotted rope from his bed clothes, let himself down to the ground, and has never been heard of from that day to this. It was the most remarkable case of which I have heard. Imagine the amount of pain and suffering that man had to endure. He never flinched for an instant that a person could detect. We knew he was shamming, but the proof seemed to be the other way. There have been other prisoners in here who feigned insanity, but a few sharp, severe tests would bring them to a realization of their senses.—[Interview in Pittsburg Gazette.

KITTEL HALVORSEN.

The Sturdy Winner of the Triangular Congressional Fight in the Fifth District.

A Visit to the New Congressman-Elect at His Farm Home Near Belgrade.

Among the many surprises of the last election none were greater than the result of the congressional campaign in the Fifth district of Minnesota. There were three candidates in the field, S. G. Comstock of Moorhead, the Republican and former representative, who sought re-election; A. J. Whiteman of Duluth, the Democratic candidate, and Kittel Halvorsen of North Fork, Stearns county, the nominee of the Alliance and Prohibition parties. Prior to the day of election it was the general opinion that the contest lay between the Republican and the Democratic candidates, and very few had any idea that Kittel Halvorsen would cut a figure in the election beyond helping to elect A. J. Whiteman.



KITTEL HALVORSEN.

Therefore when the result was announced and the Alliance candidate was found to have a plurality over his two opponents of some two or three thousand there were but few who stood in a position to ejaculate "I told you so," and those few made the remark in Norwegian, so that the general English-speaking public were spared the infliction of hearing it understandingly.

When it was learned beyond the shadow of a doubt that the Alliance-Prohibition candidate was elected, people began to ask "Who is this Kittel Halvorsen?" The general impression seemed to be that Kittel Halvorsen was an old Norwegian farmer, of limited education and means, whom an unkind fate had thrown into a position for which he was unfitted both by experience, education, or inclination. The harsh sounding name lead people to picture a man of typical Scandinavian appearance, full bearded, blue-eyed, lymphatic, may be ignorant and unkempt, and the possessor of a strong Norwegian accent. He was practically unknown to the people of the state, notwithstanding the fact that he was a member of the local house in 1887, and but few people could recall anything of the personal appearance or characteristics of the man who was elected to represent the Fifth district in congress. With the object of furnishing the readers of the PIONEER PRESS with some idea of the kind of man this Kittel Halvorsen is, and the views and sentiments he holds, a reporter visited him at his home at North Fork, near the little village of Belgrade in Stearns county.

Belgrade is a Norwegian settlement on the line of the "Soo" railway, and is a little over 100 miles northwest of St. Paul. It lies in the southwest corner of Stearns county, and it is about as uninteresting a locality as exists in Minnesota. There are not more than half a dozen English-speaking farmers or residents in the township, if indeed there are that many, exclusive of the children, who all speak good English. Six miles northwest of Belgrade is the township of North Fork, wherein is the home of Kittel Halvorsen. The settlers of North Fork are almost without exception Norwegian or of Norwegian descent, and are a rough and sturdy community. The first settler in the town was the congressman-elect himself, and in the twenty-five years of his residence he has seen the land all taken up and brought into cultivation. The Halvorsen homestead is situated on the south bank of a little creek lined with poplar and willow. The house is a little one-story-and-a-half frame structure, with a single-story kitchen in the rear. Along the eastern side of the kitchen is a shaded verandah, and in the vicinity of the house is the usual pump, milk house, etc. A hundred feet south are a range of stables and sheds, rough but comfortable enough, and a dozen or more calves and colts run loose in an acre or two of enclosed land. The homestead presents just such a picture as do a thousand other settlers' homes in the state, and is neither more nor less comfortable or pretentious than the average. Rising above the tree tops a little west of the house is the whitewashed spire of a little Norwegian Lutheran church, where Mr. Halvorson and his family attend worship every Sunday, and beyond the church is a school house. Farm houses dot the prairie all around, and here it is that Kittel Halvorsen has dwelt for the past quarter of a century.

So much for the home of the congressman-elect. Now as to Kittel Halvorsen himself. Mr. Halvorsen, taken as the PIONEER PRESS representative found him, at home amid his home surroundings, stands out strongly and distinct from the rough background. Among those Norwegian farmers he is a Saul, and towers above them mentally, as did the first king of Israel in stature above his fellows. At first glance Mr. Halvorsen might pass for a retiring, but well to do farmer of an ordinary type, but a closer scrutiny of his features creates a different and more favorable impression. His features are regular, and he has not the florid Scandinavian complexion. A firm, square chin is covered by a dark brown beard, the cheeks are full, but not too fleshy, and his nose is straight and rather large. His eye is what is commonly called gray, but is really a slaty azure in color. It is steadfast in its gaze, and conveys the impression that the man is kindly, yet firm. Above all rises a broad and high forehead, unmarked by wrinkles. In height Mr. Halvorsen is about five feet seven or eight inches, and is sturdily built, weighing perhaps 165 to 170 pounds. A close inspection of the man gives one the idea that he is self-contained, self-reliant, determined and upright—on the whole, a satisfactory figure. His history bears out his appearance.

"I came with my parents from Norway to this country," said he, to the reporter, "in 1848, when I was two years old. I lived with them in Wisconsin until I was sixteen years old, and about the middle of 1862 I joined the First Wisconsin regiment of volunteers, and served during the war with that corps. At the close of the war I came to Minnesota, and settled right here in Stearns county, being the first settler in the township of North Fork."

Some men would have made three volumes of such a life story. They would have told how the youth scarcely old enough to serve enlisted and fought manfully in many of the bloodiest battles of the Rebellion, and when peace once more reigned, followed the star of empire Westward, and with a rifle strapped across his back guided the plow which broke the virgin prairie sod, until then trod but by the Indian and buffalo, and overcoming all difficulties, established a home in the great lone land. But in a simple, unvarnished way, without any of the graces or exaggerations the average politician in his modesty usually imparts to his autobiographical confessions, Kittel Halvorsen told his story. He spoke in as pure English as ever used by an American farmer, and but for the name he bears no one would be led to believe he was anything but a pure-blooded American. On being asked as to what educational advantages he had enjoyed in his youth he said:

"All the schooling I ever received was in the little red school house. I never attended any college."

Looking only on the surface of this man and his life, it is difficult for any one to understand how he came to have such a hold upon the good will of the voters of the Fifth district. Both the Democratic and the Republican party managers found many townships and even whole counties, which formerly had given one or other of the old parties a heavy vote, where in the past election the voters were solidly supporting Kittel Halvorsen. Nothing could move them to vote for any other man, and the returns showed that they voted as they talked. The secret of his personal influence lies in the life and acts of the man during his twenty-five years' residence in the district. His every word and act appear to have been for the advancement of what he considered right, and against what he believed to be wrong. Guided by more than the usual portion of common sense, he has generally been in the right, and this has earned him the good will and even the admiration of all who have known him. For instance: Seven or eight years ago Mr. Halvorsen both smoked and drank, not to excess, but in what people call moderation. He found that the prevailing vice among his neighbors was drunkenness, and that they were impoverishing themselves by their intemperate habits. Without any ostentation Kittel Halvorsen gave up the use of liquor altogether and became a Prohibitionist. This is what his neighbors say of him, and they further say that his example has done much toward curing large numbers of farmers, especially Norwegians, of their drunken habits. His neighbors also say that to his efforts mainly is owing the existence of the little Norwegian Lutheran church, and also the establishment of a modest but useful library in connection with the district school.

It is but natural that such a man should become the natural leader of his fellows and that his natural gifts and characteristics have placed him upon an unsought pedestal in the midst of the Scandinavian community in which he dwells. He is their beau ideal of an upright, honest, capable man, and looking upon him with their lights, they have not a shadow of a doubt but that he is a fit and proper man to represent them in congress or anywhere else. They chose Kittel Halvorsen as against S. G. Comstock because they had lost faith in a man who had voted for a bill which was as opposed to their interests as they were told the McKinley bill was, and Alonzo J. Whiteman to them was a stranger from the big cities, with whom they had nothing in common. The very manner in which Halvorsen was nominated, and his manner of campaigning, confirmed their good opinion of him. Here is the way Mr. Halvorsen talked o his nomination, campaign and election:

When the Alliance district convention met at Fergus Falls last July several names were presented as candidates for concressman, and among them was mine. To my surprise, and in the face of my protest, the convention nominated me by 96 votes out of 102, or something like those figures, on the first ballot. I declined the nomination, but the convention passed a resolution ignoring my resignation, and I went off home feeling mad. At that time I had no idea of being elected, and furthermore I did not want to be elected. Friends came to me and urged me to make a canvass, and finally I set out, though somewhat late in the day. I visited St. Louis, Carlton, Aitkin, Cass, Hubbard, Polk, Norman, Becker, Otter Tail and one or two other counties, and had just got into Douglas on the day of election. As I made my canvass, I gradually became more and more convinced that I would be elected, and when some politicians in Crookston asked me what I was running for, I told them that I was afraid I would be elected. The announcement of the returns did not surprise me, nor has it elated me. I was expecting it."

When told that reports were in circulation to the effect that he had been kept in the field by Democrats and Democratic money, Mr. Halvorsen, in place of flying into a passion, smiled and said quiety but emphatically:

Any person who states that I was assisted, either financially or any other way by the Democrats, either as a party or by individuals, states what is not true.

As to Mr. Halvorsen's qualifications for the high duties he has been called upon to perform, it is not easy to form a just and accurate opinion. By reason of his mode of life he might be expected to possess narrow views of the leading issues of the day, or to be ignorant of many of them. He might also be expected to be more or less wanting in that education or polish, and knowledge of the world and of men, which many people consider so essential to the perfect politician. Polished gentleman Kittel Halvorsen is not, no more than was Abraham Lincoln or Ulysses S. Grant. His reading has been not as limited as his company, but it has lacked variety, perhaps, and it must have been impossible to keep abreast of the current literature of the times. But although not a fluent conversationalist, being a man who would listen rather than be heard, no one can hear his terse, pointed remarks without being convinced that he is possessed of a keen, discerning mind, and of sufficient solid education to carry him safely through such a temple of rare culture as the house of representatives at Washington. As to his views on political questions, here are some of them:

"My tendencies have always been toward the Republican party, although I am not favorably inclined toward a high tariff," said Mr. Halvorsen. "A time came when I deemed the question of prohibition superior to that of party politics, and I abandoned the Republican party."

"Would you, if you had been a member of the last congress, have voted for the McKinley bill?"

"I cannot say. I am not sufficiently well acquainted with the McKinley bill to be able to give an answer to your question. I have heard a great deal about it, but I would like to study the measure more before deciding for or against it. If it increases the duties on imports I am opposed to it, and don't think I should have voted for it."

The silver question Mr. Halvorsen said he had not studied, and he declined to express an opinion regarding the recently passed bill.

I am in favor of the proposition of the federal government of loaning money to farmers at 2 per cent interest. It would be of immense benefit to the farmers who have to pay exorbitant rates of interest upon the money they borrow. I am also favorably inclined toward the sub-treasury scheme, which is that the federal government establish storehouses throughout the country, where farmers can store their produce and receive in return a negotiable receipt or treasury note for the full market value of their produce. It would be a costly proceeding, however, and would require careful forethought. It is as fair a scheme as the present system of bonded warehouses for the benefit of the whisky dealers.

"Do you favor government control of the railroads?"

"That has always been one of my favorite ideas. If we could have the civil service system extended to include the railroads, it would, I think, be practicable; but it would be a great injury to the country if the government had control of the railroads and used them as a political machine, appointing the employes for political reasons. I think the civil service might very well be extended to the whole postal service."

After some other conversation on various subjects, of some of which Mr. Halvorsen frankly owned he knew nothing, while on others he spoke intelligently, if briefly, the reporter asked him what he thought of the future of the Alliance party. Mr. Halvorsen seemed to be of the opinion that it had come to stay, and he expressed a strong wish to see the Alliance, Labor and Prohibition parties all collected into one third party, having a common platform broad enough for them all to stand upon.

"I shall do what I can to bring this about," said he. "It may prove an impossible task, but it is worth trying. I expect the matter will be brought up at the State Alliance meeting to be held in St. Paul on Dec. 3."

Discussing the question as to whether he should go down to Washington before congress met, or not, Mr. Halvorsen remarked:

I shall probably go down next January and learn my way about. I need scarcely tell you that I go down there absolutely unpledged. If I cannot conscientiously enter into caucus with any party I find there, I shall remain out of any caucus. There is no reason that I am aware of why I should not be able to participate in the Alliance caucus, if such a thing is held.

In this connection it might be stated that Mr. Halvorsen will occupy the peculiar position of being the first congressman who has been nominated by the Prohibition party and been elected. The Prohibitionists nominated him at their convention held after the Alliance convention, not merely endorsing him, and he ran on both tickets.

Before parting from Mr. Halvorsen the reporter was introduced to Mrs. Halvorsen, a comely matron of prepossing appearance, and also to three or four sturdy youngsters rejoicing in the surname of Halvorsen. As the reporter shook hands with the congressman-elect and bade him adieu, he experienced a feeling of regret that such a noble forest tree as Kittel Halvorsen should ever be transplanted from his natural surroundings to the enervating hot-house air of Washington. That he will make a congressman of whom Minnesota or any other state need not be ashamed, people may rest assured; and that his rectitude and sagacity will bring him safely through the quagmires and pitfalls of capitol politics, may also be believed; but for his own sake, for the sake of his home life and home comfort which must be offered as a sacrifice, Kittel Halvorsen's call to public life cannot but cause his friends the same feeling of regret with which one sees a friend depart upon a long and toilsome journey.

* * *

A Self Satisfied Woman.

It is impossible for many people to realize that there is anything which they do not affect and that their consequence in any given case is not the thing which decides the course of events. One of these persons, an elderly and rather stout lady, was riding in a railroad train. She was evidently unaccustomed to traveling, and her constant fire of remarks to whom every one would listen afforded not a little amusement to those within hearing.

The old lady was nervous about a certain bridge, a very high one of which she had seen pictures, and which she had made up her mind was not to be trusted. She kept inquiring when the train would come to it, until it was a wonder that the patience of the conductor held out. At last she was told that the bridge in question was at hand.

"Well," the old lady said, with pathos, "I don't know whether we shall get over alive or not, but if we don't it shall not be my fault."

She settled into the corner of her seat with a determined air and a closely puckered up mouth which were only less droll than the general air of responsibility which brooded over her. During the passage of the bridge she could not be persuaded to say a word, but seemed to be holding her breath.

"There," a gentleman in a neighboring seat said, "we are over it safe."

The old woman heaved an explosive sigh.

"Well," she said, "if we had gone to the bottom I should have died with a clear conscience, for it would not have been my weight that did it. I bore up so that I know I just really made the train lighter than it would have been without me."—Boston Courier.

* * *

A Traveler's Curiosity.

An American had tried several times to engage the only other occupant of the compartment in conversation, but the latter, an elderly German, although he in his brief replies showed a good knowledge of English, was taciturn and went back to his book with a grunt after every interruption. As the train sped on its way toward Berlin the silence became more and more oppressive to the American. He came from a part of the United States where to hold one's tongue is almost as deadly as to hold one breath, Boston. Six hours of silence were a head of him unless he did all the talking.

He noticed on the seat beside his fellow traveler an oddly shaped box, with what seemed to be holes punched in the top. This might break the ice, he thought, and he said in the most polite way he could compass:

"Excuse me, sir, but might I be allowed to ask what you have in that box?"

"A mongo," was the gruff reply.

"A mongo! Pray, what is a mongo?"

"It's a wild beast—lives on snakes—my brother's ill—dreams about snakes—I'm taking the mongo down there to eat them!"

"But, my dear sir, the snakes your brother dreams about are not real!"

"Neither is the mongo!"—Galignani's Messenger.

* * *

They Have no Feeling.

From the Detroit Free Press.

Repeated experiments have been made in this country and in France during the last year to see if a live oyster could feel pain. In no one instance has it been shown that he can. He is composed of a fabric which has no sensitiveness, and the only result of a shock of electricity is to make something like a grin crawl over him.

Printing Woodcuts.

Encouraged by the success of the web press in magazine presswork, the printers of The Century have applied the rotary principle to a new machine for fine illustrations, but recently put to work. Sixty-four plates of The Century, truly bent to the proper curve, are firmly fastened on one cylinder 60 inches long and about 30 inches in diameter; sixteen inking rollers, supplied with ink from two ink fountains, successively ink these sixty-four plates with a delicacy and yet with a fullness of color never before obtained

The shafts of the impression cylinder and the plate cylinders, 4½ inches in diameter, do no spring or give under the strongest impression. Although rigid in every part, in the hands of an expert pressman it can be made responsive to the slightest overlay. This machine is fed by four feeders from single sheets in the usual manner and does the work of four stop cylinders in a superior style.

The gain in performance is not as great as the gain in quality of presswork, but quality was considered more than speed. The performance of the machine could have been more than doubled by adding to it other cylinders which would print on both sides of the paper, but careful experiment has proved that the finest woodcuts cannot be properly printed with this rapidity. To get the best results the ink on one side of the paper must be dry before it is printed on the other side.—Theodore L. De Vinne in Century

What an Ayrshire Cow Does.

An Ayrshire cow generally shows 13 per cent. of solids, 13 to 16 per cent. of cream, and 3½ to 4½ per cent. of butter fat. In the milking competitions of the London Dairy Show, and the Oxfordshire and other shows, the Ayrshires have stepped far ahead of the Shorthorns, Guernseys, etc., in the quantity and quality of the milk which they yielded. The milk of the Ayrshire is pre-eminently suited for cheese making from its composition and structure. All samples of milk under the microscope are seen to be composed of a homogeneous fluid, in which float little globules of butter fat. These globules vary in size, and while in the Jersey they are comparatively large, in the Ayrshire they are small and not rising quickly, but, mixing with the curd butter, make an evenly rich cheese The quantity of cheese yielded by such an animal is about six hundredweights, estimated in so many stones of fourteen pounds each.—New York Ledger.

Two Jolly Rides.

Why is it that some boys belonging to the nicest sort of people will persist, in spite of the choicest influences and the most persistent efforts to guard them from the vulgar, in acting precisely as if they did not belong to nice people at all? There are such, and they are a dreadful trial to their parents. An actual case in point is that of young Arthur Swellby, 15 years old, of Beverly and the Back bay, who was completely missing one afternoon, after school, and turned up at about 7 o'clock in a very dingy and disreputable condition.

"Where have you been, Arthur?"

"Cambridge," said the boy.

"Did you walk?"

"Walk? Hum! Guess not. I rode over on a swill cart and came back on a hearse."—Boston Transcript.

Facts About the Queen of Sheba.

It's rather late to learn the truth about the Queen of Sheba Nevertheless the Academy of Inscriptions are greatly exercised about this subject One of their members thinks that he has discovered that Sheba was in Arabia, and that the queen was the mother of a Ben Solomon, who founded a kingdom in Ethiopia. She went to Jerusalem on conquest bent, and would have liked to stay there. But the wise Hebrew king thought she would be too hard to manage, and more useful as an ally in her own country. He therefore sent her back laden with presents and fired with ambitious projects. We may expect one of these days to see her personated by Sarah Bernhardt in an Old Testament drama by Sardou.—Paris Cor. London Truth

The Speculator in Old Dimes.

A few ingenious men go about New York and Brooklyn buying mutilated coins. They visit cheap restaurants, saloons, small retail shops and street stands, and buy all the half dollars with holes in them; all the filed quarters, and all the ancient and time worn dimes that they can find. They pay a price which allows them a margin of 10 per cent. profit. They sell to the small exchanges which do a business in buying mutilated coin: Some of these peripatetic hunters for bad dimes make from $2 to $10 a day.—New York Journal.

A Sire from 'Wayback.

Mrs. Grosvenor—Your daughter tells me that the founder of your family came over with the conqueror

Mr Darcy (from Arizona)—No, mum; she's way off. Why, he'd done fenced in his claim an' cut two craps of alfalfy afore that feller ever seed the steerage.—Judge.

A locomotive engineer of Detroit has a scrap book in which he has pasted 147 stories of engineers' wild rides, thrilling escapes, etc. He says that not one of these stories is true in any particular, but that they were all concocted by men who know nothing about the life of an engineer.

One System of Checks.

A very complete system of meal checks is in practice at an up town cheap restaurant, one of the largest in the world. As you pass the cashier's desk on entering she—the cashier has come to be a she in almost every instance nowadays—hands you a piece of pasteboard which informs you that without it you cannot be served. In addition to this information the card contains figures from five cents to $3. On seating yourself you give this check to the waiter. He keeps it until you have finished your dinner, when he punches a hole in the figure corresponding to the amount you have eaten.

On your way out you hand the pasteboard to the cashier with the amount. This is a very neat plan, and it materially reduces the income of the dishonest waiter.—Ernest Jarrold in New York Journal.

Diamonds, Their Supply and Price.

A diamond once mined and cut is in the world to stay. It is the most indestructible form of matter known, and its value secures it from the mischances which happen to other kinds of property. Every year the stock already on hand is increased by the whole product of the mines, with little or no corresponding reduction to be made for loss or destruction of old gems. It would be natural to suppose that this steady increase in supply—which in Africa alone exceeds 4,000,000 carats annually—would lower the cost of diamonds, but, on the contrary, every year shows a rise in their price.—Kate Field's Washington.

For Office Seekers.

The following story, which may be true, but more probably is not, is related of President Lincoln: A local politician went to Washington seeking an office, but in a fortnight came back without it. "What was the trouble?" asked one of his friends. "Didn't you see the president?" "Yes, of course," answered the politician. "Well, then, why didn't you get the office?"

"Well," said the disappointed applicant, "we went in and stated our errand. The president heard us patiently, and then said, 'Gentlemen, I am sorry that I have no office for Mr. ——, but if I can't give you that I can tell you a story.' Then he went on:

"'Once there was a certain king who kept an astrologer to forewarn him of coming events, and especially to tell him whether it was going to rain when he wished to go on hunting expeditions. One day he had started for the forest with his train of lords and ladies when he met a farmer.

"'Good morning, farmer,' said the king.

"'Good morning, king,' said the farmer. 'Where are you folks going?'

"'Hunting,' said the king.

"'Hunting! You'll all get wet,' said the farmer.

"'The king trusted his astrologer and kept on, but at midday there came up a tremendous rain that drenched the king and all his party.

"'On getting back to the palace the king had the astrologer decapitated, and sent for the farmer to take his place.

"'Law's sakes,' said the farmer when he arrived, "it ain't me that knows when it's going to rain, it's my donkey. When it's going to be fair weather he always carries his ears forward, so. When it's going to rain he puts 'em backward, so.'

"'Make the donkey the court astrologer!' shouted the king.

"'It was done, but the king always declared that that appointment was the greatest mistake he ever made in his life.'

"Mr. Lincoln stopped there," said the office seeker. "'Why did he call it a mistake?' we asked him. 'Didn't the donkey do his duty?'

"'Yes,' said the president, 'but after that every donkey in the country wanted an office.'"—Youth's Companion.

Some Foreign Words.

One of the fair young girl graduates who quite recently mapped out the destiny of the world in an essay entitled "A Dream of the Future," has taken to writing society novels, and her latest effort, the manuscript of which lies on the desk of the literary editor for review, is well up to the standard of current fiction. Especially is this so in the selection of foreign words and phrases which abound in the story. It strikes me, however, that they are not always up to the mark in the application.

For instance, it is going a little too far, I think, to say that the rounded cheeks of Jessica wore a beautiful sub rosa hue, and that her hat draped in nom de plumes was most becoming. I don't quite see how the little bona fide could come in wagging his tail, or that the chickens could be put into their coup d' etat. I should not care to risk my bones galloping away on a hors de combat, but I suppose I should be as safe as in ordering my steak double entendre, especially when Ich dien at 2 o'clock precisely. Finis, the end is an apt quotation.—Memphis Times.

Salt for the Hair.

There is an old belief that salt water injures the hair, and a delightful old lady once explained the reason therefor.

"You see," she said, "the salt in the water is stronger than the hair in your head, and so the salt just draws the hair right out." Assuming this to be true, that salt water will draw the hair out of the head when it isn't otherwise specially inclined toward coming out, by good homoeopathic reasoning we come to the conclusion that when the hair insists upon coming out of its own accord a vigorous treating with salt and water will put a stop to it. Whether the reasoning be true or not the fact is. Not all the tonics you can buy at the hairdresser's will do your hair half the good, if it manifests a tendency toward falling out, that a daily scalp bath of strong salt and water will.—New York Evening Sun.

The Power of Prayer.

One of our city undertakers relates a little incident which illustrates the power of prayer in a way different from that which is taught by orthodox ministers. He says:

"I had a funeral the other day. It was the child of a poor family; but few people and no minister were at the grave? I pitied them; it looked so desolate and forlorn that I made a prayer at the last myself, although I had never done the like anywhere before."

"You didn't!" exclaimed his wife.

"Yes, I did. I have heard it done so often that it all came to me without thought. Besides that it did me good; I got three funerals last week which would never have come to me had it not been for the prayer."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

Where the Lifeboat Was Born.

A monument to the lifeboat now stands at South Shields, said to be the lifeboat's birthplace. In 1789 the ship Adventure was wrecked off the Tyne and a committee was formed to consider the matter of providing a lifeboat. The models submitted by Henry Greathead, a boat builder, and by William Wouldhave, a journeyman painter, were selected by the committee for use. Whether Wouldhave or Greathead was the actual inventor is a moot point; but locally Wouldhave is looked upon as the author of the model. The names of both men are given on the memorial. The first occasion on which a shipwrecked crew was landed by means of a lifeboat was on June 30, 1790.—Chicago Herald.

Josh Billings.

Josh Billings is the nom de plume of Henry W. Shaw, who was born in Lanesborough, Mass., in the year 1818. He first became known as a humorous writer and lecturer in 1863, and since that time his comic sketches have been extensively published in the journals of the United States and England.

Protesting Too Much.

Lucy (effusively)—My dear, I was so very sorry that I was not in when you called yesterday.

Jessie (earnestly)—Please do not feel vexed, dear; I assure you it didn't matter at all.—Pittsburg Bulletin.

The Sad Part.

Fred—I wish my girl would hurry up and marry me, if she is going to.

Edwin—Is she keeping you in suspense?

Fred—No, expense.—Detroit Free Press.

The Race Question Again.

"Uncle Abe, they tell me your colored church is very exclusive?"

"It tries to be, sah, but er white man will sneak in ocrasionally."—Epoch.

The Life of a Funny Lecturer.

The lecture platform (alack that it should be so!) is become a booth in Vanity Fair, and they that stand therein have wares to sell. And there be some of us standing in the market place who mourn that the passerby may lament unto us. Some of us there be who pipe that the light of heart may dance. And others still are there, good as the best of those who toil, and stand idle, even until the eleventh hour, because no man hath hired them. But alike are they all in the market place. The lecture business is a "business." The lecturer invests, comparatively speaking, much in it. He causes to be made a lithograph of himself which resembles him "as the mist resembles rain" or a silver dollar resembles the Goddess of Liberty. He compiles a book of "press notices," so uniformly and extravagantly laudatory that we might fear he stood in danger of the woe pronounced upon us when all men shall speak well of us did we not suspect that the press notices undergo a rigid civil service examination, and that only the fittest for the business survive the ordeal of natural selection.

He salaries an advance agent, or nestles under the wing of a lecture bureau. He provides for himself many changes of raiment, extra sandals and scrip for his purse. He pays full railway fares; often he travels hundreds of miles between engagements; he eats when he has opportunity and there is aught to eat; he goes to bed when the committee is too sleepy to sit up in his room any longer; he passes sleepless nights on freight trains; he endures, because he must, the maddening roar and racket and rush and jar of railway trains day after day, months in succession; he lives without companionship; there is no time to read; he hears no lectures save his own, and of them perhaps he grows a-weary. He attends no concerts, no theatre; he sees little of his friends, less of his family.—Robert J. Burdette in Forum.

Stamps That Will Not Stick.

Correspondents complain that the two cent red stamp will not stick on their letters long enough to have them delivered through the mail. Letters are received duly post marked, showing that the stamp had been affixed, but quite devoid of any pay stamp on reaching their destination. Other stamps are heard from that come off in the hand while they are being posted. The letter goes off in the box, the stamp flutters off in the hand. You can wrap up, says one correspondent, a ten cent special stamp in a bit of paraffine paper and it will keep its stickiness, for the mucilage is good.

But if you wrap up your two cent red stamp in a similar paper, to keep them all from sticking together, the result is bad; stickiness goes out of them, and the chances are that they will fall off your letter before it reaches Mr. Field's stamping machines. Yet the paraffine paper is supposed to act, by its oiliness, precisely as the less elegant plan of rubbing the stamps as you buy them on the hair of your head. Is there any remedy for stickless stamps? Certainly there is. The mucilage bottle, if you have any doubts. You had better resurface them—in this individual way—than to have the trouble of tearing them apart when all glued together.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Marie Bashkirtseff's Lingerie.

About her underclothing this interesting young person was as wildly extravagant as in other directions. She had all those things made of the finest linen lawn and real lace

She was especially fond of Valenciennes lace as being youthful and chaste. The style which she always affected was what the French call the virginal or young girlish.

Doucet made her underclothes as well as her outer ones. They were horribly expensive of course and she ordered quantities of them.

Her wash bills were dreadful to contemplate, and her Aunt Romanoff, who smoked all the time and cared very little for underclothes, made these wash bills and Marie's constant changing of lingerie a topic of frequent and amazed though uncomplaining conversation.

Marie was very liberal with all her things, including her underclothes. For instance, she gave to Breslau, whom she hated, but with whom she wished to be on friendly terms, a very fine old fashioned linen bodice, trimmed with long ruffles at the neck and sleeves, which she herself had been wearing at the studio. It cost 100 francs and Breslau, who was a poor and practical young woman, accepted it with thanks, and probably has it yet.—New York Sun.

Stanley and Artist Bell.

Mr. Joseph Bell was an admirable sketcher, fertile in suggestion, and quick at taking hints and notes, but somehow he always managed to irritate Stanley by what may be called his excessive verbosity and the mischievous delight he always took in endeavoring to land Stanley on the horns of some dilemma. For example, he got him to describe the method of getting a donkey across a deep river. Stanley explained to him how the porter led the donkey into the stream, holding the bridle and keeping the donkey's head (which was alone visible) out of the water with one hand and swimming vigorously with the other hand. "Yes," said Bell; "did the porter carry a rifle?" "Of course," said Stanley. "Yes," said Bell, "and in which hand did he carry the rifle, seeing that one hand is already engaged in guiding and helping the donkey and the other in swimming for dear life?" This was a sort of fun which Stanley did not appreciate.—Edward Marston in Scribner's.

Two Morals to One Story.

In a little village not a thousand miles from Hartford, and not a thousand years ago, a happy family sat down to dinner. They had blanc-mange for dessert. The blanc-mange, unfortunately, as it turns out, was put to cool outdoors before it was placed on the table. Nearly every one partook heartily. Presently the head of the family felt something hard in the dish, and delving into it spooned up a hoptoad. Said toad had jumped into the dish as it lay outside, and the blanc-mange being soft and hot, had sunk and died.

This true story teaches not only that one should look before one leaps, but that things are not always what they seem.—Hartford Courant.

Jamaica Ginger for the Blues.

A farmer in northern Maine recently drank three bottles of Jamaica ginger to drive away the "blues." He afterward went to sleep in the barn, and a cow laid down on him and broke two of his ribs. He hasn't done a day's work since, and at last accounts he was "bluer" than ever.—Kennebec Journal.

Everybody knows of the totems of North American Indians, but not quite everybody has been interested to learn that totemism is nearly universal with savage man. No savage will eat the animal that represents his own clan.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Nov. 4, 1890.

Notice is hereby given, that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the clerk of the Dist. court at Detroit, Minn., on Dec. 29, 1890, viz James Dean, pre-emption d s 5982, for the se¼ sec 1 tp 150 rg 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz

Peter Lonson, James McMahon, James Wiley, James C O'Brien, all of Red Lake, Minn.

A. Barto, Register.

Land Office at Crookston, Minn., Oct. 27th, 1890. Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the register or receiver U. S. Land Office at Crookston, Minn., on Dec. 13th, 1890, viz;

Joseph Patnode, Hd No 10934, for the w½ ne¼ sec 27, tp 151, r 43.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuos residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz:

Exerie Chatel, Sam Miller, John Deforge, A. Lafontaine, all of Red Lake Falls, Minn.

nov7d13 H. H Dickmann, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Nov 4, 1890.

Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the clerk of District Court at Detroit, Minn., on December 29, 1890, viz Peter Lonson, pre-emption d s No 5986, for the s½ ne¼, and n½ se¼ sec 26, tp 150, r 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz

James Wiley, James McMahon, James C. O'Brien, James Dean, all of Red Lake, Minn.

A Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Nov. 4, 1890.

Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the clerk of District Court at Detroit, Minn., on Dec. 29, 1890, viz James McMahon, pre-emption D S No 5988, for the se¼ sec 33, tp 150, rg 32.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz

James Wiley, Peter Lonson, James C O'Brien, James Dean, all of Red Lake, Minn.

A Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Nov. 4, 1890.

Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the clerk of district court at Detroit, Minn., on Dec. 29, 1890, viz: James Wiley, pre-emption d s No. 5,992 for the [illegible] se¼, nw¼ se¼, and se¼ sw¼ sec 35 tp 150 rg [illegible]

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz;

Peter Lonson, James McMahon, James Dean, James O'Brien, all of Red Lake, Minn.

nov6de11 A. Barto, Register.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk—ss.

In probate court, special term Oct., 1890.

In the matter of the estate of William J Bahnson, deceased.

Letters of administration on the estate of said deceased being this day granted unto De Forest Bucklen of said county.

It is ordered, that all claims and demands of all persons against said estate be presented to this court, for examination and allowance, at the probate office in the city of Crookston in said county on Tuesday the 18th day in May, A. D. 1891 at 10 o'clock a. m.

It is further ordered, that six months from the date hereof be allowed to creditors to present their claims against said estate, at the expiration of which time all claims not presented to said court, or not proven to its satisfaction, shall be forever barred, unless for cause shown further time be allowed.

Ordered further, that notice of the time and place of the hearing and examination of said claims and demands shall be given by publishing this order once in each week, for three successive weeks prior to the day appointed for such examination, in the Red Lake Falls News, a weekly newspaper printed and published at the village of Red Lake Falls, in said county.

Dated at Crookston, Minn., the fourteenth day of October, A. D. 1890.

By the Court: C. O. Christianson,
Judge of Probate.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before, the register of U S Land Office at Crookston, Minn., on Dec. 6, 1890, viz, Arthur Toupin, hd 12,187, for the w½ se¼ and e½ sw¼ sec 15, tp 150, r 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of, said land, viz,

Damas Lacnance Moses Guerard, Philias Desautel, Cyrille Lussier, all of Brooks P. O., Minn.

State of Minnesota, county of Polk, ss.

District Court, fourteenth judicial district.

Winnie Eason, plaintiff, against Theodore Eason, defendant.

The State of Minnesota, to the above-named defendant.

You are hereby summoned and required to answer the complaint of the plaintiff in the above entitled action, which is on file in the office of the clerk of the district court in and for the county of Polk and state of Minnesota and to serve a copy of your answer to the said complaint on the subscribers, at their office in the city of Crookston in said county, within thirty days after the service of this summons on you, exclusive of the day of such service: and if you fail to answer the said complaint within the time aforesaid, the plaintiff in this action will apply to the court for the relief demanded in said complaint.

Dated Oct. 31st, 1890.

Montague & Bucklen,
Plaintiff's attorneys, Crookston, Minn.

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage containing a power of sale dated April 5th, 1887, duly recorded in the office of register of deeds of Polk county, Minnesota, on April 8th, 1887, in book 30 of mortgages on page 30 whereby Wilfred Cyr and Emma Cyr, his wife, mortgagors, mortgaged to F. T. Day, mortgagee, the west half (w½) of the south east quarter (se¼) and the south east quarter (se¼) of the south west quarter (sw¼) and lots nine (9) and ten (10) all in section twenty-five (25) in township one hundred and fifty one (151) of range forty-five (45) in Polk county, Minnesota containing one hundred and seventy-four and 25-100 acres, by which default the power of sale has become operative and no action or proceeding at law or otherwise has been instituted to recover the debt remaining secured by said mortgage or any part thereof and there is claimed to be due on said mortgage at the date of this notice, the sum of $7.30.

Now, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of said power, said mortgage will be foreclosed and said premises will be sold at public auction by the sheriff of said county or his deputy on the 10th day of January, 1891, at 10 o'clock a. m. at the front door of the court house in the city of Crookston in said county, to pay said debt and interest and taxes and twenty-five dollars attorney's fees and disbursements allowed by law.

Dated June 1st, 1890.

F. T. Day, Mortgagee.

De Forest Bucklen,
Attorney for Mortgagee,
Crookston, Minn.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk—ss.

In probate court, special term, Nov. 17, 1890.

In the matter of the estate of Peter Bischoff, deceased.

On receiving and filing the petition of Joseph Bischoff of Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, representing, among other things, that Peter Bischoff, late of this county, on the 3d day of April, A. D. '88, at Drayton, N. D., died intestate, and being a resident of this county at the time of his death, leaving goods, chattels and estate within this county, and that the said petitioner is a brother of said deceased, and praying that administration of said estate be to said petitioner, Joseph Bischoff, granted:

It is ordered, That said petition be heard before this court, on Tuesday, the 16th day of December, A. D. 1890, at 2 o'clock p. m. at the probate office in Crookston in said county.

Ordered further, that notice thereof be given to the heirs of said deceased, and to all persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week, for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the Red Lake Falls News, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Red Lake Falls in said county.

Dated at Crookston the 17th day of November A. D. 1890.

By the Court: C. O. Christianson,
Judge of Probate.

$6000.00 a year is being made by John R. Goodwin, Troy, N.Y., at work for us. Reader, you may not make as much, but we can teach you quickly how to earn from $5 to $10 a day at the start, and more as you go on. Both sexes, all ages. In any part of America, you can commence at home, giving all your time, or spare moments only to the work. All is new. Great pay SURE for every worker. We start you, furnishing everything. EASILY, SPEEDILY learned. PARTICULARS FREE. Address at once, STINSON & CO., PORTLAND, MAINE.

P. & J MEEHAN,

(SUCCESSORS TO J. J. HOWE & CO)

Manufacturers and Dealers in

LUMBER,

LATH,

SHINGLES

Sash, Doors, Moldings, Building Paper,

Yards and Office on Main St.

We Would Like to Call the Attention of

Capitalists

Manufacturers and Others Desiring a Place for

INVESTMENT

To the

Superior Advantages of

RED LAKE FALLS,

Is Many Water Powers and other natural advantages. It is only a question of a few years until this will be one of the leading cities of Minnesota. Investment in real estate or water privileges are sure to secure to the investors handsome returns.

WE RE

In the Center of Vast

Farming District.

Yearly consuming large amounts of imported products of manufactures. This vast tract of land is watered by the Red Lake and Clearwater rivers. Within the limits of the city are

12 DISTINCT WATER POWERS.

The only natural water powers on these streams. There are fine openings for paper and pulp mills, woolen and other factories. Parties outside desiring any information concerning property, address

THE NEWS.

RED LAKE FALLS NEWS.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

JAMES MEEHAN JR., EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR

OFFICIAL PAPER OF CITY AND COUNTY.

Vol. IIX. No. 1.

RED LAKE FALLS, POLK COUNTY, MINNESOTA, DECEMBER 11, 1890.

TERMS, $1.50 PER YEAR

> SPECIAL <

CLOAK - SALE

>THIS WEEK<

JOSEPH SMITH & CO.

CHARLES LANGEVIN

—DEALER IN—

GENERAL MERCHANDISE,

RED LAKE FALLS, MINNESOTA

Red Lake Falls Iron Works.

P. & J MEEHAN, Proprietors.

J. Z PERRON, Manager.

SAW AND GRIST MILL

MACHINERY MADE AND REPAIRED.

Repairing Thresher Engines

AND BOILERS AND

AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS

Circular Saws Hammered. Satisfaction Guaranteed, Correspondence Solicited.

BRING IN YOUR WORK

Scrap Brass and Copper Bought

Hunt & McClatchie

—DEALERS IN—

Heavy and Shelf Hardware.

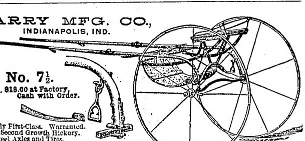
DEERING FARM MACHINERY.

Look at Our

≥Premium Offer≤

At Head of Local Page.

PARRY MFG. CO.,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.



No. 7½.
Price, $18.00 at Factory, Cash with Order.

Strictly First-Class. Warranted.
All Second Growth Hickory.
Steel Axles and Tires.
Low Bent Seat Arms. Perfectly Balanced.
Long, Easy Riding, Oil Tempered Spring.
Best Wheels and Best All Over.
IF YOU CAN'T FIND THEM FOR SALE BY YOUR MERCHANTS, WRITE US

A FEW COLLEGE YARNS.

WORK THAT BOYS IN SCHOOL WILL UNDERTAKE FOR FUN.

A Hazing Party That Failed—How a Professor's Horse Was Raised in the Air—When One Fellow Had to Pray Three Hours to Save the Crowd.

"Talking of hazing," said a university club man the other evening, "I'm here with some emphasis and accent to say it is not always a success. I was with a party of students once who, having set their academic hearts on hazing a rough and uncouth specimen from Vermont, repaired to his room about 11 o'clock one night to perform these rites. There were seven of the invaders, including myself, and we silently collected in the corridor outside the freshman's door. In order to be impressive in our entrance at a given signal we hurled ourselves against the portal and burst it in.

"I recall a feeling of pride as the door went in at the success of this first step, but nothing distinctly afterward. In the dim, religious light which sifted through the curtains from the swinging moon we beheld a long, sparse and meager being who flew out of bed and fell upon us. He was silent as a bulldog, but quick and ferocious as a cat. I never saw such a creature. I got a blow which I vividly remember comparing on the spot to a flail, a comparison, by the way, which I do not now alter or regret. The whole affair did not last ten minutes, and its close found myself and the other hazers battered and bruised and out in the hall.

RAISING THE HORSE.

"The Vermonter did not even attempt to close the door after us, such was his contempt for our prowess. He went over to a washstand while we consulted in the hall. We did not go back in his room. We could, of course, but we saw it would consume a great deal of time and the hour was late. So we gave it up.

"'Say, you Vermont man!' I said as we were about to leave, 'I trust you are not mean enough to report this to the faculty?'

"'Not at all,' he said with a cheery laugh. 'I like it. Come again any time you please. Your attentions are very gratifying to my pride.'"

"Where I was," said the listener, "we had a little fun one night—perfectly bloodless, however—which in its results always rose an insolvable mystery to the profound head of the institution. The professor had an old, fat, sluggish horse, which abode in a small pasture or paddock close to the college. One night a party of us repaired thither and proceeded by means of rails laid square, just as children build cob houses, all decked over or floored with some two inch planks which lay convenient, to build a platform. We raised it at first perhaps eighteen inches from the ground. Then we built a second close beside the first and made it three feet high.

"The horse was led up on the first and from there to the second. Then, taking off the plank floor, we added about four rails to each of the four sides and carried the first platform to about eighteen inches higher than the one on which the horse stood. This was planked over and the old horse invited to climb on it, which he did in a docile, oppositionless way very winning to our young hearts. Well, we continued this alteration business, leading the old war horse from one pedestal to the other until he was twelve feet in the air, perched on an eminence of rails and planks.

"This suited the most fastidious of the party, and we tore away the rail and plank construction the horse had no further use for and piled it carefully back in its several parts just where we got it. The old horse, who seemed to realize his position, didn't stroll about any, but made the best of it, lying down and going to sleep. The professors were much astounded in the morning and never were able to figure it out. They sent to a neighboring town for help and got the horse down with a derrick.

PRAYING AGAINST FIRE.

"Another time," continued the raconteur, "a party of us had been out on that sacred night Halloween tearing off gates and signs and otherwise disporting ourselves after the fashion of college youth the world around. We had brought about a cord of broken store signs up to Jim Martin's room, and were merrily burning them in his big fireplace. The ceremonies were at their height when two or three professors, excited to the movement by indignant townspeople, whose signs being ravished had followed us to the college gates, rapped loudly at the door for admission. Something had to be done, as it would never do to let in the professors and those broken evidences of our guilt around.

"A man by the name of Jack Nesbit was equal to the pinch, however. It was a rule of the college that no professor should be denied entrance to a room, no matter the hour, unless the occupant was engaged in prayer. In event of the present progress of this religious exercise the professor was unable to wait until the 'amen,' and could in nowise complain. At the first rap Nesbit broke into prayer. In a loud, sonorous tone he sought mercy for himself and his companions. Continuing he beleagured the throne of grace in behalf of the college, as well as the professors, singly and in a body. Next the students came in for note by name and in bulk, as well as every attache of the place to the small person who cleaned knives and forks in the kitchen. No one was slighted or overlooked. Then Nesbit went for the government and prayed for the nation at large; then the president and his pressing needs were named, and divinity was pleaded with for their fulfillment; then all the departments and various officers of state, and when they were exhausted all the states, beginning with Maine and ending with California, were interceded for.

"After this Jack went to Europe, and, beginning with England, related the necessities of each government and sought their satisfaction. From there he went to Asia, to Africa, then to South America, and so on until he was drifting among the islands which dot the southern seas. Meanwhile the rest of us turned stokers and crowded the signs into the fireplace, where they roasted and leaped almost to the limits of general conflagration. Just as Jack was landing at Auckland the last splinter went up in smoke and the disgusted professors were let in. The prayer was almost three hours long, and as the teachers filed in Nesbit closed with some quotation from St. Mark which refers to those who, seek- [illegible] find it not.—Kansas City [illegible]

Queer Foster Child.

Cats sometimes adopt the young of other animals, even when they have not lost their own kittens; but the sort of adoption which a Pennsylvania correspondent of The Youth's Companion relates is certainly very unusual. The cat of whom the story is told had been deprived of her sole kitten, and was mewing about disconsolately. All at once her attention was attracted by a brood of young chickens which were taking the air under a gravel sifter in the yard.

She seemed quite fascinated by the downy, newly fledged little creatures, and began walking about the cage, mewing in motherly tone as they "peeped" one to another. The chickens, on their part, watched the cat suspiciously and evidently regarded her as an enemy.

Next morning it was found that one chicken was missing, and as the old cat was nowhere to be found, she was at once suspected of having stolen the chick and carried it away. A search was made for the cat, but without success.

On the second morning after the chicken's disappearance two little girls of the family once more started on the search. Going around the house to the back of an old kitchen, one of them climbed a ladder to a loft which served as a storehouse for odds and ends. Nearing the top of the ladder, the little girl heard a faint "cheep!"

She searched the loft as she had done before, but found nothing. Again came the faint "cheep!" from some unknown source.

In the weatherboarding by the side of a chimney which went up at the side of the loft there was a hole. Into this the little girl popped her head, and there, on the ground about six feet below, sat the cat, with the little famished chicken beside her.

In order to rescue the chicken it was necessary to make an opening in the weatherboarding near the ground. Then the adopted chicken, which the foolish cat was trying to bring up as a kitten, was set free and restored to its mother, greatly to the distress of the old cat, which kept on fondling and licking it to the last moment. Her distress, indeed, seemed even greater than when she was deprived of the kitten.

A Story of the Good Old Style.

Abner Dungrass, from away up beyond the White mountains, had penetrated to the Hub. It was Abner's first visit to the city—in fact, his first trip away from home.

A relative doing business in the metropolis had spent the previous summer with Abner's parents, and in return for many kindnesses he had invited his friends of the country farm to visit him in his city home.

And thus Abner chanced to be in Boston, and was now dining at a hotel with his host.

At first our countryman hardly knew what to do with himself at the wondrously laden table. His relative, observing his hesitation, whispered to him:

"Don't be backward, Abner; help yourself to just what you like."

By and by a gentleman sitting opposite directed a waiter to bring him a plate of ice cream.

The cream was brought, and the gentleman set it down before him while he finished a dish of scallops. Abner looked up and saw the delicate looking mass in the plate not far away. It was tempting and he reached forth and took it. He had put a spoonful of the frozen mixture into his mouth, and was hesitating between surprise and delight when the gentleman opposite rather abruptly and not very pleasantly spoke:

"Well, my friend, that's what I should call decidedly cool."

"Yaas," responded Abner innocently, when he had swallowed the frigid morsel. "It's abaout the coldest pudd'n' I ever tasted. I swan tew man! ef I don't believe it's railly tetched with frost!"—New York Ledger.

Who Votes in London.

London's new government rests upon a franchise so popular that practically nobody who would care to vote is excluded. In the first place, all householders are enfranchised; and this includes every man who rents a place for his family, even if it be only a small room in the garret or the cellar of a tenement house. It also includes those who live within fifteen miles of the metropolis, but own or occupy metropolitan quarters, for any purpose, worth a certain very limited rental. Owners of freehold property in London, no matter where they live, if British subjects, are entitled to vote. Widows and unmarried women who are householders, occupiers or owners of property, are also authorized to vote for county councilors.

The principal basis of the franchise is the household; and the chief disqualifications are receipt of public alms and failure to pay rates that have fallen due. Any resident of the metropolis or vicinity who is entitled to vote is eligible to election. Furthermore, any British subject who owns land in London, or who is possessed of a limited amount of property, no matter where he lives, may be chosen a councilor of the county of London. The fact of residence in one district does not disqualify, either in law or in the popular judgment, for candidacy in another district.—Century.

A Pretty Arrangement of Photographs.

A pretty way to arrange photographic and other views, which are reminders of one's summer vacation, is described by a visitor to Lady Brassey's home, and is very easily imitated. Procure long strips of gray or any neutral or delicate tint of cartridge paper, of a pretty width to form a frieze or border, and carefully cut out openings of various sizes at irregular intervals. Tack the strips to the wall in the hallway or library or your own room, and underneath each opening place a photograph sketch or collection of cards or wild flowers collected during the season. They should not be placed higher than the eyes of an ordinary sized person, and they will form a very agreeable reminder of vacation days. Lady Brassey so arranged hundreds of sketches of her extensive travels, and they are greatly enjoyed by guests at her old home.—New York Ledger.

A COMPOSER OF SONGS.

HE WROTE SWEET BALLADS, BUT OTHERS GOT THE DUCATS.

The Author of Hundreds of Beautiful Songs, Many of Them Famous, Now Mailing Clerk of a Pawtucket Newspaper. Story of "Touch the Harp Gently."

Samuel N. Mitchell ought to be a rich man today from the proceeds of the 550 songs which he has written, and which have been set to music and sung in every habitable part of the earth.

When it is stated that Mr. Mitchell is the author of "Touch the Harp Gently, My Pretty Louise," "When the Whippoorwill Is Calling," "Put My Little Shoes Away," "The Lane That Led to School," "My Dear Savannah Home," and "We Deck Their Graves Alike Today," his title to a place in The Globe's roll of honor cannot be disputed.

A New Yorker who published many of Mitchell's songs lives at Newport in a $70,000 "cottage," but Mr. Mitchell, the author, was found by The Globe correspondent down in the basement of a newspaper office, his shirt sleeves rolled up, and the fingers which had penned the most delightful of ballads nimbly plying a long, thin brush, with which he was painting the news bulletins for The Pawtucket Evening Times.

MILLIONS SOLD.

Modest as is Mr. Mitchell's income as mailing clerk of The Times, he reaps more from it than from song writing, notwithstanding the fact that Hopkins & Cew, of London, sold 4,000,000 copies of his "Touch the Harp Gently, My Pretty Louise."

"I don't believe I shall ever write ballads again," said Mr. Mitchell. "I think that if I should count every penny received by me for the 600 songs I have written the sum would not exceed $7,000, and yet one London musical firm, according to its own showing, cleared over $100,000 from the proceeds of one song, and that one, too, for which I never received a cent. It was stolen bodily and carried off to London, where, in a pothouse, it was shown by Jack Turridge, one of Kelly & Leon's minstrels, to Charles Blamphin, the composer, who, struck with the lines and their possibilities, set them to the music with which the song is so familiar today.

"The song became the rage of London, and when Lydia Thompson brought it back to this country in the extravaganza of 'Blue Beard' it became as famous on this side of the Atlantic as the other.

"It never occurred to the publishers on either side to give the author so much as a sou, but then I did not write that song for money. I wrote it for love."

"The Louise of the song was your own Louise?"

"No, indeed. She was another fellow's; but come to think of it she was not even his. She did not marry him."

"Him," it appears, was the late E. P. Kendall, manager of the once famous Berger family, and a bosom friend of Mitchell's. Kendall had been sighing like a furnace in the poet's corner of their joint office, and finally told his friend that he was badly hit in the direction of Miss Louise Berger, who had so captivated him that he proposed to have her or perish. Now it happened that the well known Sol Smith Russell entertained the same sort of feeling for Louise Berger, who, by the way, was an exquisite player on the harp.

Mr. Mitchell thought out a plan for helping his friend. He would write a song entitled, "Touch the Harp Gently, My Pretty Louise," which he would dedicate to Kendall and have it published. The words and the dedication would be understood by the lady, who would, of course, succumb to the sweetness of the song and give encouragement to his suit.

In less than half an hour the song was written and on its way to The New York Clipper, which published it at once.

But alas! Louise thrummed not her harp gently nor otherwise for Mr. Kendall, who in a moment of madness undertook to sing it, he being at that time possessed of the most unmelodious voice in the United States.

The experiment proved fatal to his hopes, for although Miss Berger often went to hear the song sung by singers of repute, she fled precipitately from Kendall's presence whenever he manifested symptoms of a desire to sing it.

SOME OTHER SONGS.

Mr. Mitchell used to write many songs for the wife of Lingard, who used to sing them at the Boston Theatre Comique, then somewhere near where Jordan & Marsh are now. His "Girl with the Golden Switch" he sold to White, Smith & Perry, of Boston, for $30. It had a great success.

The revenue for one of his songs is still to come in from Boston. He wrote "When the Whippoorwill Is Calling," and sold it to a musician of Boston, then leader of one of the theatre orchestras, who, Mr. Mitchell says, was to remit the revenue. The song became so popular that it could be found in every music dealer's shop, but up to date the author says he has not seen the color of the purchaser's cash, although fifteen years have passed since the song was written.

Mitchell is a much older man than he looks. He could pass for 27, but he served in the army as a man twenty-five years ago, having gone to the front with the Eleventh Rhode Island and served in the famous Irish brigade.

He composed the Decoration day hymn, "We Deck Their Graves Alike Today," which is sung at so many Grand Army posts on each Memorial day.

Mr. Mitchell's first ballad was written on the head of a drum when he was 17 years of age. He was then serving in the Eleventh regiment from Rhode Island, and the war had not long been born. The captain thought he was too pathetic, and was more calculated to make the men weep than fight: therefore he ordered young Mitchell to employ his spare hours in polishing his weapons instead of writing songs.

The well known minstrel song "Sadie Ray" was written by Mitchell for Charlie Pratt, who brought over the first female minstrel troupe. It was written one Sunday afternoon in the Central hotel, and the next night it was sung at the performance. —Boston Globe.

How [illegible] Colds [illegible] Broken up [illegible] Montana.

When we find a medicine we know to possess genuine merit, we consider it a duty, and take pleasure in telling the public what it is. Such a medicine we found Chamberlain's Cough remedy, last winter, when la grippe was prevailing. We are satisfied that we warded off several attacks that were threatening by the use of this syrup and we have since relieved in a few hours, severe colds, and in the course of two or three days, entirely broken them up by its use, as have several of our friends to whom we have recommended it. It is all that it is represented to be by the manufacturers. If you have cough and want to stop it Chamberlain Cough remedy will do the work, for sale by W. A Schreiter.

A Preventive For Croup.

The discovery of preventive for croup, is one of the most important made in recent years. Since first discovered it has been used in many cases and with unvarying success. Its being within the reach of all makes it the more valuable. It is only necessary to give Chamberlain's cough remedy freely as soon as the first indications of croup appear, and it will dispel all symptoms of the disease. Full directions are given with each bottle. For 50 cents at Schreieters.

There may be persons in this community who are at times troubled with colic, or subject to attacks of bowel complaint If so, they should try Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It will afford almost immediate relief, and when reduced with water is pleasant to take. If taken as soon as the first indication of the disease is felt it will ward off the attack. Many people use it in this way, and find that it never fails them. A 25 or 50 cent bottle may be obtained a W. A. Schreiter's.

THE

WISCONSIN CENTRAL LINES
NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD CO. LESSEE

RUNS

Fast trains with Pullman Vestibuled Drawing Room Sleepers, Dining Cars and Coaches of latest design, between Chicago and Milwaukee and St. Paul and Minneapol.

Fast train with Pullmant Vestibuled Drawing Room Sleeping Dining Cars and Coaches of latest design between Chicago and Milwaukee and Ashland and Duluth.

Through Pullman Vestibuled Drawing Room and Colonist Sleepers via the Northern Pacific Railroad between Chicago and portland, Ore.

Conveniete Trains to and from Eastern, Western, Northern and Contril Wisconsin points, affording unequalled service to and from Waukesha, Fond du Lac, Oshkosk, Neenah, Menasha, Chippewa Fall, Eau Claire, Hurley, Wis., and Ironwood and Bessemer, Mich.

For tickets, sleeping car reservations, time tables and other information, apply to Agents of the line, or to ticket Agents anywhere in the United States or Canada.

S. L. Ainslie, Gen. Man., Milwaukee.
J. M. Hansford, Gen. Traf. Man. St. Paul.
H. C. Barlow, Traffic Man. Chicago.
Louis Eckstein, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, Chicago.

CHICAGO AND ATLANTIC

In conjunction with the Erie System operates Fast-Vestibuled Trains between Chicago and the Atlantic Seaboard. you may travel in the most Elegant and complete Pullman Vestibuled Trains ever constructed and save $1.50 to Buffalo and Niagara Falls, $2.00 to New York $2.35 to Albany and Troy, and $3.00 to Boston and New England Cities.

No rival line offers the advantages of a system of through first and second-class day coaches and Pullman Dining cars chicago to New York.

It is the only line operating pullman cars to Boston and New England via Albany.

Entire trains are lighted by gas, heated by steam. Pullman dining cars run through in either direction.

Pullman chair and sleeping cars to Columbus, O., and Ashland, Ky, Daily.

No extra charge for fast time and unsurpassed accommodations afforded by these luxurious trains.

MY CREED.

What is my creed, you ask, dear?
  I look in your grave, brown eyes
And believe—in your womanly sweetness,
  Your purity, clear as the skies.

I've faith—in your true, brave heart, dear,
  Your life, with its joys and tears:
And far beyond storm-mist and sunshine,
  Beyond weary days and long years.

I hope—in a love that is waiting
  With infinite tenderness there
To comfort us both, you and me, dear,
  For the burden he gives us to bear.
—Willis Boyd Allen.

IVY'S MISTAKE.

A STORY OF THANKSGIVING.

THANKSGIVING eve in the old Sunderland homestead, and from cellar to garret floated delicious odors of roasting turkey, of chickens done to a tender crisp in their own rich juices, and of a goodly array of pies of all denominations—such pies, teeming with all the odors of the Araby blest, as had won dear, motherly Mrs. Sunderland an enviable reputation through all the region round about.

And flitting busily at her mother's side, in the great, clean, shining kitchen; with light feet and the very daintiest, deftest little hands in all the world, was the blooming Ivy—"sole daughter of her house and heart."

"There, mother," she said, placing a gigantic plum cake on the table with a triumphant flourish, "that's the last! The baking is done, thank goodness, and now I'll attack the parlor."

"I wouldn't to-night, dear," said Mrs. Sunderland. "You'll tire yourself out. There'll be plenty of time in the morning."

"Oh, no, mother. I promised to be at the church early, to practice the new anthem. They all declare they can't get along without me. And I thought if I could snatch an hour some time between now and then that I'd finish off my blue silk—it only needs a stitch or two. Julia Hunt said she might be over after dinner and bring her cousin with her. She's from the city, you know, and so stylish. "And then," she added, with a rather overdone attempt at carelessness, "it's possible Joe Dalton may be here in the evening."

"H'm! Joe Dalton," said Mrs. Sunderland, a little surprised, but too much absorbed in her contemplation of the cake to pay strict attention to less important matters. "And when did you hear from him?"

Oh, not since he left in the summer. But he told me then that he intended to pass Thanksgiving at the 'squire's, and that if he did he'd give us a call. But really I must begin at the parlor."

And into the parlors he went, a curiously-happy light on her face, while she dusted the quaint old spindle-legged piano, and polished the mirror between the windows, and rubbed the brass fire dogs till they shone again. Then she, brought out long wreaths of fragrant ground pine and knots of scarlet leaves, and garlanded the old family portraits, and filled vases and baskets, till the old room was sweet and glowing as the bower of a forest queen.

Perhaps it was all to please Julia Hunt and her city cousin, but I know that all the while before Ivy's happy eyes were floating memories of Joe Dalton's admiring looks when one day last summer she decorated the room with wild clematis vines, and still in her ears were ringing his praises of what he called her "exquisite artistic instincts."

Suddenly the whistle of the evening train was heard, away went the tired feet, twinkling up three flights of stairs to the attic, where Ivy coddled down in the window commanding a view of the turn of the road by which the 'squire's open wagon must pass on its way home from the depot. Yes, sure enough, there came the wagon behind the pair of high-stepping bays. Ivy could distinguish the 'squire's portly figure on the front seat, beside the coachman, and behind was a slenderer form that Ivy's beating heart told her was Joe. But a little half-jealous pang shot through the same heart as she saw that a lady, evidently young, sat beside him, and marked the devoted air with which he leaned toward her, one arm extended behind her on the back of the seat, the other pointing here and there, as drawing her attention to the different beauties of the landscape.

"Some cousin, I suppose," she said to herself, as she went slowly down the stairs to her own room. The apron must be removed, the silky braids smoothed with extra care, and the plain linen collar replaced with frills of dainty lace. Then from its little sandal-wood box Ivy drew forth a slender chain and locket, the sole ornament she possessed, and settled it among the frills with a satisfied smile. Tender brown eyes, crimson lips, a low white forehead framed in silken curls—it certainly was a pretty picture that looked back at her from the glass. In spite of fatigue Ivy was looking her prettiest and knew it, and was so glad, for who could tell but that he might come over that very night?

However, she said nothing to her mother of any such expectation. But as soon as tea was over, with some strip of fancy work, she drew her own little rocker before the wood fire on the sitting room hearth, and while her swift fingers evolved the mysteries of satin stitch, point and wheels, her happy thoughts went straying over that brief, bright month when Joe Dalton had spent his summer vacation in Redleaf, and every spare moment of it in close vicinity to the Sunderland farmhouse.

Joe, be it known, was the 'squire's stepson. Only the year before the 'squire had married a dashing, though elderly widow from the city, with two grown-up sons. One of them Ivy had never seen, but Joe had been in the habit of paying frequent flying visits from the city, where he resided, and, as report said, was amassing a fortune fairly fabulous for so young a man.

When the summer came, and he spent a whole month at the squire's, he had singled out Ivy from the whole bevy of rustic beauties, and devoted himself to her with a persistence that soon set gossip's tongue in motion.

What a delightful month it was! How they had picnicked and frolicked together through the long summer days, and strolled through dewy lanes in the dreamy twilight, and rowed on moonlit nights, down the shining river! And then that last scene of all! Ivy's cheeks glowed at the remembrance of it.

She had gone down the garden path with him to the little gate, and there, under the shadow of the elms, and hidden from the house by a clump of syringa bushes, they had somehow found saying good-bye a very lingering transaction indeed. Ivy remembered how he held her hand in his tight clasp till all the warm blood came billowing up over cheek and brow, and her eyes fell beneath his ardent gaze. Then, almost before she knew it, an arm had stolen around her waist, a pair of warm lips were pressed closely, lingeringly on her own.

"Good-bye till Thanksgiving," he laughed, and was off before she could chide him.

He hadn't told her in just so many words that he loved her, but how could she doubt it? Hadn't every look and act declared it over and over during that happy vacation time? And then if he didn't love her, why that last tender caress speaking volumes to her answering heart?

The morning came—Thanksgiving morning—with floods of golden sunlight with air so crisp and bracing that it made one's blood tingle just to breathe it. Ivy made haste to finish her light morning tasks, and then daintily arrayed herself for church. She was to walk. It was only a mile, and the choir had arranged to come early and practice their anthem once more before service began.

With a light step she tripped down the narrow path. But at the little gate she stopped suddenly, trying to check a frown; for there, under the elm, behind the leafless syringa bushes, stood Alvira Simms, the village dressmaker, evidently lying in wait to walk to the church with her, and Miss Simms was one of Ivy's pet aversions. Many's the time she and Joe had amused themselves at the expense of those cork-screw curls and affected tones of vinegar sourness.

"Good morning," simpered Miss Alvira. "I thought likely you'd be coming along, so I walked slow on purpose to see if I couldn't have the pleasure of your company to church. It's a beautiful morning?"

"Beautiful," said Ivy, briefly, and she looked curiously at Miss Simms, as if to divine the cause of this sudden desire for her society, for they were usually as distant as the poles. She fancied an unusually malicious twinkle lurking in the seamstress' snaky black eyes.

"I suppose you've heard the news?" with a sharp side glance and an air of immense importance.

"News? No, I've heard no news worth mentioning," returned Ivy in her most indifferent tones.

"Well, I don't know as you'll consider this worth mentioning," retorted Alvira, bridling up. "It's about Mr. Dalton—Joe Dalton, you know. But you used to be so intimate with him that I thought perhaps it might interest you to know." She paused and looked Ivy full in the face. "He's married!" she said, and there was a hateful, cruel light in her mean face as she watched the effect of her words.

"Married!" echoed Ivy, with her wide, startled eyes. "I don't believe it!" she added, bluntly, in her bewilderment forgetting her politeness.

"Oh, very well," sniffed Miss Alvira, her nose in the air, as she turned to go.

"Excuse me," stammered Ivy, putting out her hand to detain her. "I—I thought you must have been misinformed. How did you hear?"

"Oh," said Miss Simms, softening, only too glad of the chance to go over the details. "I didn't hear at all—I saw! I was up at the 'squire's when he brought her home. The sewing room door was open, and I saw them come into the hall together. Then his mother and the 'squire ran out, and I heard him introduce her as their new daughter. Then, in the midst of their laughing and kissing and handshaking some one closed the door, to prevent the dressmaker from witnessing their family joys, I suppose!"

Poor Ivy! She turned faint and sick as the fatal truth forced itself upon her. Her face grew white as death, and there was a stony look of misery in the soft eyes that would have melted a less cruel heart than that of the woman beside her. But in the midst of her misery pride came to her aid. One thing she was resolved upon—no one should ever suspect her anguish; no one should ever say that she wore the willow for gay Joe Dalton.

How she accomplished the rest of the distance to church she never knew. She had a confused remembrance that she turned the subject with some commonplace remarks—that she discussed the weather, the fall styles, the new minister, with now and then a laugh or careless jest, in much her usual fashion, till they parted at the church door, and Ivy mechanically ascended the gallery stairs and took her place among the "singers' seats."

"Why, Ivy Sunderland!" chorused the girls; "what is the matter? You're as white as a sheet, and your eyes—why girls just look at her eyes!"

"There, girls," said Ivy, with a faint smile, "please don't talk to me; I've got a horrid headache." Which was true enough, but heartache would have been truer.

So the kind-hearted creatures bustled about and brought her a glass of water and a battered old palm leaf fan from a dusty closet, and mercifully left her at peace. But for once the soaring soprano was silent. and the anthem obliged to pursue its wending way without her aid, while she sat on one side idly watching the conflagration drifting on one by one, with their shining holiday faces.

By-and-bye came a firm, light tread up the aisle, and Ivy closed her eyes with a sickening shudder. When she opened them again Joe Dalton stood at the head of their pew, ushering in a tiny, elegant creature in rustling purple silks, a cloud of fluffy blonde hair above a childish face, and eyes like great soft violets. He faced the choir for an instant, and, as his eyes met Ivy's the whole face lit up with a gleam of dark eyes and a flash of dazzling teeth beneath his brown mustache.

But the smile faded to a look of half indignant surprise as Ivy looked straight on and beyond him without the slightest sign of recognition, and he settled himself with that impatient shake of the broad shoulders which Ivy knew so well.

Long after service she lingered in the gallery to avoid all chance of meeting him, and then slowly made her way home, a curious numb feeling at her heart, a strange blur and chill over the sunny autumn landscape and in the crisp. golden air.

But when she reached home she was even more gay and cordial than usual in her greetings of the numerous aunts uncles and young fry of cousins who had assembled there during the morning; and all the afternoon her laugh was the loudest, her jest the wildest among all that hilarious group. A bright spot burned on either cheek, and there was a feverish light in her eyes; but no one knew that her hands and feet were like ice, that the wild gayety came from an excitement that had just escaped delirium. And when Julia Hunt and and her cousin called they found her radiant in the blue silk, and ready to discuss "the news," which, thanks to Miss Simms, was at present briskly circulating from one end of Redleaf to the other. So through the long twilight they sat in the firelight, cracking nuts and jokes indescriminately, pounding their thumbs and screaming with alternate pain and laughter, and chattering through it all like a convocation of hilarious magpies.

Then, as the young moon looked in at the western windows, Miss Hunt, declared, jumping up, that they must go; there was to be a dance a mile away; at which they were due in an hour, and a pair of "somebodies" no doubt awaiting impatiently at the paternal mansion at this very moment for their return.

So, Ivy, throwing her scarlet cloak around her shoulders and pulling the hood over her curls—a lovely, grown-up Red Riding Hood—ran down to the gate with them to see them off, in sociable country fashion, and after a shower of girl kisses on both sides stood watching them as they tripped up the road in the wierd mingling of twilight and moonlight which hung over the world.

Standing on one side, peering up the road with intent eyes, absorbed in her own thoughts, she did not hear the footsteps that stole softly along the grass bordering of the roadside walk. The next moment a strong arm clasps her, a pair of daring lips snatched a kiss.

"Watching for me, Ivy?" cried Joe Dalton, triumphantly.

"Mr. Dalton! How dare you! Let me go, sir!" exclaimed Ivy, breaking away from him with blazing eyes and face shining white with anger in the faint light.

"Whew!" ejaculated Joe, stepping back a pace. "It seems to me that you have changed mightily in three short months. Have you forgotten"—

"I have forgotten nothing, sir," burst out Ivy, in tones of suppressed passion. "It is you who have forgotten—forgotten, among other things the respect which every gentleman owes to a lady."

"Ivy—Miss Sunderland, what is the meaning of this? What has happened that you should break off our friendship?"

"What has happened, indeed!" echoed Ivy scornfully. "Mr. Dalton, have you so low an opinion of me, are you such a libertine yourself, as to suppose that to me marriage is no impediment to such liberties as you have just insulted me by taking?"

"Married!" cried Joe. "So you are married, Ivy. And I to know nothing about it! Why did no one tell me? Oh! Ivy, Ivy, how could—"

"What are you saying, Mr. Dalton? I am not married; it is you—you!"

Here she broke down, her overwrought mood gave away, and she burst into hysterical sobs.

"Ivy, Ivy!" cried Joe' "I am not married. Who ever told you so?" and he caught the shuddering, trembling form in his arms, and drew the head down on his bosom. "So this is the meaning of all this, your averted look this morning, and all. I thought afterward that perhaps you did not see me. Now, who told you such an absurd story? I insist on knowing.

"Miss—Miss Simms," faltered Ivy, as the sobs died away.

"Alvira! Well, I declare! And you believed her?"

"She—she said that she saw the bride last night—that you introduced her to your mother as her new daughter; and then you were at church with her this morning."

"Oh, that meddlesome old maid!" ejaculated Joe; "to think she should have made you suffer all this, my little clinging vine. Never mind, love, we'll cut her acquaintance when we're married."

"But, Joe," said Ivy, affecting not to hear the last remark, "who is the lady? Do you know, I believe I'm half jealous of her?"

"Jealous! well, you won't be so long. That lady is my mother's new daughter, Ivy. She is brother Dick's lovely little wife, whom my mother had never seen before. They arrived in New York last night from New Orleans, and as Dick could not come out till the midnight train, and Edith was anxious to get home as soon as possible, I acted as her most dutiful escort."

And Ivy, although she began her Thanksgiving rather late in the day, made up in intensity what was lacking in length of time.

A Noted Soldier.

Frederick the Great had the happy faculty of surrounding himself with able men. Like Napoleon he was a good judge of human nature, and he was rarely deceived. One of his most valued assistants was an Englishman, James Edward Keith. This young man engaged in a revolution in England, and barely escaped with his life. Then he served under the czar in his wars upon Poland and Turkey; but considering himself the victim of injustice, he resigned and accepted the position of field marshall in the Prussian army. Frederick the Great made him his favorite companion, and they traveled together incognito, through Germany, Poland and Hungary. Keith invented a game resembling chess, which so delighted the king that he had some thousands of men cast in metal, by which he could arrange battles and sieges. The British field marshall managed the admirable retreat of the army from Olmutz in the presence of a superior force, without the loss of a single gun, and he took part in all the great battles of the period. He lost his life in the desperate fight at Hochkirchen on Oct. 14, 1758. Keith was of middle height, dark complexion and strongly marked features. His presence of mind was remarkable, and his knowledge deep and varied, while his military talents and strict sense of honor made him take rank among the first commanders of the day. His brother, the lord marshal of Scotland, once wrote of him: "My brother has left me a noble heritage; after having overrun Bohemia at the head of a large army, I have found only $70 in his purse." Frederick honored Keith's memory by having erected a monument to him in Berlin by the side of his other generals.

The Crank Is Brave.

Let us cherish the crank. Let us cultivate and corner him here in this land where blessings are plentiful and curses few. He is a being that never lies still and never crawls. He may be a kicker, a bucking broncho, a wasp or an eagle, but he is never a parasite or a snail. Whether he play the part of the pestiferous gnat of the trumpeting elephant, no man can accuse him of being a sneak, nor an enemy in ambush.

He may be right or he may be wrong; he may be a necessity or a nuisance: but he is always frank, fearless and a fighter, striving earnestly to enlighten and improve the world.—Kate Field's Washington.

A Telegraphic Error.

"Yes, indeed; send horse and carriage to depot," was the innocent message that went to a lady in Utica not long ago. She was married, and her husband, usually called Joe, had been away from home for several weeks. The wife had telegraphed a lady member of the family to come up and spend a few weeks with her, and the answer was sent as above. The Utica lady was prostrated with grief when she received a dispatch reading: "Joe is dead. Send hearse and carriage to depot." Arrangements were made in a hurry, and the hearse and carriage were in waiting when Joe and the lady stepped out of the train.—Exchange.

A Light Voter.

Deer Isle claims the "lightest" voter at the last election—John O. Robbins, who weighs but 29 pounds. Owing to his diminutive size Robbins was lifted to the ballot box by Mr. J. W. Green, and much interest was manifested in the little fellow's movements. He is 25 years old.—Portland (Me.) Press.

The wonderful cure by Salvation Oil of Mr. M. S. Culp, 229, George St., Baltimore, Md., who was for many years so prostrated with Rheumatism as to be entirely helpless, has awakened wide-spread interest in this remedy. It costs only 25 cts.

"If the heart of a man is depressed with cares and suffering, the mist is dispelled when the bottle appears." Not a bottle of spirits, oh no! but a small vial of that invaluable compound known to civilization as Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, which will cure a cough or cold immediately.

Spare Moments: Landlady—That new boarder needn't try to make me think he is a bachelor. He's either married or is a widower.
Millings—How can you tell?
Landlady—He always turns his back to me when he opens his pocketbook to pay his board.

CONFIRMED.

The favorable impression produced on the first appearance of the agreeable liquid fruit remedy Syrup of Figs a few years ago has been more than confirmed by the pleasant experience of all who have used it, and the success of the proprietors and manufacturers the California Fig Syrup Company.

Chicago Tribune: "A man paid $3 for a barrel of apples. He sold half of them for $2.50, and the rest of them decayed on his hands. How much did he lose?" asked the teacher.

"He didn't lose nothin'," bawled out a farmer's boy in the class. "He worked 'em up into cider.

Washing powders are strong alkalies, and ruin clothes. The purest soap obtainable is the best and cheapest. Dobbins' Electric Soap has been acknowledged for 24 years to be the purest of all. Try it right away.

Light: Tangle—My nephew, John, who is in the 'Steenth cavalry at Fort Wayout, says he had a sharp brush with some Indians the other day.

Mrs. Tangle—Well, I daresay a brush would do those untidy savages good; but I should think a currycomb would be better.

A $2.50 Paper for $1.75.

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION gives so much for the small amount that it costs it is no wonder it is taken already in nearly Half a Million Families. With its fine paper and beautiful illustrations, its Weekly Illustrated Supplements, and its Double Holiday Numbers, it seems as if the publishers could not do enough to please. By sending $1.75 now you may obtain it free to January, and for a full year from that date to January, 1892. Address, THE YOUTH'S COMPANION, BOSTON Mass.

Munsey's Weekly: Footlytes—Do you think there is much difference between Sarah Bernhardt as La Tosca and Fanny Davenport in the same role?

Baldy—Yes, a good deal. About 150 pounds, I should judge.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

An Accommodating Conductor.

The narrow-gauge railway running from Tunkhannock to Montrose, Pa., has been late a good deal recently and finally a Lehigh Valley conductor asked a messenger the reason. "Well," he said, "I don't know what usually makes it late but I can tell you what detained us to-night. One of our passengers while looking out the car window with his mouth open, lost his set of gold-mounted false teeth. The conductor on being informed of the loss, stopped the train up to the point of the accident, when all hands hunted with lanterns for the teeth until found."—New York Tribune.

COPYRIGHT 1890

A feeble woman is restored to health and strength, by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. If you're overworked, "run-down," or debilitated, you need it. It's an invigorating, restorative tonic, and a soothing and strengthening nervine, imparting tone and vigor to the whole system. It's a legitimate medicine, too—carefully compounded by an experienced physician, and adapted to woman's delicate organization. For all the chronic weaknesses, functional derangements, and painful disorders peculiar to the sex, it is an unfailing remedy. It's because it is unfailing that it can be sold under a positive guarantee. If it fails to give satisfaction, in any case for which it's recommended, the money paid for it will be promptly returned.

It is a legitimate medicine—not a beverage. Contains no alcohol to inebriate; no syrup or sugar to sour or ferment in the stomach and cause distress. As peculiar in its marvelous, remedial results as in its composition.

Cuticura Soap For Bad Complexions Red Rough Hands and Baby Humors.

TRADE MARK

BAD COMPLEXIONS, WITH PIMPLY, blotchy, oily skin, Red, Rough Hands, with chaps, painful finger ends and shapeless nails, and simple Baby Humors prevented and cured by CUTICURA SOAP. A marvelous beautifier of world-wide celebrity, it is incomparable as a Skin Purifying Soap, unequalled for the Toilet and without a rival for the Nursery.

Absolutely pure, delicately medicated, exquisitely perfumed, CUTICURA SOAP produces the whitest, clearest skin, and softest hands and prevents inflammation and clogging of the pores, the cause of pimples, blackheads, and most complexional disfigurations, while it admits of no comparison with other skin soaps, and rivals in delicacy the most noted of toilet and nursery soaps. Sale greater than the combined sale of all other skin soaps. Price, 25c.

Send for "How to Cure Skin Diseases."

Address POTTER DRUG AND CHEMICAL CORPORATION, Proprietors, Boston, Mass.

Aching sides and back, weak kidneys, and rheumatism relieved in one minute by the CUTICURA ANTI-PAIN PLASTER. 25c.

Interference Was Needless.

From the Detroit Free Press.

A lady living in Bush Street, telephoned police headquarters the other day, asking that a detective be sent up there, and when an officer arrived in response to the summons, she exhibited a three-stone diamond ring and said:

"A strange man came along the other day and wanted to dispose of this, which he claimed was worn by his dead wife. He was willing to sacrifice, and I bought it for $25. My husband is very upset about it, believing it to be stolen property, and so concluded to notify the police."

"That was the correct course, madam, but you can keep the ring."

"Then it was not stolen?"

"No, ma'am."

"But why did he sell it so cheap?"

"Well he is one of a crowd which struck the town a week ago with 500 rhinestone rings to sell, and if he got $25 of you, he made a profit of about $23. Good day, madame!"

Fourteen Cents Capital.

The possession of how much money does it require to save a man from the charge of being a pauper? Lately a ship load of 525 Italians was landed at New York city, and the cash capital they brought with them averaged just fourteen cents each. A man in a strange land and unacquainted with the language of the country, who possesses fourteen cents, may not be a pauper, but, unless he is willing to work and hustles to secure employment, he is likely to become one very shortly after his arrival.—Pittsburg Chronicle.

Unlucky Number Nineteen.

The peculiar coincidence connected with the last primary for the legislature has just come to light. It will be remembered that Mr. Cobb was defeated by nineteen votes. Since then it has been remembered that his father was defeated by nineteen votes and his grandfather by the same number. We do not know whether Mr. Cobb is twice 19 years old, but to complete the coincidence he ought to be.—Athens (Ga.) Banner.

ST. JACOBS OIL
CURES PERMANENTLY

SCIATICA.	LUMBAGO
N. Ogden, Mich., May 17, 1890. "My brother—Rev. Samuel Porter, was cured by St. Jacobs' Oil of excruciating sciatic pains in his thigh." J. M. L. PORTER.	410 Kearney St., San Francisco, Cal. April 28, 1890. My wife and I both have been afflicted with lame-back and sore throat, and have found permanent cure by use of St. Jacobs Oil. E. J. IMHAUS.

IT IS THE BEST.

WOONSOCKET

When buying Rubbers, don't trust your eyes. Shoddy rubbers often look as well as the best. Rely on the name. Only the Best Rubbers are stamped "Woonsocket."

Send for Catalogue.
WOONSOCKET RUBBER CO.
PROVIDENCE, R.I.

RUBBERS

FAT FOLKS REDUCED

"I write to inform you of the success of your treatment. I am reduced [illegible] pounds, and the most important point is, that the result is permanent. Since discontinuing treatment, I have eaten everything, whether it contained sugar, starch or fats, but have not increased a pound, thus proving that your remedies remove the cause of Obesity. I can recommend your skill as a Specialist for Obesity." J. SILAS LEAR, of Burnard & Leas Mfg. Co., Moline, Ill.

PATIENTS TREATED BY MAIL.

No starving, no inconvenience, harmless and no bad effects. Strictly confidential. For circulars and testimonials address with 6c. in stamps,

DR. O. W. F. SNYDER 243 STATE ST., CHICAGO.

SUPERFLUOUS HAIR
on face, neck, moles or any part of the Body quickly dissolved and permanently removed with
DR. BRIDGMAN'S SECRET,
a purely Electro-Vegetable Compound, entirely free from injurious ingredients; needs but two or three applications, even in most stubborn cases. Has never failed. Leaves no bad effect whatever, and is absolutely guaranteed. Sent by mail, securely packed, free from observation, on receipt of $1. Remit by Express or P. O. Money Order, stamps or currency, to THE A. BRIDGMAN Co., 373 Broadway, New York.

She Ran The Hotel.

A little story which is going about is worth telling in print if only because it illustrates the fact that a girl who has money may possibly have good sense also. Not far out of New York is a sleepy little town where the members of a certain family of many dollars have been in the habit of rusticating for some months every summer. This year their stately old frame house, famous for its revolutionary memories, was untenanted. The roses ran wild and the box hedges went untrimmed. In October the tall blonde daughter, who in previous seasons had astonished the whole countryside with her frocks and her pony trap and her head of curls, alighted quietly one day from the afternoon train. Instead however, of opening the familiar door and taking down the tarred shutters, the gossips were lifted off their feet by the intelligence that she had come to manage the village hotel. This not very prosperous place of entertainment underwent, in fact, in the next few days such a process of scouring and scrubbing and curtain hanging that not a passer but rubbed his eyes. Could it be the ——fortune had gone down in Wall street and was the belle and beauty thus reduced to earn her living? All sorts of rumors affecting the family finances became current, and a few of the bolder spirits among the women found errands to take them to the quaint little parlor of the hostelry to condole with the young innkeeper, if so they found opportunity. They reported her calm, self-possessed, uncommunicative. Neither to the ladies who had been on calling terms with her mother, nor to the village girls with whom she had played tennis, would she say anything. She had brought with her a slight, pale-faced woman to be her bookkeeper, and these two soon had the establishment running as if they had been used all their lives to making travelers comfortable.

The young landlady's lover heard of her occupation, ran out from the city, reasoned with her, quarreled. A second young man, penniless, who had despaired of her moneyed favor, came to ask if she wanted help that he could render. Three villages and a city circle whispered of the family smash-up and the girl's quixotism.

In two or three weeks came the father. He took the hotel's best chamber. He was seen about the streets but he said nothing. Presently the village became aware that invitations were out for a hallowe'en party. These included such households as had been entertained in former seasons at the great shut-up mansion. The chestnut roasting and the fortune-telling came off in the freshened and furnished hotel ~~dining-room.~~ Every body felt awkward and nothing went with merriment until the tall, soldierly father of the little hotel mistress rose, patted her shoulder, offered a health to the house and bowed—to a quiet, middle-aged lady who was a stranger to the entire assembly.

The secret was a simple one. The hotel had fallen by foreclosure of a mortgage to the soldierly father. The little landlady had begged him to put in her former governess, a woman of considerable executive ability, as manager. He had answered that a woman could not run a hotel. She had urged the contrary, and had challenged her father to let her prove her proposition. In jest he had consented, in earnest she had set out next morning, in consternation he had written after her, but in pride of possession she had kept on the even tenor of her way. In wrath he had pursued, In gentleness she had conquered. With her father's hard won consent she had cleaned and painted and made ready to turn over a spick and span house to the friend whose eyes were failing and who must give up books or become blind.

Paradise of the Honey Bee.

From the Kansas City Star.

Western Missouri was perhaps the greatest bee country that ever existed. It was here that the tree growth found its last expression in the sparse and scrubby oak openings which, in happy alternation of tree and grass and sunlight, afforded vast fields for bee ambition to unfold itself. It was here, too, the bee said good-by to the white man as he pushed out on the prairie. Here the trees ceased and here perforce the bees ceased also. They could go no further. So, as year followed year, with new communities of bees following hard the old, and all checked and held by the eastern boundary of the treeless plains, there came at last a day in these parts when a bee was swinging on every clover bloom and every hollow tree possessed its buzzing commonwealth.

She Missed Him.

Mr. Billus had been away from home several days and had just returned.

"Did you miss me, Maria?" he inquired, as he deposited his valise in the corner, hung his overcoat on a hook, and then gave his wife a business-like kiss.

"Miss you?" replied Mrs. Billus, tenderly. "Indeed I did, John. There hasn't been anybody to swear at the biscuit for six whole days."

THE QUEST OF THE HEART.

O heart, go out of your hiding place,
  And wander where you will,
Through the city and through the town,
  Over the dale and hill.
Over the sea with its thousand isles,
  Over the river—go
In quest of a single human soul
  Who hath never known a woe.

You may enter the palace of the king,
  The poor man's humble cot,
The peace where great wealth beautifies,
  And where it blesseth not,
But, should you travel for long, long years
  Till centuries had flown,
In search of mortals sorrow-proof,
  You would come back alone!

O, hands that have much work to do,
  And weary of your toil,
That fain would change with idle hands,
  Fair hands, "too white to soil;"
Work on! for you have the promise sweet
  To the faithful toilers given,
As you sow good seeds along the way,
  From earth to the gate of heaven.

O, feet that are climbing the up-hill road,
  Oft pierced with the sharpest thorns,
Oft tempted out of the narrow way,
  Into the flowery lawns;
Climb on, with the aid of your trusty staff,
  Up, upward toward the sun,
For the good you seek is just in sight
  And the bright crown almost won.

—Household.

PEARL PLAYFAIR'S ORDEAL.

ARE you better to-day, Kate?

"Oh, yes, Pearl, ever so much."

The cheerful March sunshine streamed in at the window, where Pearl Playfair had pinned up a piece of blue-paper muslin to serve as a temporary curtain, and wrote its glittering autograph on the carpetless floor that Pearl had staid up late the night before to scrub neatly, so that Katie should not feel the room neglected.

The two chairs were wiped free from dust, the tiny stove shone with a newly applied coat of blacking, and the chromo "Angelus," pinned against the wall over the wooden mantel, gave an air of refinement to the sloping-roofed apartment.

Katherine and Pearl Playfair were all alone in the world. Their father had been a hard-worked bank clerk, who found it impossible to save a cent before death presented its account and bankrupted him at once.

Their few distant relatives had distinctly given them to understand that "blood was not thicker than water," and for more than a year these two brave young girls had fought their own battle with the world.

Katie was a "trimmer and finisher" in a fashionable dress-making establishment. Pearl was errand girl and generally useful hand at Miss Thorburn's famous millinery emporium.

"Next year," she said, brightly, "I can go into the show-rooms, and get $1 a week more wages. And won't I be rich?"

But when Katie's dreadful cold deepened into a cough, and the doctor said she must not leave her room, Pearl found her $12 a month sadly insufficient to meet all exigencies.

The good doctor spoke to the kind little druggist on the corner, who put the medicines down to cost price; the baker's wife slipped in many an extra spongecake and Vienna roll among the frugal orders; the butcher saved his choicest bits of meat for beef tea—for every one in the neighborhood knew and sympathized with the Playfair girls.

But the things had to be paid for, nevertheless. And the tooth of poverty bites sharply.

Pearl stood looking at Katie with solemn, questioning eyes.

"That is what you always say Katie," said she. "And I know your cough was bad last night."

"Did I disturb you, dear?"

"It isn't that. But oh, Katie, to see you growing paler and thinner every day—to know that you have to stay alone here so long——"

"But I don't stay alone, Pearl. Mrs. Nippett comes in often and little Allie Smith."

And that isn't the worst of it, Katie. The coal is out, and I can't pay for any more until my Saturday night wages come in."

"It's lucky that the sun shines in so bright," said Katie, hopefully. "Never mind the coal, Pearl; I'll cuddle down in bed, with the blanket-shawl over me, and I'm sure Mrs. Nippett will make my tea on her stove when noon comes. She's always so thoughtful!"

Pearl went to her work with a heavy heart. On the way she was joined by Joe Vail, the foreman of the box factory that supplied the patent receptacles in which Mrs. Fitwell's gowns were carried home to her customers, and in councils of war respecting splendid toilets he had become acquainted with Katie.

He was a dark-haired, swarthy-complexioned young fellow, and his dark eyes sparkled as he saw Pearl Playfair.

"How's your sister, Pearl?" said he. "No better? Oh, I'm sorry to hear it! I say, my sister's come up from the old homestead to keep house for me this winter, and she brought a barrel of jolly Spitzenberg apples and some bottles of home-made currant wine. Would Katie try the wine, do you think? Wouldn't it do her good? I'll send my sister around if——"

"Oh, thank you, Joe! This evening, please!" said Pearl; and she secretly registered a vow that she would somewhere or somehow beg or borrow a peck of coals, so that these kind people should not find them absolutely fireless. "And Katie thought Joe Vail had entirely forgotten her," thought she. "As if any one could forget Katie!"

Miss Thorburn was very cross when at last Pearl reached the store. Her best customer's carriage had been seen across the street at Mdlle. Lavigny's rival store, and the new Paris fashion-plates were delayed in their arrival more than a week.

"Late again, Pearl Playfair!" said she, sharply.

"It's only one minute past 7, Miss Thorburn!" pleaded the girl.

"And I wish you distinctly to understand," snapped Miss Thorburn, who had been peering through the windows, "that I don't allow my young women to gallivant through the streets with young men on their way to and from the store! It isn't respectable, and——"

Pearl colored vividly.

"It's a friend of my sister," said she. "He only——"

Miss Thorburn glared at her.

"Obliged me," said she, "by remembering that I do not permit my young women to answer me back. Here's Miss Densel's bonnet. Take it at once to 60 Caravan square. She'll be furious because it wasn't sent last night."

Sixty Caravan square was a stately brown-stone house, with vestibule doors of gorgeous stained glass and floor of mosaic marble, covered with rich Persian rugs.

Miss Densel was not in, but Paula and Florine, her younger sisters, ran to receive the hat.

"Audrey will be so angry because it didn't come in time for Mrs. Jay's musical breakfast," cried Paula.

These two pretty young maids, in their pink, and blue cashmere tea-gowns, their flowing gold hair and dainty, red-heeled slippers encircled with gold embroidery—how wistfully Pearl looked at them as she crept quietly away in her patched boots, her faded cloth jacket, which had come down to her from Katie, and her poor little knitted Tam o 'Shanter cap.

"How nice it must be to be rich!" thought she.

"Let's have a look at the hat, Flo," said Paula—"right here in the dining-room, where the beveled mirror is. Audrey never lets us see her pretty things."

Florine opened the box.

"Oh, isn't it exquisite!" she cried. "All rosebuds, with strings of pink faille, and the sweetest jeweled poniard stuck through the side! Are they real diamonds, Paula, or only Rhine stones?"

"Rhine stones, of course!" said sage Paula. "Who ever heard of real diamonds with a $30 bonnet? But isn't it a beauty? Let us try it on, Flo. Oh, take care!"

For in handing it across the table Florine had dropped it. The effort to recover it only succeeded in overturning a tall flask of Bordeaux sallad-oil upon the rosebuds and pink faille.

Flo and Paula looked aghast at each other.

"Hush!" cried the former. "Some one is coming. Put it back into the box, Paula. Take it up to Audrey's room. She'll think it was an accident. Oh, how could you be so careless?"

"I wasn't careless," sputtered indignant Paula. "It was your fault as much as it was mine. What will Audrey say?"

Two hours later the reception bonnet was brought back to Miss Thorburn by Audrey Densel herself in an olive plush-lined carriage, attended by a French maid, and Pearl Playfair was summoned at once.

She came, innocent and eager only to be angrily dismissed from the establishment. In vain were her protestations and entreaties.

"If you didn't do it, stopping at some of your grocer and baker friends' places," cried Miss Thorburn "who did? Do you suppose Miss Densel poured grease over her own reception hat? Silence, I say! Leave the house at once, and do not presume to ask for either wages or reference from me. I consider that I am treating you with extreme kindness in not sending for a policeman."

Pearl went home, feeling as if she were in a dreadful dream. Her situation was gone, and without references how could she expect to get another? And who would find food or fire for Katie?

The elder sister listened to Pearl's piteous tale with dismay, but she put the bravest possible front upon it.

"Don't sob so, Pearl," she soothed, "We shall not starve; something will happen to protect us, dear; don't be afraid. Who is that Mrs. Nippett is talking to outside?"

"It's me—Janie Vail," said a cheery, cordial voice, "with some apples and home-made wine. Joe, my brother, says you are his friends. I may come in, mayn't I?"

And Janie entered, rosy and smiling, with a refreshing air of the country about her.

"Oh, yes," said she, nodding her head and glancing about the room, so cold, so cheerless, so neat, "nobody can expect to get well boxed up in the city like this! that good woman outside tells me that the doctor recommends country air. I think, Miss Playfair, that if you will visit my mother at the old farm for a month, we shan't know you when you come back. I hope you like the country. Joe does. It's Joe's highest ambition some time to buy a nice farm of his own. As for the little girl there," nodding her head at Pearl, "she can come and stay with me while you are gone, if she doesn't want to lose her place at the bonnet store."

Pearl hung her head.

"I have no place now to lose," said she. "I was discharged to-day."

Just then there was the sound of solid footsteps on the stairs and hard breathing, as if the steep locomotion were a decided effort—and in trudged Miss Thorburn.

"Is this Pearl Playfair's place?" panted she. "Do people hereabouts live at the top of all creation? Bless me, where's the fire? Is this sick girl your sister, Pearl? Why didn't you tell me you had a sick sister?"

Pearl shrunk back, growing very pale.

"Have you come to—to arrest me?' she gasped.

"My dear, it's all right," said the obese milliner, beginning to recover her breath. "Miss Densel's two little sister's came right back in the carriage, crying as hard as ever they could. They had heard what hard luck you had, and they confessed—dear little things—that it was all their fault. It seems they were looking at the bonnet in the dining-room, and a cut-glass flask of oil was somehow upset, and they were horribly frightened, and meant to keep it a secret; but when they heard Miss Densel's story, they couldn't bare to think that you were blamed, and owned up at once. So I have come all this way, my dear, to let you know. And you must come back at once, for it's our busiest time, and you can have Miss Dater's place in the show-room—Miss Dater's going to be married—at $2 a week more. And you mustn't mind what I said to you when I was vexed; for an old woman's tongue can't always be held responsible. Ha, ha, ha!"

"Oh, I am so happy! so thankful!' gasped Pearl, while Miss Thorburn trotted around to the side of Katie's bed to ask her a string of kind, motherly questions, whose trend they understood better an hour later, when a basket of fruit arrived from the nearest grocery, a cold roastfowl from the restaurant, and a pail of oysters from the fishmonger.

"How good people are—how very good!" said Katie. "And I was just beginning to think that heaven had forgotten us."

She was well enough, under the sunshine of all this kindly remembrance, to go to the Vail homstead within a very few days.

Jane accompanied her thither, "just to settle her," and of course Joe had to go, too; while Pearl was taken into Miss Thorburn's own family during her sister's absence.

"I can't have her staying all alone by herself," said Miss Thorburn. "She's a great deal too pretty, and what's the best of it, she don't even know it. I've taken a fancy to that child. I shouldn't wonder if I some day adopted her!"

But when Katie Playfair came back in May with cheeks as pink as mountain daisies themselves, and Miss Thorburn broached her ideas, the elder sister refused the offer, with many thanks.

"I couldn't spare Pearl," said she. "I—I am going to settle on a farm in Orange county—the great butter-making region you know—and I want Pearl to enjoy the buttercups and the roses and the young lambs with me."

"Going to settle, eh?" said Miss Thorburn. "Oh if that's the case I make no further objection."

"Yes," said Katie, blushing charmingly, "Mr. Vail has a contract as carpenter to a railway repair-shop there, and Pearl and I are to live always in the beautiful country."

"Well, my dear," said good Miss Thorburn, "I hope you'll be very happy. And mind you're to take no thought about the wedding bonnet. I'm going to make you a present of one, all trimmed with white lilacs."—Saturday Night.

Four "Fresh" Pittsburgers.

Four young men of Pittsburg have planned an expedition into Africa at the head waters of the Congo River, with the object of securing proofs as to the truth of Stanley's reports in regard to his explorations in that region. These ambitious young explorers expect to follow the path which Mr. Stanley says he hewed from Yambuya to the province of Equatoria, over which Emin reigned.

The Pittsburg method of giving the lie to Mr. Stanley is unique, to say the least, but the fresh young Pittsburgers will find when they get to Africa—if they ever make a start—that it takes something beside mere bravado to equip men for the work of exploration in Africa.

African vegetation is not easily discouraged, and the track made by Mr. Stanley on the way from Yambuya to the East Coast of Africa didn't remain a track very long. It has been shown that even the ill-fated rear column" could not find the path hewed out by Mr. Stanley's sappers, and was compelled to turn back to its camp of brutality, discontent and starvation, where Barttelot died a violent death at the hands of an incensed native.

There is another thing that the Pittsburgers have overlooked. The world-at-large may not regard Pittsburg veracity any more highly than the ambitious young Pittsburgers regard Mr. Stanley's word of honor. Then another expedition would be necessary to prove the character of the Pittsburg explorers; and after the third expedition, perhaps another; and so on indefinitely.

A Man's Ideal of Woman.

Said an eastern man of fashion the other day: "To my mind the judicial woman is a blot on the face of he universe. We don't want women who can reason and work things out. We want dear, delightful, frivolous things who will float by us in butterfly fashion, making us no end of trouble and inducing us to be willing to kill each other for their sakes. The time when woman was at her best, to my mind of thinking, was in the middle ages when she sat up in a window of a turreted castle threw her hankerchief down to one knight and a hated rival rushed at him as he grasped it, and they flew at each other and knocked their tin hats off, the hated rival was stretched out stiff and cold, and the maiden in the turret applauded her gallant knight and believed that he had done well. The judicial female is a mental hermaphrodite.

A Whopper.

"Yep, said old man Dunlap. "I member jest as well when the first caravan came th'ough these parts. 'Twuz forty-three years ago last grass. They had the first elephant ever seen hereabouts—ole Bolivar—an' I tell ye he was a buster. After they had got th'ough their performin' ole Bolivar got loose an' went rampagin' round the neighborhood, an' finally brought up down back o' Si Pettengill's hay-stack. Si'd neves seen an elephant, an' next mornin,' when he turned the corner of his stack and ran smack up in front of ole Bolivar, I tell ye it's'prized him some! He jest stopped, throwed up both hands an' hollered, 'Gosh all hemlock! What a toad!' and put fer the house."—Puck.

USE BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES for Coughs, Colds and all other Throat Troubles. —"Pre-eminently the best."—Rev. Henry Ward Beecher.

Munsey's Weekly: Lawyer—Young man, if you want to be acquitted you had better get me to defend you.

Prisoner (sizing him up)—I guess I'd have a better chance if you prosecuted me.

FOR A GENERAL SYSTEM REJUVENATOR and blood purifier take Allen's Iron Tonic Bitters. All genuine bear the signature of J. P. Allen, Druggist, St. Paul, Minn.

Chicago Mother (to newly wedded daughter)—And is George tender, dear?

Bride of a Month—Almost as tender as papa's celebrated canned corn beef.

Partners in Guilt.

Three malignant foes to human happiness co-operate for evil. Their names are dyspepsia, billousness, constipation. Though they constitute a strong syndicate, they can be overthrown with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Not instantaneously, of course, but by persistence. So can malarial, rheumatic and kidney ailments and nervousness. Ask your druggist for Hostetter's Almanac and be advised of their superior merit.

Washington Post: "Don't be shy," said the paternal crawfish.

"I can't help it," was the reply. "I am naturally backward."

For a disordered liver try Beecham's Pills.

Within the last thirty years the acreage devoted to corn has increased from 14,000,000 to 78,000,000, and the amount produced from 500,000,000 to 2,000,000,000 bushels.

Two Giants

On the one hand—Scrofula, the ancient disease, known the world over, gnawing at the vitals of every nation, existing in the blood of nearly every family—descended to us from our fathers or acquired by our wrong habits and indulgences—powerful, obstinate, almost impregnable.

On the other hand—Hood's Sarsaparilla, the modern medicine, the great enemy of impure blood, accomplishing the most wonderful cures of scrofula, salt rheum, etc.—the conqueror of disease, economical, reliable, sure.

If you suffer at all from the Giant of Disease, conquer him by the aid of the Giant of Health,

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

BEECHAM'S PILLS
ACT LIKE MAGIC ON A WEAK STOMACH.
25 Cents a Box.
OF ALL DRUGGISTS.

IF YOU HAVE
MALARIA OR PILES,
SICK HEADACHE, DUMB AGUE, COSTIVE BOWELS, SOUR STOMACH and BELCHING; if your food does not assimilate and you have no appetite,
Tutt's Pills
will cure these troubles. Try them, you have nothing to lose, but will gain a vigorous body. Price, 25c. per box.
SOLD EVERYWHERE.

SICK HEADACHE
CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.
Positively cured by these Little Pills.
They also relieve Distress from Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Too Hearty Eating. A perfect remedy for Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Coated Tongue, Pain in the Side, TORPID LIVER. They regulate the Bowels. Purely Vegetable.
Price 25 Cents.
CARTER MEDICINE CO., NEW YORK.
Small Pill. Small Dose. Small Price.

If you have a
COLD or COUGH,
acute or leading to
CONSUMPTION,
SCOTT'S EMULSION
OF PURE COD LIVER OIL
AND HYPOPHOSPHITES
OF LIME AND SODA
IS SURE CURE FOR IT.
This preparation contains the stimulating properties of the Hypophosphites and fine Norwegian Cod Liver Oil. Used by physicians all the world over. It is as palatable as milk. Three times as efficacious as plain Cod Liver Oil. A perfect Emulsion, better than all others made. For all forms of Wasting Diseases, Bronchitis,
CONSUMPTION,
Scrofula, and as a Flesh Producer there is nothing like SCOTT'S EMULSION.
It is sold by all Druggists. Let no one by profuse explanation or impudent entreaty induce you to accept a substitute.

A WINTER'S FUN for 15 cents. Send quick to box 383 Leslie. Mich.

PATENTS obtained. Fees moderate Information free J. R. Littell Washington D. C

AGENTS make 100 PER CENT. profit, on my Corsets, Belts, Brushes, Curlers and novelties. Samples FREE. Write now. Dr. Bridgman, 373 Broadway, N. Y.

LADIES can have smaller feet. Solid comfort. Pamphlet free. Sample pkg., 10c. The Pedine Co., New York.

GARFIELD TEA Cures Constipation and Sick Headache. Free samples at all druggists or 319 W. 45th St., N.Y.

CANCERS Cured without the use of the Knife at the Iola Cancer Infirmary. Iola, Waupaca, Co. Wis. Write for book of treatment.

DETECTIVES.
Wanted a man in every locality to act as Private Detective, under our instructions. Particulars free. Capital Detective Bureau Co., Topeka Kan.

PENSIONS The Disability Bill is a Law. Dependent widows and parents are included. If you wish your claim quickly and Successfully Prosecuted, write to JAMES TANNER, late Commissioner of Pensions, Washington, D. C.

PENSIONS Old or new Law Bounty and pay under new decisions FEES CONTINGENT. MILO B. STEVENS & CO., Attorneys 1419 F. St., Washington, D. C. Branches, Chicago, Detroit, and Cleveland Three Years army service. 26 Years practice.

WEAK MEN!! REMEDY FREE, vigor restored, I have found a certain Self Cure which I will gladly send FREE to any fellow sufferer. It cured me after all else had failed. Address R.T. Hamilton, Box 61 Albion, Mich

PENSION LAND AND INDIAN DEPARTMENT CLAIMS.
Special attention given to the above. NATHAN BICKFORD, "B" 5th N. H. Inft., Solicitor of Claims Washington, D. C. References furnished in any State. Blanks and information free.

BIG G Cures in 1 TO 5 DAYS. Guaranteed not to cause Stricture. Mf'd only by the Evans Chemical Co. Cincinnati, Ohio. Trade Mark
I prescribe and fully endorse Big G as the only specific for the certain cure of this disease.
G. H. INGRAHAM, M. D., Amsterdam, N. Y.
We have sold Big G for many years, and it has given the best of satisfaction.
D. R. DYCHE & CO., Chicago, Ill.
$1.00. Sold by Druggists.

VASELINE.
FOR ONE DOLLAR sent us by mail, we will deliver, free of all charges, to any person in the United States, all the following articles carefully packed in a neat box:
One two ounce bottle of Pure Vaseline, 10cts.
One two ounce bottle Vaseline Pomade, 15 "
One jar of Vaseline Cold Cream..............15 "
One cake of Vaseline Camphor Ice..........10 "
One cake of Vaseline Soap, unscented.....10 "
One cake of Vaseline Soap, sented...........25 "
One two ounce bottle of White Vaseline..25 "
—$1.10
Or for stamps any single article at the price.
If you have occasion to use Vaseline in any form be careful to accept only genuine goods put up by us in original packages. A great many druggists are trying to persuade buyers to take VASELINE put up by them. Never yield to such persuasion, as the article is an imitation without value, and will not give you the result you expect. A bottle of Blue Seal Vaseline is sold by all druggisst at ten cents.
Chesebrough M'f'g Co., 24 State St, New York.

N. W. N. U. 1890 No. 50.

Ely's Cream Balm Cures
COLD IN HEAD
RELIEVES INSTANTLY.
ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren St., New York. Price 50 cts.

THE CURE FOR
CATARRH
COLD IN HEAD
HAYFEVER
DEAFNESS
HEADACHE
ELY'S CREAM BALM
50c

IRRIGATION PUMP.

Water Steam Vacuum Pumps, for Irrigating, Stock, Drainage, Coffer Dams and Mining. The latest and most economical pump made. Will raise 75,000 gallons water with one bushel coal, and elevate it 10 to 150 ft. high. We handle Well Drilling Machinery, Steam Plows, which turn 6 14-in. furrows at one round. Send four cents in stamps for mailing catalogue, to

WESTERN MACHINERY CO.
1412 17th St., DENVER, COLO.

PISO'S REMEDY FOR CATARRH.—Best. Easiest to use. Cheapest. Relief is immediate. A cure is certain. For Cold in the Head it has no equal.
CATARRH
It is an Ointment, of which a small particle is applied to the nostrils. Price, 50c. Sold by druggists or sent by mail. Address, E. T. HAZELTINE, Warren, Pa.

THE NEWS.

Entered at the post office at Red Lake Falls as second-class mail matter.

Official Paper of the County.

Official Paper of the City.

Jas. Meehan, Jr. Editor and Prop.

The grand jury system is an expensive force and should be wiped out of existance.

Some of the sympathizing congressman and senators should be sent out to treat with the poor starving Sioux.

The farmers alliance will make a grave mistake if they commence healping costly investigations upon the county.

Isn't it about time the congress should drop the force bill and commence to take the tariff oft everything but the products of the farm.

The question that agitates the public mind to day is whether the democrats or republicans will capture the alliance vote in the legislature.

Prominent democrats are not expressing their paesidential preferense as a battle between Clevland and Hill makes an opinion a dangerous article for those who desire to be among the solid ones.

The underhanded political trickery in New Hampshire will make the puritanic blood of the old settlers run cold, and if such paritsan legislation was enacted one hundred years ago, it would be tyranny to day it is shrewd politics.

Russel A. Alger is setting his pins for the republican nomination for president in '92. His only merit lies in his well filled barrel; this at one time had some effect in American politics, but that time has passed. It is hoped the republican party will not make such a mistake as to nominate this small brained, puffed up, accidental millionaire.

The grand jury in its recommendations requests a thorough investigation if the books of the county for the last ten years. We cannot see the object of this, since the expense of this investigation would cost thousands of dollars and only a few minds would be easier. This no doubt follows the result of the election and it may be a scheme of some of the new officials to get a start on innitiation into the way of handling the books in a proper manner. Whether or not this be the object is of little concern. What the people want is a reduction of taxes and the way to effect this is by eliminating all unnecessary expenses instead of heaping them upon the county by investigations. Knowing that the farmers are the tax payers, the men elected by tham cannot in the performance of their public trust do any act that will tend to raise the rate of taxation.

It is about time the farmers in the vicinity of Red Lake Falls, and farther east, were awakening to a sense of their miserable condition as regards their county seat. It costs every farmer who goes to Crookston two days' time besides their expenses while there which will amount in the neighborhood of two dollars. They are obliged to drive from twenty to forty miles through rain, mud, snow and blizzard. What a blessing it would be to the farming community were there county seats at Red Lake Falls and Fosston. It would add dollars to the value of their land. The expense of a division would not amount to much as Red Lake Falls stands ready and willing to erect a proper building for a court house and jail. The only remaining expenses would be the transcribing of the records, which would not cost more than fifteen hundred dollars. Polk county is large enough for eight counties of the size required by law. Would it be anything more than justice to make of it three counties? There will ever be a murmur of discontent, a howl of discord arising from an overtaxed people so long as the county remains its present size. It remains with the farmers (those are the ones most deeply interested) to not only ask but demand of their representatives a chance to voice their desires in this matter of county division. Who will act first.

It is safe to say the governing class in the United States the past fifty years have been fools or the powers that be, in our government have absorbed large sums of money to their own benefit that other classes might be pinched. True, we have vast acres of country traversed by railroads and vast portions of this country settled along those railroads. But to the young American of to-day the question arises whether or not our country would have been developed as rapidly if the government had reserved the lands they gave away to railroads and allowed them to be directly from the government instead of being purchased to the enrichment of a favored few, from the railroad corporations which are endeavoring to absorb all the surplus earnings of the farmers the artisan and middle class Few of the rising generation believe the extent of our railroads would not be as great if the government had not granted the vast amounts of land they now hold at exorbitant prices, and few believe our country would not have been developed as extensively if the government had retained the lands. One railroad company has remaining 46,000,000 acres of land after a large tract being recently forfeited. The value of this land is one thousand million dollars. If an average man could live two thousand years and could save five hundred dollars per year he would be a millionaire. But is would take one thousand such men to purchase the lands of one railroad company.

But twenty five years is the time allowed for the average working man and it would therefor take 200,000 of those toiling mortals to purchase the land of the people from this one great railroad corporation. This that defies the power of the people; that has hoodwinkad and purchased the congress of the past, this all-absorbing heartless corporation that should have its stock transfered to the government and be run by the people and for the benefit of all. The people have built the railroad why should they not own them.

Bucklin's Arnica Salve.

The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by W. A. Schreiter.

A CHARACTER.

Everything pleased our neighbor Jim;
When it rained
He never complained,
But said wet weather suited him.
"There never is too much rain for me,
And this is something like," said he.

When earth was dry as a powder mill,
He did not sigh
Because it was dry,
But said if he could have his will
It would be his chief supreme delight
To live where the sun shone day and night.

When winter came with its snow and ice,
He did not scold
Because it was cold,
But said, "Now this is real nice;
If ever from home I'm forced to go,
I'll move up north with the Esquimau."

A cyclone whirled along its track,
And did him harm—
It broke his arm,
And stripped the coat from off his back;
"And I would give another limb,
To see such a blow again," said Jim.

And when at length his years were told,
And his body bent
And his strength all spent,
And Jim was very weak and old;
"I long have wanted to know," he said,
"How it feels to die," and Jim was dead.

The angel of death had summoned him
To heaven, or—well,
I cannot tell;
But I knew that the climate suited Jim,
And cold or hot, it mattered not—
It was to him the long sought spot.

—Bloomington Pantagraph.

Alleged Facts About Feet.

"Girls' feet? Well, it's not a matter for me to discuss, maybe, but Lewiston and Auburn girls have awful little feet." "I suppose you want me to put your name in the paper now," suggests the newspaper man. "Well, maybe it might attract trade," was the honest admission. "But, honestly, girls don't have half as big feet now as they used to. There was a time when our Sally Janes used to sport nines and tens. Ever see them nowadays! Not you.

"Sarah Jane doesn't grow now the way she used to. Girls between 16 and 18 have bigger feet than after 20 to 24. The foot is fleshy at that time and large, but as years come the foot decreases and the muscles grow more firm. At that time they complain that their boots are too large, and we always know the reason. Among men from 20 to 32 the feet lengthen perceptibly, and at this age the customers complain that their last pair of shoes were too short. They sometimes need boots an inch longer."—Lewiston Journal.

"White Lies" Don't Pay.

It doesn't pay to tell "white lies." The other day I read a little treatise on them which not only argued that they were admissible, but mildly hinted that in many contingencies they were highly creditable. I had this idea in my mind when, a short time afterward, I was introduced to Miss and Mrs. ——. Now, Miss —— was an exceedingly homely young woman, and I knew it; but remembering the suggestions of the book on "white lies," and thinking that the time to put its principle in practice had come, I said to Mrs. ——, "What a pretty girl your daughter is." And then I began to expatiate on the theme. I noticed a rather unsympathetic expression on Mrs. ——'s face, and just about the time I finished she said, "That is my sister-in-law, sir; not my daughter."—Kansas City Times.

Protection from Kleptomaniacs.

An artist friend of mine who suffered some losses at one of the studio receptions he gave fixed upon a device to protect himself from aristocratic kleptomaniacs. He put his ivory carvings and smaller objects in glass cases, which he locked, while some beautiful bits of Nuremberg ironwork he placed upon a shelf, with a card asking that they be not handled. But he did still another thing. The top of this shelf was covered with sheetiron connected with a robust electric battery, and when occasionally a visitor disregarded the admonition of the card he or she received a prompt and efficacious "reminder." This shelf and its contents caused everything in the studio to be regarded with a certain degree of suspicion that was a complete protection.—New York Star.

How to Sweep a Store.

We don't use a leaky old sprinkling pot to sop the floor all over in puddles when we sweep, said a store sweeper. No, sir! We have wet sawdust, and I put a row of it across one end of the store and sweep that right along to the other end, just like a regiment marching across a ten acre lot. It catches all the dirt and carries it along. If it gets a little dry I add some more. Some folks scatter sawdust all over the floor, but that is no good. The reason for using sawdust is to avoid wetting the floor all over, and to have something that will absorb the dust.—New York Journal.

MOLTKE'S GAME OF CHESS.

The Count Defeated an Egyptian Pasha by Remarkable Strategy.

In the summer of 1841 Professor Adolf Stahr with several friends and one stranger were being rowed across a little bay at Heligoland, when the conversation turned on Moltke's record in Egypt. "He has written a fine book," said the professor, "but for that one statement that in the last day and a half he traveled thirty-eight hours. That's too much."

"That is true, though, for I did it myself," came in muffled tones from the stranger, as he pushed from him the heavy military cloak that had enveloped him beyond recognition and revealed his "sharp, weather beaten face, compressed lips and hard, gray eyes." "We could see," wrote Professor Stahr, "that he had endured terrible fatigue in Egypt, and that only his will of steel, combined with his strong constitution, had kept him up. He acknowledged this, and said he had come in the hope of strengthening his nerves at the baths. He was then 40 years old, but looked 50."

It is not in authentic history that Moltke was ever again in Egypt, but Egyptian tradition has it that shortly after the battle of Nizib he mysteriously appeared in Cairo, did a deed that rendered him as famous there as all his great subsequent battles, and then suddenly disappeared as inexplicably as he came. Suleiman Pasha, not the great one, but the commander of artillery at Nizib, the tradition says, sat one warm afternoon at a little chess table in a cafe on the river.

He was a remarkable chess player, the champion of all Egypt, and every afternoon he might be found before the little chess table in the cafe on the river with another general, the only foeman worthy of him in all Egypt, opposite him. On this particular afternoon his wonted opponent was tardy. The commander of artillery dozed over the table and occasionally muttered his impatience to the other officers, who sat around him at respectful distances. There was a quick, firm step on the other side of the little chess table. Suleiman Pasha looked up and saw before him a tall, spare man, with a bare, bony face. The man saluted and said:

"Pasha, I challenge you to a game of chess."

The pasha sat up to express his astonishment and the officers crowded forward.

"Well, how much do you wish to play for?"

"As you will. Perhaps a hundred ducats."

The pasha nodded, the stranger sat down and the game began. The pasha played with tremendous earnestness, for it was his opinion that chess and war required exactly similar tactics, and that in every game of chess, therefore, his military reputation was at stake. Move after move, and the stranger seemed to be hard pressed. His case became more desperate, apparently, with every minute, and the officers ceased to crane their necks toward the little table.

"Two moves more and he is beaten," one of them said.

"Pasha," commented the stranger, in a hard voice, "twelve moves more will finish you."

The officers who had turned away came back and counted anxiously. One—two—three—four—five—the pasha was undoubtedly getting into trouble. Six—seven—eight—nine—ten—the stranger had control of the board. Eleven—twelve, and checkmate.

Suleiman Pasha leaned back, looked over his antagonist and reflected.

"I think," he began questioningly, "that I have observed strategy of that kind before. It was carried out by a man from the north, a German, on the field of Nizib, and had not Hafiz Pasha disturbed his plans the history of the battle would have been different."

Suleiman Pasha scrutinized the face of his vis-a-vis. It was expressionless. Then he continued:

"There is only one man in the world who can make such a plan—only one man in the world who knows such combinations—and he is Moltke."

The stranger rose, saluted and said; "I am Moltke." He was not seen in Cairo afterward.—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Imagination as Bad as Realization.

Some years ago Napoleon III permitted some French scientists to experiment on a convict who was to suffer the death penalty. The condemned man was delivered to the physicians, who had him strapped to a table and blindfolded, ostensibly for the purpose of being bed to death.

Near the drooping head was placed a vessel of water, which, by means of a siphon arrangement, trickled audibly into a basin below. After an argument as to how it had best be done one of the M. D.'s sharpened a knife and then walked up to the man and made a scratch across the back of his neck with a pin. Perfect silence (with the exception of the dripping water, which the convict took to be his own blood) was maintained for six minutes, when the straps were removed and the man was found to be stone dead.—St. Louis Republic.

Archæology from the Ark.

There is a town on the shore of Lake Ontario where dwells a widowed clergyman, who boards at the house of a middle aged woman who always knows everything and never fails to show it. One day at dinner the minister began to talk about a young boy whose acquaintance he had made—one who seemed to him more than ordinarily bright.

"Why," he said, "he was greatly interested in history, and even in archæology he had made great progress. He's got a collection of archæological specimens."

"Archæology?" said the landlady. "Oh, yes! All about the ark."—New York Tribune.

Drinks Kerosene Oil.

A young lady residing in the far east has developed a most peculiar affection for kerosene oil. Its odor is perfume to her, its taste delicious. She drinks one or two cups of it a day, bathes in it, and steeps little rolls of paper in it to thrust in her work. "Sparking" would be dangerous business for this girl of phenomenal appetite, but it is doubtful if a lover be found sufficiently fond of her to endure the perfume she revels in.—New York Sun.

A New Brand.

"You have fish?" she queried as she looked at the display in the window.

"Certainly."

"Well, I'll take one."

"What kind, ma'am?"

"Oh, it doesn't make very much difference. A leghorn will probably do as well as any."—Detroit Free Press.

Oculists have displayed unbounded energy and exalted skill, as shown by their success in transplanting the cornea of the cat, dog and rabbit to the eyes of human beings, and of mucous membrane to the conjunction, for the correction of deformity as the result of eye troubles in infancy.

$40.00

13

—GRAND—

WINTER EXCURSIONS.

FROM NORTHERN

MINNESOTA

AND NORTH

Dakota

TO

Montreal

And all Points West in

ONTARIO

VIA THE

Northern Pacific

The Dining car line between uorthern Minnesota and
North Dakota
Points, by way of St. Paul and Chicago. Dates of sale,
Tuesday, Nov.
18 and 25, and Dec. 2 and 9; and daily, Dec. 16 to 23 inclusive, & Dec 30, 1890.
Limit of Tickets 99 days, good returning fifteen days, with stop-over privileges
Subject to local regulations of lines over which tickets read.
Final limit of
Tickets extended fifteen days on payment of $5.00; 30 days,
$10 and 60 days, $20

For further information, maps, time-tables and tickets via the dining car line, write to or inquire of any agent of the Northern Pacific railroad, or

C. A. Sharkeo, agent, Crookston, Minn. H. W. H. W. Nunn, Agent Grofton, N. D. J. A. Duffy Red Lake Falls, Minn. E. F. Rea, Agent, Gildy N. D. J. A Risk, Agent, Minnewaukon N. D. M. H. McGowan, Agent, Grond Forks N. D. N. McCallum, Agent, Drayton, N. D. F. J Cunningham, Agent, Pemcina, N. D. J. D. Rocertson, Agent, N. D. R. Tazewell, Agent, Leeds, N. D.

Land Office at Crookston, Minn., Nov, 24th, 1890.
Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the register or receiver of U. S. land office at Crookston, Minn., on January 12th, 1891, viz, Damase Dion, hd No. 10917, for the nw¼ sec 33, twp 150, r 42.
He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of, said land, viz,
Charles O'Claire, Charles Benoit, Louis Parenteau, Prosper Benoit, all of Terrebonne, Minn.
nv27jan1. H. H. Dickmann, Register.

Land Office at Coookston, Minn., Nov. 29, 1890.
Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the register or receiver of U S Land office at Crookston, Minn. on Jany 16th, 1891, viz, Joseph Provost, Hd No 5793 for the w½ nw¼ and w½ sw¼ sec 22 twp 151 r 45
He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz:
Oliver Caron, Marcil Heil, Lion Audette, Joseph Pepin, all of Huot P O, Minn. de4j8
H. H. Dickmann, register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Dec. 1, 1890.
Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the clerk of the district court at Detroit, Minn., on Jan. 20th, 1890, viz:
Patrick Moylan, pre-emption D. S. No. 5981 for the lots 3, 4 and 5 and se¼ sw¼ sec. 1, tp 150, rg, 32.
He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence opon and cultivation of, said land, viz:
Joseph Dargan, James C. O'Brien, Michel Burns Thomas A. Wiley, all of Red Lake, Minn.
A. Barto, Register.

Land Office at Crookston, Minn, Dec. 4th, 1890.
Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the register or receiver of the U S Land Office at Crookston, Minn., on January 22d, 1891, viz John H. Blivin, hd No. 13132, for the se¼ sec. 27, tp 152, r 42.
He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of, said land, viz,
Wesley Lafaye, Lawrence Lafave, Louise Lafave, Paul Berry, alll of Wyandotte, Minn
H H Dickmann, Register

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Dec. 1, 1890.
Notice is hereby given especially to Charles Corcoran who filed pre-emption D. S. No. 5978 for the s½ ne¼, se¼ nw¼, and ne¼ sw¼ sec 35, township 150, range 30, that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the Clerk of Dist Court at Detroit, Minn., on Jan. 20th, 1891, viz:
John Moylan, pre-emption D. S. No. 5934 for the s½ ne¼, ne¼ se¼ and se¼ nw¼ sec. 35 tp 150 rg 32.
He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz:
Thomas Wiley, Joseph Dargan, Michael Burns, James O'Brien, Red Lake, Minn.
de11j15 A. Barto, Register.

Land Office at St. Cloud, Minn., Dec. 1, 1890.
Notice is hereby given especially to Joseph Juneau, who filed preemption D. S. No. 5980 for the w½ sw¼ sec 13, nw¼ nw¼ sec 24 and ne¼ ne¼ sec. 23, tp. 150, range 32, that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the clerk of district court at Detroit, Minn., on Jan. 20th, 1890, viz:
Thomas A. Wiley, pre-emption D. S. No. 5999, for the e½ se¼ sec 14 and w½ sw¼ sec 13 tp 150, rg, 32.
He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land, viz:
John Moylan, Patrick Moylan, Charles Durand James C. O'Brien, all of Red Lake, Minn.
oc23nov27 A. Barto, Register.

Things Worth Remembering.

That it is dangerous to stand near a tall tree or spire during a thunder storm.

That the southwest corner of the cellar is the "cyclone safety point."

That there is no medicine so universally applicable to sickness as fresh air and sunshine."

That blowing out the gas before retiring is funny—to every one except the one who tries it.

That you may swear as hard as you please but it will not remove grease spots.

That the Wisconsin Central is the most popular line between Minneapolis and St. Paul and Milwaukee and Chicago.

That its fast train leaves Minneapolis daily at 6:25 p. m., St. Paul at 7:15 p. m., with through Pullman sleepers, arriving in Milwaukee at 7:27 and Chicago at 9:50 the following morning, serving breakfast in dining car.

That before starting on a trip always get information from some reliable ticket agent, and that nowhere will such information be more cheerfully given than at the city ticket offices of the Wisconsin Central, No. 19, Nicollet House block, Minneapolis, and 162 East 3d st, cor. Jackson, St. Paul, Address letters to Chas. E. Dixon, acting city passenger and ticket agent, St. Paul, F. H. Hanson, Gen. Northwestern Pass. agent, Minneapolis, or Louis Eckstein, Assistant General Passenger and Ticket agent, Milwaukee.

RALPH & BOURDON,

Proprietors of the

CITY DRAY LINE.

WOOD & COAL

Anything in our line done
Promptly and at very Reasonable
Rates.

GIVE US A CALL

TONSORIAL HALL!

N. MORISETTE, Prop.

Everything First Class!

SHAVING,
HAIR-CUTTING,
SHAMPOOING!

☞Shaving 15 cents.
Haircutting 25 cents.☜

Main Street, - Red Lake Falls.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk—ss.
In probate court, special term Nov., 25th. 1890.
In the matter of the estate of Theodore Laurent. Deceased.
Letters of administration with will annexed, on the estate of said deceased being this day granted unto Louis St. Yves of said county.
It is ordered, that all claims and demands of all persons against said estate be presented to this court, for examination and allowance, at the probate office in the city of Crookston in said county on Monday, the 1st day in June, A. D, 1891 at 10 o'clock a. m.
It is further ordered, that six months from the date hereof be allowed to creditors to present their claims against said estate, at the expiration of which time all claims not presented to said court, or not proven to its satisfaction, shall be forever barred, unless for cause shown further time be allowed.
Ordered further, that notice of the time and place of the hearing and examination of said claims and demands shall be given by publishing this order once in each week, for three successive weeks prior to the day appointed for such examination, in the Red Lake Falls News, a weekly newspaper printed and published at the village of Red Lake Falls, in said county.
Dated at Crookston, Minn., the twentyfifth day of November A. D. 1890
By the Court: C. O. Christianson, de11 25 Judge of Probate.

VIOLINS, GUITAR, BANJOS' FINEST Assortment, Largest Stock, Lowest Prices, Best Strings for all instrument, assorted to suit, $1,50 per dozen, postpaid. Cash with order. Anything in the music line sent to any part of the United States. Write Allmendinger Piano And Organ Company, Ann Arbor, Mich. Orders from teachers and the professional solicited. Live Agents wanted for our Pianos and Organs.

PAUL GLOBE.

Northwestern Newspaper.
[illegible] of Northwestern [illegible]
[illegible] Taxation in Time of Peace.
[illegible] Farmer and [illegible] of Monopo- [illegible]
[illegible] AND RELIABLE.
[illegible] Favorite with the [illegible] The price is $1.00 [illegible] for six months' [illegible] the News and Good [illegible] the Legislature of [illegible]
TERMS
[illegible] Editions of the Globe
[illegible] One Year. - - - $1.00
[illegible] - - 3.0
[illegible] Pages, " - - - 2.00
[illegible] Per Month - - .70
[illegible] SUNDAY, Per Month, - - .85

THE GLOBE,
St. Paul, Minn.

NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD

The New Dining Car Route
BETWEEN
WINNIPEG,
GRAFTON,
GRAND FORKS,
RED LAKE FALLS,
ST. PAUL,
MINNEAPOLIS,
DULUTH,
AND ALL POINTS EAST.

The Direct line to
MONTANA, IDAHO,
WASHINGTON TERRITORY,
OREGON, BRITISH COLUMBIA
PUGET SOUND AND ALASKA.

EXPRESS TRAINS DAILY.

To which are attached Pullman Palace Sleeping and Elegant Dining Cars. On overland trains, Emigrant Sleepers Free. The only line to the Yellowstone Park.

All trains daily.
Pullman Palace Sleeping Cars between Grand Forks and St Paul. Dining cars on all trains
Coupon tickets on sale to all points Southeast and West
For further information regarding rates, routes maps, etc., address
Chas. S. Fee, G. P. & T. Agt., St. Paul, Minn.
J. A. Duffy Local Agt

Green Bay, Winona & St. Paul

Railroad. Best and most Direct Line Between LaCROSSE,
WINONA,
Neillsville,
Eau Claire,
Grand Rapids,
Stevens Point,
New London,
Appelton,
Neenah,
Menasha,
Oshkosh,
Fon du Lac,
GREEN BAY.

And all Points in
EASTERN WISCONSIN,
Iron Districts of Northern Michigan and Lake Superior Regions.

Close Connections and Quick Time.

See That Your Ticket Reads Via
GREEN BAY, WINONA & ST. PAUL Railroad.
S. W. Champion,
Superintendent, Green Bay, Wis.
J. B. Last,
Ass't Gen. Pass. Agt., Green Bay, Wis.

$100,000

To Loan on Farms

—AT—

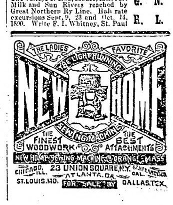
10 pr Cent

Interest. No bonus—no delay, at

THE FIRST NAT. BANK

Red Lake Falls - - Minn.

Homeseekers will find the last of the public domain of agricultural and grazing value along the Great Northern Ry in North Dakota and Montana.	FREE LANDS.
New Towns	100 or more, along the Great Northern Railway Line. Business chances. Write F. I. Whitney, St. Paul, Minn., for Books, Maps, etc. Write now.
Settlers on Free government lands along the Great Northern Railway Line in North Dakota and Montana get low rates and fine markets for products.	Low Rates
Hunting, Fishing	Finest resorts in America along the Great Northern Ry. Line in Minnesota, Dakotas and Montana. Best climate for health seekers.
Montana produces the finest horses and cattle. Free ranges yet in the Mouse, Milk and Sun River Valleys and Sweet Grass Hills.	Horses, Cattle
Health, Wealth	In Monta. Free Lands, New Towns New Railways, New Mines, Low Rates. Largest area of good, vacant land.
Sweet Grass Hills, Milk and Sun River Valleys, Montana, reached only by the Great Northern Railway Line. The stock raisers' paradise.	Sheep Hogs
Gold, Coal	The Regions tributary to th Great Northern Railway Line in Montana produce all the precious and baser metals, New towns and railways are being built.
Go to the Great Reservation of Montana and get a good free homestead. Low rates and free sleepers on Great Northern R'y Line. Go now.	Milk River
Herds, Mines.	These have made Montana the richest state per capita in the Union Plenty of room for more miners and stock raisers.
Along the Great Northern Line in Montana are free ranches and pasturage, mines of precious metal iron and coal, and new cities and towns. Now is your opportunity.	Young Man
Great Falls	Surrounded by a fine agricultural and grazing country, close to mines of precious metals, iron and coal possessing a water power unequaled in America, it is Montana's industrial centre.
The valleys of Red, Mouse, Missouri Milk and Sun Rivers reached by Great Northern Ry Line. Half rate excursions Sept. 9, 23 and Oct. 14, 1890. Write F. I. Whitney, St. Paul	G. N. R. L.



THE LADIES FAVORITE
THE LIGHT RUNNING
NEW HOME
SEWING MACHINE
THE FINEST WOODWORK
THE BEST ATTACHMENTS
NEW HOME SEWING MACHINE CO. ORANGE, MASS.
CHICAGO, ILL.
23 UNION SQUARE, N.Y.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
ATLANTA, GA.
ST. LOUIS, MO.
FOR SALE BY DALLAS, TEX.

Railroad Time Table.

	LEAVE P. M.	PASSENGER	ARRIVE A. M.
	8.00	St. Paul,	7:05
	8:35	Minneapolis.	6:35
	8:00	Duluth	7:00
	8:30	Ashland. (p m)	6:30
WAY	3:30 a m	Wadena a m	12:02	WAY
FREIGHT	A. M.	....	P. M.	FREIGHT
1:00 p m	6:25	WINNIPEG JCTION	9:10	2:00 a m.
2:55 "	7:35	Twin Valley	8:30	11:42 pm
4:22 "	8:22	Fertile	7:14	9:54 "
6:20 "	9:20	RED LK FALLS	6:20	7:47."
2:00 "	9:40	Crookston	6:00	10.00 am
7:42 "	10:10	Buffington	5:29	5:55 p m
8:30 "	10:55	Grand Forks	4:45	5:00 "
DAILY	P. M.	....	P. M.	DAILY
	12:50	Grafton	2:45
	2:45	Pembina	12:55
	5:30	WINNIPEG, Man.	10:05

All trains daily.

The NEWS has prepared a grand benefit for its readers. We are desirous of adding new names to our subscription list, and settling up with those already there. A grand inducement is offered in the following proposition: Every person who pays up all arrearages on subscription and one year in advance, will be given a ticket in the drawing of the following articles: Four beautiful steel engravings, valued at from $15 to $20 each, the size being 3½x2½ feet, and one new gig, valued at $20. Each ticket has the chance of winning one of these grand prizes, the aggregate value of which is nearly $100. Not content with the above magnificent offer, the NEWS presents FREE, to its farmer friends who take advantage of the above offer and request it, the American Farmer, a farm-magazine. To those who desire one of the very best American magazines at a greatly reduced price, we offer the Cosmopoltan, (if the premium offer is accepted) at $1.50 cents, the regular price being $2.40. You can hardly afford to let this opportunity pass. It is open for a month.

ECHOES OF THE RAPIDS

THE LAST GOOD NIGHT.

Clad in their nightgowns, clean and white,
The children come to say "good night."
"Father, good night," says Marjory,
Climbing for kisses on my knee.

Then Ernest, Kittie, Harry next,
And baby, till I get perplexed,
Wishing the last good night was said,
And each and all were packed to bed.

These small folks take me unawares;
I hear them call when safe upstairs,
As I sit down to read or write,
"Father, we want to say good night!"
[illegible] pen is laid aside;
I find them lying, open eyed,
Five rosy rebels, girls and boys,
Who greet me with tumultuous noise.

Can I be stern with such as these?
Can charming ways and looks displease?
They hold, and scarce will let me go,
And all because they love me so.

Then in a vision suddenly
The future seems unveiled to me!
It is my turn, though all in vain,
To long to say "good night" again.

I see the years stretch on and on,
The children all grown up and gone;
No chamber echoes to the tread,
The last good night has long been said.

And by his fireside desolate
An old man sits, resigned to wait,
Recalling joys that used to be,
And faces that he may not see.

Therefore, what bliss is mine that now
I still can smooth each fair young brow?
And feel the arms that clasp me tight,
The lips that kiss the last good night.

—Somerville Journal.

Dime sociable Friday night. Be sure you hie yourself thither.

The Burnt Cork Club made the rounds of the town Wednesday.

Samuel Gibeau was appointed town clerk of Lambert last week.

Mrs. Chas. Langevin returned from New York after a two months' visit Saturday.

Roller mill B, has a free delivery system that is proving of great convenience to town patrons.

The passenger now arrives at 9 a. m. going north and 6 p. m. going south. No trains on Sundays.

The choral society is progressing nicely. They will meet next Monday at Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Davis.'

C. H. Woodbury of Forest Rievr, Dak. is here looking after business matters and renewing acquaintances.

Forty below zero—the coal fire out man with his nocturnal cough and the baby with the colic—this is the season of man's discontent.

L. J. O'Neil and his estimable lady were in town Wednesday. Mrs. O'Neil has taken her departure for a brief visit to relatives—therefor the woe-begone, disconsolate look on the face of L. J.

Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Paradis, Mrs. M. Bray and Messrs. Desire Robillard and Marchildon, will shortly take a company trip to Canada to visit relatives.

The case of the State against Howes & Landers was dismissed, the indictment being defective. There was no case against them and if the grand jury cannot find anything better to do than [illegible] a square, though shrewd business deal [illegible] to dissolve forever.

We see by the News that C. T. Walker is to give a grand New Year's ball at East Grand Forks.

Mr. O. M. Holmes, the former editor of the Gazette took his departure for Duluth and West Superior last Monday.

A grand masquerade ball is spoken of for New Year's eve. Do not prepare your costumes on this authority, however.

Joseph Laurant one of the prominent Terrebonne farmers was in town Monday to see his brother off for New York, Joe ordered the NEWS for a year.

The Presbyterian church and St. Mary's church will have Christmas trees for the little ones of their congregations. Elaborate preparations are going on in both churches, and this Christmas bids fair to be a notable one.

Miss Polly Zaiser is expected home the latter part of the week. Mrs. Zaiser will remain a week or two in Faribault and Fergus Falls visiting relatives and friends.

Everybody should attend the dime sociable at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Marshall Friday night. The proceeds go toward Christmas expenses at the Presbyterian church.

Mr. P. Meehan, after rusticating a month on the Red Lake reservation, returned to his home in Milwaukee. Before his return he will purchase machinery for the new steamboat.

Cash paid for barley, oats, flax, hides pelts. All kinds of coal for sale—at Hoskins & Co.'s elevator.

41 W. T. SPILLANE.

Joseph Smith & Co. have loaded three cars with potatoes this week and if the fine weather continues will undoubtedly load two or three more. These potatoes are destined for central Illinois.

The thermometer, these days, ranges all the way from 20 to 50 degrees above zero. This is remarkable weather, almost a repetition of the winter of '89, and our citizens are not inclined to demur.

Erve McCaffrey is expecting a car load of fine buckwheat flour before the holidays which will be distributed here and in the adjoining towns. The buckwheat is from the Dells Roller mills at Augusta.

Tom Allard of Lambert has, it is reported, skipped where the woodbine twineth, with a good boodle, leaving many of his farmer friends in the lurch. Some of our merchants also feel the bitter pang of misplaced confidence stinging their pocket books.

It is expected that next Sabbath Rev. Thos. E. Douglas of Langdon, North Dakota will preach morning and evening for the Presbyterian society. Services in Burgdorf building, north side. Morning at 11:15; evening at 7:30. All are invited to attend

E. L. Laurence, of Athens, N. Y. has been visiting relatives around Terrebonne among whom is Joseph Laurence. Mr. L. would have enjoyed his three weeks visit more had not the change of climate unfavorably effected his health. He left Monday evening on his return trip.

J. T. Beaudry appeared on our streets yesterday. Mr. Beaudry has taken a residence in Crookston and will soon assume the duties of county treasurer. That the funds of the county will be in honest hands the next two pears, is an assured fact.

The silk quilt is completed. The raffle will take place Wednesday evening of next week in the Gosselin hall. A supper will be sereed in connection with the event. Tickets are still on sale at 25c each. The quilt is truly a magnificent piece of work. Added to its artistic value is the charm of its antiquity.

There will be a dime sociable at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Marshall on Friday evening Dec. 12th.

The proceeds of this sociable are to be used to defray Christmas expenses of the Presbyterian Sunday School. Everybody is heartily invited to attend.

COMMITTEE.

Mr. J. A. Buckley a young attorney of Milwaukee, may shortly take up his abode in our midst. He is a graduate of the State university of Wisconsin and a graduate of the law school. He is well up in law and a fluent speaker—we think there is a good standing here for an attorney an whom implicit confidence can be placed. We know Mr. Buckley to be a young man of worth.

Twenty-one families have within the past two months moved from North Dakota and settled in the town of Emardville, this county. This speaks well for Polk county. People see the advantages we have over our sister state. North Dakota and are thus leaving the homes they had started there and settling on the border of the great Red Lake reservation—knowing that the vast body of timber thereon as soon as manufacturing commences, will furnish labor in winter to combine with the profit of the farm in summer. This is the place to live.

The ladies of St. Joseph's French Catholic church are making strenuous efforts and procuring the material for a grand bazar. We are glad to note they are having the best of success. It is a noble and charitable undertaking and they should receive the assistance of all who are able to add their mite, that the treasury of the church may be filled with a surplus. In no distant day a fine edifice will replace the one destroyed by fire a year ago—nor shall the fire brand of the apostate prevail against it.

That silk quilt—just as we had written thus far a person looked over our shoulder and threatened to end our earthly career if we dared add another letter. His hand was upon our throat and the cold grip of death lurked about his clammy fingers, We dared not proceed. But full particulars are to be found in another item we wrote after his departure. We realize that persistency should be rewarded. A noble determination that might carry revolutionary hosts to victory is all that could have tided this silk quilt project to triumphant success.

The order of the Interior department, compelling the Indians to log within the new reservation limits has been recinded and the dead and down timber, accessible to the streams, tributary to Red Lake will be put in and sold to P. & J. Meehan under their contracts with the Red Lake Indians. The cut on Red Lake will thus be increased to about eight million eet. With the logs on hand this firm will have twelve million feet to cut during the sawing season of '91.

There are those who would like to know if, in these days of artificial incubation, rabbits ever hatch from pumpkins, as in days of fairy tales.

P. & J. Meehan will this winter build a steamboat eighty feet long and twenty feet wide with two engines of one hundred and fifty horse power. A spool will be placed upon the counter shaft which can be detached and used in towing log rafts. She will be a side wheeler, will probably be built at Thief River Falls and run to the lake during high water in the spring. The boat will carry a heavy grouser so that in case of storm this can be dropped and the toes held out from the beach. The boat it is intended will withstand any storm on Red Lake.

Collector Marcus Johnson was in town the guest of J. D. Marshall.

Rev L. S. Arpin pointed out an error we had made in an item last week. The fair mentioned should have been the Lambert and not the Terrebonne fair. Each of these places had a fair during the past month. The Lambert fair was a notably successful one. Fr. Arpin says the pastor, Rev. Guillaume, cannot be praised too highly, and his congregation are none the less worthy of commendation. This is a pleasant state of affairs.

CARD OF THANKS.—We desire to express heartfelt thanks and grateful recognition to our kind friends whose sympathy and assistance made lighter our affliction in the death of our beloved husband and father.

MRS. B. ZAISER AND CHILDREN

Wednesday night, at Gosselin hall, the grand raffle and oyster supper of the silk quilt, will be held. Those desiring rich eating should attend.

The regular annual meeting of the stockholders of the First National Bank of Red Lake Falls, Minn., for the election of directors will be held at the rooms of the bank on Jany. 12, 1891.

JAMES I. WYER, Cashier.

Hunt & McClatchie are selling heating stoves at cost. Call and secure bargains before they are gone.

If you want to buy hardware cheap go to Hunt & McClatchie as they are contemplating a change about Jan. 1st 1891 and want to reduce stock and will give great bargains at present.

School report for month ending Nov28. The figures after each name denote, respectively, present membership, average daily attendance, cases of tardiness, not absent or tardy, number of visitors:

Mr. Hortvet:.....	30	25	4	8	1
Miss Fairwearher	45	34	5	15	0
Miss Duffy......	27	20	3	10	3
Miss Boyle......	38	39	10	14	3
Mrs. Emard......	53	44	4	16	2
Totals	204	162	26	63	7

Electric Bitters.

This remedy is becoming so well known and so popular as to need no special mention. All who have used Electric Bitters sing the same song of praise.—A purer medicine does not exist and it is guaranteed to do all that it is claimed. Electric Bitters will cure all deases of the Liver and kidneys, will remove Pimples Boiles, Salt Rheum and other affections caused by impure blood.—Will drive Malaria from the system and prevent as well as cure all Malarial fevers.—For cure Headache, Consumption and Indigestion try Electric Bitters—Entire satisfactory guaranteed, or money refund.—price 50c and 1.00 a bottle at Schreiter's.

Improved Passenger Service

Under the new time schedule of "the North-Western Line," C. St. P., M. & O. Ry., all passenger trains of this line make the trip between St. Paul and Chicago in less than 14 hours.

The Pullman and Wagner Vestibuled Limited, leaving St. Paul at 7:30 p. m. makes the trip to Chicago in 13½ hours and from Chicago to St. Paul in 13 hours and 25 minutes.

The Daylight Express leaving St Paul at 7:45 a. m. makes the trip to Chicago in 13 hours and 50 minutes and from Chicago to St. Paul in 13 hours and 45 minutes.

This is the only line running all its trains in less than 14 hour between St. Paul and Chicago, and while this time is quick trains don't have to run at as high speed to make their time as on other lines, because this is shorter than any other line.

In addition to these facts this is the only line by which connections are assure in Chicago with all fast line trains from Chicag to the East and South in the morning and at night.

Note.—Fares by this line are always as low as by any other.

For Map Folder of the line address T. W. TUESDALE, Gen'l Passenger Agent St. Paul, Minn.

The Christmas Holidays.

Are an especially enjoyable season of the year and is the one festival universally celebrated among all civilized nation. Popularly, it is supposed to have its origin in commemoration of the day Christ was born, but the literary people who are versed in folk-lore, tell us that a festile of similar character was observed among the Teutonic and Norse people long before any knowledge of Christianity reached them. However this may be, it is a priceless benefit to us that we have a breathing spell in our hustling for a livelihood, when we do really "take a day off," try to enjoy ourselves, and make our friends happy with gifts. Why not make yourself and family happy by taking a trip to the sunny and flowery South in the two weeks holidays? it will be the best thing you ever did for pleasure and rest. From the great Northwest and the Upper Mississippi Valley, "The Burlington" is the only rout worth naming. It has its own tracts all the way to either Chicago or St. Lewis. Buy your tickets by this line. Any ticket agent can supply you, or write to W. J. C. Kenyon Gen. Pass. Agent, C. B. & N. R. R St. Paul, Minn.

A Wonder Worker

Mr. Frank Huffman, a young man of Burlington, Ohio, states that he had been under the care of two prominent physicians, and use their treatment until he was not able to get around. They pronounced his case to be consumption and incurable. He was persuaded to try Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds and at that time was not able walk across the street without resting. He found before he had used half of a dollor bottle, that he was much better; he continued to use it and is to-day enjoying good health. If you have any throat, Lungs or Chest trouble try it. We guarantee satisfactionr Trial bottle free at Schreiter's Drugstore

A Good Offer.

Do you read The Cosmopolitan, that bright, sparkling young magazine? The cheapest illustrated monthly in the world. 25 cents a number. $2.40 per year. Enlarged, October, 1889, to 128 pages. The Cosmopolitan is literally what the New York Times calls it, "At its price, the brightest, most varied and best edited of the magazines." An unusual opportunity for new subscribers for one year only:

The Cosmopolitan, per year....	$2 40
The NEWS, per year..........	1 50
The price of both..........	3 90
We will furnish both for only....	3 00

This offer is only to new subscribers to the Cosmopolitan, and only for one year. The Boston Journal says "It has more articles in each number that are readable, and fewer uninteresting pages, than any of its contemporaries." The Cosmopolitan for the first time in magazine literature, a splendidly illustrated Periodical at a price hitherto deemed impossible. Try it for a year. It will be a liberal educator to every member of the household. It will make the nights pass pleasantly. Send $3.60 to this offite and secure both the Cosmopolitan and the NEWS.

A Present to our Subscribers.

It is with pleasure that we announce to our many patrons that we have made arrangements with that wide-awake, illustrated farm magazine, the American Farmer, published at Fort Wayne, Ind., and read by nearly 200,000 farmers by which that great publication will be mailed direct, FREE, to the address of any of our subscribers who will come in and pay up all arrearages on subscription and one year in advance from date, and to any new subscriber who will pay one year in advance. This is a grand opportunity to obtain a first-class farm journal free. The American Farmer is a large 16-page journal of national circulation, which ranks among the leading agricultural papers. It treats the question of economy in agriculture and the rights and privileges of that vast body of citizens—American Farmers—whose industry is the basis of all material and national prosperity. Its highest purpose is the elevation and ennobling of Agriculture through the higher and broader education of men and women engaged in its pursuits. The regular subscription price of the American farmer is $1.00 per year. IT COSTS YOU NOTHING. From any one number ideas can be obtained that will be worth thrice the subscription price to you or members of your household, YET YOU GET IT FREE. Call and see sample copy.

MADE CHANGE OUT OF THE CHANGE.

An Incident Showing the Unreliability of Circumstantial Evidence.

The enormous force of circumstantial evidence and the liability to error that all men labor under, were strikingly displayed the other day by an incident that happened in a Third avenue grocery. A little fellow came in for a half pound of tea. He had the order written on a piece of paper, and handed the paper and some money to the grocer. The grocer was talking politics to a lounger, and he went about filling the order in a somewhat absent minded manner. When the tea was wrapped up he said to the little fellow:

"You gave me twenty-six cents. The tea is twenty-four. Here are two cents change."

The youngster took the change and the tea, and departed.

In about five minutes a woman came in leading the boy that had bought the tea.

"Didn't my little boy give you a fifty cent piece when he was here a few minutes ago?" said she.

"No," replied the grocer. "He gave me twenty-six cents, and I gave him back two."

The lounger substantiated this statement, for he had observed the twenty-six cents in the grocer's hand and had seen him return the change. All that the little boy could say in reply to his mother's question was: "I dave him de money what you dave me."

It seemed impossible to reach a solution of the question. The woman went away dissatisfied, feeling certain that the grocer had made a mistake, and the grocer was grieved to have her depart in such a humor, though with the testimony of the lounger to support him he felt that he had the best side of the case.

An hour had passed. The keen edge of the incident had worn away, and the lounger was airing certain theories that he entertained in regard to the tariff, when the grocer suddenly interrupted him.

"Wait! I have an idea," said he. "By Jove, that's curious!"

"What's curious?" inquired the lounger.

"About that fifty cents. The youngster did give me fifty cents."

"Well, I'm not blind," said the lounger, "and I saw only twenty-six cents in your hand. It was a quarter and a one cent piece."

"You're right there," replied the grocer, "but that twenty-six cents was the change from the fifty cents. I remember about it now. My mind was so occupied with politics when I was filling the order that I took the twenty-four cents for the tea out of the fifty cents and then forgot all about it. Then I again took the twenty-four cents out of the twenty-six cents, and gave the boy two cents change."

"Well, I'll be tarred and feathered!" remarked the lounger.

"I'll have a harder time of it than that," said the grocer, "when I try to explain the matter to that woman the next time she comes in."—New York Tribune.

Why Leaves Change Color.

Perhaps the majority of readers have read the dozens of different theories advanced to account for the fact that leaves change from their dark summer green to yellow, red, golden and innumerable intermediate tints at about the same time every year. The following, from an eminent botanist, will, however, be of deep interest to those who have always thought that the red and golden glory was simply the effect produced by frosts: The green matter in the tissue of the leaf is composed of two colors—red and blue. When the sap ceases to flow in autumn, and the natural growth of the tree is stopped, oxidation of the tissues takes place.

Under certain conditions the green of the leaf changes to red. Under different conditions it takes on a yellow or brown tint. The difference in color is due to the difference in combinations of the original constituents of the tissue and to the varying conditions of climate, exposure and soil. There are several things about leaves that even scientists cannot explain—for an instance, why one of two trees of the same species growing side by side in the same soil should take on a bright red color in the fall and the other a pale yellow, or why one branch of a tree will turn a beautiful crimson and the one just above or just below it turn a dull brown.—St. Louis Republic.

A Sensible Method of Reducing Flesh.

I can give the experience of two persons who have tried successfully the following method of reducing "superfluous flesh." They made no change in their diet, but took moderate exercise and simply left off drinking with their meals. Neither of them drinks tea or coffee habitually, and they drink either hot or cold water when they are thirsty. A great deal of drinking is done as a habit, and if one "can't do without two cups of coffee" or tea in the morning, there is not much use in dieting, and if he or she drinks two cups at each meal with from ten to twelve teaspoonfuls of sugar a day (say, 3,650 a year), it is easy to see where the "accumulation of flesh" comes from. The advice of one of the persons mentioned would be: "Avoid the milk" and "bovinine." Take moderate exercise, eat what you can relish and only drink when you are thirsty, as our friends, the four footed animals, do.—Cor. Boston Transcript.

A Child of Culture.

Boston Mother—Minerva, my daughter, you are 8 years old today. I wish to commemorate the occasion by presenting you with some volume which shall be acceptable. What would you prefer?

Minerva—You gave me Emerson's works last year, mother. Having carefully analyzed them, I find Emerson was not always so transcendental as some of his adherents would make us believe.

Mother—You are right. I shall give you Carlyle this year, but do not be too severe with him.

Minerva—I shall be glad to possess his works, although I have no sympathy with his cynicism nor with his assumption of man's superiority over our sex.—Boston Beacon.

Cleopatra's Earrings.

The Cleopatra that Bernhardt does is a most marvelous one, but does she wear such earrings as adorned the shell shaped ears of the famous beauty? They were valued at £161,458! And somebody talks about the women of today being extravagant. Though earrings are out of vogue, their first reason for existence is a pretty one. Jacob gave them to Rebecca that she might put them in her ears as a symbol that they were closed to all evil words against her future husband.—New York Sun.

Can They Get It?

Herr Bergen, a German capitalist, offers a reward of $35,000 to any astronomer who will prove to him that there is anything solid in the sun, moon or stars, or that by any flight of imagination they can be supposed to be inhabited. He gives as his references Krupp, the cannonmaker, and is in earnest.—Detroit Free Press.

What Becomes of Your Hair.

With so much hair periodically taken away from the heads of the community what becomes of it all? The civilized man, leaving the barber shop and feeling the wind strike chill upon the back of his head, gives scarcely a second thought to the ultimate destination of the hair that once shielded him, except perhaps to have a vague idea that it may in time find its way to its appointed place in mortar and mattresses. Even this is mere supposition on his part, and so long as it does not go down the back of his neck it matters to him not the least where it does go. No such carelessness will content the savage islander. He must know what becomes of every particle of the hair which has been removed, and to guard against any possible mischance takes charge of the falling locks as the slivered bamboo or sharpened shark's tooth removes them.

When he has made sure that he has in his hand all the hair that was shortly before upon his head, his first and pressing care is to properly dispose of it. To this end he builds a small fire in his house, puts into it the hair and with satisfaction watches it curl up and fall to ashes. These ashes he mixes with water and gulps down, and then only does he feel safe. The reason for all this excess of precaution is that his mind, ever timorous of some blighting evil, is firmly convinced that if any one could get possession of a lock of his hair, burn it and swallow the ashes, that person could draw all his strength away, and he would weaken and die, just in proportion as the other waxed hearty. Therefore he takes the dose himself.—William Churchill in New Orleans Picayune.

An Oregonian in New York.

W. E. Robinson, of Baker City, Ore., tells a rather amusing story of his encounter with the billiard experts of the metropolis. Mr. Robinson was in the east for the purpose of floating the bonds of the company which is to construct the great irrigating canal in western Nebraska. He is a good amateur billiard player himself, and on the first evening after his arrival in New York he strolled into the Hoffman house billiard parlors for a game. A gentleman standing by volunteered to accommodate him. The stranger won the bank and began to play. He nursed the balls along the cushion, and by the time his score had reached 100 quite a crowd had congregated around the table. He ran 175 points without a break and left the balls on the rail.

Mr. Robinson concluded that he would rather play with some one else, and a bystander took the stranger's place. He likewise won the bank and ran his string out. Then he gave way to another bystander, who accomplished the same feat. Mr. Robinson was about to conclude that he wasn't much of a billiard player after all, when a friend dropped in and introduced him to his opponents. They were Slosson, Heiser and Gallagher, all of whom are frequently found at the Hoffman. They had combined to play a joke on a stranger, and the laugh was on Robinson.—Omaha World-Herald.

The Corrector Corrected.

A young law student recently had occasion to consult the latest American dictionary, and chanced to look at the word "mosey," the common provincial word meaning "to move off slowly." Under the definition of the word he found a quotation from one of the poems of Col. John Hay, in which the word occurs, but the quotation was credited to Bret Harte. The young man immediately wrote to Col. Hay, setting forth the facts of his discovery. He then entered upon a scorching arraignment of "the publishers who could be so careless or so ignorant as not to recognize the familiar lines from Col. Hay's 'Banty Jim.'"

The return mail brought a letter from Col. Hay thanking the young man for his kindness and courtesy in calling attention to the error. The poet then added: "But, after all, Mr. Harte is the one who alone has cause for complaint, since he unwittingly is made to father a waif which, it seems, has gone slightly astray. Permit me in all kindness to remind you, however, that publishers have the same justification for making mistakes that other people have. You, yourself, are wrong in giving the title of my little offspring as 'Banty Jim' instead of 'Banty Tim.'"—Chicago Mail.

Men That Worry a Conductor.

"What kind of people do you dislike most?" was the irrelevant question asked of a pleasant conductor on one of the big railroads. "Well," he said, "the people who for some infernal reason will not buy tickets before getting on the train, and those who do get their tickets, but can never find them when I come along to collect them. The man who insists upon getting his ticket on the train almost invariably tries to get me to change a large bill. I am not supposed to sell tickets, but to take them from passengers. I can't account for the large bills except on the theory that the man who has large bills has nothing smaller and is afraid to wait for a ticket agent to make change for fear he may miss his train. As for the other offender, when he sits in his seat and goes through his pockets one after another without finding his ticket and then begins all over again, he drives a conductor crazy."—New York Tribune.

History of the "Bang."

Women who regard the bang as a modern style of hairdressing will be interested to learn that it is far from new, being, in fact, decidedly old. Boughton, the artist, in his "Sketching Rambles in Holland," a copy of the rare "first edition" of which is in the library of the editor, in his description of the women of Macken, says: "In a print of a Dutch book published in 1737 there is the same fair hair cut in a fringe straight across the brow, level with the eyes; some seem to even look through the fringe with the bright, sharp twinkle of a beady-eyed skye terrier. Others had the fringe brought level with the eyes and then brushed up. This had a rather aggressive air, and belonged, probably, to the caste of eligible maidens."—St. Louis Republic.

Unconscious Self Praise.

The idioms of a foreign tongue hold many a pitfall. It was a New York girl at her first ball in Berlin who, wishing to reply to a request for a dance, informed the astonished young man in her best German, "No, thank you, I am beautifully arranged," thinking she had told him merely that she was already engaged for that number. A smile which passed like a flash over his face warned her of some blunder, and her chaperon quickly enlightened her when later on she repeated the speech for her benefit.—New York Times.

The cochineal insect is mostly known for its use as a dye, but it has also an additional value for relieving neuralgic pains and for checking the spasms of whooping cough. A similar insect is the "lac," of Mexico, which serves admirably as an astringent in cases of dysentery.

Red Lake Falls News.

JAS. MEEHAN JR., Editor & Proprietor.

TERMS, $1.50 A YEAR.

The expenses of the Pan-American Conference were within $20 of the total appropriation—$125,000.

Somebody with plenty of leisure time has figured it out that one journal is published for every 85,100 individuals in the world.

It is stated that the great soda deposits of Wyoming have been sold to a party of English and French capitalists for $2,000,000.

Way Lee, who is a distant relative of the emperor of China, has opened up a very handsome restaurant in Jacksonville, Fla.

Monte Carlo's record for this season is ninety-two suicides. That seems about the only way for a gambler to beat the game there.

The London poor are justly indignant because the wholesale dealers of that city frequently destroy hundreds of tons of fresh fish in order to keep up prices.

A law has been promulgated at Hardanger, in Norway, to the effect that no girl shall be eligible for the marriage state until she is proficient in spinning, knitting, and baking.

The Washington Post fears an epidemic of asphyxiation at the capital from unsophisticated persons blowing out the gas when the next congress meets.

Edward Everett Hale proposes the appointment in some leading university of a "Professor of America," who shall stand as an expounder of Americanism.

The turf loses a conspicuous figure by the death of August Belmont. He owned some of the best race horses in the country. His winnings in 1889 amounted to $169,165.

Daniel Lamont once secretary to Preesident Cleveland, ten years ago was working on a country newspaper for a salary of $15 a week. His income now is placed $50,000 a year.

Deacon Richard Smith, of the Commercial-Gazette, says the ten commandments could not be engineered through the Cincinnati city council without "stuff."

Some of the men who are most concerned because there is not money enough to pay all the world's debts are least concerned about paying any part of their own.

An invention is set to work in France for indicating the speed of railway trains. Tables are prepared showing the practical observer the exact relations the readings have to the speed.

The highest railroad in the United States is the Denver and South Park, a branch of the Union Pacific, at Alpine tunnel, at which point it reaches a height of 11,596 feet above the sea level.

The statue of Joan D'Arc, which was unveiled in Philadelphia recently by the French citizens of that town, depicts her in full armor, and carrying in one hand the oriflamme.

It is estimated that the amount of fish eaten by the seals which the United States is trying to protect, would sell for more money than all the seals that are caught. But the seals do their own fishing and make no charge for the labor.

Early in the present generation of business men there were but five millionaires in this country. They were John Jacob Astor and Stephen Whitney, of New York; Nicholas Longworth, of Cincinnati; Stephen Girard, of Philadelphia, and William Gray, of Boston. There are now 500 millionaires in New York alone.

The increase of the wealth of the United States during the last decade has been much more rapid than the increase of population. The total wealth of the country is now $71,459,000,000, which is a good deal more than $1,000 per capita. This is an increase in ten years of $18,000,000,000, or 42 per cent. England's wealth in 1885 is given at $50,000,000,000.

EVENTS OF A WEEK.

A Digest of the Interesting News of the Past Week.

AROUND WASHINGTON.

The yearly report of the postmaster general is out. He strongly recommends the establishment of a postal telegraph system and postal savings bank.

The treasury department has declined a proposition from New York to issue $2,000,000 in treasury notes of small denomination in exchange for gold coin.

The militia forces of the United States aggregate 109,469 men, as shown by an official report presented to Secretary Proctor by Capt. D. M. Taylor, in charge of this branch of the service.

PEOPLE IN PRINT.

Eva Hamilton, the notorious wife of Robert Ray Hamilton, who has just been liberated from a New Jersey prison, to which she was sentenced for stabbing her baby's nurse, will soon appear upon the stage in a play written especially for her.

UNFORTUNATE EVENTS.

John Gebhard, his wife and their two children were instantly killed by the train on the North railroad at Gloster, N. J.

Robert Leeds and Jerry Hitchcock were riding on the foot board of an engine in Cherokee, Iowa, when two freight cars crashed into them. Leeds also suffered fracture and was pinched about the hips.

